The verb is the aorist active indicative of koinōnéō (κοινωνέω) [pronounced koy-no-NEH-oh], which means to share. The gnomic aorist is for a fact which is so fixed in its certainty as to be axiomatic in character. This is also constative in the sense of a fact extended over a period of time—the entire Church Age. By application to us it is a constative aorist. The active voice: the Gentiles who are believers produce the action of the verb, sharing in the spiritual benefits of the Jewish spiritual heritage of doctrine. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality, hence a first class condition. Plus the locative plural from pneumatikos (πνευματικός) [pronounced nyoo-mat-EEK-oss], meaning “in spiritual things.” Plus the possessive genitive plural of the intensive pronoun autós (αὐτοῦς) [pronounced ow-TOSS] which is used most of the time in the New Testament as a substitute for the third person personal pronoun. There is no 3rd person personal pronoun and autós (αὐτοῦς) [pronounced ow-TOSS] is used for it. It should be translated “belonging to them.” “For you see, if the Gentiles have shared in spiritual things belonging to them [the Jews]” – first class condition, “and they have.” Principle: Spiritual things such as doctrine from God is the monopoly of the Jew; it is their heritage. With several very rare exceptions all of the human writers of Scripture are Jew by race.

“their duty is also to minister unto them in carnal things” – the present active indicative of the verb opheilō/opheileō (ὀφείλω/ὀφειλέω) [pronounced of-Ī-low, of-Ī-LEH-oh], a verb of obligation: “they are obligated,” literally. The perfective present tense denotes the continuation of existing results. The active voice: Gentile believers, or any believers who prosper through the perception of doctrine, produce the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of dogmatic doctrinal reality.

The conjunctive use of the conjunction kai, “also.” The aorist active infinitive of leitourgeō (λειτουργέω) [pronounced li-toorg-EH-oh] means to perform a service to God, to fulfil a civic responsibility like paying taxes, to discharge public responsibility like entering military service, to perform cultic functions at the altar and that is where it gets the concept from “to minister” – “they are also obligated to minister.” The constative aorist is for a fact or action extended over a period of time. The action of the verb is contemplated in its entirety. The action extends over the Church Age and is a principle of the royal family honor code. The active voice: the believer who has prospered from the Lord is motivated by doctrine to produce the action of the verb by giving money to those believers who have provided for them or shared with them in spiritual things. The infinitive is the intended result infinitive in which the result fulfils a deliberate objective, the objective of the honor code, a blending of purpose and result. The honor code requires the reciprocity principle always. Here the spiritual is exchanged for the material. Then the dative plural indirect object from autós (αὐτοῦς) [pronounced ow-TOSS], the intensive pronoun used as a personal pronoun, 3rd person—“to them.”

Then the preposition en (ἐν) [pronounced en] plus the locative plural of both the definite article and the adjective (σαρκικός) [pronounced sar-kee-KOSS], used as a substantive here for material things.

Romans 15:27 Yes, they have decided to do this with pleasure [the gentiles sending the gift]; in fact, they are obligated to them. For you see, if the Gentiles have shared in spiritual things belonging to them [the Jews; and they have], they [Gentiles] are obligated to minister to them in material things.

Principle

1. Christian giving is an honor code function. It combines doctrinal motivation with material prosperity to perform a divine service.
2. Bona fide spiritual giving is really the function of the positive or strong believer who has benefitted from doctrinal teaching by advancing in the plan of God.
3. The true givers are those who have shared in the spiritual things from doctrinal teaching, so that doctrine resident in the soul motivates the believer to give, and nothing else. Service organizations often solicit money from unbelievers.

4. Giving is not the sharing of emotion, is not based on attraction or persuasion by flattery; giving is reciprocity between doctrinal teaching and resultant material prosperity.
5. The strong believer has been spiritually blessed from doctrine and financially prospered by divine imputation. The doctrine provides motivation to give to the source of his doctrinal inculcation. In this context it is the Jew; in principle in the Church Age it applies to the communicator of doctrine. 1Timothy 5:18 For the Scriptures says, you will not muzzle the ox while he is threshing. Deuteronomy 24:15 The laborer is worthy of his wages.
6. From the divine imputation of prosperity comes the money with which to give. God creates the wealth by imputation. And from doctrine resident in the soul comes the motivation. Doctrine must provide the motivation; and God provides the money. We have the fun, which is the giving.

Romans 15:27 Yes, they have decided to do this with pleasure [the gentiles sending the gift]; in fact, they are obligated to them [the Jews]. For you see, if the Gentiles have shared in spiritual things belonging to them [the Jews; and they have], they [Gentiles] are obligated [under the honor code] to minister to them in material things.

513 09/01/1978 Romans 15:28a Good strategy and bad tactics; fall of Napoleon and Ney; inflexibility in the non-essentials

Who caused Napoleon to do what he did? One man, Fushe, an evil man, courage + inflexibility does not give you what is needed for winning. Bob knows five cases in the Marine Corps and three in the Army. Great inflexibility in the Marines; the too much flexibility in the Army, but without discipline. How could a man make a mistake a Paul did? He became courageous with inflexibility. Too many believers think that they have it all figured out. They think that they have this before they have all of it.

People often mistake courage and flexibility for leadership. Paul will be out of it for two years.

Verses 28-29, bad tactics and good strategy. Tactics is the troop engagement; and strategy is moving the troops before and after.

Romans 15:28 Therefore having finished this, and having sealed this fruit to them, I will set off through you into Spain.

Verse 28 – “When therefore I have performed this.” The inferential conjunction oun (οὐν) [pronounced oon] denotes that what it introduces is an inference from what precedes. Doctrine says go to Rome; emotion says go to Jerusalem. Everything from verse 23 to verse 27 is brought into sharp focus, to a conclusion: good strategy; bad tactics.

The aorist active participle from epiteleō (ἐπιτελέω) [pronounced ep-ee-tel-EH-oh] which means to finish, to complete, to execute an order or protocol. The aorist tense is a culminative aorist, it denotes the attainment of an end, of a process. The administration of the offering to the destitute people in Jerusalem is something he is looking at from the standpoint of the end of the process. The process began when believers cracked the maturity barrier; they appreciated what the Jews had done for them from the Old Testament writers right down to the apostle Paul. Therefore they were glad to start collecting and forming an offering. The active voice: Paul intends to produce the action of the verb by traveling to Jerusalem. This is a temporal participle. The action of the aorist participle precedes the action of the main verb; the main verb is “I will come.”

“Therefore when I have accomplished.” Then the accusative neuter singular direct object from the demonstrative pronoun houtos (οὗτος) [pronounced HOO-tos], referring to the charity mission to Jerusalem – “this [mission].” Note that it is emotion controlling the soul that takes battle courage or moral courage and converts it into an inflexible system—converts the virtue into a terrible danger.

A person with courage and inflexibility becomes a Judas goat. Eisenhower was the key strategist throughout the war; and he knew to keep Churchill away from the battle strategies. There was one person similar to Ike, Stonewall Jackson. Lee was inflexible with regards to the nonessentials. He had dysentery. Lee was flexible as long as Jackson was there. Longstreet was right and Lee was wrong. Nathan Bedford Forest had great flexibility in the nonessentials; he had battle courage and moral courage. He is still be studied in Europe. Bedford Forest was not saved then; but he operated on the basis of divine establishment. He had common sense. No training; but he was a great man. He became a believer after the war; a Presbyterian minister witnessed to him on the street.

As long as we are alive, the only essential is Bible doctrine. Paul by requiring to go to Jerusalem is being inflexible.

514 09/03/1978 Romans 15:28b–29a Paul's neutralization of his good strategy re the fourth mission; inflexibility cancels virtue

You can have good strategy but bad tactics.

Sir Douglas Hay was underrated from WWI and perhaps the most brilliant. He went from Captain to General in 10 years. He began using tanks and ordered 500 for one of the last great offensives.

Romans 15:28 Therefore having finished this, and having sealed this fruit to them, I will set off through you into Spain. (BLB)

“and have sealed to them this fruit” –the connective use of the conjunction kai plus the aorist middle participle of sphragízō (σφραγίζω) [pronounced sfrag-IHD-zo] which does mean to seal. It means to provide with a seal, to mark with a seal as a means of identification, but it also means to certify, as here: “and have myself certified.” The aorist tense is a culminative aorist, it denotes attainment of the end of the process which includes the collection of the money. The direct middle refers to the results of the action directly to the agent, Paul, with reflexive force. This is a temporal participle. Again, the action of the aorist participle precedes the action of the main verb, “I will come.”

Then the dative plural indirect object from the intensive pronoun αὐτοῖς (αὐτοῖς) [pronounced ow-TOSS]. It is used as a third person plural personal pronoun and translated “to them.” He is thinking about the believers in Jerusalem in a sentimental way and therefore his good strategy is about to be neutralized by bad tactics. To make emotion a criterion for your life is to enter into bad tactics, to enter into reversionism, and to neutralize any virtue that you might have from previous spiritual experience. Plus the accusative singular direct object from an immediate demonstrative pronoun οὗτος (οὗτος) [pronounced HOO-tos], and with it the noun καρπός (καρπός) [pronounced kahr-POSS] which means fruit or production. This production is an offering. Translation: “and have myself certified this production to them.”

Grace principle at a mission. Feed the people first and then give them the message, if they want it.

Local churches are provided for growth. Bob has no use for negative volition. If they don't want teaching, they should not be there. They are bored, the squirm. The Word of God is for those who are positive.

Paul was going to make the people sit and listen; then he was going to hand out the money.

Seals

1. Using seals in the ancient world was a custom of identifying things with a sign, a letter, a word, or a combination of these things. Sealing was certification in the ancient world.
2. An impression was made with a signet ring on the paper as a guarantee and legal protection of property. Here we find Paul is the seal and he is using his apostolic authority for a legitimate thing: the transfer and distribution of funds. That is legitimate. But this should be delegated to those with the spiritual gift. The pastor sets the policy but the deacons carry it out.

Paul is violating this policy and he will deliver the money where he could have passed this along to them instead. Those with the communication gift should not handle the money or distribute funds. Paul should go to Spain, to Rome, to France.

The royal family honor code demands that every believer find his spiritual gift and function with it. Paul has bad tactics; and he was trying to make up for his bad behavior in Jerusalem. This guilt complex is coming up to the surface.

“I will come by you into Spain” – this is a good tactic, it is simply the deviation to Jerusalem that is wrong.

The future middle indicative of the verb aperchomai (ἀπέρχομαι) [pronounced ahp-AIRKH-oh-ma] means “I will go.” The future tense is a predictive future for an event expected to occur in future time. The middle voice: a deponent verb which is middle in form but active in meaning. Paul intends to produce the action of the verb, which is good strategy. The indicative mood is potential of obligation in which the indicative is used to declare his obligation. It is God’s will for Paul to go to Spain. He is not going to Spain, he is going to deviate at this point. Then the preposition dia plus the ablative plural from the personal pronoun su – “by means of you.” Then the preposition eis (εἰς) [pronounced ICE] plus the accusative of the proper noun Spanía (Σπανία) [pronounced span-EE-ah]—“to Spain.”

Romans 15:28 Therefore when I have accomplished this mission [delivering the offering], and have myself certified this production to them [to the destitute Jews in Jerusalem], I will go to Spain by means of you.

Points on Romans 15:28

1. Spania includes Portugal and Spain. Greeks called it Iberia as well.
2. During the Roman republic, colonies had been established on the Spanish peninsula.
3. General Hamilcar Barca and his famous son Hannibal conquered most of Spain. Making it a Carthaginian country. Spain is a beautiful country. The Iberians were first conquered by the Catheginians.
4. As a result of the Punic wars, Spain became a Roman colony as early as 197 B.C. Took 200 years to Romanize them. It took that long to reconcile the Spanish people to Roman rule.
5. Augustus made Spain into three Roman provinces: Hispania, Betica and Lusitania.
6. At the time at Paul writes, Spain is a fantastic conglomeration of Carthaginian business and Roman culture and a beautiful land with positive volition. Spain is ripe and ready. This was a great opportunity. If Paul had been lucid, he would have known this. This would have been a beautiful place to go.
7. Paul has covered the Hellenistic part of the Roman Empire; they spoke Greek in the eastern part; this was the Alexander the Great portion. However, Paul he had not crossed the Adriatic into the Latin portion, which is to the best.
8. After the evangelizing of Spain, great changes will take place there. Vespasian would extend Roman citizenship to Spain and France. Great emperors came from Spain.
9. Great Latin writers like Seneca, Lucian, and others. Spain will be conquered by the Goths and the Vandals. Many of the Goths and Vandals are positive toward doctrine. Spain was overrun by the Moslems; and they are totally and completely anti-Christian.

If the Muslims had the numbers, they would destroy the United States. The Morels and the Moslems are as anti-Christian as they come. The best challenge to Moslems is the power of the gospel message. Bible doctrine is the only thing that can stop Islam. You can kill them or convert them. There is no middle ground. They are anti-western civilization.

Spain is a very important part of western Europe. Spain has a marvelous history. This was the greatest missionary opportunity in the world.

Romans 15:28 Therefore when I have accomplished this mission [delivering the offering], and have myself certified this production to them [to the destitute Jews in Jerusalem], I will go to Spain by means of you.

Points on Romans 15:28

1. The good strategy is to go to Spain; the bad tactics, the diversion to Jerusalem. Jerusalem becomes a trap. People think that a trip to Jerusalem makes them spiritual. Paul believed that he could change Jerusalem. Where people are negative, you cannot change anything.
2. The emotional pull to Jerusalem causes Paul to become inflexible with regard to non-essentials.
3. The distribution of that money did not require Paul's administrative ability. Others could have done this.
4. Paul should be inflexible with regard to the essentials of doctrine and the will of God. Paul should be inflexible about crossing the Adriatic. They become inflexible with regards to the nonessentials due to emotionalism.
5. It is God's will for Paul to minister to the Latin world of the empire, just as until now Paul has ministered to the Hellenistic part of the empire.
6. The Adriatic Sea divides the Roman empire into two parts: Latin in the west; Hellenistic in the east.
7. Now that Paul has fulfilled his unique missionary function—three missionary journeys in the Hellenistic area—he must go immediately to the Latin west.
8. Therefore Paul must be inflexible regarding Rome and Spain.
9. But the temptation to personally deliver the great offering to Jerusalem was too much for him, and Paul finds himself violating the honor code principle and neutralising the greatest virtue that has ever existed in the royal family of God. Paul's greatness is neutralized by his inflexibility in the nonessentials.

Sir Douglas Haig in 9 battles over a period of a year which turned WWI around; but these battles are not commemorated anywhere in Great Britain. Prior to this, his signature on an order resulted in 60,000 deaths in an hour.

Good strategy is going to Spain; bad tactics is going to Jerusalem.

Romans 15:29 Now I know that coming to you, I will come in the fullness of the blessing of Christ. (BLB)

Verse 29 – “And I am sure that when I come unto you.” The postpositive conjunctive particle de used as a transitional conjunction here, translated “Now.” Then the perfect oida (οἶδα) [pronounced OY-da] used as a present tense for something in which Paul is totally confident. It indicates knowledge correctly applied from his soul. The pictorial present tense is for knowledge now going on before Paul has entered into reversionism. However when Paul finally reaches Rome he will be prepared. The active voice: Paul produces the action of the verb through maximum doctrine in his soul. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of Paul's spiritual gift in preparation for the reality of tremendous perception of doctrine, the reality of the fact that he is the one man in all of the world who is truly prepared to go west and do the job right.

The conjunction hóti (ὅτι) [pronounced HOH-tee], is used after verbs of perception to indicate the content of that perception, or in this case to indicate the application of doctrine—"that." The present middle participle of the verb érchomai (ἔρχομαι) [pronounced AIR-khoh-my] which means to come. The futuristic present tense denotes an event which has not yet occurred, but is regarded as so certain in thought that it is contemplated as already coming to pass. Paul in his thinking is already in Rome. The middle voice of the deponent verb means that Paul intends to produce the action, but in his timing, not God's timing. This is a temporal participle, translated "when I come." The prepositional phrase that follows indicates face to face teaching at a future time—prós (πρός) [pronounced pross] plus the accusative plural of su, "face to face with you."

God's timing is, it is right now; but Paul wants to go to Jerusalem for emotional reasons.

Timing is everything. Ballroom dancing teaches this. You can destroy a woman's feet in one evening. Doing the right thing at the wrong time is a guarantee...

Paul's Misdirection

1. Paul is confident that it is God's will for him to come to Rome to minister the Word. In this he is correct.
2. In fact it is the will of God for him to come immediately to Rome, now, in preparation for his missionary work in the regions beyond. Paul could have easily begun in Spain and then gone north. What would his future have been?
3. Paul's missionary momentum demands that he keep moving west and not be distracted by any personal desire or emotional connotation of taking that offering personally to Jerusalem.
4. Paul has a special apostolic ministry to the Roman believers which is vitally necessary for securing his base in Rome.
5. Furthermore the Roman believers have been brought to a certain level by their pastors. They are ready for Paul. Paul's ministry is necessary to bring a lot of them to maturity.
6. It is imperative that a mature remnant of believers be established in Rome since historically the expansion of Christianity must include that vital centre.
7. For several hundred years after the death of Paul Rome will be the centre for the advance and expansion of Christianity and the pivot which will be eventually formed in Rome by Paul's ministry will produce the greatest historical age anyone has ever known: one hundred years of the Antonine Caesars, 96-192 A.D.

8. Therefore Rome, not Jerusalem, is the key city for the dissemination of doctrine.
9. Jerusalem is actually being phased out as the centre of Christianity and historical positive volition is moving away from the Jews to the Gentiles in the west.
10. Therefore, since the doctrine of Paul is unique it is inevitable that he must teach Bible doctrine in Rome and beyond. In fact, some of his greatest work in doctrine will be accomplished in Rome: the writing of the prison epistles.

Lesson #515

515 09/03/1978 Romans 15:29b–30 Sir Douglas Haig; teamwork; artillery analogy to prayer; flexibility in leadership

Tony Curtis involving smoking and football games.

Bob is upset that the pope was found on channels 2, 11 and 13 when it should have been football. He was on for hours.

Earl Campbell is a new halfback/fullback.

Sir Douglas Haig from WWI is one of the most maligned men in England. If things went wrong with one of his generals, he stood behind them and protected them from civilian critical attacks.

Romans 15:29 Now I know that coming to you, I will come in the fullness of the blessing of Christ. (BLB)

“I shall come in the fullness of the blessing of the gospel of Christ” – the phrase “of the gospel” is not found in the original manuscript, and it is definitely misleading. Paul’s primary mission in Rome is not evangelism. Paul has the advanced doctrine to teach. The future middle indicative of érchomai (ἔρχομαι) [pronounced AIR-khoh-my] – “I shall come.” The future tense is predictive, he knows that it is God’s will for him to come now to Rome. He is going to delay it and rationalize it, but he does understand God’s plan. The middle voice of the deponent verb really means that Paul is producing the action. The indicative mood is historical reality.

The pastors in Rome have no hangups, like those in Jerusalem. They want Paul to come to them and teach.

Then en (ἐν) [pronounced en] plus the locative of plêrōma (πλήρωμα) [pronounced PLAY-roh-mah] – “in the full measure.” This refers to the fact that he has more doctrine, more understanding, and more ability to communicate doctrine than anyone who has ever lived. He is unique and he is going to come and give them a full blast of what they need, the most advanced type of doctrine. The descriptive genitive singular of the noun eulogia (εὐλογία) [pronounced yoo-log-EE-ah] refers to the six categories of blessing to the mature believer. These six categories are imputed to the believer after he cracks the maturity barrier. Then the ablative of source in the singular from the proper noun Christos (χριστός) [pronounced krees-TOHSS] – “Christ.” All blessing is from the Lord Jesus Christ, and the imputation of divine blessing to the mature believer is both the glorification of Christ as well as blessing from the source of Christ.

Romans 15:29 Now I know that when I come face to face with you I shall come in full measure of blessing from Christ.

Paul Will Come in Full Measure

1. The ministry of Paul to believers is one of momentum and motivation under the honor code.
2. The doctrinal communication of the great apostle motivated believers to advance to the high ground of maturity and at the same time to become aware of and to function in the royal family honor code.
3. The attainment of maturity means blessing imputed from the Lord Jesus Christ. Attainment of maturity is the only way to glorify God, and maturity is the only way to function under the honor code.
4. The attainment of maturity is the motivation and the proper function of the honor code. It functions perfectly with the mature believer because it requires so much in the way of flexibility.
5. Paul’s ministry will bring many Roman believers to maturity through the pertinent doctrines.
6. The prison epistles are really the full measure of blessing from Christ.

Romans 15:30 Now I exhort you, brothers, by our Lord Jesus Christ and by the love of the Spirit, to strive together with me in the prayers for me to God,... (BLB)

Verse 30 – “Now I beseech you, therefore, brethren.” The postpositive conjunctive particle de used as a transitional conjunction, “Now.” The present active indicative from the verb parakaleō (παρακαλέω) [pronounced pahr-ahk-ahl-EH-oh], which means to summon to one’s aid, to appeal to someone for help, but here it means to encourage. The customary present tense denotes what may be reasonably expected when Christians recognize a man of Paul’s stature, and without any encouragement they should be supporting that man in prayer. The active voice: Paul produces the action of the verb by encouraging them to pray for him and to pray with him. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality.

We need to recognize the imputed righteous in others; and to respect the feelings and thoughts of others.

With this is an accusative plural direct object from the personal pronoun su, referring to the Roman believers. The Roman believers are encouraged to act as artillery support and provide a prayer barrage for Paul’s advance. The nominative plural from the noun adelphos (ἀδελφός) [pronounced ad-el-FOSS] is referring specifically to the believers in Rome, but it also refers to all believers who are positive toward doctrine and who are making spiritual advances. Every believer possesses the great weapon of prayer.

To accomplish anything in life, it takes a group. There is someone at the top. There are always people carrying out the policy of the group. It takes all kinds of people to move the group forward and to make it productive. Those with the most ability and authority need to be sensitive to those working under them. Leadership is a subject whenever a group exists; and you need to know those under your command, to understand their jobs and to understand their sensitivities and their problems.

Arrogance + authority is the antithesis of the honor code. No group can succeed with arrogance and inflexibility.

“for the Lord Jesus Christ’s sake, and for the love of the Spirit” – dia plus the possessive genitive of egó (ἐγώ) [pronounced ehg-OH], plus the ablative of means from kurios (κύριος) [pronounced KOO-ree-oss], Iêsous (Ἰησοῦς) [pronounced ee-ay-SOOCE] and Christos (χριστός) [pronounced krees-TOHSS], “by our Lord Jesus Christ.” The ablative of means is used here because source is involved. Jesus Christ is the source of prayer. Then the connective conjunction kai, and dia plus the genitive of agápē (ἀγάπη) [pronounced ag-AH-pay] – “through love.” Never in Scripture are we commanded to love the third person of the Trinity. This is not “of the Spirit,” this is the ablative of source from pneuma (πνεῦμα) [pronounced PNYOO-mah] and it is “love from the Spirit,” love generated by the Spirit, love of which the Spirit is the source—impersonal love, honor code love—these are the issues. So it is a direct appeal to the honor code for the function of impersonal love in prayer. Mutual prayer support is a part of the honor code.

“that ye strive together with me in your prayers” – aorist middle infinitive of a compound verb, sunagōnizomai (συναγωνίζομαι) [pronounced soon-ag-o-NIHD-zom-ah-ee] [sun = along side with; agōnizomai (ἀγωνίζομαι) [pronounced ag-oh-NIHD-zohm-ah-ee] = to carry on a conflict, to fight in a combat situation, to compete in the athletic games], which means to join in a team effort. With this is the dative singular indirect object from the personal pronoun egó (ἐγώ) [pronounced ehg-OH] – “that you join me in a team effort.” The constative aorist tense gathers into one entirety the concept of prayer as a team effort in which everyone participates in the function. The deponent verb: the Roman believers form a battery of artillery in prayer support for Paul’s advance. The infinitive is intended result in which the result is indicated as fulfilling a deliberate objective. It blends purpose and result. Then the prepositional phrase, en (ἐν) [pronounced en] plus the locative plural of the definite article used as a possessive pronoun, plus the locative plural of proseuchē (προσευχή) [pronounced pros-yoo-KHAY], “in your prayers.” This is analogous to the logistic support for a military force. It used to take 30 men to support one man on the field. Now it takes even more.

“to God for me” – the preposition prós (πρός) [pronounced pross] plus the accusative of theos (θεός) [pronounced theh-OSS]. All effective prayer is “face to face with the God.” Then hupér (ὑπέρ) [pronounced hoop-AIR] plus the ablative singular of the personal pronoun egó (ἐγώ) [pronounced ehg-OH], referring to Paul—“on behalf of me.”

Romans 15:30 Now I encourage you, brethren, by our Lord Jesus Christ, and through love from the Spirit, that you join me in a team effort in your prayers to the God on behalf of me.

Paul will make a prayer request in vv. 31–33 which are wrong. There will be a good prayer request and a bad one.

Lesson #516

516 09/04/1978 Romans 15:31–32 Inaccurate prayers wasted; desire of Paul in Jerusalem and then in Rome

There will be one erroneous prayer and one correct prayer.

A review of the translation for the entire chapter.

Romans 15:31 so that I may be delivered from those refusing to be persuaded in Judea, and that my service in Jerusalem may be acceptable to the saints,... (BLB)

Verse 31 – an erroneous prayer.

An Erroneous Prayer

1. Erroneous prayer requests lead to ineffective prayer function. Prayer is a part of our logistical grace support. But if a prayer is wrong, it cannot overcome its own inaccuracy.
2. Just as artillery must be on the target to give support to infantry, so the prayer petition must be accurate to result in effective prayer. In prayer, everything can go wrong. One can pray out of fellowship; or the prayer can be erroneous and it does not line up with Scripture. Bob heard hundreds of goofy prayer requests in his lifetime. Sometimes you think, "That is a terrible prayer request."
3. This verse expresses an inaccurate prayer request, for it is not the will of God for Paul to go to Jerusalem.
4. Therefore we have something equivalent to directing fire on the wrong target.
5. In the next verse there will be an accurate and correct prayer request compatible with the will of God.
6. While this petition is wrong for this situation the principle involved is correct for similar situations compatible with the will of God.
7. Paul will go to Jerusalem in reversionism, and Paul will be disciplined in Jerusalem for that reversionism.
8. This immediately cancels the effectiveness of any prayer offered with regard to this request.
9. Prayer, like artillery fire which does not hit the target, is ineffective.
10. The petition of prayer request must specify a correct target compatible with the will of God. The more doctrine you know the more you will know what is compatible with the will of God. If you are in doubt always preface your prayer, "If it be thy will."

“That I may be delivered from them that do not believe in Judaea” – the conjunction hina (ἵνα) [pronounced HEE-na] introduces a semi-final purpose clause. This is one in which the direction of the action of the main verb toward a given result is sought. In this case it is sought through prayer. Then comes the aorist passive subjunctive of the verb rhuomai (ῥύομαι) [pronounced RHOO-ohm-ahēe] – “that I may be delivered.”

If there is one thing Paul will not be it is delivered in Jerusalem. He is completely out of line by going there. He goes under the principle of emotional revolt. On the way to Jerusalem he was warned twice—Acts 21, but he rationalized the whole situation. The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. This is a prayer request for an action extended over a period of time. The passive voice: Paul wants to receive the action of the verb, which is deliverance. The subjunctive mood is potential, but being used with hina (ἵνα) [pronounced HEE-na] introduces a purpose clause semi-final in which a prayer request is noted. With this is the preposition apó (ἀπό) [pronounced aw-PO] plus the ablative plural from the definite article used as a demonstrative pronoun and translated “from those,” with the present active participle of apeithéō (ἀπειθέω) [pronounced ap-i-THEH-oh]. It means to disobey, to be disobedient or to be an unbeliever. Here it seems to refer to both believers and unbelievers because both categories exist in Jerusalem and both categories are negative to doctrine. The believer is just as antagonistic as the unbeliever when he is involved in reversionism. Therefore it is a reference to reversionistic believers as well as Judaistic unbelievers. Both categories are zealous in their opposition of the apostle. It should be translated, “from those who are disobedient.” “Apeithéō (ἀπειθέω) [pronounced ap-i-THEH-oh] is in the present tense of duration, it denotes what has begun in the past and continues into the present time, both negative volition toward doctrine and intensive opposition to the apostle Paul. The active voice: both those who have rejected or have been disobedient to the gospel and those believers who have gone negative toward doctrine produce the action of the verb. The unbelievers are called Judaizers; the believers are called reversionistic legalists. The participle is circumstantial. Then the preposition en (ἐν) [pronounced en] plus the locative of the proper noun Ioudaíos (Ἰουδαίος) [pronounced ee-ou-DYE-os], referring to the south Roman province of Palestine and comparable to the southern kingdom of Judah.

Principle: The unbeliever rejects or is disobedient to that doctrine known as the gospel. The believer has accepted the gospel but after salvation has rejected Bible doctrine, and therefore has moved into reversionism; he has retreated instead of advanced.

“and that my service which I have for Jerusalem may be accepted of the saints” – this is what he wants. The connective kai continuing the semi-final purpose clause, “and that”; and with it the nominative singular subject diakonia (διακονία) [pronounced dee-ak-on-EE-ah] plus the possessive genitive singular from the personal pronoun egó (ἐγώ) [pronounced ehg-OH] – “my ministry.” His ministry is teaching doctrine but he I also going to function administratively. At this point Paul has no openings to teach doctrine or to speak in the local churches at Jerusalem, only the administration of the offering for the destitute Jewish believers. Then the prepositional phrase, eis (εἰς) [pronounced ICE] plus the accusative from the proper noun for Jerusalem – “to Jerusalem.” Next is the aorist active subjunctive from the verb gínomai (γίνομαι) [pronounced GIN-oh-my] – might become.” The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: Paul’s ministry produces the action of the verb. The subjunctive mood is potential, and the potential is already zero. There is no “I have,” it is not found in the original. It is simply “that my ministry to Jerusalem might become.” Then the predicate nominative from the compound euprósdektos (εὐπρόσδεκτος) [pronounced yoo-PROS-dehk-toss], “acceptable,” the one thing that will never happen in Jerusalem. There comes a time when your personal desires and God’s will are going to be absolutely antithetical. Paul made a decision and he wants people to pray for him regarding it, and there is no way they can pray for him. There isn’t a thing you can do when people make mistakes.

Points

1. Inasmuch as “ministry” covers both the teaching of doctrine and the administration of funds it is obvious that Paul is using the generous offering of the Greek Gentiles as an opportunity to get his foot in the door in Jerusalem. He has an intense desire to minister to these people.
2. Paul has much to offer the Jerusalem believers by way of doctrinal teaching, but they have never forgotten Paul’s persecution when he was an unbeliever.
3. In fact, many of their relatives were killed or impoverished by the zealous young Pharisee, Saul of Tarsus.
4. Since then Paul has become the great advocate of grace which rips the heart out of Judaism. Because of this there is much controversy over Paul in Jerusalem, and even more antagonism toward Paul from the Jerusalem church.
5. Yet no one can offer more doctrinal teaching, no one is greater or more helpful for the advance of any believer than Paul. Principle: The greatest ministry in the world is totally ineffective in the face of negative volition. We cannot break through negative volition. Even Peter had compromised regarding the law when he was in Jerusalem, and it was Paul who straightened Peter out – Galatians 2:11ff.
6. Peter came from Jerusalem to Antioch and became divisive regarding the Mosaic law so that the deception caused disunity and division among the believers in Antioch.

Romans 15:31 That I may be delivered from those who are disobedient in Judaea; and that my ministry to Jerusalem might become acceptable to the saints.

Points

1. It has already been noted that this prayer request was incompatible with the geographical will of God for the apostle Paul. He should be going to Rome.
2. An erroneous prayer request results in ineffective intercessory prayer.
3. Paul’s journey to Jerusalem is part of his emotional reversionism, and any request for his blessing is null and void; it is cancelled by reversionism. Principle: The most difficult prayer in the world for anyone is for a reversionist. There is very little can be done except for the prayer of importunity. Importunity is, in effect, begging God to spare someone that they might live long enough to recover.

4. Paul comes under divine discipline in Jerusalem, and because he is under divine discipline this nullifies the petition being answered through their intercession.
5. By analogy, intercessory prayer is like the use of artillery to support infantry in the advance. Artillery, like prayer, can only support when it is on the target. If it doesn't hit the target it is totally ineffective. So is prayer that is not zeroed in on the target, the will of God.
6. The prayer request must specify a correct target compatible grid coordinates of God's sovereign will.
7. However, in the next verse Paul makes a correct and accurate prayer request, and that one will be answered.

Romans 15:32 so that having come to you in joy, by the will of God I may be refreshed with you. (BLB)

Verse 32 – the second request. In this verse we have accurate prayer resulting in efficacious prayer function. “That I may come unto you with joy by the will of God.” The conjunction hina (ἵνα) [pronounced HEE-na] introduces and continues the concept of the purpose clause. The aorist active participle of érchomai (ἔρχομαι) [pronounced AIR-khoh-my] has to do with Paul finally traveling in the right direction, and is translated “having come.” The desire is to preserve Paul and he will be preserved; he will not die in Jerusalem. But the petition that he might have an effective ministry is wrong and will get a “no.” The prayer to get Paul to Rome will be answered. Even erroneous petition cannot hinder the plan of God. Often God honors the desire behind the petition and answers that much of it. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. Paul's arrival in Rome as a mature believer will see him with +H again. Paul will produce the action, and it is a temporal participle translated “So that when I come.”

There are two prayer requests from Paul, one which is good and the other which is not.

Then prós (πρός) [pronounced pross] plus the accusative plural of su—“face to face with you,” referring to Paul's face to face teaching. Then another prepositional phrase, en (ἐν) [pronounced en] plus the locative singular of chara (χαρά) [pronounced khahr-AH] – “in happiness,” i.e. sharing the happiness of God. It assumes that Paul, by the time he gets to Rome, will be not only in fellowship but back to old status as a mature believer, and still have all that doctrine which these Roman believers desire. Finally, dia plus the ablative of thelêma (θέλημα) [pronounced THEHL-ay-mah] plus the genitive of theos (θεός) [pronounced theh-OSS] – “by the will of God.” Happiness and the will of God always go together. Doing the will of God involves three things: right thought, right function, right place.

“and may you be refreshed” – the adjunctive use of the conjunction kai should be translated “also.” The aorist middle subjunctive of the compound sunanapaúomai (συναναπαύομαι) [pronounced soon-an-ap-OW-om-ahee] [sun = with; anapaúō (ἀναπαύω)]

Romans 15:32 So that when I come face to face with you in happiness by the will of God, I also myself may find rest and refreshment with you.

Points

1. The subjunctive mood says that this rest and refreshment is potential. The potentiality comes from the fact that Paul isn't there yet, and that when he gets there, there must be positive volition. The greatest rapport that can exist in human life is between communicator and those who are respondersto doctrine. The potential factor involves the essentials of life, of course the essential being the doctrine that Paul has and will communicate.
2. If the Roman believers are positive toward doctrine this will be mutual refreshment and blessing in the Lord.
3. Looking at the other side, negative volition toward doctrine will cancel this principle and therefore the application of the honor code demands inflexibility with regard to the essentials of doctrine and total flexibility with regard to the non-essentials. When they see Paul for the first time, they might be surprised, as he does not look very good (as we know from the Acts of Paul and Thekla). Paul is not a handsome or attractive man.
4. The royal family honor code provides the atmosphere for rest and refreshment. There can be none of this apart from maximum doctrine resident in the soul.
5. For this reason the first degree of maturity (super-grace A) is characterized by rest and refreshment.
6. The second prayer request is legitimate and will be fulfilled in Paul's first visit to Rome.
7. The effectiveness of intercessory prayer demands that the prayer request be compatible with the will of God.

8. This means that the barrage of prayer will be right on target, advancing Paul into their very presence under the conditions specified.

The final verse deals with the honor code objective.

Lesson #517

517 09/05/1978 Romans 15:33–16:2 Flexibility on Wake Island; certification of Phoebe, Patroness and friend of Paul

Messages for soldiers at Pearl Harbor. People in offices 2000 miles away where people had no idea. The flexible and the inflexible. Wake Island is between Hawaii and Asia.

Romans 15:33 Now the God of peace be with all of you. Amen. (BLB)

Verse 33 – a statement regarding the honor code objective. “Now the God of peace be with you all.” The transitional use of the postpositive conjunctive particle de is correctly translated “Now.” The nominative singular subject ho theos (θεός) [pronounced theh-OSS] refers to God—“the God.” The genitive of possession from the noun eirênê (εἰρήνη, ης, ῆ) [pronounced eye-RAY-nay] which means primarily “prosperity.” God possesses an unlimited supply of prosperity, and inevitably for us as believers all prosperity comes from God. Because of ellipsis we have to insert a verb here, the verb to be—“be.” The prepositional phrase meta plus the genitive of the adjective pás (πάς) [pronounced pahs] and the personal pronoun su – with you all,” referring to the Romans.

The last word, “Amen” is amên (ἀμήν) [pronounced am-ANE], which has many meanings. Here it is a liturgical word for the liturgical formula for terminating the subject, and it requires the response of positive volition in the soul.

Romans 15:33 Now the God of prosperity be with all of you. Amen.

Chapter 16

The honor code sequel

Outline:

1. Apostolic salutations, 1-16.
2. The exception to the honor code function, 17-19.
3. The ultimate triumph of the royal family, 20-27.

Verses 1-2, the certification of Phebe.

Personal Greetings

Bob reads chapter 16 in the KJV. We should not neglect or ignore any portion of the Word of God. Everything has meaning or it would not be in the Word of God.

Romans 16:1 Now I commend to you Phoebe our sister, being also a servant of the church in Cenchrea,... (BLB)

Verse 1 – “I commend unto you Phebe our sister.” The postpositive conjunctive particle de is used as a transition. The verb is the present active indicative of sunistaô/sunistanô/sunistêmi (συνιστάω/συνιστάνω/συνίστημι) [pronounced soon-ihs-TAH-oh/soon-ohs-tah-AHN-oh/soon-ohs-TAH-ay-mee] which means to present, to introduce, to recommend someone to someone else. “Now I recommend.” The customary present tense denotes what habitually occurs when Paul under the honor code principle is recommending a mature believer. Paul entrusted Phebe with the transportation of this epistle. The active voice: Paul the human writer recommends her and gives her the epistle. The indicative mood is declarative for historical reality. Phebe is a believer living in Corinth. She is about to take a business trip to Rome and consequently Paul entrusted her with the care of the Roman epistle and certifies her as the bearer of this portion of the Word of God. Acts 20:3 and this passage lets us know that Phoebe is the one taking this epistle to Rome.

With this is the dative plural indirect object from the personal pronoun su, referring to the Roman believers. The dative of indirect object indicates the ones in whose interest the act of writing Romans is performed, therefore very close to the dative of advantage. “Now I recommend to you for your advantage/blessing.” Then her name, the accusative singular direct object from the proper noun Phoibē (Φοίβη) [pronounced FOY-bay], Phebe.” It means “radiant” or “attractive.” Her charm came from doctrine resident in her soul. With it is the appositional accusative from adelphê (ἀδελφή) [pronounced ad-ehl-FAY], which means “sister.” Plus the possessive genitive plural from the personal pronoun egó (ἐγώ) [pronounced ehg-OH] – “our sister,” referring to a fellow believer.

“which is a servant of the church which is at Cenchrea” – the present active participle from eimi (εἰμί) [pronounced eye-ME], “who is.” The retroactive progressive present denotes what is begun in the past and continues into the present time, indicating this woman has stability. The active voice: Phebe produces the action. This participle is in the accusative case and takes its predicate nominative in the same case. Plus the accusative feminine singular of diakonia (διακονία) [pronounced dee-ak-on-EE-ah], which means a minister. Women have ministries within certain limitations—no woman has the gift of pastor-teacher and therefore no woman can communicate from a pulpit to male and female in a congregation. This does not preclude the ministry of women. Women are great teachers by nature. Since the participle of eimi (εἰμί) [pronounced eye-ME] is in the accusative case, the noun diakonia (διακονία) [pronounced dee-ak-on-EE-ah] must be in the accusative case to match it as a predicate nominative—“who is a helper” or “who is a minister.”

Then the genitive of relationship from ekklêsía (ἐκκλησία) [pronounced ek-klay-SEE-ah], referring to the local church in Cenchrea, plus the prepositional phrase en (ἐν) [pronounced en] plus Kenchreaí (Κεγχρεαί) [pronounced keng-khreh-AH-hee], the eastern harbour of Corinth, a very busy suburb. In Acts 18:18 Paul sailed from this port. Apparently the church met in the home of Phebe.

Romans 16:1 Now I recommend to you Phebe our sister, who is a helper, an agent of the church which is at Cenchrea.

While the word diakonos (διάκονος) [pronounced dee-AK-on-oss] is often misconstrued and distorted into a female board of deacons [deaconesses], this passage does not warrant that concept. In fact, it is obvious that 2000 years ago this woman not only fulfilled an administrative function for the local church but also apparently taught the children. In the local church administration and function no woman is given an authority over man. There is a board of deacons and that board is restricted to the man. This does not detract from the woman, but on the contrary it raises the woman to a higher level of respect and honor which elicits the response of love and honor and respect for womanhood. The woman's position in the man's world is unique. This is a man's world, but the reason this is a man's world is because of the woman. This is an appreciation of femininity. There is no creature more loved, more honored, than the woman who has attained maturity adjustment to the justice of God through maximum doctrine resident in the soul. The inner beauty of the mature woman believer is an inspiration to virtue and honor in any gentleman.

Romans 16:2 ...that you might receive her in the Lord worthily of the saints, and you might assist her in whatever matter she may need of you. For she also has been a patroness of many, and of me myself.

Verse 2 – “That you receive her in the Lord, as becometh saints.” A final clause is introduced by the conjunction hina (ἵνα) [pronounced HEE-na] – “that,” plus the subjunctive. A final clause denotes a purpose, an objective. The aorist middle subjunctive from the verb prosdechomai (προσδέχομαι) [pronounced pros-DEKH-om-ahee] follows; it means to welcome, to receive. The constative aorist is for an action extended over a period of time. As long as she is in Rome, receive her. The constative gathers up into one entirety her stay in Rome before she returns to Cenchrea. This is a deponent verb, it is middle in form but active in meaning, and the Roman believers are to produce the action of the verb. The accusative singular direct object from the intensive pronoun autós (αὐτὸς) [pronounced ow-TOSS] is used for the third person personal pronoun—“her.” Then en (ἐν) [pronounced en] plus the locative of kurios (κύριος) [pronounced KOO-ree-oss]—“in the Lord.” This is not positional truth here but whatever she needs, help her. Plus axiós (ἀξίως) [pronounced ax-EE-occe] tôn hagiôn. The adverb axiós (ἀξίως) [pronounced ax-EE-occe] means “in a manner worthy of.” The adverb emphasizes the function of the royal family honor code. The descriptive genitive plural from hagios (ἅγιος) [pronounced HA-gee-oss] plus the generic use of the definite article—“the royal family, the saints.”

“and that ye assist her in whatever business she hath need of you” – kai should be translated here, “and that.” The aorist active subjunctive of paristêmi/paristanô (παρίστημι/παριστάνω) [pronounced par-IHS-tay-mee/par-is-TAHN-oh] [par = beside; histêmi (ἵστημι) [pronounced HIHS-tay-mee] = to stand] which means to help her. The culminative aorist views the action of the verb in its entirety but emphasizes the existing results: that the Roman believers will help her in any way she needs help while she is in Rome. The active voice: Roman believers are expected to produce the action of the verb because they function under the honor code. The subjunctive mood merely indicates the purpose clause: “and that you stand by to help her.” The dative singular indirect object from the intensive pronoun autós (αὐτὸς) [pronounced ow-TOSS], used as the third person singular—“her.”

Points

1. The honor code recognizes the concept of helping or standing by other believers.
2. This is an expression of impersonal love in the honor code. It puts impersonal love into action on behalf of another believer.
3. In order to avoid conflict with the privacy of the priesthood in the honor code the believer who desires to help must desire it from his volition.
4. Phebe must express her desire for help or makes requests in certain cases.

Next is the preposition en (ἐν) [pronounced en] plus the locative of the relative pronoun hos (ὃς) [pronounced hohç], with the particle án (ὅν) [pronounced ahn] used to indicate uncertainty and put in simply to indicate that Paul does not know what Phebe’s business in Rome is, he didn’t ask her. It was none of his business. He just knew that she was going to Rome. Privacy of the priesthood. Plus the locative singular of the noun pragma (πρᾶγμα) [pronounced PRAG-mah]—“in any matter in which.” Pragma (πρᾶγμα) [pronounced PRAG-mah] is used for a law suit, for business function, for disputes. Then the present active subjunctive of chrêzô (χρῆζω) [pronounced KHRADE-zoh], meaning “to have need of.” “That you might receive her [Phebe] in the Lord, in a manner worthy of the saints, and that you stand by to help her in any matter in which she might have need of you.” The present active subjunctive from chrêzô (χρῆζω) [pronounced KHRADE-zoh] plus the particle án (ὅν) [pronounced ahn] denotes that the action of the verb is dependent on some circumstance such as Phebe’s desire for help and her desire to actually state her business, or in any terms in which she might wish to do so. The present tense is a perfective present, it denotes the potential of continuation of existing results, namely the business which brings Phebe to Rome. The active voice: Phebe is a stranger in Rome and therefore she is going to need help. The subjunctive mood is potential. The objective genitive plural from su, “of you” or even “from you.”

“for she has been a succourer of many” – the postpositive conjunctive particle gar is used to express a cause or reason. The adjunctive use of kai means “also.” The nominative singular subject of autós (αὐτὸς) [pronounced ow-TOSS] is translated “she” – “but she has also been.” The aorist passive indicative of gínomai (γίνομαι) [pronounced GIN-oh-my] here means to be. The culminative aorist tense views the event in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. Maximum doctrine resident in her soul has made her become a helper in the function of her ambassadorship. The passive voice: Phebe receives the action of the verb as the result of advance to maturity. The indicative mood is declarative for historical reality in her honor code function in Cenchrea. Then the predicate nominative singular from prostátis (προστάτις) [pronounced pros-TAHT-is] which means “of great assistance.”

“and of myself also” – kai emou autou. This is kai – “and,” plus the objective genitive of egó (ἐγώ) [pronounced ehg-OH] – “of me,” plus the intensive pronoun autós (αὐτός) [pronounced ow-TOSS], “myself”: “and including myself.”

Romans 16:2 That you receive her [Phebe] in the Lord, in a manner worthy of saints, and that you stand by to help her in any matter in which she might have need of you; for she has also been of great assistance to many, including myself.

518 09/06/1978 Romans 16:3 "Heroines of Dixie"; Sherman's policy; role of Phoebe; integrity plus service of Aquila and Prisca; doctrine of the royal family honor code (1–2)

An historic account of Yankees destroying a city in South Carolina. A fire on Main Street and the firemen were not allowed to put the flames out. People were not allowed to leave with even food and blankets. Homeless women and children shivering in the night air. Nearer to a vision of hell than anything I expect to see again. See what you have brought to you?

Bob reads some remarkable passages for the diary of a 17 year-old girl in South Carolina (Emma LeConte) when the Yankees came through burning down the buildings of her city. I have found these recollections online:

<https://docsouth.unc.edu/fpn/leconteemma/leconte.html>

General Sherman was great at fighting women and children.

Some writing from Robt E. Lee's wife. Grant's terms were reasonable and Lee agreed to them for that reason. They could achieve by starvation that they could not win by valor; and they had not taken a single city in the South except for Vicksburg that had not been deserted.

Points

1. Just as believers are designed by regeneration to respond to God, so women are designed by creation to respond to men.
2. The responding woman is the greatest of all creatures, while the reacting woman is the worst of all creatures.
3. In this way the female of category homo sapien encapsulates the male of category mankind. The woman is under the authority of the man but she plays a far greater role than the man. In the function of the woman it requires greater moral courage than the man. More is demanded of the woman than the man in the man's world.

4. While this is a man's world it is a desert without women.
5. Planet earth will not be God's world until the Second Advent and the Millennial reign of our Lord.
6. The earth is the devil's world but because God has graciously given the woman to man it becomes a wonderful world when the woman fulfils her role. There is no greater preparation for the fulfilment of that role than, after salvation, the intake of doctrine.
7. This requires spiritual maturity such as possessed by Phebe.
8. Again, women are the best or the worst creatures, depending upon femininity versus non-femininity, demanding as it were, equality and, in effect, superiority in their function in life.
9. All women have an old sin nature, and the prize function of the woman's old sin nature is much more subtle and much more complex than that of the man.
10. While women are not as smart as men they are much more subtle and infinitely more cunning. The cleverness of the woman is, of course, a byword in human history.
11. The woman has the potential, then, of being uniquely magnificent as the glory of the man.
12. This potential only becomes a reality through regeneration and advance in the plan of God to maturity.
13. Phebe was such a magnificent woman as to be able to do something for Paul that no one else could possibly do. She provided comfort, encouragement, inspiration of soul, hospitality, honorable companionship. She was a noble encouragement. Phebe represents everything which is great in Christian womanhood – honor, integrity, maturity.

The woman in her very design is made to respond to the man.

Verses 3-4, the integrity of Priscilla and Aquila.

Romans 16:3 Greet Prisca and Aquila, my fellow workers in Christ Jesus—

Verse 3 – “Greet Priscilla and Aquila my helpers in Christ Jesus.” The aorist active imperative of the verb aspazomai (ἀσπάζομαι) [pronounced as-PAD-zom-ahee]. Paul only once ever entrusted a woman with something as valuable as Romans. It was Phebe who brought Romans to Rome and this is one of the highest compliments that the great apostle ever gave to any woman. Now he moves on to another woman who is magnificent in the marriage stage. As Phebe is magnificent in single state, so we have Priscilla as magnificent in the marital state. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, it refers here to a momentary action. “Greet” is a good translation. The active voice: Paul produces the action of the verb by writing this greeting. The imperative mood is the imperative of entreaty, not command. It does not convey the finality of a command, it has the force of a request. And named first, again, is the lady. The accusative singular direct object from the proper noun Príska (Πρίσκα) [pronounced PRIS-kah]—“Prisca.”

She is a fantastic woman, the wife of Aquila (meaning, the eagle). She is also not only a great Christian but a great Christian wife. She not only recognizes the authority of her husband as the head of the house but sustains him in every decision. If he ever weakened at any point she was there to provide the moral courage to keep going. Besides being everything a Christian wife should be there are three things mentioned about her in the Scripture. She was in total accord with her husband in opening their home for the assembly of the local church in Ephesus. When a woman will go along with her husband’s decisions and back him and encourage him, it is truly a magnificent thing. 1Corinthians 16:19. Aquila is Jewish; Prisca is Gentile.

In Paul’s departure from Corinth Prisca and Aquila accompanied Paul as his companions and helpers. Acts 18:18.

Prisca joined her husband in positive volition toward doctrine resulting in maximum doctrine resident in the soul of both. Both husband and wife had cracked the maturity barrier – a rare combination. Having attained maturity, both were able to instruct Apollos in Ephesus – Acts 18:24-26.

Paul first encountered this married couple in Corinth – Acts 18:2.

“my helpers in Christ Jesus” – the accusative plural direct object from the noun sunergós (συνεργός) [pronounced soon-er-GOSS]. It means co-workers, fellow workers. Plus the possessive genitive singular from egó (ἐγώ) [pronounced ehg-OH]. No man is an island, and that includes the apostle Paul. He had team help from this married couple. Then en (ἐν) [pronounced en] plus the locative of Christos (χριστός) [pronounced krees-TOHSS] and Iêsous (Ἰησοῦς) [pronounced ee-ay-SOOCE] – “in Christ Jesus.” They are all royal family. They must function as a team.

Romans 16:3 Greet Prisca and Aquila, my fellow workers in Christ Jesus.

Points

1. Here is a marriage between a Jew and a Gentile which was not only the quintessence of domestic tranquillity in compatibility, but a marriage which establishes the record for personal and impersonal love which provided a haven for all who were encompassed in their sphere.
2. They had personal friends and great friendships due to having capacity for love.

3. Prisca was a Roman citizen and Roman aristocracy.
4. Aquila was a Jew who came to Rome, met Prisca, wooed and won her.
5. When Claudius in AD 49 banished the Jews from Rome, Prisca, a Roman aristocrat chose to go with her husband, rather than to remain in Rome her native city.
6. Almost ten years later Paul sends greetings to them, now residing in Rome after the death of Claudius.
7. When Paul is imprisoned in Rome the second time Prisca and Aquila will have returned to Ephesus. But they are included in Paul's last greeting – 2Timothy 4:19.
8. Aquila was a previous slave who took the name of his benefactor.
9. They had great personal love for one another.

Bob is going back to the royal family honor code.

Definition and description:

One of the points of the honor code is to be able to think like aristocracy. This is not a bad word. Liberalism and communism try to make this into a bad word. Every aristocracy develops through integrity and honor. These do tend to degenerate. They disintegrate after a few hundred years. We are royal family. All aristocracies have standards.

This doctrine seems to be fairly close to the 1980 doctrine of the royal family honor code. This may be closer to the previous doctrine of the royal family honor code.

Freedom cannot exist without property. To destroy property is to destroy freedom. Property is an essential part of privacy. We all have some. No freedom without property; but you share it in communism. That is not privacy and that is not freedom. Houston is a mess because our police chief and mayor do not understand freedom.

The Honor Code begins with recognition of freedom and emphasizes the privacy of the priesthood. There must be great tolerance for the non-essentials.

1. The laws of divine establishment sponsor the function of freedom in the human race.
2. The purpose of man's creation is to resolve the angelic conflict.. It cannot be resolved without freedom
3. Freedom has 4 principles which are inter-dependent.
4. Freedom, based on status of volition Live and let live. Legitimate self-determination. Exemption from necessity and arbitrary control. Privacy, is the environment for the function of Freedom. Property should not be confiscated or distributed.
5. Spiritual freedom is an extension of human freedom
6. All must stand or fall together (property, privacy, freedom)
7. Slavery to false doctrine (Gal 5:1b)

A person's property is sacred. Anything left in the church should be as safe as the vault of England. You parents should drill your children in respect for others property.

It is not the business of the church to make people leave any job.

Berachah has gotten rid of the women who have come up and told others what they cannot wear in church. Objectivity is key.

Lesson #519

519 09/07/1978 Romans 16 New American games without competition; doctrine of the royal family honor code (3–7, amplified); relaxed mental attitude and stoicism

Bob reading Time Magazine. Conservatives have antisemitism as a part of their thinking. Time Magazine is the only magazine printing articles telling us how degenerate we are. Vampire Blob is a tag game. Related to Whole Earth catalogue; and this is all about changing the way America plays games. All is a cooperative game and not games where people win and lose. They want games where everyone plays and no one loses it. The goal is to eliminate goal keeping altogether. Many learn from their employers how to play non-scoring games. One game is a tug of peace.

Impersonal love is required toward everyone; personal love is only for a few. Impersonal love emphasizes your character and doctrine. Just as emotion is the enemy of spirituality, so is emotion out of control the enemy of personal love. You love all on the basis of your norms and standards.

Stoics subordinated their emotion to their mentality. Stoicism was neutralized by a lack of divine viewpoint in the soul.

How you feel in the Christian life is not an issue in the spiritual. You cannot make emotion the criterion for living the Christian life. Impersonal love is what lifts us above everything else in life. The repetition of love the brothers is impersonal love; it is not personal love. You would have a nervous breakdown trying to be nice to all kinds of people. You don't have to be nice to people and to be around them. You can always discard acquaintances but you cannot lose a friend. All love is based upon your standards and your capacity and they should increase. You do not lower yourself to the standards of others. If they malign you, you do not seek revenge. We must learn to respect God's righteousness in others. When you understand imputation, you are very glad to know that you have God's righteousness in you. God could not bless us except that we have a home—the imputed righteousness of God.

Mental attitude love is a part of impersonal love. It is not a part of personal love. There will be times in personal love when you will not have an relaxed mental attitude toward them. If you bear a grudge against someone, you are out of fellowship.

Honor codes have stated objectives. Many honor codes of the middle ages were designed to honor and respect womanhood from father to son. Out of this came the proper attitude toward the weaker sex. In [X] you are supported by divine establishment. In [Y] you are supported by the honor code function and by divine establishment.

It is easy to exploit a believer's guilt. Religion does this all of the time. Naming your sins to God for forgiveness is very difficult for some people especially with a religious background. The common objective is learning Bible doctrine. So the environment of the church encourages this.

We are under morality but that is not the spiritual life. The honor code excludes Christian production as a means of blessing from God. This does not exclude production as normal activity. The priesthood is the basis for advancing to maturity and the basis for blessing from God. Our ambassadorship is connected to our production, like giving, witnessing, praying for others. This is a result of spiritual growth. God does not bless us for what we do; God blesses us when we have the capacity for blessing; and that comes from spiritual growth. That are six categories of blessings based upon imputation of +R at salvation.

520 09/08/1978 Romans 16:4a Vietnam War; conspiracies in the U.S.; doctrine of the royal family honor code (8–16); laws of supreme sacrifice and love

When the Germans went into Yugoslavia (what is now Yugoslavia), this is a number of groups of people living there and they all have very different ideas. Some are Roman Catholic like the Croats; the Serbs are Greek Orthodox. Others are communists. Many little countries; since 1920, they have been united under a national banner and a king.

Someone escapes and goes off into the hills with about 30 people. They plan on guerilla tactics. He encourages his people to stay there in their homes. For every German who is shot, the Germans would go into a village and kill 100 people.

They contact a communist Tito. He did not care if Yugoslavia survived. They began to supply him with arms. Then these communists would cut off noses and ears; and go into villages and rape.

This brings us to the country which could place us into guerilla warfare. They are trying to take away our guns so we will be defenseless.

The idea of differentiating between fascists and communists is ludicrous. No difference between the fascists of Hitler's party and the communists of Russia.

We have not learned the importance of guerilla warfare. The guerilla warfare has succeeded in Africa. It is being exploited all because a lot of stupid liberals in this country.

We are inflexible in our military doctrine; whereas the communists are totally flexible; and they will use children and women to further their ends. They fight an all out war. They give every aspect of war attention.

The honor code makes the imputations meaningful.

Summary

1. The honor code is related to God, the nation and the people. Jesus Christ uses the mature believer as the real issue in history. Jesus always works around, through the remnant of grace.
2. Understanding the objectives of the hopes becomes the basis for relating these to honor code function.
3. The royal family honor code demands cognizance and dependence upon the justice of God; which is our point of contact. We can do nothing to get in between God's righteousness and God's justice. We are blessed apart from any works; we cannot break through this encapsulation.
4. Grace is the policy of the justice of God in blessing mankind. This is a divine policy where man is excluded from taking part in salvation or in getting blessing from God.
5. Impersonal love versus personal love.
6. Essential versus nonessentials.

The Royal Family Honor Code Demands Everything of the Strong Believer

1. Romans 15:1–4 obligation increases as our spiritual maturity increases.
2. Romans 15:1 Now we, the strong [mature believer], are obligated [under the honor code] to keep bearing the weaknesses of the weak, and to accommodate ourselves. Additional responsibilities are assigned to the mature believer. You allow the immature believer to grow. You don't make fun of him; you don't straighten out every Tom, Dick and Harry. Maximum function of impersonal love. By not accommodating ourselves, the norms and standards of the mature believer are emphasized. We often set aside our liberty and freedom and set it aside. New believers babble all of their superficial ideas. Let him alone; stay out of it. It is arrogance trying to straighten everyone else out. Avoiding argumentation and retaliation. This may appear to be weak to the weak, it is strength. This makes possible the spiritual growth and the advance of the weak.
3. Romans 15:2 Let each one of us [the mature believer] accommodate his neighbor for the purpose of the good to the edification complex. The good is X+Y+Z.
4. Romans 15:3 For even the Christ did not accommodate Himself; but, as it stands written [in Psalm 69:9], The blasphemous insults of those who insulted You [God the Father] fell on Me [Christ on the cross]. (Psalm 69:9)
5. Romans 15:4 For as many doctrines as have been written before [Old Testament], for our instruction they were written, in order that through perseverance and encouragement from the scriptures we might have hope [= confidence]. All momentum and advance in the plan of God is based upon hope.
6. Continued momentum in the Christian life. The believer produces from his ambassadorship. He cannot advance apart from authority-orientation. Production is a result of advancing. It is a result; not the means. God's blessing comes from cracking the maturity barrier. Our income tax is evil and a census is an evil thing. We do not need to know how many people there are. It is a violation of privacy and a violation of freedom. You have freedom and privacy unless you are a criminal.

7. Hebrews 13:17 the authority of the pastor-teacher. The responsibility of the pastor to teach the doctrine.
8. Reciprocity of categories. Romans 15:26–27 ...for Macedonia and Achaia have decided with pleasure to make a special offering to the poor ones among the saints in Jerusalem. Yes, they have decided to do this with pleasure [the gentiles sending the gift]; in fact, they are obligated to them [the Jews]. For you see, if the Gentiles have shared in spiritual things belonging to them [the Jews; and they have], they [Gentiles] are obligated [under the honor code] to minister to them in material things. As God has prospered them financially, the people are to share their material wealth with them.
9. Christian giving as a part of the honor code.
10. Personal avoid of self-pity, often used as an evil; or some use self-pity to gain the attention of others, like a yipping dog. Our love must be non-hypocritical. Be devoted to one another; esteem others more highly than yourselves. This is using personal weakness to attract another person. These weasels are weak; and they are evil people. Under honor code principles, there is no relationship there. Romans 14:8 the honor code prohibits self-pity.
11. The imputation of divine righteousness eliminates... Self-righteousness produces sins such as arrogance. Righteousness produces evil. Self-righteousness is a complex of evil. It has no merit and no virtue in the Christian way of life.
12. Maximum function of the honor code is to give one's life for another. John 15:12–13
13. The honor code is the only system that makes dying a part of living.

Romans 16:4 ...who have lain down their neck for my life, whom not only I thank, but also all the churches of the Gentiles—...

Verse 4 – “Who have for my life laid down their own necks.” The nominative masculine plural subject from the indefinite relative pronoun hostis (ὅστις) [pronounced HOHS-tiss]. This is not a simple relative pronoun, it is a categorical relative pronoun. A literal translation would be, “Who are of such a category as.” This husband and wife team are a special category, says this relative pronoun. The prepositional phrase hupér (ὑπέρ) [pronounced hoop-AIR] plus the ablative singular of psuchê (ψυχή) [pronounced psoo-KHAY] – hupér (ὑπέρ) [pronounced hoop-AIR] = on behalf of or for the sake of; psuchê (ψυχή) [pronounced psoo-KHAY] == soul or life. Since human life is in the soul psuchê (ψυχή) [pronounced psoo-KHAY] is used both ways. Here it means life. Then the genitive singular pronoun from egó (ἐγώ) [pronounced ehg-OH] in which Paul is speaking of himself – “my soul/life.” “Who on behalf of my life.”

The aorist active indicative of the verb hupotíthēmi (ὑποτίθημι) [pronounced hoop-ot-IHTH-ay-mee] is inserted [hupó (ὑπό) [pronounced hoop-OH] = under; títhēmi (τίθημι) [pronounced TIHTH-ā-mee] = to place], means to put one's neck under the axe, and it comes to mean risk. It is an idiom which is translated “who have risked their own necks for my life.”

The accusative singular direct object from tráchēlos (τράχηλος) [pronounced TRAKH-ay-loss] which means “necks.” The possessive genitive plural from the reflexive pronoun heautou (ἑαυτοῦ) [pronounced heh-ow-TOO], their own. The aorist tense of the verb is the constative aorist, it gathers up into one entirety the action of the verb, which means more than one occasion. They have done this, not just once but many times. The active voice: Prisca and Aquila produce the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the historical reality of this concept; they have actually done this.

Lesson #521

521 09/10/1978 Romans 16:4b Doctrine of the royal family honor code (re-organized, points. 1–5) definition, freedom, plan of God, privacy and flexibility

Romans 16:4 ...who have lain down their neck for my life, whom not only I thank, but also all the churches of the Gentiles—... (BLB)

“unto whom not only I give thanks, but also all the churches of the Gentiles.” The dative plural indirect object from the relative pronoun hos – “to whom.” This is also a dative of advantage. The antecedent is Prisca and Aquila. Then the phrase, ouk (οὐκ) [pronounced ook] egó (ἐγώ) [pronounced ehg-OH] monos (μόνος) [pronounced MON-oss] – ouk (οὐκ) [pronounced ook] is the negative which means that Paul is not alone; egó (ἐγώ) [pronounced ehg-OH] is the personal pronoun first person singular referring to the apostle Paul, and with it is monos (μόνος) [pronounced MON-oss], “not only I.” Paul is not the only one for whom they have risked everything. He adds that there are a great many others who have received blessing from this married couple. Then allá (ἀλλά) [pronounced ahl-LAH] is an adversative conjunction which includes others in the principle: not only Paul but others also. With the adjunctive use of kai this is translated “but also.”

The verb is the present active indicative of eucharisteô (εὐχαριστέω) [pronounced yew-khahr-ih-STEH-oh], which means to give thanks. It indicates first of all a mental attitude of love, of capacity for love and capacity for life which means appreciation. Capacity for love + capacity for life = genuine appreciation. The present tense is the present of duration which denotes what was begun in the past and continues into the present time. In other words, gratitude which continues. The concept of continuing gratitude is a part of capacity for love as well as capacity for life. Whenever a person is grateful and the gratitude is perpetuated for any period of time it is indicative of that capacity for life and love. The active voice: Paul produces the action, but he is not alone. All of the Gentile churches, all of the believers who have come into contact have the same appreciation. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the fact that this married couple had had a most fantastic impact on the lives of others. Next is the nominative plural adjective pás (πάς) [pronounced pahs], plus ekklêsía (ἐκκλησία) [pronounced ek-klay-SEE-ah], referring to all of the churches where they have been. Plus the descriptive genitive plural of ethnos (ἔθνος, οὐς, τό) [pronounced EHTH-noss] – “of the Gentiles.”

Romans 16:4 Who have risked their necks for my life; to whom I not only give thanks, but also all of the churches of the Gentiles.

This couple has risked their lives for other believers. We are not aware of the exact nature of these risks; just that they took place.

All of this is to bring us to the next stage of this passage which has to do with an honor roll of those who have been great in Rome in the function of the honor code. These are people who had been under the ministry of three different pastors.^[1]

The believer in Christ is born into aristocracy. The original word for achievement is aristocracy. Those establish their achievement within a certain group; and they become aristocracy as a result. The Church Age is the dispensation of the royal family of God. We must have royal family function, which is the Christian way of life. Most connect this with a church program, or following the Ten Commandments, or being nice and helping your neighbor. The Lord Jesus Christ is the very basis for the fact that we have an honor code. Christ has three royal titles. Royal as Son of God. Also royalty in His humanity as the son of David. His royal family are all those descended from David and Bathsheba. Jesus is also the King of Kings and Lord of Lords. This is His battlefield royalty.

The Age of Israel came to a sudden halt, and the Church Age was intercalated into the Age of Israel. Now we have a spiritual royal family. The honor code is the Christian way of life.

Right thinking results in right motivation which produces right function. For this right thinking, there must be maximum doctrine resident in the soul. This is half of the determining factor. For application of this doctrine, there must be the filling of the Holy Spirit. We cannot execute the honor code when we are filled with the Holy Spirit. The honor code is the Christian way of life. This includes the advance to maturity; it means advancing in the plan of God. The honor code makes it possible for every believer to advance to maturity. It sponsors us in the plan of God.

Main point two: Freedom and the honor code. The laws of divine establishment sponsor freedom in the function of the human race. God knew that we would live in the devil's world. We must have freedom, which is independent of our spiritual function. The laws of divine establishment are for all people. The purpose of man's creation is to resolve the angelic conflict. This cannot be fulfilled without freedom. Freedom is composed of 4 categories which are interrelated and interconnected. Freedom itself, the status of human volition as the uncaused cause of human function. We have freedom resident in the soul and it is based upon freedom. This is expressed with live and let live. Freedom means self-determination; exemption from necessity. Necessity from arbitrary control. Included with this is privacy. This is the environment for the function of freedom. Privacy is divided into two categories: when you are alone and when you are with others. The privacy of soul and body. When you come into public, you cover your body with clothes. Privacy is a great issue. We can have privacy in public, and this takes place in your soul. You can look up toward the front with this pious expression, but you are thinking, "That son of a bitch." That is privacy.

When someone comes along and tells you what to wear, you have lost your privacy. When you join the military you surrender your privacy. They should because of the principles involved in military function. The third aspect is property. Privacy and property meet under a Naderism. Certain things are built into your vehicle. Like a buzzer to tell you that your seat belt is not on.

All divine institutions have a system of authority.

Freedom cannot exist without each classification of the subject. There can be no freedom if property is easily confiscated or destroyed. Socialism and communism both destroy freedom. In Russia, there might be 20 families sharing a kitchen and a bathroom. There is no privacy. Spiritual freedom is an extension of establishment freedom. All four classifications are involved in the honor code. The laws of divine establishment never divorce freedom from the honor code. Methodists advocate the destruction of human freedom. They support guerilla warfare in Africa. They want their freedom, but they want to destroy the freedom of others. Many housewives are actually slaves, but they can advance to spiritual maturity.

Stop being enmeshed in the confinement of cosmos diabolicus.

The plan of God. $X+Y+Z = \text{the good}$. Every person has the imputation of His love. There is no human life in the womb. At the same time, Adam's original sin is imputed as well. No condemnation at birth means that there is no potential. God does not have to wait around for us to commit our first sin. This eliminates arrogance. We don't even do anything to achieve our condemnation. Adam's original sin was imputed to us, that we are condemned from birth. So our sins were set aside for the cross. Stop being conformed to this age but be transformed by the renovation of your thinking, namely the good, which is the plan of God. It is well-pleasing and complete. Romans 12:9 your love must be non-hypocritical so that you despise the evil and adhere to the good. Stop being conquered by the evil, but be conquered by the good. Advancing in the plan of God means perception of Bible doctrine. Romans 15:2 Let each one of us accommodate our neighbors for the good. Romans 16:19 certainly the report of your obedience has become known to all.

The honor code and the plan of God are the same; one is the principle and the other is the function.

The privacy of the priesthood means that every believer has the right to live his life before the Lord. The privacy of the royal priesthood means that every believer can live under the plan of God apart from the distraction or interference of others. Every believer with positive volition toward doctrine has the right to assemble in the local church to get Bible doctrine. This also allows for the establishment of Biblical norms and standards. Such a believer can assemble without his personal life or business being an issue. His personal life is not to be made public. We should be able to attend without being criticized, censored or gossiped about. Each believer must be able to advance without these things. The a passage condemns a believer, this comes from God the Holy Spirit and not from this person's peers. 1Peter 2:9 we are a holy race, a people of God's Own possession. We are a royal priesthood. We hear that some of you are living an undisciplined life acting as violators of privacy. We are told to work with a low profile and to eat your own bread (and mind your own business). Idle hands or an idle tongue violate the privacy of others.

People after being saved are confused and they do not do anything. They study to be idle. They wander around house to house. Not only idle but gossips.

The principle of flexibility in the honor code. Here is where rightly dividing the word comes into its own. We are to distinguish between the essentials and nonessentials. The essential is Bible doctrine; doctrine resident in your soul. The nonessential becomes everything else in life. You must inflexible about the essential and flexible about the nonessentials. Doctrine resident in the soul establishes the norms in which priorities are rated. Without doctrine in the soul, the believer operates under erroneous norms. Jesus distinguished between the essentials and the nonessentials. Jesus was giving a doctrinal dissertation. A certain woman from the crowd. She noticed that the women were getting interested in what Jesus had to say. She was going to put Jesus down. She wanted to make certain that Jesus would not be there without a woman. She shouts at Him. She has introduced a nonessential. Happiness is not being pregnant, but happiness is knowing the Word of God. Jesus ignored the false issue; but He was inflexible about the true issue. Therefore do not throw away as worthless your confidence in doctrine, which has a rich distribution...you keep having need in persistence in perception.

Shall unbelief cancel the faithfulness of God? Definitely not. That you might become vindicated by means of your doctrine and you might become victorious. The essential is always doctrine. Austria has become a small country. All of Italy once belonged to the Hapsburg. This magnificent empire was scattered all over for being inflexible in the nonessentials. He who finds me, Bible doctrine, finds grace from the Lord.

522 09/10/1978 Romans 16 Doctrine of the royal family honor code (re-organized, points. 6–14); love, morality, integrity, production, strong vs. weak, self-pity and self-righteousness

Football is a unique American custom. Professionalism is all about knowledge; not emotion.

The Principle of Love in the Honor Code

1. The command to love the brethren cannot be understood until we understand personal love and impersonal love; and the essentials versus the nonessentials. This command is a real command.
2. Impersonal love emphasizes the subject; personal love emphasizes the object.
3. Impersonal love demands that we operate on our own norms and standards. It depends on the norms and standards of the subject.
4. Impersonal love is a command where all members of the human race in your periphery are the object. John 15:12, 17 Romans 13 8–9 1Peter 2:17

5. Personal love is directed toward a few; impersonal love is directed toward all. The subject has a mental attitude. It is your norms and standards; your thinking. Love toward Jesus Christ; toward one's wife; toward family; toward friends. Personal love emphasizes the object. We are attracted to an object. We have some mutual relationship with the object; some mutual interests.
6. The object of impersonal love is all believers and all others.
7. Impersonal love excludes emotion while personal love has great emotional function. There is a place for emotion in love; in personal love. This is normal and it is wonderful. When dealing with the human race in general, there is no emotion.
8. Impersonal love emphasizes the integrity of the subject; personal love emphasizes the attractiveness of the object.
9. Impersonal love cannot be reduced to the level of dog-eat-dog. Your relaxed mental attitude is the issue. Maintain your high standards.
10. Impersonal love excludes carrying a grudge. If someone judges you, you do not retaliate.
11. If you are wronged, you do not seek revenge. This lowers yourself.
12. Impersonal love includes respect for imputed righteousness of God in others.
13. Since the righteousness of God resides in every believer, impersonal love respects the believer on that basis.
14. You cannot hold a grudge against another believer. That is like bearing a grudge against the righteousness of God.
15. Furthermore, impersonal love is the relaxed mental attitude from the filling of the Spirit. Romans 5:5 Galatians 5:22 This does not refer to personal love. A guy leaned in for a kiss, and the woman wanted to rebound first so that there would be love. Idiotic and tragic.
16. Under impersonal love, the believer functions under his own standards, rather than being influenced by attraction, reciprocity, flattery, attention.
17. Not only does the impersonal love of the honor code exclude mental and verbal sins, it also demands toleration, respect for privacy. The avoidance of distracting anyone from doctrine.
18. Flexibility is related to impersonal love.
19. In contract, person singular emphasizes the object, demands learning to cognizance of the person involved. Romans 12:9 13:8–10

The Place of Morality in the Honor Code

1. Morality is related to the laws of divine establishment, therefore morality is designed for the entire human race, believers included. Morality fulfills the laws of divine establishment.
2. Since the unbeliever can produce morality, morality is not a part of the Christian way of life.
3. While the Christian way of life is not reality, it does not exclude morality. The Christian way of life is higher than morality.

4. However, the honor code demands a standard higher than morality and divine establishment.
5. The morality of the laws of divine establishment is a base, but in the royal family honor code, this is higher.
6. Whatever the unbeliever can do is not the Christian way of life. We fulfill the honor code with the filling of the Holy Spirit. Morality does not require the filling of the Spirit.
7. Morality is not rejected as per antinomianism; nor is it accepted as per legalism.
8. Neither legalism nor antinomianism is the Christian way of life.
9. The honor code demands that the believer live under establishment; but exceed morality and divine establishment by the filling of the Holy Spirit and use of Bible doctrine.
10. Both morality of divine establishment and filling of the Spirit support the believer in his spiritual advance.
11. The honor code demands patriotism, respect for governmental authority, respect for law and order in a Christian relationship with one's government. Review Romans 13:1–7

Point 8: hope as momentum in honor code function

Hope is confident expectation. We have studied the doctrine of hope. Romans 15:13–14 where hope as a concept is related to the honor code.

The Connection Between the Believer's Priesthood and His Ambassadorship

1. Every believer is both.
2. We advance on the intake of Bible doctrine.
3. The believer produces as a result of spiritual growth; it is not the means of spiritual growth. No production can exist apart from the Spirit.
4. Royal family honor code excludes all forms of Christian works, legitimate or illegitimate as a means of blessing from God.
5. Praying, giving, sacrificing cannot bring blessing from God.
6. Morality, asceticism, devotional worship or working in a church will elicit blessing from God.
7. Blessing from God originates from doctrine in the soul which triggers divine blessing to the target of imputed righteousness.
8. Divine blessing to the imputed righteousness of God occurs when the believer attains spiritual maturity.
9. The attainment of maturity is the only basis of the imputation of divine blessing.
10. We advance in our priesthood. Production is the result of spiritual growth. As an ambassador, we represent the absent Christ. As a priest, we represent ourselves before God.
11. What is often construed from blessing from God is logistical grace or blessing by association.

12. Under logistical grace, God provides the support to attain maturity, which means time, under logistical grace God provides food, shelter and clothing; and there are great differences in these things. One person's logistical support is another person's poison. God never tests us beyond what we can bear. God provides transportation. Some people drive a Honda, others a Rolls Royce. One person's logistical support is much different from another's. Whatever the reason for your strain, you never have the right to complain about those who have. Completely out of line with the honor code. This does not mean you have failed in the Christian life. Paul died broke as a supergrace believer. He is the greatest believer who has ever lived. I know how to be abased and I know how to abound. God provides a right pastor and a local church. People have different allowances. Bob knew kids with an allowance of $500/week; others had $50 a week; this was during the depression in Beverly Hills. Jealousy and self-pity can sometimes result. Whatever your means of transportation is what God provides.
13. Under blessing by association the believer receives blessing from God because he is associated with a mature believer in life. This is why some have wealth while advancing.
14. Therefore, the royal family honor code demands total dependence upon the integrity and provision of God. This does not mean that you stop hustling. You are motivated to work hard.
15. The purpose of the honor code is to provide the necessary protection from bullying while advance.
16. Works are the result of advancement, but they are not the means of spiritual progress.

Point Ten: the royal family honor code demands more of the strong believer than the weak believer. Remember Romans 15:1. We are to bear up the weaknesses of the weak. We carry around our own weight and the burdens of others. Only maximum doctrine in the soul makes it possible for us to put up with all the nonsense of weaker believers. The function of the application of impersonal love involves accommodating others and not ourselves. In personal love you assign great merit to the object. You set them apart and distinguish them from the rest of the human race. But in impersonal love, there is no merit assigned to others. It is tedious to hear the arrogance and the inconsequential opinions and tolerating them. The absolutely unessential.

Point 11: The thrust of the honor code and authority in the spiritual realm.

Point 12: reciprocity and the honor code. Romans 15:26–27

Point 13: avoidance of self pity or any function which arouses pity from others. This is a great distraction in the spiritual life. Do not become occupied with yourself. We all have a certain amount of sensitivity and we can feel very sorry for ourselves. Seeking to gain attention from others by making them feel sorry for you, these other people are compassionate and noble, it is not a true friendship. Such a relationship is no man's land. If you have made someone feel sorry for yourself, you will live your whole life divorced from reality. This is how psychotics are produced. A relationship on the basis of pity is no relationship at all. That is having a relationship with a dog. Romans 12:9–10 your love should be non-hypocritical. Despise the evil and adhere to the good. Be devoted to one another; esteem others more highly than yourself. Romans 13:8

“For those of you who are cat lovers, you can still stay in Berachah.”

Some Related Points

1. The response demanded is impersonal love of the honor code; not personal love. You must distinguish between them. If you do not distinguish, you will have a nervous breakdown.
2. Since impersonal love depends upon doctrinal standards in the conscience, it excludes self-pity. And any attempt to arouse pity in others. Romans 14:8 15:5–7
3. The imputation of divine righteousness is salvation eliminates self-righteousness in the Christian life. The royal family honor code excludes self-righteousness.

Divine justice can only bless divine righteousness. Self-righteousness functions produces the sin of arrogance. Self-righteousness produces human good. Self-righteousness also produces evil, like socialism. Self-righteousness is a complex of evil. Self-righteousness guarantees evil in your life. It is excluded from the honor code; and this is an insult to the holiness of God.

Point 15: Maximum function of the honor code is to give one's life for another member of the royal family. Paul speaks of this regarding Prisca and Aquilla.

Point 16: Dying becomes a part of living. As long as you draw breath, you are living. And you continue under the function under the honor code just as if you are up and around. The unbeliever gives up. He no longer has the capacity to enjoy life. Dying, says the honor code, is a part of living. Maybe you have cancer. So what. This does not change the honor code. If you have doctrine in the soul, this is a great application of the honor code in your life. Christ will be exalted in my person, whether living or dying. Living is Christ and dying is gain.

523 09/15/1978 Romans 16:5 Living includes dying, done alone; pluggin in GAP gets to spiritual maturity

Jesus gave the principle for the angelic conflict. Satan, when faced with his judgment claimed that his punishment was unfair; outside of the essence of God.

God created man to resolve the angelic conflict. There is a permanent place for all angels; but Jesus, through man, will resolve the angelic conflict.

After the cross, Jesus is the King of Kings, Lord of Lords, but He was without a royal family at that point. Because we are royal family, more is expected of us than any previous group of believers in any previous dispensation.

Freedom in the Christian way of life; which includes live and let live. The function of flexibility in the Christian life. Categories of love. We start out as babies and we move to adolescence and then to maturity. The priesthood is the sphere in which we advance. All production is the result of spiritual advance. The baby produces 1/10th of 1%; the adolescent believer perhaps 10%.

The first 4 verses reviewed. Vv. 3ff is about an honorable married couple. This couple have risked their lives on many instances. This requires moral courage.

Point 16: Dying is a part of living. Most people when told they are going to die immediately fall apart. They get hysterical, they give up, they become despondent, they change their pattern. That is human and that is normal. That is the royal family honor code. Dying is a part of living. Life is composed of the living part and the dying part. The royal family honor code assigns dying to life. The dying is greater than the living up to that time.

Dying for the unbeliever is a nightmare; it is a great problem; and after that, the judgment. But dying for the believer is the greatest blessing in life; and this takes us into eternity. Every believer has two aspects to life, as an ambassador and a priest. And life is the living phase and the dying phase. The honor code is very specific; dying is a part of living. Bob enjoys going up north and there are a lot of them and they are very positive toward doctrine. Not one person in four nights even opened his mouth to yawn. A young lady who is 21 and she comes from a lovely Christian family. She found out a month ago that a month ago she is dying of cancer. She has been taking in doctrine all of her life and she has handled this in the most beautiful way. She is a perfect illustration of this principle. We still have one day at a time in dying as we do in living. We have the same capacities. Nothing changes. Right motivation results in right action. It is all about the doctrine in your soul; it is what you think that counts. There should be no difference in the living or dying phase of life. When we die, we are absent from the body and face to face with the Lord. We will receive a resurrection body in which we will live forever. The problem is spending time dying, if it is drawn out. The whole concept is, in living, you often have people around you and spend time together. But when dying, you can only do this alone. This is what we are being prepared for all of our life.

The people that we are studying have all died; and they all died alone. They went through the dying; no one went through this with them. No one dies for us in physical death. This is the greatest test; and dying is a part of living. Every name that we read on this honor roll of integrity has died. They died in a variety of ways. There is no greater experience in life than the death of the mature believer, no matter how long it takes. It is the ultimate in the dynamics of the Christian life.

Bob always liked the aristocrats who died with honor and nobility. They had poise; they had moral courage. They showed themselves to be aristocracy by the way they met the guillotine.

We live one day at a time. Bob was delighted to have lunch with her. It is not what people will do, but what she has in her soul.

Do people shock you? If you are shocked by what people do, then you are not ready to die. You can only die with the doctrine that you have. Some of you are unprepared for death, as you have no real interest in doctrine. The ultimate achievement in life is to die well. These people died well because they were mature believers.

The honorable Romans, verses 5-16. This seems to be a partial roster of mature believers who assembled in the home of Prisca and Aquila, and in two other homes. All of them had one thing in common: maturity adjustment to the justice of God. Prisca and Aquilla have a large home, and it is one of the three homes where believers met in Rome.

Romans 16:5 ...and the church at their house. Greet Epenetus, my beloved, who is a firstfruit of Asia for Christ. (BLB)

Verse 5 – “Likewise greet the church that is in their house.” The adjunctive use of the conjunction kai—“also.” In this sentence there is no verb for “greet” but it implies the aorist active imperative of aspazomai (ἀσπάζομαι) [pronounced as-PAD-zom-ahēe] which means to greet or to salute. It means to pay one’s respects to someone. With it is the accusative singular direct object from the noun ekklêsía (ἐκκλησία) [pronounced ek-klay-SEE-ah], used here for the local church. Then the prepositional phrase kata plus the accusative singular from the noun oikos (οἶκος) [pronounced OY-koss], with the genitive plural from the intensive pronoun autós (αὐτοῖς) [pronounced ow-TOSS] used as the possessive personal pronoun, “Also pay my respect to the church in their home.” The church in their home now has an honor roll of mature believers. For the first hundred years, it was typical for believers to meet in homes.

“Salute my well-beloved Epaenetus” – aorist active imperative of the verb aspazomai (ἀσπάζομαι) [pronounced as-PAD-zom-ahēe], meaning again to salute, to greet, to pay one’s respects to. The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, and it refers to a momentary action. This is all a part of the Word of God. It is not a list of names to be mispronounced in Sunday School. The active voice: Paul produces the action of the verb. The imperative mood is the imperative of entreaty which does not convey the finality of a command but has the force of a request. Plus the accusative singular direct object from the proper noun bv.

We know from the accusative singular of the adjective agapêtos (ἀγαπητός) [pronounced ag-ap-ay-TOSS] that he was loved. This is imply the word “beloved.” This is not only impersonal love but personal love. This is one of the few of Paul’s great friends. With this is the possessive genitive singular from egó (ἐγώ) [pronounced ehg-OH] – “my beloved friend.”

“who is the firstfruits of Achaia unto Christ” – the nominative singular from the relative pronoun hos referring to Epäenetus. The word “Achaia” does not occur in the original text. The verb is the present active indicative of eimi (εἰμί) [pronounced eye-ME], the verb to be. The present tense is a historical present in which a past event is viewed with the vividness of a present occurrence. The active voice: Epäenetus produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative for an historical reality. The predicate nominative singular from aparchê (ἀπαρχή) [pronounced ap-ar-KHAY] means “firstfruits”. But the next word is the ablative of source singular from the definite article, plus the proper noun Asía (Ἰσσία) [pronounced as-EE-ah] – “Asia,” the Roman province—“from Asia.” Achaia is southern Greece. Asia is made up of the 7 churches found in Revelation in what is Turkey today. This man is probably the first person that Paul led to the Lord in Ephesus. He is on the eternal honor roll. Then eis (εἰς) [pronounced ICE] plus the accusative of the proper noun Christos (Χριστός) [pronounced krees-TOHSS]—“to Christ.”

Romans 16:5 Also pay my respects to the church in their home. Greet Epäenetus my beloved friend, who is the first convert to Christ from [Roman province] Asia.

Epäenetus is probably the first person that Paul led to Christ in Ephesus. He is now living in Rome, he has continued positive toward Bible doctrine. By now he is a mature believer.

Epäenetus' Spiritual Life

1. Epäenetus represents the principle of plugging or plodding.
2. Spiritual growth is not the flight of a rocket, it is the slow, steady, continuous trot of a good horse.
3. The flash-in-the-pan Christian fizzles out, but the consistently positive volition type gains momentum, a little at a time.
4. Epäenetus started with doctrine and he continued with doctrine. He kept right on plugging, one day at a time.
5. Even though he did not continue under Paul's ministry, but moved to Rome, he continued to take in doctrine. Perhaps under Aquila.
6. He was regular in his attendance to the church assembly in the home of Prisca and Aquila.
7. He was diligent in his concentration on the teaching of doctrine, making the function of GAP a daily habit. Therefore he represents the ordinary Christian, the non-spectacular Christian, the unknown Christian, the unknown Christian, the Christian who catches on because he knows that the secret to the Christian life is not who is helping you along, not who is encouraging and complimenting you. It is in one phrase, self-determination. Daily self-determination.

MacArthur made one of the greatest short speeches. His 75th birthday; and there was a dedication of a monument in his honor. It takes place in 1955.

MacArthur's Speech at the Dedication of his Statue in Westlake Park near Beverly Hills California Jan 1, 1955 His 75th birthday now MacArthur Park:

TRIBUTE TO THE NOBLE WARRIOR

Like salvation, freedom is a gift purchased at an enormous cost. Brave soldiers pay with their lives on battlefields all over the world so we might live in freedom. A most poignant homage to their courage and nobility was articulated by General of the Army Douglas MacArthur in Los Angeles, 26 January 1955, at the dedication ceremony of a monument erected in his honor. His eloquent description is a worthy tribute to those who sacrifice themselves on the altar of our country.

I have listened with deep emotion to these solemn proceedings and my heart is too full for my lips to express adequately my thanks and appreciation for the extraordinary honor you do me. Even so, I understand full well that this memorial is intended to commemorate an epoch rather than an individual; an armed force rather than its commander; a nation rather than its servant; an ideal rather than a personality. This but increases my pride, that my name has been the one chosen as the symbol of an epic struggle and victory by millions of unnamed others. It is their heroism, their sacrifice, their success, that you have honored today in so unforgettable a manner. I, and this statue, and this park are but the selected reminders of their grandeur. Most of them were citizen soldiers, sailors and airmen - men from the farm, from the city, from the schoolroom, from the college campus - men not dedicated to the profession of arms, men not primarily skilled in the arts of destruction - men amazingly like the men you see and meet and know each day of your lives - but men animated, inspired and ennobled by a sublime cause - the defense of their country, of their native land, of their very hearth-stones. The most divine of all human sentiments and impulses guided them - the spirit and willingness to sacrifice. He who dares to die - to lay his life on the altar of his nations' need - is beyond doubt the noblest development of mankind. In this he comes closest to the image of his Creator who died on the cross that the human soul might live.

These men were my comrades-in-arms. With me they knew the far call of the bugles at reveille; the distant roll of the drums at nightfall; the endless tramp of marching feet; the incessant whine of sniper bullets; the ceaseless rattle of sputtering machine guns; the ominous roar of threatening cannon; the sinister wail of air sirens; the deafening blasts of crashing bombs; the stealthy stroke of hidden torpedoes; the amphibious lurch over perilous waves; the dark majesty of fighting ships; the mad din of battle lines; and all the stench and ghastly horror and savage destruction of a stricken area of war. They suffered hunger and thirst; the broiling suns of relentless heat; the torrential rains of tropical storms; the loneliness and utter desolation of jungle trails; the bitterness of separation from those they loved and cherished. They went on, and on, and on, when everything within them seemed to stop and die. They grew old in youth. They burned out in searing minutes all that life owed them of tranquil years. When I think of their patience under adversity, of their courage under fire, and of their modesty in victory, I am filled with an emotion of admiration I cannot express. Many of them trod the tragic path of unknown fame that led to a stark white cross above a lonely grave. And from their tortured, dying lips, with the dreadful gurgle of the death rattle in their throats, always came the same gasping prayer that we who were left would go on to victory. I do not know the dignity of their birth, but I do know the glory of their death, and I am sure a merciful God has taken them unto Himself.

Their sacrifice for our cherished liberty inspires and heartens the souls of all who remember. Just as the Lord Jesus Christ made the greatest sacrifice of all history on the cross - dying so that mankind might have eternal life - so the soldier sacrifices his time, his fortune, and sometimes his life that others might live in freedom. For those of us who are the beneficiaries of these two majestic sacrifices, let us never forget the honor due our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ and the intrepid men who purchase freedom through military victory.

Living and dying are both a part of life. In living, you know many people and they make up the atmosphere of life. In dying, you go it alone. No friend or loved one can take away or add to what God will do.

All the difficulties in life are a test of the doctrine which is in our soul. Job 5:19 Evil will not touch you; and in...

Job 5:19 He will rescue you from six calamities; no harm will touch you in seven. (BSB)

Evil is a disastrous thing. Four categories are mentioned.

Job 5:20 In famine He will redeem you from death, and in battle from the stroke of the sword.

Protection in economic disaster and in war.

Job 5:21 You will be hidden from the scourge of the tongue, and need not fear destruction [dying in national disaster] when it comes.

The third disaster is social disaster. Those who gossip, malign and judge.

Job 5:22 You will laugh [this is the relaxed laughter of happiness, relaxation under the pain] at destruction and famine, and need not fear the beasts of the earth.

Bob has found that, when dealing with pain, can relax in order to reduce the pain.

We rarely have someone dying from a wild animal today. This is a category of death; death by violence of some sort. Today, this might be cars, harm from others. Doctrine in the soul makes the difference.

Job 5:23 For you will have a covenant with the stones of the field, and the wild animals will be at peace with you.

Stones in the field are a reference to weapons of the era.

There were two great shows last night. You cannot always tell by the titles. Bob is glad that some of you missed them. I was in Houston at this time. No idea if I saw these or not.

Job 5:24 You will know that your tent is secure, and find nothing amiss when inspecting your home.

God knows exactly what to do; when to pick the corn. It has to be picked exactly when it is ripe. That is how God chooses the time to select our time for death. There is a right time for everyone.

Romans 16:6 Greet Mary, who toiled much for you. (BLB)

Verse 6 – “Greet Mary, who bestowed much labour on us.” The aorist active imperative of the verb aspazomai (ἀσπάζομαι) [pronounced as-PAD-zom-ahēe] which means to greet, to pay one’s respect to someone, to salute. “Pay my respects to Mary.” The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. It refers to a momentary action. The active voice: Paul produces the action of the verb. The imperative mood is the imperative of entreaty rather than command. It does not convey the finality of a command but has the force of a request. The object is the accusative singular direct object from the proper noun Maria/Mariam (Μαρία/Μαριάμ) [pronounced mar-EE-ah/mar-ee-AHM], “Mary.” She is listed with the honorable Romans who have attained maturity adjustment to the justice of God. She is a woman who, like Phebe and Prisca, is listed among the great women of the Bible.

She has the great inner beauty of 1Timothy 2:9–15

1Timothy 2:9 Likewise I have made a command decision that women should make themselves beautiful by respectable, well-arranged clothing, associated with respect for authority and good judgment (or common sense); not with emphasis on high fashion hair styling, golden jewelry or either pearls or expensive clothing.

Only the woman is called beautiful. Paul tells us how they can make themselves beautiful. A woman should be dressed in good taste, but the real issue in beauty is her soul. Good judgment; not flaky.

The negative does not prohibit the exterior things mentioned in v. 9; it simply does not emphasize these things. Bob likes pearls more than anything else. They go with anything.

1Timothy 2:10 But what becomes fitting for women being promised super-grace status [or maturity] through intrinsic good accomplishments [or, the attainment of the good].

1Timothy 2:11 Women be learning in silence with complete [or, total, entire] subordination (to authority).

Bob rarely sees men talking during class; but women a lot.

1Timothy 2:12 But I do not permit a woman to teach, nor do I permit her to exercise authority over a man [or, the adult male], but to be in silence.

1Timothy 2:13 For Adam was formed first, then Eve;... (ESV)

1Timothy 2:14 But although that woman had been completely deceived, she had come to be [in the transgression] with the result that she remained in the transgression.

1Timothy 2:15a In fact, she will be delivered (or saved) through childbearing (the virgin birth).

The key to a woman's beauty is her soul.

Lesson #525

525 09/17/1978 Romans 16:6b Principle of dying grace; woman's advance and production; self-determination; single woman The Saturday Night at the Movies was Midnight (1939).

Although very little verbiage is given to these people, these are believers who are mature and have broken the maturity barrier. If you do not have anything worth dying for, then you have nothing worth living for.

Howard Cosell was recently roast. Milton Berle. "Why are we honoring this man? Did we run out of human beings?" This is related to the word person just covered.

The great principle of dying grace.

Seven Deaths Found in the Scriptures

1. Spiritual death takes place at the moment of birth; as God imputes to us Adam's original sin to our genetically formed sin nature. When Adam ate the forbidden fruit, the sin nature was created in Adam's soul (body?). Spiritual death is separation from God in time; and this is a result of Adam's sin. Romans 5:12 6:23 refer to Adam's original sin. We do nothing for our condemnation. Our personal sins are all collected and imputed to the Lord on the cross. All of these sins were judged. When He cried out, "My God, My God, why have You forsaken Me" Jesus was still alive when He said, "It is finished." That means salvation was completed in his spiritual death.
2. Physical death is the separation of the soul and spirit from the body. When your EEG is zero, you are physically dead. For the unbeliever, this is the separation of the soul and body. Philippians 1:21

3. The second death, which is the final judgment of the unbeliever.
4. No production is a type of spiritual death. When out of fellowship, this is also operational death. The believer's failure is found in James 2:26
5. Romans 6:3–4 positional death; where we are retroactively identified with Jesus Christ in both of His deaths on the cross. ID'ed with Him in His spiritual death and in His burial. The sin nature is the old husband; the law is the marriage counselor; at salvation the marriage is to Christ and the Holy Spirit is the marriage counselor. Colossians 2:20 3:3
6. Temporal death, where the believer is out of fellowship due to sin.
7. Sexual death, the inability to copulate. Abraham's sexual death for 13 years; and God revived his sexual apparatus at age 99. Romans 4:17–21 11:11–12

We are looking at physical death.

Biblical Comments with Regards to Physical Death

1. Num 16 deaths to end a revolution. This took place under Napoleon.
2. Psalm the omniscience of God knows all that will happen and all of the alternatives, what actually occurred and what could have occurred. Everything is written on a computer HD, and all decisions are recorded. Foreknowledge exists to deal with the decrees only. It is not what could have happened but what did and will. We have been in the plan of God from the point of election. Only the real things are found in foreknowledge and in divine decrees.
3. Personal love for the right person is stronger than death. Song of Solomon 8:6. Love is a motivation; and a status quo.
4. God can and He does prolong physical life. Psalm 102:19–20 Psalm 118:18
5. Because the woman is a responder and because she is unique. She must be taught to face the death of loved ones. She has an intense response to death of loved ones. Jeremiah 20–29
6. Lamentations 1 death cannot be faced when the norms and standards of the right lobe are messtup.
7. Dying grace is gain.
8. Amos 5:8 dying grace for the believer. Job 5:20 God delivers the believer from death. In the living part of our life, the mature believer has the best while in [Z]. But in dying grace, he has something better than in life. Better than the best. The wonderful anticipation of the Judgment Seat of Christ. Psalm 33:18–19 behold the eye of the lord is on those who are occupied with Him...to deliver their souls from death... Living and dying are all a part of life. Dying for the believer is the most fantastic of all experiences. Precious in the sight of the Lord are His dying ones.
9. Believers are so confused today because of their attitude toward Bible doctrine. Paul completed his course; he has reached the end of his life. Paul knew that he was going to die in A.D. 68. He had to go it alone, but he had all of the doctrine.

Romans 16:6 Greet Mary, who toiled much for you. (BLB)

The nominative feminine singular from the indefinite relative pronoun hostis (ὅστις) [pronounced HOHS-tiss] is not the usual relative pronoun hos (ὃς) [pronounced hohç], this indicates a categorical concept. It is called indefinite because it defines Mary in terms of a unique category of people. She is a mature believer, she has cracked the maturity barrier, she is one of those great people in time who is even going to be greater in eternity. This would ordinarily be translated “who is such a category as,” but we simply reduce it to the relative pronoun “who,” understanding this principle. The aorist active indicative of the verb kopiaō (κοπιᾶω) [pronounced kop-ee-AH-oh] which means to work to the point of exhaustion, to work hard for someone.

Mary is the kind of a person who works and sacrifices and is an extremely hard worker. The aorist tense is a culminative aorist viewing Mary’s maturity adjustment to the justice of God in its entirety but emphasizing the existing results in the production of her ambassadorship. Because as a priest she advanced in the privacy of her priesthood—positive volition toward doctrine—all the way to maturity, she produced in her ambassadorship, and the culminative aorist is the function of her ambassadorship. If you advance to maturity, you will be given many opportunities to produce.

Then the prepositional phrase, eis (εἰς) [pronounced ICE] plus the accusative plural from the personal pronoun su, “for you, for your benefit, on behalf of you.” Plus the adverbial accusative from polus, polos (πολύς, πολλός) [pronounced poll-OOS] which means “much,” but in the plural it means “many.” Here, with eis (εἰς) [pronounced ICE], it means “with reference to many things.”

Romans 16:6 Pay my respects to Mary, who has worked hard for you with reference to many things.

The Woman and Spiritual Growth

1. Being a woman does not hinder the believer from advancing to maturity or having maximum production from her royal ambassadorship. Not only that, but a woman who advances to maturity is the admirable woman, the woman with inner beauty. She is unknown to us, but known to Paul and to God.
2. Being a woman is no hindrance to progress or function in the Christian way of life. Freedom means that there will be inequality. A woman can improve herself superficially or her soul. The key is what the woman emphasizes. No woman who is attractive with a beautiful body just was born with it as a result of genetics. Bob found out in Beverly Hills that the key is knowing how to dress; and this outdoes even genetics.
3. While Christian women are prohibited the gift and function of pastor-teacher they are not hindered from having a ministry, nor are they prevented from teaching doctrine to certain categories—like children or other women.
4. Mary was a single woman. Being single is no disgrace, it is not antisocial; it is a matter of self-determination.

5. The single woman represents the fact that not only does she have less distraction in the advance to maturity but she has greater opportunity for production. Production without maturity is ridiculous.

Missionaries can also advance to maturity. We will meet two missionaries in the next lesson.

Lesson #526

526 09/18/1978 Romans 16:7–8 "St. Paul from the Trenches"; concern of Paul for Jews; missionary use of APOSTLES

The forward of the book above; the author was killed in the trenches on the day that the British lost 60,000 soldiers. This can be found online for 1, 2Corinthians and Ephesians.

Promises that still need to be fulfilled.

Paul was desperate concerned for the Jews; they still had individual self-determination. He knew that client nations would be established where they would have a place to live. In the future we are going to learn about the Great Parenthesis. Three of the greatest chapters in the New Testament.

Bob has been asked many times about the 6 million Jews destroyed by Hitler. Bob has spoken at many synagogues. By plugging, by plodding, by faithfulness to the Word, are those who crack the maturity barrier.

Romans 16:7 Greet Andronicus and Junias, my kinsmen and my fellow prisoners, who are of note among the apostles, and who were in Christ before me. (BLB)

Verse 7 – Paul’s actual relatives: cousin and cousin-in-law. “Salute Andronicus and Junia, my kinsmen, and my fellow prisoners.” The aorist active imperative of the verb aspazomai (ἀσπάζομαι) [pronounced as-PAD-zom-ah-ee] which means to salute, to pay one’s respects to, to greet. Here it is a matter of respect. Paul respects the members of his own family who understanding the picture responded by faith in Christ. “Pay my respects to.” The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: Paul produces the action of the verb through a written salutation to his own cousins. The imperative mood is the imperative of entreaty which does not have the force of a command but simply makes a request.

The object is the accusative singular direct object from the personal noun Andrónikos (Ἀνδρόνικος) [pronounced an-DRON-ee-koss]. He was a Jewish believer of the tribe of Benjamin, a first cousin of Paul, and was converted before Paul. He was one of the first great missionaries of the early church. He went to Rome as a single man but we have with him his wife whose name is Iouíās, which is called in the Latinised form, Iouíās (Ιουιᾶς) [pronounced ee-oo-NEE-as]. From her name it is obvious that she is not a Jew, she is a Roman citizen of a very aristocratic name.

Then an appositional accusative plural of the noun suggenês (συγγενής) [pronounced soong-ghen-ACE] [sun = with; génos (γένος) [pronounced GEHN-oss] = family, race, tribe]. Here we have it used in the sense of relatives. “Pay my respects to Andronicus and Iouiniâs (Ἰουινιάς) [pronounced ee-oo-NEE-as], my relatives.” The genitive singular of possession from the personal pronoun egó (ἐγώ) [pronounced ehg-OH] indicates that Paul has a personal relationship with them.

In Romans chapter 9 we have an explanation of suggenês (συγγενής) [pronounced soong-ghen-ACE] when it says, “For I could pray that I myself were accursed from Christ for the sake of my brethren, my kinsmen . . .” There suggenês (συγγενής) [pronounced soong-ghen-ACE] refers to being members of the same tribe, the tribe of Benjamin. But here it is even closer: cousin and cousin-in-law. While Paul would be imprisoned many times, recorded in the book of Acts and elsewhere, it is only here that we have a reference to an earlier imprisonment of some sort: “My fellow prisoners,” another appositional accusative from sunaihmálotos (συναιχμάλωτος) [pronounced soon-ahheekh-MAL-oh-toss], which means to be in a same cell, a fellow prisoner. The genitive of possession from egó (ἐγώ) [pronounced ehg-OH] the personal pronoun refers to Paul – “my fellow prisoners.” According to 2Corinthians 11:23 Paul was imprisoned on several occasions for the cause of Christ. On one of these occasions he shared a prison experience with his cousins.

“who are of note among the apostles” – the nominative masculine plural from the indefinite relative pronoun hostis (ὅστις) [pronounced HOHS-tiss]. The word “indefinite” means a specific category. These are special, mature believers “who are of such a category as.” Then the special category: apostolos (ἀπόστολος) [pronounced ap-OSS-tol-oss], used here in a broad sense rather than in its narrow sense. The word has two entirely different meanings. In the narrow sense it means twelve men who have a spiritual gift who are, in effect, the rulers of the church prior to the completion of the canon of Scripture, and in most cases are writers of the New Testament epistles. There is a broader sense in which the word is used for missionaries in that early church, and that is what we have here. Then the present active indicative from the verb eimi (εἰμί) [pronounced eye-ME], the verb to be. This is a pictorial present tense which brings to mind the events in the process of occurrence. They are still, on the mission field, they are living in Rome. The active voice: Andronicus and Junia produce the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the fact that they are outstanding missionaries. They are said to be of note among the apostles, which is the predicate nominative plural from epísēmos (ἐπίσημος) [pronounced ep-IHS-ay-moss], meaning “prominent, outstanding.” Then en (ἐν) [pronounced en] plus the locative plural from apostolos (ἀπόστολος) [pronounced ap-OSS-tol-oss] – “among the apostles.” Apostolos (ἀπόστολος) [pronounced ap-OSS-tol-oss] here refers to missionaries who have delegated authority to follow the indigenous principle of establishing churches and training pastors. The churches had to be self-sustaining.

“who also were in Christ before me” – the nominative plural from the definite article is used as a relative pronoun whose antecedent is Andronicus and Junia. Plus the adjunctive use of the conjunction kai which means “also.” The perfect active indicative from the verb gínomai (γίνομαι) [pronounced GIN-oh-my], to be or to become, but here means “have been.” The perfect tense is the intensive perfect in which the action is completed with perpetual results. They have been and always will be born again before Paul. This is the Greek method of presenting a fact or a condition [their salvation] which has occurred in the past and will always remain in that status forever. The active voice: Andronicus and Junia produce the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for a historical fact. Paul was not the first member of his family to be saved. Then en (ἐν) [pronounced en] plus the locative of Christos (χριστός) [pronounced krees-TOHSS] – “in Christ,” and pro plus the ablative singular of egó (ἐγώ) [pronounced ehg-OH] – “before me.”

The records of these people are found outside of the Bible. Some recorded by the Venerable Bede, who did early church history.

Romans 16:7 Pay my respects to Andronicus and Junia, my cousins, and my fellow prisoners, who are prominent among the missionaries, who have been in Christ before me.

Points

1. Paul's cousin was a Jew from the tribe of Benjamin and had Roman citizenship, like Paul.
2. Like Paul, they suffered imprisonment for the cause of Christ, having shared the same cell.
3. They had the respect of Paul.
4. They were not only believers before Paul but they were prominent missionaries. They were mature believers.

Romans 16:8 Greet Ampliatus, my beloved in the Lord. (BLB)

Verse 8 – Greet Amplias, my beloved in the Lord.” The aorist active imperative of aspazomai (ἀσπάζομαι) [pronounced as-PAD-zom-ahée], “Pay my respects to.” The accusative singular direct object Amplías (Ἀμπλίας) [pronounced am-PLÉE-as] – “Ampliatus” in the Latin. This is the only reference to Ampliatus. Nevertheless, like all of the others he was a mature believer. This is a common name and is found in the inscriptions connected with the imperial household. It is found twice in the cemetery of Domitia who was the niece of one of the emperors, Domitian. The appositional accusative from agapêtos (ἀγαπητός) [pronounced ag-ap-ay-TOSS] and en (ἐν) [pronounced en] plus kurios (κύριος) [pronounced KOO-ree-oss], referring to position in Christ – “my beloved in the Lord.”

Amplias is related to Domitia. Bob suggests that he led Domitia to the Lord, so she was a believer in the palace.

Romans 16:8 Pay my respects to Ampliatus, my beloved in the Lord.

Summary

1. To be Paul's personal friend meant mutual enthusiasms in the positive attitude toward doctrine, occupation with Christ.

2. Ampliatus is another believer who persevered in the perception of doctrine. He attained spiritual maturity and glorified the Lord. Therefore the personal, isolated individual self-determination of the soul that makes a person go it alone in the intake of doctrine makes it possible for the most glorious dying it alone. Dying grace. Doctrine makes the difference.
3. Ampliatus may be unknown to history but he is well-known to God. That brings us back to the principle that nothing we ever do is ignored by God.

Success, wealth, fame, social life, approbation, sex are things which do not matter. Some people compensate by hustling around a church. All of the working for God is meaningless unless it is a result of the application of Bible doctrine. You cannot work for blessing from God or for spiritual progress.

MacArthur made four speeches that made the Proclamation of Emancipation meaningless. Lincoln had some good ideas, but he was not our greatest president.

527 09/19/1978 Romans 16:9 Freed slaves; collective and individual self determination; incompetence; friendship

Translation reviewed.

Romans 16:9 Greet Urbanus, our fellow worker in Christ, and my beloved Stachys. (BLB)

These are two former slaves. These are the great believers in Rome at this time. This is more than a list of names.

Verse 9 – “Salute Urbane, our helper in Christ.” Again we have the aorist active imperative from the verb aspazomai (ἀσπάζομαι) [pronounced as-PAD-zom-ah-ee], which mean to greet, to pay respect to, to salute. The constative aorist tense gathers into one entirety the action of the verb, the amount of time necessary to convey the greeting. The active voice: Paul produces the action of the verb. The imperative of entreaty does not convey the finality of a command but merely expresses the urgency of a request.

The accusative singular direct object from the proper noun Ourbanós (Οὐρβανός) [pronounced oor-ban-OSS]. He is listed in the imperial household inscriptions as a former slave who had been freed. His name means “of the city”. His name suggests maybe a service position, perhaps in a royal palace. Bob grew up at a time that manners were extremely important. We have destroyed manners. The appositional accusative singular from the noun sunergós (συνεργός) [pronounced soon-er-GOSS] means fellow worker. This man is a Gentile former slave, and yet in the spiritual realm, since the day he was born again, he has advanced to maturity. This emphasizes the fact that whatever one’s background prior to salvation it is of no consequence. The only thing that counts is the advance to maturity through the intake of Bible doctrine. Paul calls him a fellow worker, despite both of these men having very different backgrounds.

With this is a descriptive genitive plural from the personal pronoun egó (ἐγώ) [pronounced ehg-OH], the first person personal pronoun, indicating that Paul did not know this man personally but he knew him by reputation. Therefore he says, “Salute Urbanos our fellow worker,” not “my fellow worker.” He is a case of someone who has been brought to Paul’s attention through reports. Then the preposition en (ἐν) [pronounced en] plus the locative singular from the proper noun Christos (χριστός) [pronounced krees-TOHSS]—“in Christ,” – royal family.

There is an honorable type of slavery where the slave makes the decision to go into a slavery situation.

The Celts could never get together in too many without fighting. They do not take well to authority. They have a tendency to fight among themselves. They are anti-establishment by nature. When they fight for their freedom, they do it in an anti-authority way. Setting off bombs to harm innocent people is simply wrong. Romans put them into slavery for this reason.

The Celts have often been enslaved because of their attitude. The Negroids are easily enslaved, with the Exception of the Zulus. They have the best system of military of any African nation.

Bob has talked to many conservatives and they are only conservative because they do not want to let go of what they have. Many liberals take that position because they want something that belongs to someone else. Our own country is filled with conservatives and liberals who choose that position simply for selfish reasons.

All freedom comes through military victory. The magic word today is quality. We cannot have freedom, which is our heritage, without

Only arrogance wants to make an issue out of race. The Mexicans have a right to enjoy and be enthusiastic about their culture; but they do not have the right to impose it upon us. We have a marvelous concept of freedom in our culture. That is our heritage. We have a right to advance or not based upon race.

Our government has no reason to feed healthy people. Scum is always arrogant and they assume that the world owes us a living. Too arrogant to hold onto a job. A depression often sets these people right, because they are forced to work or starve.

The Zulus organized themselves into a military organization, and so the Arabs laid off. We are in danger of becoming slaves in our country to communism. Our president does not realize what the Scriptures say, even though he quotes them. We should never have followed the Marshal plan and send money to all these people. We were ruled by stupid people. FDR was a baby when it came to politics.

Slavery in a free country means that slavery will be eradicated. Not through violence and not through legislation. The war between the states gave an erroneous impression to the slaves who were freed. We are not equal mentally or physically. There is no such thing as equality. There were some who understood responsibility, like Booker T. Washington and George Washington Carver, and they made some of the greatest speeches ever made. People listen to flattery; but not to the truth. You do not advance by being given things on a silver platter. We have created a monster by not emphasizing that a person must work hard.

Today our free society has wiped out our freedom by giving money to incompetent people, you are telling them that they have no responsibility under freedom. Our system and our policy of government is evil. Freedom demands responsibility. Collective arrogance and not race is the problem. People who have been enslaved, must be taught and trained in the value of freedom. God freed the slaves in Egypt; and they came out entirely. They did not try to integrate themselves into that same nation. Freedom demands that everyone understand it and cherish it. The Negro people were totally exploited by liberalism.

Urbanus was a slave who was freed and he integrated himself into the Roman system. He worked in the palace. He hustled. Individual self-determination.

If you are a believer in Jesus Christ, God has a perfect plan for your life. And it does not go against any government with established freedom.

Rome as an Empire had freedom; Rome as a republic did not. The British monarchy provided freedom. God created freedom in us. We have the right of self-determination. This is a man who was a slave and he became free and it did not become bitter. He served well in the royal palace.

“and Stachys my beloved” – the connective kai and the accusative singular direct object from Stachus (Στάχυς) [pronounced STAKH-ooos], “Stachus.” The name means “ear of corn.”

At a later time he became the bishop of Byzantium (Constantinople). He was a doctor in training in Rome and eventually he would go out as a missionary to Byzantium where he would at a later time become a great pastor. With this is the accusative of apposition, agapêtos (ἀγαπητός) [pronounced ag-ap-ay-TOSS] – “friend.” Stachus is known by Paul, somewhere their paths had crossed.

Ampliatius, Urbanus and Stachus all died as martyrs, according to extra-biblical records. These people made doctrine the issue of their life. Freedom is the great cause of birth; and doctrine is the great cause of the second birth. Therefore, whatever hard knocks came their way, whatever difficulties, whatever problems, nothing stopped them. They met these things by the daily intake of doctrine and each one became a great believer.

Romans 16:9 Salute Urbanus, our Fellow Worker in Christ, and Stachus my beloved friend.

Salutations in the Bible

1. These salutations are a part of the Word of God, therefore they require understanding and analysis.
2. Certain lessons from the salutations are obvious, such as the fact that special honor and high peer rating is extended by the Holy Spirit to the apostle Paul to believers in every walk of life, believers who have attained maturity. The issue in their names being found here is maturity adjustment to the justice of God.
3. Furthermore, in a context dealing with the royal family honor code these names are memorials to the fact that believers in all circumstances of life have honor and integrity from doctrine resident in the soul.
4. Just as we learn history from tombstones and graveyard inscriptions, so we learn doctrine from the names engraved in this passage. These names are engraved in the Word of God, therefore they have the significance compatible with the place where they are found – in the Scripture.
5. Three of these people died as martyrs. This means that the principle of dying grace applies just as much to violent death as to peaceful death.
6. Dying grace includes every way of dying, which means that there is blessing for the mature believer no matter what way God has chosen for him to die.
7. Obviously then, the way to prepare for death is the same way as to prepare for life—persistent positive volition toward doctrine, resulting in the accumulation of the inner resources of grace for every circumstance of life and death. For the believer, dying is a part of living. Your worst enemies might end up being believers.
8. Note that friendship and accurate estimation of believers is always made without flattery. It does not take flattery for friendships to be established.
9. Obviously, category #3 love or friendship is based upon capacity for life, capacity for personal love, rather than flattery, attraction, public relations reciprocity.
10. While doctrine resident in the soul is capacity for friendship the integrity from the honor code cements the relationship into something honorable and permanent.
11. Paul speaks with accuracy and humility when describing his friends.
12. Note also that Paul's friendships extend to members of the opposite sex, where Paul can have true rapport with women without their concern about Paul being on the make. His rapport with women was honorable.
13. The honor code keeps the man from being predatory in his friendships with women. Women can be friends with a man according to the honor code; without a man getting the wrong idea.

Lesson #528

528 09/20/1978 Romans 16:10–11 Cursing by association with anti-Semitism; biblical principle of slavery, rights of the master and slaves

There is enough information to appreciate all of these names.

Romans 16:10 Greet Apelles, the approved in Christ. Greet those of the household of Aristobulus. (BLB)

Verse 10 – “Salute Apelles approved in Christ.” The aorist active imperative of the verb aspazomai (ἀσπάζομαι) [pronounced as-PAD-zom-ahēe], meaning to greet, pay respects, salute. The constative verb contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: Paul produces the action. Again, the imperative of entreaty. The accusative singular direct object from the proper noun Apellēs (Ἀπελλῆς) [pronounced ap-el-LACE] – Apelles, who is a Jew. This is illustrated from the line in Horace’s satires: “Let the Jew Apella believe it, I do not.”

According to tradition Apelles was the bishop of Smyrna at a later time. In the evaluation of the church at Smyrna in Revelation 2:8-11 we know that he must have been very successful. This is one of the churches which is entirely complemented in that passage. The accusative singular from the noun dókimos (δόκιμος) [pronounced DOK-ee-moss] is a part of a double accusative in which we have a direct and predicate object—the proper noun Apelles is the direct object and dókimos (δόκιμος) [pronounced DOK-ee-moss] is the predicate object—plus the generic use of the definite article gives us a good idea as to how this should be translated. While dókimos (δόκιμος) [pronounced DOK-ee-moss] generally means “approved” it also connotes tried and true, genuine, respected, esteemed. It connotes a person who has been in some form of undeserved suffering and has passed the test without any of the usual mental attitude sins. So it means tested in battle and reliable. “Pay my respects to Apelles, tested and approved.” In this case we have a prepositional phrase to tell us where: the preposition en (ἐν) [pronounced en] plus the locative form of the proper noun Christos (χριστός) [pronounced krees-TOHSS]—“in Christ.”

Apelles

1. Apelles in a mature believer. He has passed the undeserved suffering test and has advanced to ultra-super-grace.
2. The believer in ultra super grace has to meet the test of undeserved suffering and pass physically, mentally and spiritually. Some of the greatest problems in undeserved suffering are in the mental realm.
3. Apelles represents the mature believer who finds his happiness in adversity as well as in prosperity. In other words, it makes no difference, he has the same happiness from the same source: maximum doctrine resident in the soul.
4. Apelles demonstrates that the possession of God’s happiness imputed results in the function of happiness in every circumstance of life and overflows to the other categories of capacity for life—for love, for adversity, etc.
5. To the ultra super grace believer eternity, therefore, becomes a reality. No one has the reality picture of eternity, no one appreciates eternity, like the believer who us ultra super grace.
6. Eternity by analogy can be real to the positive believer in any stage of growth because he understands things like “ten cities,” “many crowns,” and “an hundredfold harvest.” But eternity by principle can only be understood by the mature believer who has passed the undeserved suffering test and actually sees eternity from doctrine rather than analogy. He doesn't have to have some sustaining factor of analogy, a frame of reference in human life which he projects into eternity. Eternity is real without human life analogy and human life frame of reference.

"Salute them which are of the household of Aristobulus." Aristobulus is not the person who is being saluted, it is a group of slaves belonging to Aristobulus. When Paul writes this Aristobulus is dead, the slaves are in view here. The aorist active imperative of aspazomai (ἀσπάζομαι) [pronounced as-PAD-zom-ahee], an imperative of entreaty. The accusative plural direct object from the definite article, the generic use, which comprehends a class or category as a simple whole and sets it off in distinction from any other class or category. This article represents the people who are being saluted, the slaves of Aristobulus. Then ek (ἐκ) [pronounced ehk] plus the possessive genitive from the proper noun Aristoboulos (Ἀριστόβουλος) [pronounced ar-is-TOB-oo-loss] – "of Aristobulus." Aristobulus is the grandson of Herod the Great and brother of Herod Agrippa. "Greet the slaves of Aristobulus."

There were other famous men with the name of Aristobulus. The second was poisoned when agreeing to a peace deal.

Our Aristobulus comes from a very famous line. He was close to Claudius; and they grew up together. He kept a villa in Rome staffed with slaves. Aristobulus offered his slaves freedom once a month, and they refused it. They were free to come and go from the castle and they opted for doctrine. This lets us know that slavery is not the worst thing. Sometimes, it is the best thing. His slaves and villas became the property of Claudius. Claudius was poisoned by his third wife. Then they became the property of Nero; and they were all well trained and Nero was glad to have them

Some information on slavery.

Abraham had a number of slaves that there were some problems with one of them, the handmaid of Sara. But there were problems on both sides of that. However, Abraham did not manumit any of his slaves.

One source of slaves are POWs. Poverty in peacetime. Leviticus 25:39ff a man could sell himself into slavery. But he must be manumitted in the year of jubilee. Exodus 21:7 Nehemiah 5:5 a father could sell his daughter into slavery.

Doctrine of Slavery (R. B. Thieme, Jr.)

A. Introduction.

1. There were two sources of slavery in the ancient world: poverty in peacetime and captured prisoners in war.

2. A man could sell himself into slavery, Leviticus 25:39-41. This was a way of declaring bankruptcy and paying off his debts. But he had to be freed during the Year of Jubilee (every fiftieth year).
3. A father could sell his daughter or son into slavery to pay off the debts, Exodus 21:6-7; Nehemiah 5:5.
4. A widow's children could be sold to pay off their father's debt, 2 Kgs 4:1.
5. A woman could sell herself into slavery, Deuteronomy 15:12-17.
6. Slaves were often acquired through trade, purchase, payment of debt, as a gift, through birth, plunder in war, or by self-determination.
7. Slaves were manumitted by redemption or purchase, by the elapse of time (six years), Exodus 21:2-4, by the year of jubilee (the fiftieth year), Jeremiah 34:8-10, through physical disability or being maimed, Exodus 21:26. In this case the master was responsible to take care of the slave for life. People did; they bought in and they bought out. They were paid wages and they could buy their way out. However, such a one could choose to stay; and he would have a hole driven in his ear. Exodus 21:2-4
8. Jeremiah 34:8-10 all slaves released in the year of jubilee.
9. If a slave was injured or maimed, then the slave owner must take care of the slave forever.

B. Rights of the Master. Abram as the master of slaves had certain rights. Certain people find security in slavery.

1. He had the right to hold his slaves as chattel, Leviticus 25:45.
2. He had the right to leave slaves as an inheritance to his children, Leviticus 25:46.
3. He had the right to hold as property the wife and children of all slaves who were unmarried at the time they became slaves, Exodus 21:4.
4. He had the right to pursue and recover run away slaves, 1Kings 2:39- 41.
5. He had the right to free slaves on the Sabbatical year or the Year of Jubilee, or at any time.
6. He was commanded to circumcise his slaves, Genesis 17:12-13, 23, 27.
7. He had the right to sell, trade, or give away slaves, Genesis 29:24.
8. He had the right to punish or discipline slaves, but not to kill them, Exodus 21:20.
9. He had the right to marry a slave or give slaves in marriage, 1Chronicles 2:35.
10. He had the right to marry a daughter to a slave, 1 Chr 2:34.
11. He had the right to purchase slaves in foreign markets, Leviticus 25:44.
12. He had the right to enslave or sell as a slave anyone caught stealing his property, Genesis 44:8-33.
13. He had the right to demand service from his slaves, Genesis 14:14, 24.

C. The Rights of the Slave.

1. He had the right to freedom by the purchase of his redemption, or by the elapse of time, or in the Year of Jubilee, or he could work his way into freedom.
2. He had the right to good treatment, Leviticus 25:43, 46.
3. He had the right to justice, Exodus 21:20ff; Job 31:13ff.
4. He had the right to marry, have children and live a normal life, Exodus 21:5.
5. He had the right to voluntary slavery where having been freed could choose to remain a slave, Exodus 21:5ff; Deuteronomy 15:16. His request had to be honored. This was done in front of two witnesses. The mark of this voluntary slavery was having his ear lobe nailed to a door.
6. He had the right to own property and money, Leviticus 25:29.
7. He had the right to promotion, Genesis 15:2, 39:4.
8. He had the right to worship God without interference from the master, Exodus 12:44; Deuteronomy 12:12.

D. Slavery has continued throughout world history.

1. In the New Testament, the Church was not issued any decree abolishing slavery, even though many early church believers were slaves. Nor were slaves commanded to rise up and overthrow their masters.
2. The responsibility of a slave to a master is taught in Ephesians 6:5-9 and Colossians 3:22-4:1.
3. Even the epistle to Philemon doesn't advocate the abolition of slavery, but emphasizes just treatment of slaves who are believers or otherwise. It also gives strong emphasis on the personal option to free slaves under principles of grace righteousness. However, this is an option to be exercised by the individual slave owner and not the federal government.
4. The War between the States became a turning point in U.S. history because it permitted the federal government to tamper with individual freedoms rather than to protect those freedoms. Legislation that interferes with personal freedom is evil. When self determination was taken away by the abolition proclamation of Lincoln, more freedom was lost for everyone, than was ever gained for a few. The economic system in the south was changing, and slavery would have probably been annulled. Lincoln could have been the greatest president of the United States, had he lived. There are problems with slaves being free in the country where they were slaves. It would have been better to ship them off to Liberia in Africa.
5. The correct solution is spiritual, where slaves could grow into spiritual maturity.
6. Bob is a slave to the Lord and he would not want it any other way. He likes being a slave to the Lord Jesus Christ. He studies and he teaches. He works much longer hours that most of us dream of. Bob is directly responsible to God. God is responsible for Bob's upkeep in life. Many people have found out that the ministry is difficult and they got out; and that was the right choice. Bob is a slave and he will always be a slave. Bob loves being a slave.

7. Slavery means great responsibility to the slave owner in the execution of his authority. The owner is a one man welfare system. This was the weakness of the nationwide manumission, when many of the slaves did not have the equipment to be free.

8. The Jews had slaves which were mostly white. The Romans had mostly white and some black slaves.

9. Slavery provided the option between security and freedom. Today people select the pseudo-security of welfare rather than freedom. Most people in the U.S. prefer the security of labor unions, and federal handouts rather than freedom. In a welfare state, you don't have failures; the failures are killed off by the state. When you get away from doctrine, you get security conscious, which is a great evil. Idiots want security rather than freedom. These people prefer slavery.

E. Both masters and slaves have sin natures.

F. Slavery is a social evil. The job of the believer is not to change social evils through violence, civil war, or through legislation; but through Bible doctrine.

Romans 16:10 Pay my respects to Apelles the reliable one, tested and approved in Christ. Greet the slaves of Aristobulus.

Romans 16:11 Greet Herodion, my kinsman. Greet those of the household of Narcissus being in the Lord. (BLB)

Verse 11 – the imperial slaves. “Salute Herodion my kinsman.” The aorist active imperative of aspazomai (ἀσπάζομαι) [pronounced as-PAD-zom-ah-ee]. The accusative singular direct object from the proper noun Hērōdīōn (Ἡρωδίων) [pronounced hay-ro-DEE-ohn]. He was a slave who was freed. He was very happy as a slave but decided to go it on his own when offered his freedom. So when he was, he honored his master by calling himself “of Herod.” He was a slave of the Herods. He may have been in the household of Aristobulus. He remained associated with his former master even though his master had freed him. His master is now dead and he continues in the imperial palace of Nero. With this is the appositional accusative singular from the noun suggenês (συγγενής) [pronounced soong-ghen-ACE]. In Romans 9:3 this word is used, but not for kinsman as here; it refers to fellow countryman. It means “my fellow countryman,” “of the same race.” “Greet Herodion my fellow countryman.” This was a Jewish slave who had been freed, a believer who had advanced to maturity. Herodian had gained his freedom, as that is what his name means.

We use our free will to become slaves to many things, good and bad. Circumstances do not hinder evangelism. Paul makes no suggestions that the slave should revolt or seek his freedom through some sort of revolt. Adverse circumstances and social problems are not issues when it comes to spiritual growth.

Principle: Circumstances do not hinder either evangelism or the advance to maturity. The thing that hinders is personal self-determination. If you are negative you are hindered; if you are positive you'll make it. Note that Paul makes no suggestion that the slaves should revolt or seek their freedom. Solving social problems neither advances one spiritually nor fulfils the plan of God for his life. Christians getting into social action produce good and evil, not spiritual advance. Adverse circumstances or social injustice do not hinder spiritual advance. In fact, circumstances are never the issue. What counts is positive volition and Bible doctrine in the soul. Hence revelation, not revolution, is the panacea of life. Revolution and social reform are not related to the spiritual advance in the plan of God.

“Greet them that be of the household of Narcissus, which are in the Lord.” The aorist active imperative of aspazomai (ἀσπάζομαι) [pronounced as-PAD-zom-ahee]. Then the accusative plural direct object from the definite pronoun used as an immediate demonstrative pronoun and translated, “those slaves.” “Salute those slaves.” When it is desired to call special attention to a designated object in context the demonstrative pronoun is used. In this case the demonstrative pronoun emphasizes the slaves belonging to Narcissus. These slaves had not only believed in Jesus Christ but they had advanced to maturity. Then the prepositional phrase, ek (ἐκ) [pronounced ehk] plus the ablative of the proper noun Nárkissos (Νάρκισσος) [pronounced NAHR-kis-soss]—“of Narcissus.”

Agripina was a very athletic woman; she was the: Narcissus did pimping for the emperor mother of Nero. She was on a boat, five miles off the shore; and Caesar's men opened up the petcocks while she was sleeping, with the idea that she would drown.

Bob continues waxing about the history of these various people. Narcissus was a heel in life and the same as a master. People even advanced to maturity, even with a terrible master like Narcissus.

“which are in the Lord” – present active indicative of eimi (εἰμί) [pronounced eye-ME], “who are.” The present tense is a static present representing a condition as perpetually existing. The active voice: the slaves of Narcissus who have attained maturity produce the action of the verb. This is a circumstantial participle. Then en (ἐν) [pronounced eh] plus the locative of kurios (κύριος) [pronounced KOO-ree-oss] meaning security in the Lord Jesus.”

Romans 16:11 Greet Herodion my fellow countryman. Salute those slaves of Narcissus who are in the Lord.

Slaves of Narcissus

1. These unknown mature believers who were slaves of the deceased Narcissus are now slaves of Nero, and they represent the concept of blessing imputed through undeserved suffering.
2. This undeserved suffering will shake up their priorities and place great emphasis on eternity.

3. The honor code function of the mature believer meets every challenge of life. These slaves had a hard time under Narcissus and he was removed from this life once the slaves passed the undeserved suffering test.
4. Capacity for life imputed to the mature believer takes adversity in stride, so that the inner resources of doctrine perpetuate the blessings of maturity in the sphere of undeserved suffering.

No one can touch a believer apart from God's permission. Any place where the mature believer is, is safe as anywhere else.

529 09/24/1978 Romans 16:12 Reunion of athletes; Roman Empire; dying well; honor of women who worked to exhaustion

Bob met his old sport buddies. One of them went ashore every time, and took a bullet a number of times. There were people that Bob knew who have died in a variety of ways. We all die alone; our capacity for dying is directly related to our capacity for living. Dying is a greater blessing than any other blessing in life.

The ladies have a most important role in this life. Without women in this world, this would be a horrible place.

Equality destroys freedom. Freedom is composed of freedom, privacy, property and the umbrella of authority. Women can naturally understand freedom even more than men. Women make themselves beautiful. Women all have property; and they think of property in terms of their dress. A woman can respond to authority and she appreciates authority more than a man does. Freedom is ordained of God. We must have one or the other; and we take our choice, freedom or equality. Freedom destroys equality.

The idea of a woman being equal to a man is ridiculous. Art deco is drab and extremely stupid; where art nuvo is much better. We no longer live in the day of James, and much in the KJV is obscured by anachronism.

The Antoinines came to the throne shortly after the canon was completed. There was a large pivot of mature believers during this time. None of the Caesars at this time were born-again believers; but the pivot made this a great time in history to live.

There has always been an abuse of authority; but this does not detract from this being a great period of time; perhaps the greatest. There was a great haven for the Jews in Rome. They were protected under the concept of pro-semitism. An antisemitic nation destroys itself. Jesus Christ controls history. We are headed into some very vigorous storms. Whether we survive or not depends upon how we reaction to great historical disasters. Many nations know what it is like to have armies traveling through their land.

We failed at the end of WWII, allowing the Hungarians to be overrun and destroyed. Yet we are still here and God has a purpose for us.

The men that Bob met with were multi-millionaires. Athletes, at this time, were not dumb people. Bob almost had the longest hair of anyone there. Very distinguished and very successful. No one is successful until he passes the last test, how does the person die. If you do not have the doctrine, you will not be a success.

You do not have to be a genius to realize that the bodies of men and women are very different. Bob read in Time magazine that all of denim companies lost money.

There are three women in this verse.

Romans 16:12 Greet Tryphena and Tryphosa, those toiling in the Lord. Greet Persis, the beloved, who toiled much in the Lord. (BLB)

Verse 12 – the ladies of maturity. “Salute Tryphena and Tryphosa, who labour in the Lord.” The aorist active imperative of the verb aspazomai (ἀσπάζομαι) [pronounced as-PAD-zom-ah-ee] means to salute, greet, pay respects. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: Paul produces the action of the verb under the ministry of God the Holy Spirit. The purpose is to recognize those honorable believers in Rome, those who attained spiritual maturity, those who fulfilled the plan of God for their lives. They act as the pivot for historical blessing in the Roman empire.

We have here a double accusative direct object from proper names: Truphaina (Τρύφαινα) [pronounced TROO-fa-ee-nah] and Truphōsa (Τρυφῶσα) [pronounced troo-FO-sah]. There is clear indication that these two ladies are twins, therefore they had names often given to twins, with exactly the same root. Archaeology has uncovered an inscription on which is found Tryphena, and on another one Tryphosa. The meaning of these names: Tryphena means dainty; Tryphosa means delicate. These ladies emphasize the fact that what is in your soul is by far the most important, and that if you have inner beauty you are going to be successful in life and in dying. The connotation of the names are no accidental in this passage. Doctrine provides that inner beauty for a woman which in turn is the umbrella of femininity overshadowing and motivating to honor those men in the periphery of such spiritual magnificence. This is the fulfilment of the inner beauty concept. Then the accusative plural direct object from the definite article, used here as a relative pronoun—“who.” The antecedents are Tryphena and Tryphosa.

Dainty and delicate can describe a soul which lacks arrogance. It is possible for a woman to be smarter than a man. Bob indicates that a right man is smarter than his right woman.

The most vicious infighting in the world is among the women.

, which means,

What have these ladies done as a result of having maximum doctrine resident in the soul? The answer is found briefly in the aorist active participle of the verb kopiaō (κοπιᾶω) [pronounced kop-ee-AH-oh] which means to work hard, to work to the point of exhaustion, to make great exertion, to even wear one's self out. It has the connotation of both mental and physical weariness. But behind that is motivation. What you think and how you are motivated in the issue. So this is a reference to the great inner beauty of these twins which came from Bible doctrine. They went all of the way to maturity; they fulfilled the plan of God for their lives. The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The action of the verb plus the connotation of the verb indicates that these ladies through the strong motivation of Bible doctrine are working to the point of exhaustion. The active voice: the wins, Tryphena and Tryphosa produce the action of the verb. The participle is circumstantial. With this is the prepositional phrase, en (ἐν) [pronounced en] plus the locative of kurios (κύριος) [pronounced KOO-ree-oss] – “in the Lord.”

Romans 16:12a Greet Tryphena and Tryphosa, who have worked in the Lord to the point of exhaustion.

God assigns different things to different ladies.

When a woman feels sorry for herself thinks that she is the expert on life. She becomes bitter, implacable, and she becomes a very vicious person.

Principle: Bible doctrine resident in the soul, which is the source of the woman's inner beauty, is also the source of her incentive, her drive to keep on going when mentally and physically exhausted.

“Salute the beloved Persis, which laboured much in the Lord” – again, the aorist active imperative of aspazomai (ἀσπάζομαι) [pronounced as-PAD-zom-ah-ee], meaning here to pay respects to. The object is the accusative singular direct object from the proper noun Persís (Περσίς) [pronounced per-SECE]. The appositional accusative from the adjective agapêtos (ἀγαπητός) [pronounced ag-ap-ay-TOSS], with the definite article which sets her apart in this small category of women whom Paul loved intimately as friends. We translate this “worthy of love” or “respected one.”

Then the nominative feminine singular subject from the indefinite relative pronoun hostis (ὅστις) [pronounced HOHS-tiss] referring to a special category. Plus the aorist active indicative of the verb kopiaô (κοπιάω) [pronounced kop-ee-AH-oh]. She has been motivated by doctrine in her soul in a time of exhaustion. Next is the adverbial accusative of reference of polus, polos (πολύς, πολλός) [pronounced poll-OOS], meaning “many.” But it means here, “with reference to many things.” It is in the plural.

Principle: Maturity exploits production; maturity produces honor in production; the mature woman never falls or fails in a time of exhaustion. You never know what kind of a person you are unless you are taken to a state of absolute exhaustion, hungry, tired, exhausted. Some get a weird sense of humor when they are exhausted.

These are three women who have passed the exhaustion test. Her function is diversified. She has multifarious functions.

Romans 16:12 Greet Tryphena and Tryphosa, who have worked in the Lord to the point of exhaustion. Pay my respects to Persis, worthy of love, who has worked in the Lord to the point of exhaustion with reference to many things.

While the two sentences in this verse use approximately the same words they are really quite different. The first sentence uses a definite article for a relative pronoun, while the second greeting uses an indefinite relative pronoun. Both sentences use kopiaō (κοπιάω) [pronounced kop-ee-AH-oh] in the Lord, but the second one adds polus, polos (πολύς, πολλός) [pronounced poll-OOS]. In both the case of the twins and Persis we have en (ἐν) [pronounced en] plus kurios (κύριος) [pronounced KOO-ree-oss], but in the case of Persis we have the plural of polus, polos (πολύς, πολλός) [pronounced poll-OOS] added, and that is significant. This adds up to the fact that Persis has attained the ultra-super-grace status while the twins have attained maturity. All are living in the Z radical but there are different stages of growth even in maturity.

This passage includes many ladies.

Lesson #530

530 09/24/1978 Romans 16:13–14 Edwardian England; mature believer family of Simon of Cyrene and local church men; marathon

Romans 16:13 Greet Rufus, chosen in the Lord, and his mother and mine. (BLB)

Verse 13 – “Salute Rufus chosen in the Lord, and his mother and mine.” The aorist active imperative from the verb aspazomai (ἀσπάζομαι) [pronounced as-PAD-zom-ah-ee]. The aorist is a constative aorist which contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, a greeting. The active voice: Paul produces the action of the verb under the ministry of the Holy Spirit for a definite purpose. These people are not simply names thrown in, there is nothing casual about this at all. The imperative mood is the entreaty, the request rather than a command, but a request which is recorded in the Word of God forever in order to list the honor roll of the great ones in Rome. The accusative singular direct object from the proper noun Rhoûphos (Ῥοῦφος) [pronounced HROO-foss], in the Latin it is Rufus. He is said to be in the appositional accusative, eklektós (ἐκλεκτός) [pronounced ek-lek-TOSS], meaning “elected one.”

We go back to eternity past and the omniscience of God. The omniscience of God includes God’s knowledge of everything that would ever happen before anything happened. He also knew everything that would never happen. So that the omniscience of God can be classified as the essence of God knowing what would occur, and the alternatives would be the things which would not occur but would have occurred if someone had made a different decision. God recognizes that in every decision there are options and He knew billions of years ago what decisions would be made and what decisions would not be made, what the alternatives would be, and He even knows what would have happened had the alternative decision been made instead of the one that was. God’s omniscience does not in any way interfere with the free will of man. However, only God knew what would occur billions of years before it did. In effect, He fed this into a great computer which we call the doctrine of divine decrees. The decree of God is His eternal, holy, wise and sovereign purpose, comprehending at once all things that ever were or will be, and their causes, conditions, successions and relations. In other words, all history was fed into the computer long before history existed. All of these things were known to God; all of these things were in the computer. The computer handles them in three different ways. The first is election, the second if foreknowledge, and the third is predestination. Election indicates that God knows everyone who would ever be in the plan of God, everyone who would believe in Christ. Therefore election emphasizes that one most important decision in life, the decision to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, the decision resulting in eternal salvation; a free will decision which puts the individual in the plan of God. God has a plan for every believer, there are no exceptions. Foreknowledge simply acknowledges what is in the decree. God knows everything that would ever happen. Foreknowledge is not the same as omniscience. Omniscience knows the unknowable as well as the knowable. Foreknowledge merely deals with what is in the decrees. Predestination means that God has a personal plan based upon God's perfect knowledge of every decision you will ever make. So you are said to be predestined in that God knows the decisions you make, and having known the decisions you make He provides whatever is necessary—blessing, discipline, growth, whatever may be involved. Election, foreknowledge and predestination: three words that are overworked theologically and which must occasionally be reduced to the utmost simplicity.

We are dealing here with election. The one mentioned here as Rufus is said to be the elected one. Again, we go back to that prepositional phrase that indicates that Rufus is royal family, en (ἐν) [pronounced en] plus the locative of kurios (κύριος) [pronounced KOO-ree-oss]—“in the Lord.” This is the baptism of the Spirit, the formation of the royal family of God, retroactive and current positional truth, everything that is necessary to form the royal family of God in the Church Age under the title of royalty. Rufus is found in other passages of Scripture, back in the Gospels, e.g. Mark 15:21. It was Rufus's father, Simon, who actually carried the Lord's cross. Cf. Matthew 27:32. Simon, along with the Roman centurion who observed the crucifixion believed in Jesus at that time.

Cyrene originally a Greek colony; with good soil and beautiful weather, not unlike Los Angeles. Aristophenes came from this region. A place of great blessing and prosperity.

When Jesus begins to stagger, the centurion looks out into the crowd. Simon was wearing white robes. Both men believed in Jesus during those 6 hours. Only three people born again at the cross; and each one represents a different principle. The Jewish businessman (representing the scattered Jewish population); the dying gangster (representing the criminal element), and the centurion, representing the might and greatness of Rome.

Paul is sending greetings; Mark is just recording historic facts. So Rufus and his mother are named by Paul.

Next is the adjunctive use of the conjunction kai, which means “also,” plus mêtêr (μήτηρ) [pronounced MAY-tare] for “mother.” With it is a possessive genitive of the intensive pronoun autós (αὐτός) [pronounced ow-TOSS] used as a third person pronoun—“also greet his mother.” Paul adds a personal note with the connective use of the conjunction kai, which this time means “and,” plus the possessive genitive singular from the personal pronoun egó (ἐγώ) [pronounced ehg-OH]—“his mother and mine.” She was not the real mother of Paul but she had treated Paul as she treated her own son.

Romans 16:13 Greet Rufus the elected one in the Lord, also pay my respects to his mother and mine.

Romans 16:14 Greet Asyncritus, Phlegon, Hermes, Patrobas, Hermas, and the brothers with them. (BLB)

Verse 14 – There is more than one local church in Rome. “Salute Asyncritus, Phlegon, Hermas, Patrobas, Hermes, and the brethren which are with them.” This begins as usual with the aorist active imperative of aspazomai (ἀσπάζομαι) [pronounced as-PAD-zom-ah-ee]. “Asyncritus” is not correct. The accusative singular direct object from the proper noun Asunkritos (Ἀσύγκριτος) [pronounced as-OONG-kree-toss]. Sugkrinō (συγκρίνω) [pronounced soong-KREE-no], which means, 1) to joint together fitly, compound, combine; 2) to interpret; 3) to compare. Thayer definition only. Strong’s #4793. Kritos means a judge, and this would be meaning “incomparable judge,” a “great judge.” The word means incomparable as a judge. Outside of his name we know nothing here, but there is something else listed in tradition of extra-biblical history. From the meaning of his name it is obvious that he is a mature believer. He was incomparable through Bible doctrine resident in his soul. Several additional principles can be derived from this unknown mature believer. For example, although his name is mentioned without anything else, this much we know: the importance of every believer in the plan of God. Asyncritus is unknown to us, but then we are unknown to Asyncritus. The point is, God knows him and God knows us. We have something in common; we are all known by God. It means that every person is an individual to God, and God has an individual plan tailor made for his life. So the importance of every believer as an individual in the plan of God. So Paul greets Asyncritus as a friend, and since Paul has not been in Rome up to this time it means that he had contact with him somewhere else in the empire. Being listed also means that he was a mature believer. This emphasizes again the importance of Bible doctrine in the so-called ordinary life. There is no ordinary life as far as the Lord is concerned.

“Phlegon” – Flegon, means “burning.” Full of energy, doesn’t know what to do with it all. Never relaxed, therefore an entirely different type of personality. We know from extra-biblical history that he became a pastor in a Greek town called Marathon.

Darius assaulted Greece at the gulf and they planned to land at Marathon and march to Athens. They wanted to lure an army there; but they also entered in at another place as well. There was a man from Athenia. The Spartans could not come for two weeks due to a religious festival, as they wanted to kill Persians. The Persians landed at Marathon. The Athenian army came out to meet them. Miltades was one of the ten generals. Each general would stand up and say what he could do. If Miltades was always followed; and the other generals would give a different plan, as a cya. They could always say, if things went wrong, this was my idea, but they did not do it. As a result of a runner, Marathon became a shrine to freedom. This is a battlefield that is visited; and people run from Marathon to Athens to check the time that it takes them.

Next is the accusative singular direct object from Hermēs (Ἑρμῆς) [pronounced her-MACE], “Hermes.” At this time Hermes was probably a businessman in Rome. Later on he would be a pastor in Dalmatia. He was called Hermes because he was a really vigorous man. He represents to us the believer who while in business discovers that he has the spiritual gift of pastor-teacher and prepares himself in a local church like Rome to eventually go out as a pastor himself. Next is the accusative singular direct object from the proper noun Patrobās (Πατροβᾶς) [pronounced pat-ROHB-ahs]. The name is the abbreviated form of Patrobis, a wealthy freed man of Nero who was finally put to death some time after Paul wrote this epistle. The one who killed him sort of proclaimed himself king, was king for maybe 7 months, and he killed Patrobis during this time.

With this is the accusative singular direct object from the proper noun Hermās (Ἑρμᾶς) [pronounced her-MAHS], the nickname for Hermogenes of 2Timothy 1:15 where he was then in reversionism. Paul cut him dead when he became a reversionist. He turned his back on Paul and on doctrine as well. He represents the believer who reaches maturity only to neglect Bible doctrine and to retreat into reversionism. There is no record as to whether he recovered from his reversionism or not. If he is the writer of the Shepherd of Hermas, then he recovered.

“and the other brethren which are with them” – i.e. the other believers who were in the church. But these are believers who were positive and had not yet advanced to maturity. This is the accusative plural direct object from adelphos (ἀδελφός) [pronounced ad-el-FOSS] and it means that there are a lot of other people in that church. They just simply had not cracked the maturity barrier, though some of them would eventually. These are positive believers in various stages of growth. Paul did not know these other people but he knew that there was a large group of people meeting together in this second church at Rome—“and the brethren” (or the royal family). Then one prepositional phrase to show they are not in the first church in Rome, but in the second church, the preposition sun (σύν) [pronounced soon] plus the instrumental plural from the intensive pronoun autós (αὐτοῖς) [pronounced ow-TOSS]—“with them.”

Romans 16:14 Greet Asyncritos, Phlegon, Hermes, Patrobis, Hermogenes [or Hermos], and the royal family associated with them.

We have here another local church in Rome. This clarifies the problem, also, of plurality of elders. There is no such thing as plurality of elders in one church. Elders are pastors with emphasis on their authority over a specific local church. The elders who met Paul in Ephesus were not elders of one local church but were pastors of different congregations.

A multiplicity of elders is arrogance, revolution, an attack on the authority of the pastor-teacher. It is a rejection of delegated authority from God. There is no such thing as a teaching elder and an administrative elder. A false doctrine of arrogance.

531 09/25/1978 Romans 16:15–16 Third local church of Rome; doctrine for old age; doctrine of the kiss (29 point survey)

Everyone that Bob knew and grew up with, all of them served and then entered into life. There was a Catholic priest and a Presbyterian minister. The priest was a better scholar than the minister; and Bob is a greater than all them. The minister has presided over a very large congregation. He said today, he would be a conscientious objector. Bob does not know anyone who is more confused than the Presbyterian. The Catholic priest was less confused. The Catholic is a conservative (although many of his brothers are liberal).

Bob saw that the years have not been kind to his former friends and sports guys. Generally speaking, most people cannot handle getting older. There is a vanity thing. To try to recapture youth is almost an act of imbecility. The older you get, the better life is.

Romans 16:15 Greet Philologus and Julia, Nereus and his sister, and Olympas and all the saints with them. (BLB)

Verse 15 – a third local church. “Salute Philologus, and Julia, Nereus, and his sister, and Olympas, and all the saints which are with them.” Again, the aorist active imperative of the verb aspazomai (ἀσπάζομαι) [pronounced as-PAD-zom-ahēē]. The imperative of entreaty is a request rather than an order, and first on the list, the accusative singular direct object from the proper noun Philólogos (Φιλόλογος) [pronounced fil-OHL-og-oss], which means “lover of doctrine.” He was a freed slave and a very old man at the time that Paul writes. He had lived in the palace of Augustus. The principle is: old age is not hindrance to advancing to maturity. Here is a believer who remained faithful to the Word in his old age. Bible doctrine is the solution to the problems of old age just as Bible doctrine is the solution to the problems of youth. The adjunctive use of the conjunction kai here is “also.” “Also Julia,” rather than “and Julia.” The accusative singular direct object from the proper noun Iouliá (Ἰουλίᾱ) [pronounced ee-oo-LEE-ah], the name of both the aunt and the sister of Julius Caesar.

Also, Julia is the daughter of Augusta by his second wife. It was also the name of the granddaughter of Augustus. So there were a lot of Julia’s in the Roman imperial household, it was a favourite name. Julia in this context is the wife of Philologus. The home of this couple is apparently the site of this third local church. Here also by implication is a couple whose marriage did not hinder them from advancing to maturity. Nothing in their marriage was more important than the perception of doctrine. Since doctrine was first, everything worked out.

Next comes Nereus, the accusative singular direct object from the proper noun Nhrea, a famous believer who not only attained maturity and glorified the Lord by such attainment, but became a very famous Christian martyr in the reign of Nerva. He was very young at the time of writing because he was martyred somewhere about 96-98 AD, and his martyrdom was very famous. There is also a connective conjunction here, kai, and the appositional accusative adelphê (ἀδελφή) [pronounced ad-ehl-FAY], plus the possessive genitive singular from the pronoun autós (αὐτῶς) [pronounced ow-TOSS], meaning “and his sister.” So we have “Nereus and his sister.” The ascensive use of kai, meaning “even,” adds another person, the appositional accusative of Olympás (πάς) [pronounced pahs], the name of his sister.

These are unknown believers, except for Nereus who had a famous martyrdom. Then “all the saints which are with them,” indicating another church. The accusative plural direct object from the adjective pás (πάς) [pronounced pahs], plus hagios (ἅγιος) [pronounced HA-gee-oss]—all the saints.” With this is the intensive pronoun autós (αὐτῶς) [pronounced ow-TOSS] used as the third person plural personal pronoun—“associated with them.” Here is the instrumental of association which implies a second party must furnish the means of association. The second party is the pastor of the third local church.

Romans 16:15 Greet Philologus, also Julia, Nereus and his sister, even Olympas, and all the saints associated with them.

The function of the honor code recognizes great believers wherever they are found. There is instant rapport among believers where doctrine has priority in the lives of the royal family. Perception of doctrine is the true basis for rapport in the royal family. Doctrine is the issue; the honor code is the basis for expressing that issue. With doctrine resident in the soul and the function of the honor code you have true rapport.

Romans 16:16 Greet one another with a holy kiss. All the churches of Christ greet you. (BLB)

Verse 16 – honor code relationship among the local churches. “Saute one another with an holy kiss. The churches of Christ salute you.” Again, aspazomai (ἀσπάζομαι) [pronounced as-PAD-zom-ahee] in the aorist active imperative. The accusative plural direct object from the reciprocal pronoun allêlôn (ἀλλήλων) [pronounced al-LAY-lohn], translated “each other.” The plural subject is being represented as affected by an interchange of action with the verb, and that is why it is called reciprocal. “Salute each other.” Then the prepositional phrase for reciprocity, en (ἐν) [pronounced en] plus the instrumental singular from hagios (ἅγιος) [pronounced HA-gee-oss] and the noun philêma (φίλημα) [pronounced FIL-ay-mah]—“with a holy kiss.” The ancient custom of greeting is comparable to shaking hands today.

The Doctrine of Kissing

1. The custom of kissing in the ancient world originated from the animistic idea. Kissing only occurred where people were smart. Animism is the belief that all objects possess life by the indwelling of the soul.
2. The kiss on the mouth was the means of conveying one’s soul to another under animism. This means to convey your soul to another in the expression of love.
3. Later, the essence of kissing was often found in the transfer of breath to those who related breath to the soul—a sub-form of animism.

4. Therefore a kiss was considered by the ancients an intermingling of animi, or pseuchai, the intermingling of souls.
5. The kiss was also used to get to know the person by scent. This was especially true of the Middle East and east of the Middle East.
6. Apart from the erotic implications of a kiss it was the means in the ancient world of recognizing rulers—kissing the feet, and in some cases kissing the hand. The kiss goes back to the Graeco-Roman world for greeting of relatives as well as greeting of friends. The kiss represented the fact that there was nothing between your soul and theirs.
7. The kiss also expressed the close relationship between members of a royal family, and since the church, the body of Christ, is royal family it was so used at the inception of this dispensation.
8. The kiss was used for respect as well as love, therefore it became the customary greeting in the royal family of God under the title of “holy kiss.”
9. The holy kiss, then, was the expression of impersonal love in honor code function. It was a greeting of respect for the imputed righteousness of God residing in another believer. In effect, the holy kiss was recognition that the believer you were kissing also had the same righteousness of God which you had.
10. The kiss conveyed honor, as has been carried down to the present in the award of decorations by the French.
11. Alexander the Great used the kiss as the means of identifying his friends and relatives.
12. Therefore the kiss of honor and the kiss of recognition came to Rome by way of the Seleucids and Ptolemies, the Hellenistic monarchies. Augustus instituted the kiss as a part of good manners. Tiberias, who was anti-social, abolished it.
13. After Tiberias the kiss was again instituted and was used by emperors as a token of highest honor.
14. Plinney the younger lauds Trajan for granting the senate the right of kissing at the beginning and at the end of their sessions.
15. Homer introduced the Greek concept of kissing on the cheek and forehead as a greeting.
16. From that time on in the ancient world, even up into the modern world, kissing was used in greeting, in parting, in making a contract, in honor of the winner at games, and also in reconciliation. Many uses. Don't laugh at other people's cultures.
17. The erotic kiss of the ancient world is described in Latin literature but is not pertinent here. Ovid described this in Latin poetry. Latin students enjoyed this.
18. Kissing the foot in the coronation ceremony of the Babylonian kings was the way of recognizing a new king.
19. Kissing the foot or hand became a matter of homage, while kissing the cheeks became a matter of greeting.
20. Caligula, the mad emperor of Rome, did not like people to kiss his feet, so he would take off his shoes and have everyone kiss his shoes instead.

21. In the later Roman empire kissing the feet was discarded for kissing the robe of the emperor. In Egypt nobility kissed the king's feet, while servants kissed the earth in front of the Pharaoh.
22. On reception into a closed circle the kiss was a sign of brotherhood. A newly-elected chief of pirates or robbers in the Roman world was kissed by each of the pirates when he was elected.
23. There is also the cultic kiss of the ancient world in which the attainment of supernatural strength was accomplished by kissing an idol.
24. The pagan custom is carried over into Romanism with kissing the feet of the statue of Peter in Rome.
25. Neither the cultic nor the erotic kiss is found in the New Testament; only in the Old.
26. The kiss of Judas Iscariot was a greeting kiss. It says in effect there is nothing between my soul and yours, I come as a friend. But actually the kiss was used to betray our Lord Jesus Christ. This, then, was the kiss of hypocrisy—Luke 22:47.
27. The parting kiss is documented by Acts 20:37.
28. The kissing of our Lord's feet in Luke 7:38, 45 was a recognition of his deity as well as His kingship.
29. That brings us to the holy kiss, Romans 16:16, and found in 1Corinthians 16:20; 2Corinthians 13:12; 1Thessalonians 5:26. This is to be described as the liturgical kiss. Its connotation is impersonal love. As far as our passage is concerned this command must be interpreted in the time in which it was written. We are 2000 years from this custom and therefore we portray this custom in a very simple way: by the fulfilment of the royal family honor code—impersonal love. However, in our society we are Anglo-Saxon by culture and we do not have the holy kiss any longer. The command to greet each other with a holy kiss is simply a command to love the brethren—impersonal love. We eliminate the overt activity and we emphasize what is in the soul.

Then the nominative plural of ekklêsía (ἐκκλησία) [pronounced ek-klay-SEE-ah] with the generic use of the definite article, meaning “the churches,” referring to many local churches in Corinth from where Paul is writing. There is no such thing as one church in each place. Then comes aspazomai (ἀσπάζομαι) [pronounced as-PAD-zom-ah-ee] for the last time for a while, present active indicative. This is a descriptive present for what is now going on as Paul conveys these greetings. The active voice: the local churches in one area greet local churches in another area. Principle: Fellowship is the only relationship that should exist among local churches—fellowship, not organization. Organization means a denomination. The indicative mood is the declarative indicative of reality, the genuine greeting being sent. The accusative plural direct object from su means “you” or “you all.”

Romans 16:16 Greet each other with a holy kiss. All the churches of Christ greet you.

Final Instructions and Greetings

Romans 16:17 Now I exhort you, brothers, to consider those causing divisions and obstacles contrary to the teaching that you have learned, and turn away from them. (BLB)

Verse 17 – the drill regarding the weak reversionist. “Now I beseech you, brethren, mark them which cause divisions and offences contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned.” The weak and strong believer is one of the most important concepts. The more you learn doctrine the more you know what is a weak believer, what is a strong believer. Your norms and standards for making such an estimate of a situation, or the status quo with regard to anyone with whom you are associated has absolutely nothing whatever to do with the usual concepts of morality verses immorality, legalism versus antinomianism, and other concepts which are found in the Scripture as false standards, false norms with which to evaluate any situation. Remember that the strong believer is defined as the one who has maximum doctrine resident in his soul, the believer who has fulfilled the principle of X + Y + Z. The strong believer always functions under the royal family honor code. He has the ability to rightly divide the Word of truth, he understands the principle of personal and impersonal love, and he has great discernment with regard to those who do not. He can spot them in a moment and without judging them, without maligning them, without in any way running them down, he can avoid them completely and totally; that is the drill with regard to the reversionist. You are to cut off the reversionist completely. It does not change your impersonal love, your toleration, but it does mean that you have nothing whatever to do with the weak believer who is in reversionism. The strong believer has the ability to understand this and to appreciate it, and in so avoiding the weak believer he does not in any way detract or hinder the weak believer’s recovery if the weak believer so determines.

The weak believer falls into two categories. Some believers are weak because they are just starting. They are weak because they are ignorant of doctrine. However, their ignorance is not their fault. They are positive toward doctrine and they just happen to be babies who haven’t advanced far enough to be strong believers. Maximum doctrine resident in the soul is the simple definition of the strong believer. Therefore the honor code impersonal love function applies, he is tolerated with all of his idiosyncrasies, all of his weaknesses and failures. We are talking about the weak believer who is negative toward doctrine and therefore in one of the stages of reversionism. Bible doctrine resident in the soul is the strength of the believer and the weak believer is the antithesis of this, his function is generally (the one who is in reversionism) to not be able to distinguish between the essential and the non-essential. Therefore with regard to the essential he is very flexible and with regard to non-essentials he is totally inflexible. This flexibility with regard to the essentials causes the weak believer to get involved in the tongues movement, and this is one of the kinds of Christians from whom to must completely and totally separate yourself. An arrogant person divorced from reality is the weak believer. He is frustrated by the saturation of his own mental attitude sins, he is carried away in arrogance with the importance of his opinions, and therefore he is very inflexible about his opinions and since they are divorced from reality his opinions are mostly erroneous, inaccurate, and incompatible with Bible doctrine. He is often motivated to bear grudges and to function under revenge principles. The weak believer, then, is generally a sociopath, he has no doctrinal norms or standards in his soul. Reversionism has shut out any possibility of implementing from doctrine. The weak believer is, of course, completely ignorant of the royal family honor code, therefore he is totally unaware of the imputation structure of the plan of God. He does not understand or utilize the provisions of logistical grace which are designed to advance him to maturity, and he is always flexible with regard to the essentials of doctrine. In the weak believer lack of doctrine means erroneous application. It also means no common sense, no understanding of reality. He is, in fact, a walking casualty and he must be avoided.

The verse begins with the postpositive conjunctive particle de, translated “Now.” The present active indicative of the verb parakaleō (παρακαλέω) [pronounced pahr-ahk-ahl-EH-oh] follows. It means to call to one’s side, to summon to one’s side, and therefore to encourage. You bring someone to your side to appeal to them, to exhort them, to encourage them, or to chew them out. So this has antithetical meanings. It means to rebuke, to exhort, to chew out someone, or it means to comfort and encourage. Here it has the concept of urgency. It is to encourage along a path that isn’t normal, to cut dead, to completely avoid, to have absolutely nothing to do with a certain category of believer, e.g. someone involved in the tongues movement. The holy-roller, Pentecostal flip-flopper is the major person under this concept. There are others as well: the emotional wrecks who are involved in what is called “victorious Christian living” should also be included, but that is application. Here it means to urge in the sense of prosecuting energetically as an enterprise, to press upon the attention of the Roman believers something of great importance. The historical present tense is employed when a past event is viewed with the vividness of a present occurrence. The active voice: Paul produces the action under the ministry of the Holy Spirit. He produces this action not only for the Roman believers but for you right now as a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality. This is the reality of Paul’s urging.

The accusative plural direct object from the personal pronoun su not only refers to the Roman believers but it refers to anyone to whom this is pertinent. Next is the vocative plural from the noun adelphos (ἀδελφός) [pronounced ad-el-FOSS], referring to the royal family of God. This is for the believer only. “Now I urge you, brethren.” Then the present active infinitive from the verb skopéō (σκοπέω) [pronounced skohp-EH-oh], which means to see, to notice, to keep one’s eyes on something. In the Attic Greek skopéō (σκοπέω) [pronounced skohp-EH-oh] meant to look at someone critically, to judge someone as a philosopher (Plato used it in that sense). It also means to be alert. The verb is used by Paul for alertness, it means to be alert with regard to the weak believer. Cf. Phil. 3:17,18 a similar type illustration where skopéō (σκοπέω) [pronounced skohp-EH-oh] is used—“be looking for,” present active imperative of skopéō (σκοπέω) [pronounced skohp-EH-oh]. The alertness here is mental alertness, discernment with regard to people. Alertness comes from doctrine resident in the soul and cognizance of the principles related to the royal family honor code. The perfective present tense denotes the continuation of existing results from doctrine resident in the soul. You are going to become alert as you accumulate doctrine in the soul. The active voice: believers in Rome produce the action, they are commanded to produce the action—alertness through resident doctrine. The infinitive is the imperative infinitive and it is a command. We are all commanded to be alert where others are concerned.

The accusative plural direct object from the definite article is used here as a demonstrative pronoun and is translated “those.” The articular present active participle of poieō (ποιέω) [pronounced poi-EH-oh] is next, and it means here to cause. The definite article is in the accusative feminine plural and is used as a relative pronoun whose antecedent is the accusative masculine plural definite article used as the demonstrative pronoun—“those who.” The retroactive progressive present denotes what has begun in the past and continues into the present time. The active voice: the weak and reversionistic believer produces the action. The participle is circumstantial. Translation: “those who are causing.”

Then the accusative plural direct object from the noun dichostasía (διχοστασία) [pronounced dee-khos-tas-EE-ah], which means “dissension.” The word “offences” is the accusative plural direct object from skandalon (σκάνδαλον) [pronounced SKAN-da-lon], which really means a bait stick, a trap. Every person who is in emotional reversionism is a bait stick or a trap where you are concerned. Every person that you know who is involved in the Pentecostal, holy-roller tongues outfit is a trap. Every person who has a façade of sweetness and light and self-righteousness, no doctrine or any interest in doctrine, or so arrogant that they are trying to superimpose their ideas on doctrine, are traps. Once you get in that trap you are distracted from doctrine. The inevitable result is to enter into some form of apostasy. So to protect yourself from this type of apostasy and anger you must have the ability to discern, but to discern without yourself becoming vicious or weak, or entering into a system of revenge, or bearing a grudge, or counter-attacking with your own mental attitude sin motivation. “Now I urge you, brethren, look out for those who are causing dissension and apostasies (or, enticements from doctrine).”

Then comes a prepositional phrase. Para is the preposition. Plus the ablative case means “from,” plus the locative case means “by the side of,” but plus the accusative means “against, contrary to.” Here we have para plus the accusative of didachê (διδασχῆ) [pronounced dihd-ahkh-AY], doctrine—“contrary to the doctrine,” with the generic use of the definite article for a specific category of information. Doctrine is no good to you unless you learn it, and that is why we have the next phrase through the ministry of the Spirit: “which you have learned.” This is the accusative feminine singular from the relative pronoun hos who se antecedent is didachê (διδασχῆ) [pronounced dihd-ahkh-AY]—“doctrine which.” Plus the nominative plural subject su—“you,” emphasis on the individual who has learned doctrine from his own positive volition, and the aorist active indicative from the verb manthanō (μανθάνω) [pronounced mahn-THAHN-oh] which means to learn through teaching or instruction, to learn from someone as a teacher—“which you have learned from a teacher.” The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. It gathers up into one entirety all of the Bible classes you have attended and all of the doctrine you have learned under the ministry of God the Holy Spirit. It refers, then, to a fact extended over a period of time; doctrinal teaching from one's pastor. The active voice: the Roman believers produce the action of the verb—perception of doctrine. The indicative mood is declarative for the historical fact that these believers had learned enough doctrine for this command to be meaningful to them.

The command is: “avoid them” – the intensive use of the conjunction kai means “in fact.” With this is the present active imperative from the verb ekklinō (ἐκκλίνω) [pronounced ehk-KLEE-noh] which means to shun, to avoid, to actually turn away from: “in fact, be turning away from, keep avoiding.” The perfective present tense denotes the continuation of results from perception of doctrine. The more doctrine you learn the more you are going to have the honor code function of loving certain people from a great distance—distance from self-determination. You determine from your own free will to avoid that person, to shun that person, to stay away from that person, to have nothing to do with that person. But at the same time you do not hate them, you are not bitter toward them, not vindictive or implacable; you simply love them from afar. That is impersonal love, love that depends upon the high standards from doctrine resident in your soul. The imperative mood here is a command. The final phrase is a prepositional phrase, apó (ἀπό) [pronounced aw-PO] plus the ablative plural from the intensive pronoun autós (αὐτοῖς) [pronounced ow-TOSS]—“from them.”

Romans 16:17 Now I urge you, brethren, look out for those who are causing dissensions and apostasies contrary to doctrine which you have learned [from a teacher]; in fact, be turning away from them.

Points

1. Note that this passage infers that negative volition toward doctrinal teaching from a pastor is the source of both dissension in the body of Christ, the royal family, as well as the source of apostasy in reversionism. People who are negative toward a pastor are arrogant in some way or another. They are resisting the doctrine, as per the book of Acts.
2. Lack of authority orientation, as well as arrogance, causes the believer to resist the teaching of doctrine from another human being. (Arrogance competes with that human being). Illustration of an actor or actress who entertains us for being someone that they are not. But sometimes they are not entertaining to the arrogant person in the audience because they are in competition with the actor. Anyone who is in public is going to have those in competition with them, even though they may be completely unaware of this. If the person represents authority (like Patton to his troops, a pastor-teacher to his congregation, the chairman of the board to his vice presidents, the policeman who stops you). Inordinate competition. It is always a challenge when you hear something that you disagree with or you dislike, etc.
3. Since arrogance and inordinate ambition sets up a revolutionary group, classified as a mutual admiration society, it is quite obvious that those who resist doctrine always look for others who resist doctrine. Those who resist authority look for those who resist authority.

4. Both dissension and apostasy result. The only answer to a believer so involved is separation, avoidance.
5. Here then is the application of the honor code which combines impersonal love with flexibility in the non-essentials. It results in separation from apostasy and reversionistic believers.
6. The superseding laws do not apply for weak reversionistic believers. You don't use the law of love, the law of expediency, or the law of supreme sacrifice. These laws only apply to weak believers who are positive toward doctrine, they do not apply to reversionistic believers. The drill is separation from reversionism.

Lesson #533

533 09/27/1978 Romans 16:18a Honor code function exceptions; doctrine of emotion of the soul (pts. 1–3); voting franchise

Romans 16:18 For such do not serve our Lord Christ, but their own belly; and by smooth talk and flattery they deceive the hearts of the naive. (BLB)

Verse 18 – “For they that are such serve not our Lord Jesus Christ, but their own belly.” The explanatory use of the postpositive conjunctive particle gar, “For.” We are getting an explanation as to why we must separate ourselves under certain conditions. Then the lengthened demonstrative pronoun toioutos (τοιούτος) [pronounced toy-OO-toss], which is used as an adjective with the definite article and therefore becomes a substantive to indicate a specific category of believers. The category is the reversionist, the weak reversionist type. “For such [believers].”

The verb that describes them is the present active participle of douleúō (δουλεύω) [pronounced dool-YOO-oh] which means to be a slave, a servant, or to obey. It is a verb only used in the slave-master relationship. “For such believers do not obey [or, serve].” There is a negative with the verb. The present tense is the present of duration, denoting what had begun in the past and continues into the present time. These people have been negative toward Bible doctrine. The active voice: the weak believer produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for reality. Plus the dative singular indirect object from kurios (κύριος) [pronounced KOO-ree-oss] and Christos (χριστός) [pronounced krees-TOHSS], referring to the title of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the possessive genitive from the personal pronoun egó (ἐγώ) [pronounced ehg-OH]—“our Lord Christ.” In other words, weak believers who are negative toward doctrine become reversionists and they neither obey nor honor nor serve the Lord Jesus Christ.

But they do serve something, and that comes up in the next phrase: “but their own belly.” The adversative conjunction allá (ἀλλά) [pronounced ahl-LAH] shows that what they serve is the antithesis of honoring the Lord—“but,” sets up a contrast between the Lord Jesus Christ and what they do serve. What they serve is in the dative singular indirect object from koilia (κοιλία) [pronounced koy-LEE-ah], which means a cavity. Sometimes in the Greek it refers to the cavity known as the womb, sometimes it refers to the other cavity known as the stomach, hence it is used as an organ of nourishment or an organ of reproduction. Plus it also means an empty, hidden responder such as the emotion, and that is the meaning of the word here. The noun koilia (κοιλία) [pronounced koy-LEE-ah] is literally “hollow.” For example, John 7:38 it is translated “innermost being.” In Philippians 3:19 it refers to the weak believer in reversionism: “whose god is his emotion.” With this is the dative singular of the indefinite article which means “their,” and with it the word for emotionalism or sensuality—“but their emotion.” It is not “their own emotion.” That is a mistranslation. You cannot translate the genitive plural from the reflexive pronoun heautou (ἐαυτοῦ) [pronounced heh-ow-TOO] as “their own.” It is true that the genitive is used as an adjective but here as the reflexive pronoun third person it means something else. When the action of the verb refers back to its own subject the construction is reflexive, and this is an objective genitive plural and it needs a verb in the English, therefore “they are serving themselves.” So the correct translation: “but their own emotion serving themselves.” “For such believers do not obey [serve] our Lord Christ, but their own emotion, serving themselves.”^[2]

The Doctrine below does not really match up with the doctrines which I have notes for. However, this appears to be an abbreviated doctrine of Emotions of the long doctrine.

The Doctrine of Emotion

A. Definition and description:

1. Emotion is the responder to the right lobe. In a normal soul, the emotion is the responder of the soul.
2. Self consciousness, volition,
3. Emotion is the female part of the soul. It responds to the dominant part of the soul, which is the right lobe; and what we Bible calls the heart.
4. Category #2 love illustrates the relationship between the heart and the emotion.
5. The heart posses a frame of reference which is designed for thought. In there is a memory center. To focus thought on anything in particular demands recall. Memory is important for capacity for life. Vocabulary is the basis for thinking. You cannot increase your vocabulary enough. Greatest thinkers have the greatest vocabularies. Many people bought Cambridge Ancient History and found out that it was not an easy read. Norms and standards.
6. The heart contains all thought and all standards. The emotion is empty.
7. The emotion is simply empty; but it is a responder. It is lined with great sensitivity. It is sensitive toward music. Love requires thought. Attraction is not thought.
8. Emotion is not designed to assume authority over the soul; but it is designed to be dominated by the right lobe of the soul. The average American is not able to vote properly because he has not sense of responsibility. To let every numbskull vote is ridiculous. 90% of voters in the United States have no concept of responsibility. When a republic becomes a democracy, it destroys itself. There was a time when England was far greater than us as a Monarchy. If we are destroyed, don't be bitter, because we have begged for it. We have not functioned under our Constitution for a long time. Emotion has no ability to think or to reason; and emotion has no ability to love. Emotion is a part of love, the responsive part, and with the homosexual and lesbian, it is the emotion which is dominating the soul. Bob is happy and has a lot of fun because he runs his emotions.

B. Vocabulary. Our emotion begins empty and then it is filled.

1. Bowels. Genesis 43:30; 1Kings 3:26; Jeremiah 4:19, 31:20; Lam 1:20, 2:11; Philippians 1:8; Philemon 12,20.
 - a. The bowels are a portion of the anatomy that is empty but filled with something. The bowels are filled with the waste of the body.
 - b. Genesis 43:30, family love stirred his emotions to the point of weeping. Weeping is an emotional response; it has no thought.
 - c. Jeremiah 4:19, Jeremiah fills his right lobe with disturbing thoughts and his emotions respond. "My bowels, my bowels" = "My emotions, my emotions." Jeremiah sees his nation as our nation is today and this caused him great grief. He is disturbed in his right lobe.
 - d. Lamentations 1:20 Jeremiah describes the war as it continues.
 - e. Lam 2:11, the liver is the emotion under normal conditions. But it is turned inside out because he no longer has normal emotions, because of the destruction of the nation.
 - f. In Philippians 1:8, Paul recalls the Philippians and appreciates their response to doctrine. This elicited a response in his emotions. In the right lobe, Paul thinks of the Philippians. He admires them and he appreciates them; he appreciated their response to doctrine.
 - g. In Philemon 20, Paul is saying that if he frees this runaway slave, it will refresh his emotions. "Refresh my bowels" is not an enema; but an emotional response.
2. Belly. An empty bag but filled. The "belly" is designated as the emotion in Prov 13:25, 18:8, 26:22; Romans 16:17-18; Philippians 3:19.
 - a. In Prov 18:18, the person who listens to gossip is emotionally stimulated by listening to all the horrible things about someone of whom they are jealous. They respond to gossip, but it produces wounds in the soul like a peptic ulcer. A whisperer is a subtle gossip. They can be very malicious, but with a cover.
 - b. When you rejoice over the tragedies of someone, you are jealous of them and only end up producing an ulcer in your own soul. This emotional activity of gloating over someone you can't stand only destroys you.
3. Reins. These are the kidneys. Empty but filled by the function of our anatomy. The "reins" are used to designate the emotions.
 - a. Reins is an old English word for the kidneys. The Hebrew word KILJAH refers to the fat pads which cover the kidneys and adrenal glands. The adrenal glands secrete the hormone epinephrine which is the fright, flight, or fight hormone. It increases blood to the muscles, cardiac output and glucose to the muscles. It is stimulated by the emotions. Psalm 139:13; Prov 23:16; Jeremiah 12:12, 20:12 . The advancing believer has a normal soul in which the right lobe dominates, Jeremiah 11:20, 17:10. Emotion takes over in fright, flight or fight. Psalm 7:9 Let the evil of the reversionist come to an end, but establish the of the mature believer for the righteous God tests the heart and reins the emotion is the responder of the soul. That is a normal soul. Psalm 26:2 Examine me, O Lord, and test my kidneys (emotions) and my right lobe. Jer 13:10 I the Lord search the heart (or the right lobe); I test the kidneys or the emotions even to give to every man according to his modus vivendi. The emotions must be tested along with the right lobe.

- C. Emotion and spirituality must be related to the dispensations. When the royal family of God are called out, that is the rapture; and the Tribulation will take place. Then the Lord will reign on earth for 1000 years. In the Millennium, the Lord will reign on earth. There will be no poverty, a chicken in every pot. Perfect environment does not satisfy man. There will be a revolt against Jesus Christ at the end of the Millennium. Socialism claims that they can provide perfect environment. In the Church Age, the Lord is seated next to God the Father, absent from the earth. The filling of the Spirit produces the character of Christ; but there is no emotional connotation. Appreciation of the Lord Jesus Christ comes through doctrine rather than through emotional function. Emotion is not eliminated, but put in its proper place. Emotional function cannot produce integrity. In this dispensation, emotion is a responder to many things in the heart. Emotional activity is not indicative of spiritual activity or advance in the spiritual life the purpose of the filling of the Spirit is perception of doctrine is advance to maturity.
- D. Only in the Millennium does the motin character the... No spiritual content to emotion is the... The filling of the Spirit is used to celebrate the reigning Christ. Bes in the Millennium are
- E. Emotion can be a hindrance to the plan of God. 2Corinthians 6:11–12 they are deceived by flatter; they deceive the right lobes of the unsuspecting.

Bob fought a lot of Irish kids and they always cried while fighting.

Who wants to sit around in a nudist colony? It is a ghastly thought. How much of the message would you get if you were sitting naked in the pews?

Lesson #534

534 09/28/1978 Romans 16:18b Lord Salisbury re voting; doctrine of emotion (4–9); emotion and spirituality in Church Age and Millennium

Salisbury hated the concept of class warfare. He hated socialism because of this and because it was a material philosophy and thus denied the spiritual. He fought all proposals which supported the masses. He did not want to extend the suffrage. He believed that the majority is often stupid and often wrong. He deplored the liberals for glorifying the working class, in terms of seeing them as different. He said for a democracy, emotion is the exception rather than the rule.

Emotion doctrine notes placed with the previous lesson.

Romans 16:18 For such do not serve our Lord Christ, but their own belly; and by smooth talk and flattery they deceive the hearts of the naive. (BLB)

“and by good words and fair speeches deceive the hearts of the simple” – the connective use of kai, plus the prepositional phrase dia with the ablative from the compound noun chrēstologia (χρηστολογία) [pronounced khra-se-tol-og-EE-ah], taken from the adjective Christos (χριστός) [pronounced krees-TOHSS] meaning good or pleasant plus the noun logos (λόγος, ου, ό) [pronounced LOHG-oss] for speech or doctrine. It means pleasant speech, good speech, bland speech, smooth, gentle, non-irritating speech. It means bland or smooth speech which masks a fraudulent purpose. It is expressed by the instrumental but when means is accompanied by the source the ablative is used: dia plus the ablative is translated “by their smooth speech [in the sense of hypocrisy].”

Plus the connective kai linking this noun with a second one in extending the prepositional phrase, the ablative of means of eulogia (εὐλογία) [pronounced yoo-log-EE-ah] [eū (εὐ) [pronounced yoo] = good; logia = communication], good communication or, in this case flattering speech—“and by their smooth and flattering speech.” Only doctrine resident in the soul is a defence against flattery which is used by the arrogant to get their way. Flattery appeals to arrogance and it lies just beneath the veneer of humility. Next is the present active indicative of the verb exapatāō (ἐξαπατάω) [pronounced ex-ap-at-AH-oh] [ek (ἐκ) [pronounced ehk] = from; apatāō (ἀπατάω) [pronounced ap-at-AH-oh] = to seduce or deceive], to deceive from means to seduce away from truth into error. We simply translate, “they deceive.” The present tense is a customary present for what habitually occurs when a believer is negative and not inculcated with doctrine. This may be reasonably be expected to occur in every case of reversionism. The active voice: reversionistic false teachers and apostate witnesses produce the action of the verb. The indicative mood is the potential indicative, it indicates what happens to the believer who is negative toward doctrinal teaching, he is a sucker for this type of thing.

The accusative plural direct object of kardia for “hearts,” the right lobe where thought exists. Just as the physical heart circulates blood, so the soul heart circulates thought. Then the possessive genitive plural from akakos (ἄκακος) [pronounced AHK-ak-oss], which here is an adjective meaning the unsuspecting. Doctrine resident in the soul means discernment; lack of doctrine obviously means non-discernment—“they deceive the right lobes of the unsuspecting.”

Romans 16:18 For such believers do not serve or obey our Lord Christ, but their emotion, serving themselves; and by their smooth and flattering speech they [false teachers] deceive the right lobes of the unsuspecting.

Emotions and Authority

1. It must be constantly emphasized that the weak believer or reversionist who is the subject of this verse is not authority oriented. Instead, he is under the control of his own arrogance and emotion.
2. The weak believer/reversionist of this verse seeks to build a mutual admiration society.
3. Spiritual authority begins with God and continues with delegated authority—delegated authority to the Word of God plus the communicator of the Word.
4. The weak reversionist rejects the authority of both the Word and the pastor who communicates the Word.
5. Because of this fact the weak reversionist does not serve obey the Lord Christ. He is negative toward doctrine, therefore he has neither motivation nor momentum to advance in the plan of God.
6. Therefore it is inevitable that the weak reversionist in his arrogance will be a slave to his emotion, and thereby serve himself.
7. All emotional type reversionists are motivated by their own arrogance. They have no authority orientation. Being motivated by arrogance it to be soulishly blind, to be non-perceptive in the soul.
8. Therefore arrogance belongs to Christians who are ignorant of doctrine.
9. Believers ignorant of doctrine are impressed by the pleasant personality. They emphasize personality in their thinking.
10. Fundamentalist Christianity has traded its doctrinal heritage for that mess of pottage, emotion as the criterion and arrogance as the motivator of the soul. This is why the tongues movement of the 20th century is so popular today. When a vacuum is created in the soul through lack of doctrine it is replaced by emotion as the criterion and arrogance as the motivator.

Lesson #535

535 09/29/1978 Romans 16:19a Book: "The First Day of the Somme"; doctrine of tongues (review)

Many great descriptions in this book. There was a fantastic sense of humor revealed in these men. They also had courage and great flexibility. Bob reads a few paragraphs.

We are learning doctrine today, so that these doctrines might be very normal to us in the days to come.

The passage covered previously is read.

Many of us have had some contact with people who claim to have spoken in tongues.

One of the few things that Bob did for entertainment was to go to a holy roller church and they would dance in the aisles and on the platform. It was better entertainment than much TV today.

The practice of tongues today is a great evil and it is not related to the Christian way of life. It is a mental sickness; it is an evil. It is emotion, evil and emotionalism.

There was a time when tongues were legitimate. It lasted for 40 years. This was a temporary spiritual gift given to a few, but not to all believers. It behooves us to understand this phenomena.

The Jews from the time of Moses to this time A.D. 30 had been a client nation to God. This is so that there would always be evangelism. The Jews could use this to send out evangelists.

There had to come a time when Israel was no longer a client nation to God. No Jewish nation can be a client nation of God will be at the 2nd advent, after the final 7 years of the Tribulation.

Paul told the believers to turn away from people who do not have their emotions under control.

Romans 16:19 For your obedience has reached to all. Therefore I rejoice over you. But I wish you to be wise to good, and innocent to evil. (BLB)

Verse 19 – the importance of authority orientation in the drill of separation. “For your obedience is come abroad unto all men.” The inferential use of the postpositive conjunction gar is used here for a self-evident conclusion, a strong affirmation from the apostle’s confidence. Paul was confident that so many of the Roman believers could not be mature believers unless they were authority-oriented. We translate this “Certainly” here, rather than “For.” The nominative singular of the subject hupakoê (ὑπακοή) [pronounced hoop-ak-oh-AY] which means a report. With it is the pronoun su in the genitive plural, and it should be translated, “Certainly your obedience.” The verb is the aorist middle indicative from the compound verb aphiknéomai (ἀφικνέομαι) [pronounced af-ik-NEH-om-ah-ee] [ἀπό (ἀπό) [pronounced aw-PO] = from; phikneomai (phiknéomai) = an Attic Greek word meaning to come, to arrive) which means to reach or to become known to. The aorist tense here is a dramatic aorist, it states a present reality with the certitude of a past event; it is a device for emphasize; it’s used for a state which has just been realized by Paul. In greeting all of these mature believers he suddenly realizes all have one thing in common, and that is authority orientation. The middle voice is the indirect middle, emphasizing the agent—believers who are authority oriented—as producing the action rather than as participating in its results. The indicative mood is declarative for historical reality. Then the prepositional phrase, eis (εἰς) [pronounced ICE] plus the accusative plural from the adjective pás (πάς) [pronounced pahs]—“has become known to all” or “has reached [the ears of] everyone.” “Certainly the report of your obedience [authority orientation] has become known to all."^[3] This explains how the Roman believers under unknown pastors have advanced in the plan of God.

536 10/01/1978 Romans 16:19b MacArthur Speech 03/14/1973; Rhodesia; biblical concept of authority orientation; "the good"

Romans 16:19 For your obedience has reached to all. Therefore I rejoice over you. But I wish you to be wise to good, and innocent to evil. (BLB)

MacArthur speaking at a dinner in 1953. This involves new weapons; and what he talks about war without pursuing the objective of victory. Once American arms have been committed to battle, we most proclaim an invincible proposition that in war, there is no substitute for victory.

We have been propagandized by socialism. The sacrifice of human life has been lost in the equality concept. God does not impute equality when He gives life. If equality could be achieved, then this would do a great disservice to all.

The president of the United States has refused a VISA to one of the great men of our time, a Rhodesian ruler. We will not hear his side of the case. England would not even allow this guy to change planes there.

Imbecility of the Rockefeller conspiracy; and even more the Jewish conspiracy, thinking that there is one cause for all the world's ills.

Most evil thing today is confiscation of property. This attacks the very basis of our country. There is always room for differences of opinion; but not where it comes to freedom. A supreme court making decisions and a president writing executive orders. The greatest enemies of the United States who think that socialism is a great thing. These people are blinded and evil.

Rhodesia is right, and we are wrong and England is wrong. The Communists want Rhodesia and they will; and this will give them a monopoly on chrome. This is one of the most valuable commodities. We buy inferior chrome from communist nations and refuse to buy the good chrome in Rhodesia. From the standpoint of personal freedom and personal interest, we should be supporting Rhodesia. They are an honorable nation; they are a great nation. We are personally responsible for the enslavement of many peoples.

Freedom must be related to privacy. We must be able to accept the Lord Jesus Christ or to reject Him. There is the concept of property. People merely want to steal the property of those who possess it. Our immoral government has been confiscating property as fast as they can.

The only person who is preserving our freedom are the police officers. He is the last stand between us and anarchy. The police officer is ridiculed today. It is an honorable profession and it is related directly to our freedom. This is the last stand of freedom, from the standpoint of establishment. Authority-orientation is one of the secrets of the Roman empire. The Roman Empire survived some horrendous rulers, like Nero. This nation continued to exist because believers were authority oriented.

Authority Orientation

1. While believers positive toward doctrine advance to maturity, execute the protocol plan of God, and become invisible heroes, a positive believer cannot maintain and continue momentum unless he maintains and continues the basis for doing so, which is authority orientation. We believers are the only hope for our nation.
2. Perception of doctrine, the function of post-salvation epistemological rehabilitation is based on a principle of authority. Perception of doctrine is the only way to advance spiritually. Such perception absolutely demands authority orientation. Why were there so many mature believers in Rome? Authority-orientation.
3. Freedom is never an isolated entity, but is four interrelated concepts forming one category and single principle. The four concepts which form the one category are freedom, privacy, property, and authority orientation. These provide everyone in a national entity to have the same opportunity for self- determination.
 - a. Freedom is the principle of divine establishment and honor code function.
 - b. Privacy is a principle related to the honor code function of the royal priesthood.
 - c. Property is sacred under the laws of divine establishment for the function of life.
 - d. Authority is the umbrella for human freedom.
4. There cannot be an attack on any one of the four concepts or principles without destroying the entire concept of freedom.
 - a. An attack on property, like socialism or the welfare state, destroys freedom.
 - b. Slavery or gossip attacks and destroys privacy, and therefore eliminates freedom.
 - c. Freedom itself is lost through the demon possession of the unbeliever, as well as drug addiction, erroneous thought, demon influence of the believer in the cosmic system.
 - d. The most subtle attack on freedom originates in either the rejection of establishment or authority in the royal family of God. Under the laws of divine establishment, authority is defined as the legal power delegated by God whereby certain members of the human race have jurisdiction and responsibility for others.
5. Spiritual authority resides in the Word of God and in its communicator, the pastor-teacher, as well as in deacons to whom the pastor delegates authority. The evangelist also has authority.
6. Divine authority is stated in the context of the Word of God. This authority is delegated to the pastor-teacher of the local church. The evangelist has authority over those unbelievers to whom he communicates the Gospel. Delegated authority is given to those with administrative gifts in a church.

7. The pastor-teacher's authority is limited to his own sheep, though his sheep need not be under his face-to-face ministry. This can take place on television, radio or by tapes. Those who do not like this are often people who cannot hold a congregation together.
8. God has provided an umbrella of divine authority over the mechanics of post-salvation epistemological rehabilitation in the teaching ministry of God the Holy Spirit who indwells every believer. The Holy Spirit must fill the believer for perception of doctrine.
9. God has also provided an umbrella of human authority over the mechanics of post-salvation epistemological rehabilitation in the teaching function of the pastor in the local church, either face-to-face or non-face to face.
10. The royal family honor code demands authority orientation in the form of academic discipline when the pastor is teaching Bible doctrine.
 - a. This academic discipline is the authority which the believer imposes upon himself during the teaching of the Word of God so that others may be free to learn without distraction.
 - b. This academic discipline includes no talking, no unnecessary movement, or anything that would break the concentration of those positive toward Bible doctrine.
 - c. The royal family honor code recognizes common sense and good manners, thoughtfulness of others, and respect for the Word of God.
11. Inevitably, the issue is the mystery doctrine of the Church Age perceived and metabolized in your soul.
12. This issue demands communication of doctrine from the pastor-teacher and perception by believers. Do not be confused by the pastor's personality. Hebrews 13:13, 17
 - a. However, the pastor cannot communicate what he does not know. Therefore, his life must be devoted to studying and teaching the Word of God. What he teaches should be the result of many agonizing hours of study under the ministry of God the Holy Spirit. Therefore, you are required to respect and listen to the teaching, at which point you choose whether to metabolize it or not.
 - b. This means the pastor's personality is not the issue in authority orientation and the function of the royal family honor code.
 - c. Never permit preoccupation with the pastor's feet of clay or his personality to hinder your perception of Bible doctrine.
 - d. Hebrews 13:17 Keep obeying those [pastors] who themselves are ruling over you, and submit to their authority. For these same pastors keep watching for the benefit of your souls, as those who have to render an account. Keep obeying them, in order that they may do this accounting with happiness, and not with groaning, for this is unprofitable for you.

- e. The pastor is responsible to the Lord and not to the congregation. Therefore, when he gets out of line, he gets double discipline.
- f. It is inevitable that certain members of the congregation will become dissatisfied with their pastor. Therefore, they will seek to discredit him, to judge, malign, and slander him. Therefore, in Isaiah 54:17 there is a warning not to tamper with God's communicator, No weapon which is formed against you will prosper, and every tongue that accuses you in judgment you will condemn. This is the heritage of the servants of the Lord, and His vindication is from Me,' decrees the Lord.
- g. The job profile of the pastor is given in Ephesians 4:11-16; Colossians 1:23-29; 1Timothy 2:24-26, 3:1-9; Titus 1:6-9; Philippians 2:16-30; 1Peter 5:1-4; Ephesians 3:7-13.

“I am glad therefore on your behalf” – the prepositional phrase, ἐπί (ἐπί) [pronounced eh-PEE] plus the dative plural from the personal pronoun su—“because of you.” Then the postpositive inferential particle οὖν (οὖν) [pronounced oon] draws a conclusion from the preceding.

The present active indicative from the verb chairô (χαίρω) [pronounced KHAI-row] which means to be happy, to rejoice, to be delighted: “consequently because of you I am delighted.” The progressive present tense signifies action in progress. The active voice: Paul produces the action. He is rejoicing and very happy about their authority orientation. Paul’s authority is not directly involved here, he is not a pastor in any one of the churches. He is an apostle and therefore has authority over all the churches but he does not know most of these people, and therefore it is not as though Paul was trying to recover his own authority in Rome. At this time he has no such authority, having never seen them face to face. What he is doing is admiring and enjoying the fact that people who are not his congregation, but the congregation of some other pastor, have recognized the authority of that pastor and are growing in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and saviour. He is inspired by the authority orientation of the Roman believers. The declarative mood is for the historical reality of Paul’s delight in the authority orientation of those who are in Rome.

“but yet, I would have you wise unto that which is good, and simple concerning evil – the postpositive conjunctive particle de connects and adds a clause to the sentence, translated here “but” because there is a contrast between authority orientation among believers in Rome and their lack of honor code function in a specific area. Then the present active indicative of thélô (θέλω) [pronounced THEH-loh], the introduction of Paul’s authority to these people, he is an apostle—to wish, to express a desire, also used of wish of purpose and therefore translated “but I want you.” The progressive present again for action in a state of persistence. This is linear aktionsart and it could be translated “but I keep wanting you.” The active voice: Paul as the apostle produces the action. The declarative mood represents the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality. Plus the accusative plural direct object from the pronoun su, referring to all of the believers in Rome, and the present active infinitive of eimi (εἶμι) [pronounced eye-ME], “to be.” The perfective present here denotes a continuation of existing results of learning Bible doctrine. This is sometimes called a customary present for what is reasonably expected to occur in the life of any believer: he is reasonably expected to learn doctrine. That is the whole purpose for remaining alive after salvation. The active voice: the Roman believers who have continued in positive volition toward doctrine will produce the action. This is the infinitive of intended result, the result is indicated as fulfilling a deliberate objective and therefore a blending of purpose and result. Plus the accusative plural of general reference from sophos (σοφός) [pronounced sof-OSS]—“wise,” but it is plural and therefore “wise ones.” Then the prepositional phrase, in what he wants them to be alert and wise to: the preposition eis (εἰς) [pronounced ICE] plus the accusative singular of the definite article and the accusative singular of agathos (ἀγαθός) [pronounced ag-ath-OSS] which is technical and refers to the plan of God—“with reference to the good.”

Points

1. Understanding the plan of God and its objective eliminates involvement with evil which is the policy of Satan as he ruler of this world.
2. Momentum in the plan of God depends on doctrine resident in the soul.
3. That doctrine resident in the soul applied to circumstances eliminates energy of the flesh modus operandi which detracts from the attainment of the objective designed by God for each one of us in eternity past.
4. Motivation in the plan of God depends on doctrine resident in the soul.
5. That doctrine resident in the soul defines the honor code principles and functions resulting in royal family integrity. Royal family integrity avoids compromise with good and evil.
6. Therefore the believer can only be wise of sagacious about the plan of God through consistent and daily resulting in royal family integrity. Royal family integrity avoids compromise with good and evil.
7. Therefore the believer can only be wise of sagacious about the plan of God through consistent and daily perception of Bible doctrine.
8. The plan of God excludes involvement in social action, welfare state, socialism, distortion of legislation to solve social problems, and other forms of evil which often distract the believer from the function of his priesthood, as well as his ambassadorship.

We are to be wise with reference to the good. Your capacity for life depends upon your thinking. Romans 12:21, 9 13:4

537 10/01/1978 Romans 16:19c Misplacement of authority orientation; freedom vs. criminals; doctrine of separation

Romans 16:19 For your obedience has reached to all. Therefore I rejoice over you. But I wish you to be wise to good, and innocent to evil. (BLB)

“and simple concerning evil” – the accusative plural direct object from the compound adjective akeraios (ἀκεραῖος) [pronounced ak-EHR-ah-yos]. The alpha privative means negative or not; the verb kerazō means to destroy; hence it means “not destroyed” or “unharmd.” It is used in a figurative sense for that which is in its original state of integrity. This adjective does not mean, as is so often translated, “unmixed.” It should be “with reference to evil unharmd [or, unravaged].” The connective use of the postpositive conjunctive particle de, so we can translate in the word order, “and unharmd.”

Then the prepositional phrase eis (εἰς) [pronounced ICE] plus kakós (κακός) [pronounced kak-OSS] and the generic use of the definite article—“with reference to the evil.”

Romans 16:19 Certainly the report of your obedience [authority orientation] has become known to all. Therefore because of you I am delighted; but I want you to be wise [learned, sagacious] with reference to the good, and unharmd with reference to the evil.

Summary Points

1. Evil destroys the integrity of the believer. Therefore doctrine resident in the soul insulates against the infiltration of evil.
2. To be wise or sagacious with reference to the good means to advance in the plan of God. It refers to the motivation and momentum in the plan of God resulting in the attainment of spiritual maturity, and with that the dynamic function of the royal family honor code.
3. Note the implication that authority orientation without doctrine can result in loss of integrity and influence of evil. So even though the Roman believers have authority orientation they are still in danger of influence by evil. Authority orientation is absolutely necessary for proper use of freedom and the advance to maturity, but authority orientation must combine with identification of one’s right pastor to continue spiritual growth.

There is a delegated authority; and that is the Bible. Any conflict with the Bible is problematic. Authority-orientation is important; but it must match up with the Word of God. When a pastor gets mixed up with evil, like liberalism, then he cannot be followed. That is misplaced authority. When the individual gets away from the Word of God, the people are led into apostasy. Or, anyone who talks about feeling good or right about an interpretation of a passage.

There is a relationship here. There is a way that we can avoid authority-orientation that would ever lead us astray.

When a pastor says, what I am teaching is right, even when it disagrees with the Bible; then there is a problem. You cannot separate yourself from privacy and property in order to have freedom. You may not have property but someone does.

Government interference with privacy and property. We have a misguided authority today. There can be separation in the spiritual realm. When you get out of a church, when there is false authority, you can quietly leave. But you do not attack the authority of the church.

We have a right to do many things in life. But when it comes to criminals, they must be removed from society or separated from society. We can destroy our own freedom by the way that we vote.

In a church, you can come or you can stay. But you do not have the right to run down the legitimate authority (which is the pastor).

You can express your opinion during a sporting event, but you cannot throw things. In NYC, there is always someone who will run out in the field and do some jackass thing, and he is removed or separated from the event. Bob does not get into fights at a game unless someone got personal with him and his antecedents.

There is nothing like Berachah's prep school anywhere else in the world.

Separation (Romans Study)

1. Authority is necessary to preserve freedom. 2Timothy 2:3–4 bear hardship with me, carry the colors with me as an honorable soldier (no soldiers becomes entangled in the functions of civilian life) in order to strive to please his commanding officer (separating from civilian life to the commanding officer) the consistent self-discipline of the believer uses rebound and perseveres to learn Bible doctrine.
2. Self-discipline and freedom of the believer moving forward in the Christian life. Separation is moving away from that which is detrimental to his spiritual growth, and choosing that which helps your spiritual growth. Freedom in itself is no good without facts.
3. Basic separation is always from reversionism. Apostasy has two sides: reversionism and . 2Timothy 3:5 the reversionism holds to an external form of piety and rejecting the power of Bible doctrine.
4. This separation may involve another believer or believers. 1Corinthians 5:10–11 2Thessalonians 3:6 separation from carnal believers and from reversionistic believers. 2Thessalonians 3:14 if someone does not do...note such a one and separate from them.
5. Hebrews 13:13 separating from reversionistic religion. Do not separate to destroy the authority within that system.
6. From emotional reversionism. Stay away from the holy rollers. 1John 2:15–17
7. In anticipating marriage, do not marry an unbeliever. Bob has performed weddings of believers and wedding of unbelievers; but not a mixture. Sometimes business problems with believer and unbeliever mixed at the top.
8. Bob does not belong to various organizations it does not appeal to his common sense. 2Corinthians 6:15, 17 separation from idolatry.
9. Separation from the fast crowd 1Peter 4:3–4 the time already past drunks, etc.

10. Separation from violence and criminal activity. Let us ambush the innocent. Proverbs 1:10–19 look at the net, not the bait.
11. Separation in family relationships. Matthew 10:34–39 Bob had to separate from his father because he was antagonistic to Christianity.
12. Married couple separate from parents. Make sure that you are never distracted by your family. They become distractions in the Word of God.
13. If your family shows up, this does not mean that you cannot go to Bible class. This is temporary separation.

538 10/05/1978 Romans 16:20a Prince Albert re Grenadier Guards; confusion re conspiracies; security; prosperity

Why is this lesson 4 days later?

No recording of General Keegan tomorrow. Tape room will be locked.

Prince Albert has a speech 200 years of service of the Grenadier Guards. The Coldstream Guards have a longer history, but there are about 10 years where they were disreputable. Prince Albert was a very smart person.

Verses 20-27, the ultimate triumph of the royal family of God.

Conspiracies about the Jews and we do not even know what we are doing because we do not know what freedom is. Our president is surrounded by Marxist advisors.

Bob is completely fed up with conservatives and their idiot ideas about Rockefeller. They have flashlight minds; they shine the flashlight on one thing and think that is the problem for everything. They point it on Rockefeller or at Jews. Even people with doctrine can't put it together. It is Satan's conspiracy. It is Satan's conspiracy. Satan knows that he must destroy freedom and he must create equality. Satan's policy is always, we are equal, we are brothers, we are all one.

Romans 16:20 And in a short time the God of peace will crush Satan under your feet. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you. (BLB)

Verse 20 – two victories: a) “And the God of peace shall bruise Satan under your feet shortly”; b) The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you. Amen.” Each of these is related to the great plan of God, the will of God, election, foreknowledge and foreordination, and all of the other factors that are related to God in eternity past.

There is no empirical system by which we can know God; and no rational system. Everything is based upon faith. ἐπίγνωσις doctrine makes the Lord more real than all of the things in your periphery. Once you establish your love relationship with Jesus Christ, you have capacity for everything in life. You can face any pressure in life.

You develop the ability to interpret contemporary history. You link your security which is Jesus Christ. If your security is something else, then you are depending upon the wrong things. Eternal life in our spirit means that we are secure; and if God knows that we are secure, then we are secure. By now, we should have atomic energy everywhere in this country (500 plants). Bob has been in three Indian villages and he has never ever smelled such a stench.

Our country needs us in the worst kind of way; it needs a lot of mature believers. We are the last hope and the last stand for the believer today. Dying again is the greatest of all.

The omniscience of God only puts into the computer of divine decrees that which happened. There is election, foreknowledge and predestination. These only deal with what really happens. These things explain what is in the computer.

Foreknowledge is not the same as omniscience. Omniscience knows all that is knowable.

Let's say you are a believer of 5 days and the rapture happens. How are you rewarded? Omniscience knows the knowable and the unknowable. So that is how God will know how to evaluate you.

Lesson #539

539 10/08/1978 Romans 16:19a Omniscience and decrees of God. Why are we here? Authority orientation; principle of establishment

We will soon launch into v. 20 and the whole issue of life and creation. We will need to review a few things in v. 19 to get to the issues of v. 20. Why are we here limited to planet earth? What is the significance of life? Life is more than the pleasures and the personal activities that we are involved in. We are hypersensitive to ourselves; but we lose track of the importance of self consciousness. We don't have to worry about every single thing that we do, wondering about what God thinks. But our awareness of God and His plan are of the utmost importance.

We need to consider God's omniscience, which means to know all. God is perfect in all of His being. We learn things throughout our entire life. Our perceptive ability increases. You start out knowing nothing and you know life knowing something. Interest should continue all of your life. This is a command for your life. We must begin with God not being limited in His knowledge, not limited by time; not having a beginning or an end. Nothing has ever changed God; it never can and never will. It is impossible for God to be unrighteous. It is impossible for God to have a relationship with unrighteous man. God knows all and His knowledge is not progressive. God has never had to learn anything. Prior to us, there have been the angels. There is a superior creation. We, an inferior creation, we have been created to solve the conflict that we are in the middle of. God does not deprive us of any blessing or happiness. We must start with God. God has known everything, long before the creation of Lucifer long before creation Adam and the woman; long before this, God knew everything that would happen. The very ability to think; God read our tape long before we existed. There is no limitation to His knowledge; He knew what would happen in every moment. He was totally lucid with regards to every factor; in order to appreciate the grace of God. God's grace is not primary in understand why we are here. The primary thing is the angelic conflict. This happened long before man was created. God knew all of these things. God understand history in its minute detail. He understands every person. Multiply yourself by the entire human race and we have an infinite number of thoughts and decisions which were completely known by God.

Some of you ask, "If God knew angels would sin, why did He create angels? If God knew man would sin, why did God create man?" It is not what happened in the past; it is where am I going from here?

In order to understand Scripture. We must know that time has nothing to do with the knowledge of God. Realize that the Father, Son and the Spirit existing together and no other creature. God knows all that would happen; God also knew that there were possible alternatives, and they would lead to other results had they occurred. The alternatives are known down to the infinite generations of man. We call the first history; and the second if called iffy history. God took all of this information and He put it into a computer that we call divine decrees. Everything that happened. All of the alternatives are not in the computer. His knowledge is not limited to the decrees. All of the alternatives are known to God. We call this the decrees. There are three theological words: Election, foreknowledge and predestination (or foreordination). The omniscience of God knows everything and the thought of every person in history and every possibility. Election begins with the believer in the [Y]. Foreknowledge is [X] + [Y] + [Z] and this is what is in the decrees. Omniscience is the overall function of God's mentality; and decrees is a very small subset of this. Election is just believers. Foreordination is shrinking all of the time, which knows what is going to take place.

This is not anything that Bob received in the classroom. This is the result of digging and digging.

This is what we must understand in order to get to the angelic conflict and to read ourselves into the picture.

What about the person who has believed for ten minutes and he went up with the rapture. How can the justice of God reward or deal with that person? God is able to take that person and perpetuates his spiritual life for as long as you want. God knows what would have happened and He distributes reward according to what would have happened. God knows what could have occurred.

Bob's ministry is a daily thing; it is not for once a week. You must be condemned in order to be saved. God is rational.

Freedom is the condition of the human soul, the volition of your soul making a decision. We have volition and we take in information. Freedom is the uncaused cause. Freedom is exemption from arbitrary controls. God provided in the soul of every creature the basis and function of freedom. Privacy is the environment of human freedom. There is not privacy in Russia. Destroy privacy and you destroy freedom. One of the functions in a local church is, you can come and listen, accept or reject. We have privacy. Secondly, there is property, which is as much a part of freedom as privacy. Certain things must be acquired and possessed in order the function in life. Ownership of tangible things. Then there is the umbrella of authority. Destroy privacy, you destroy freedom. This is socialism and communism are the great evils. Destroy the police officer and you destroy freedom. We need authority in order to protect freedom. Freedom cannot coexist with equality. There is inequality in time and inequality in heaven.

Freedom is a reality; equality is a myth. Equality is a device of the arrogant; freedom is the motivation of the grace oriented. Forced equality is the pseudo millennium of Satan. Freedom is common sense and respect for authority and property, as found in Romans 16:19.

Freedom also relates to salvation. Will you accept or reject Jesus Christ. God knew ahead of time who would replace the first hope with faith in Christ. The plan of God is based upon judicial imputation 1 and 2. The first is the sins of all man to Jesus Christ; and God's righteousness to the believer.

Abraham could not have sex for 13 years; and Sarah had passed the menopause and could not have children.

Many believers in Rome were slaves and authority oriented.

Romans 16:19a Certainly, the report of your obedience [you authority-orientation] has become known to everyone...

People who wander from one church to another have no authority-orientation.

If we are going to understand the angelic conflict, we need to understand establishment. So many people recognize the problem of allowing communism to gain ascendancy tactically and strategically. But Jesus Christ controls history and He responds to doctrine. The real solution is found here and in Romans 9.

Science recognizes divine laws as related to nature and the universe. Scientific laws are not originated by science and science cannot enforce these laws or change them.

Similarly, there are divine laws related to theology.

God has ordained laws to make it possible to continue the human race; and allows people to believe in Jesus Christ. These laws continue from the fall of man to the end of the Millennium.

The woman cannot be equal to the man. The man has authority over her (in marriage), but authority does not mean superiority. Only the woman survived perfect environment. God did not destroy the woman; she is here today just as she was in the garden.

Bob was reminded of this in Seattle where they are voting on teaching homosexuality NIV Study Bible the schools. The city is in great confusion at this time. The feminist movement is also strong there. Marriage protects the woman and the children.

Interior and exterior protection of freedom. A government of whatever category; a government that protects the freedom and rights of the citizens. A system of law that does not overstep its boundaries to try to solve social problems.

Lesson #540

540 10/08/1978 Romans 16:19b Importance of authority orientation in different areas of life; principle and summary of evil

Communion. It is good to have the ability to recall vividly. This is a great aspect of capacity for life.

Too many people are emoting their way through life. So they are not prepared for living, for adversity, for dying. Whether we are living or dying, it is all about what we have in our soul.

There are many doctrines related to what is coming up. The believer cannot grow apart from authority-orientation. The sin nature in us is anti-authority. It is very difficult for many people to accept the authority of a pastor-teacher.

Anyone who enters the entertainment industry, he is going to be well-paid for what he does. But so many of these don't have an IQ over dandelions.

The second victory is designed not only to glorify God in time and eternity, but it is grace that protects us from demon influence. This also implies that demon influence includes legalism, and anything by which man alleges to gain blessing from God, anything that man can do or say or think to get blessing from God, when in reality it is God who blesses man totally apart from man's ability. Grace is what carries the believer during Satan's rule of this world.

Pursuing making money and letting doctrine go by the wayside; that is living in evil, Elihu because of the oppressions they call out. Evil is the genius of Satan. It comes in many forms: legalism, internationalism, etc.

This prepares us for the angelic conflict in the next passage.

Lesson #541

541 10/09/1978 Romans 16:20a Divine decrees; believer losers win with Jesus Christ over Satan at Second Advent; personality of Satan

This tells us, that, no matter what kind of a loser we are, if we are in the plan of God, we will eventually be winners. The average Christian does not even know that he is, at present, a loser.

God has created the universe, man and angels. God knows everything that will happen and He knows all of the things that could have happened but didn't. God fed into the computer everything that would ever be and every thought. These things were known all at once in eternity past.

Election, foreknowledge and predestination (foreordination) are what the computer spits out. Nothing to do with possibilities or probabilities.

Plodding and plugging is a mutual activity, for the pastor and for the congregation.

God is indispensable to us; but we are not indispensable to Him.

We may fail; but the plan of God does not depend upon us. God's plan will succeed, whether we succeed or not. It is best to go along for the ride.

Most people are highly unstable, volatile. What a young girl loves today she will hate tomorrow.

Let's say God suddenly said, "Let's cancel the plan; it's not working." That would be like a person. God will go right ahead with the plan. It is a winning plan even if we lose in the plan. Vv. 20–27 is the ultimate triumph of the plan of God. V. 20 suggests two victories: the God of peace will crush Satan; and the grace of God be with you.

We are heading for great disasters in the future where we could lose the United States as a client nation. It all depends upon doctrine. God has never lost control of history, even though there are terrible things which happen.

Today, after winning WWII, the losers have all the benefits from it. They have the steel to sell to us.

Romans 16:20 And in a short time the God of peace will crush Satan under your feet. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you. (BLB)

"And the God of peace shall bruise Satan under your feet shortly." This is literally, "In fact," the intensive use of the postpositive conjunctive particle de. Then the nominative singular subject from the noun theos (θεός) [pronounced theh-OSS] with the generic use of the definite article—"the God," a reference to God the Father. Plus the descriptive genitive singular from the noun eirênê (εἰρήνη, ης, ἡ) [pronounced eye-RAY-nay], which means “prosperity.” This is prosperity which is imputed to any believer who will persevere in the perception of doctrine and attain spiritual maturity. “In fact, the God of prosperity.” That is His title when you are talking about being a winner. God is a winner; we share in His victory by the imputation of prosperity—two imputations: the imputation of blessing in time and God’s perfect righteousness imputed; eternal blessing is imputed to the resurrection body. This is the God of prosperity. The secret as far as God’s victory is concerned in the angelic conflict is prosperity. We can have these things of the devil’s world, and we can have them without Satan having anything to do with it.

Then the verb, the future active indicative of suntribō (συντρίβω) [pronounced soon-TREE-boh], which means to break in pieces, to crush, to bruise, to smash—“will smash, crush, break in pieces.” The future tense is a predictive future, it refers to an eschatological event, the defeat of Satan at the Second Advent. The active voice: God the Father produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the future reality of this event. The object is the accusative singular direct object from Satanas (Σατανᾶς) [pronounced sat-an-AS], “Satan.” Plus the preposition hupō (ὑπό) [pronounced hoop-OH] and the accusative plural from the noun pous (πούς) [pronounced poose], and with it the genitive plural from the personal pronoun su—“under your feet.”

The Jews are a great source of blessing to us: Paul, Moses, David, Jeremiah, etc. And the Jews financed our continental army that won our freedom; and they financed the confederate army.

No matter what the race is, there are good ones and bad ones. The idea that the Jews are the cause of our troubles. That is like saying that only the Jews have sin natures. If you think that Jews are the cause of all our problems, then you are stupid. You don’t belong in Berachah. No client nation ever survives antisemitism. “The very presence of antisemitism makes my skin crawl.”

Our big government is the source for most of our problems. These people are irresponsible and not responsible to anyone. Apparently there was talk of sealing up the hoods of our vehicles. We have a government of tyranny right now. This verse is an encouragement to us, because Satan is certainly involved in the United States.

We are incapable of putting Satan under our own feet. Plus the preposition en (ἐν) [pronounced en] and the instrumental singular of táchos (τάχος) [pronounced TAKH-oss]—“in a short time.” “In a short time” is a reference to the Second Advent. It doesn’t mean immediately or five minutes from now. If the Rapture occurred tonight it would be seven years, but if the Rapture doesn’t take place for another thousand years, then a short time is 1007 years. A short time means that the plan of God goes right on in spite of failure in any given generation, and that the plan of God goes right on in spite of disaster. The plan of God continues no matter what happens. The plan of God cannot be stopped or slowed down, or changed. The plan of God is an unstoppable fullback. Many of you will call out for help and the heavens will be as brass.

We can fail in every possible way, and we cannot stop the plan of God no matter what we do.

Romans 16:20a In fact, the God of prosperity will in a short time crush Satan under your feet.

This is a statement of the ultimate victory which immediately precedes the Millennial reign of Christ on the earth, the one thousand years of perfect environment before history is terminated. It is merely the statement of the first victory.^[4]

Let's notice a few things about Satan. The great enemy of God. We covered Satan all the way back in Lesson #31.

Lesson #542

542 10/10/1978 Romans 16:20a Personality and strategy of Satan (pts. 10–17), his counterfeits, quote by L. S. Chafer

A few notes are placed with Lesson #31.

Every verbal sin has been recorded and everything else that we have done that was sinful. Records are kept. Not a complete file, as Satan cannot look into our minds. Periodically, Satan goes into heaven and brings all of these accusations to God. Satan brings his lawyers and he will mention your sins. Satan knows that these sins have been paid for; but he keeps bringing these cases before God the Father. This may seem silly, but how many times have you heard unbelievers come up with examples of people who are Christians and yet sin?

There are times when you think about yourself, which is normal.

Satan's counterfeits are given.

Bob quotes Chafer and says that he is not aware of anyone who has exploited the important information that Chafer produced on Satan.

Next to the lie itself, the greatest delusion Satan imposes - reaching to all unsaved and to a large proportion of Christians - is the supposition that only such things as society considers evil could originate with the devil - if, indeed, there be any devil to originate anything. It is not the reason of man, but the revelation of God, which points out that governments, morals, education, art, commercialism, vast enterprises and organizations, and much of religious activity are included in the cosmos diabolicus. That is, the system which Satan has constructed includes all the good which he can incorporate into it and be consistent in the thing he aims to accomplish. A serious question arises whether the presence of gross evil in the world is due to Satan's intention to have it so, or whether it indicates Satan's inability to execute all he has designed. The probability is great that Satan's ambition has led him to undertake more than any creature could ever administer.

Revelation declares that the whole cosmos-system must be annihilated - not its evil alone, but all that is in it, both good and bad. God will incorporate nothing of Satan's failure into that kingdom which He will set up in the earth.

543 10/11/1978 Romans 16:20a Angelic conflict (cont.): demons and systems of demon possession; stages of reversionism

Romans 16:20 And in a short time the God of peace will crush Satan under your feet. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you. (BLB)

We are defining the conflict which is a part of our lives. We are studying the forces of Satan v. the forces of God. Elect angels v. demons; advancing believers v. unbelievers and those in reversionism.

We cannot out think fallen angels and they are far more powerful than we are.

Demon possession. Man is not allowed to see the demons. Unbelievers can be possessed. The demon can only influence the body and soul of the believer. The notes for demon possession.

The Celts, the Teutonic peoples both have demonistic backgrounds. The Jews were studying the Mosaic Law whereas many of our white ancestors were worshiping trees. Were it not for the Jews, there would be no human race. Biped animals only. Apart from the Jews, we would have wiped ourselves out as a people.

Stages of reversionism at the end.

Romans 16:20 And in a short time the God of peace will crush Satan under your feet. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you. (BLB)

Lesson #544

544 10/12/1978 Romans 16:20b Occult and demon practices and illustrations (Moros, Hitler, Egypt), drawing room approach, Satan's powers and use of demons; grace protection

Separation from other believers is not a violation of loving the brothers. The love to all believers is not personal love but impersonal love.

Romans 16:20a In fact, the God of prosperity will in a short time crush Satan under your feet.

Many of the points below can be found in the doctrines on demonism:

The soul can be taken over by Satan. Believers often find themselves in some idiotic position and believers are too curious about some of these subjects like esp, necromancy and other things involving demon activity. When you have the specific warning of the Word of God, you have to be written off as idiotic. You can become involved in things that will be disastrous to you.

The words wizard and witch. The wizard is a male who is demon-possessed; and the witch is a woman who is demon-possessed.

There are many systems of influence; some are legitimate and great; others are evil. Thought transference, mind-reading, etc. are problematic. The mind of one person can take control of others. Unlawful isolation of dormant faculties. There are various systems or mesmerism, that dancing of the dervishes, and the tongues movement in the United States. The accomplishment of these things through the phallic cult as well.

Emotion takes over and blocks out thought or common sense. There are two different systems involved in this part of the angelic conflict: demon possession and demon influence. One is related to the body and the other is related to the soul. The believer cannot be demon-possessed.

Idolatry and human sacrifice is the original system of demon contact. Deuteronomy 32:17 is another reference, sacrificing to demons and not to God. Voodooism where sacrifices of the animal is actually a substitute for the human sacrifice. People being cut open and their interior organs are seen. It is quite a bloody mess. When angelic creatures under Satan's command, the things that they can do to people and their influence can be remarkable. The Moslems going on a yurgimentando on Mindanao in the Philippines. Some, before they died, would kill an American or a Filipino.

Wherever you find Islam, you find demon possession. They do have a conspiracy in the planning stages to take over the United States.

Psalm 96:5 The actual demon is very attractive. They are represented by weird representations like the satyr. When demons were visible, the women of the world abandoned men and went for demons. This is the basis for all mythology. Half-human, half-god creatures were the result. This happened until the flood put the end to it.

Adult human sacrifice and child sacrifices occurred. These things can be found in Africa, Asia but even England (the Stonehenge was related to that). Bible doctrine is the only guarantee against it.

Another form where the demon-possessed person gives the impression of being a genius. They are used to attract and impress us. Adolf Hitler is a good example of demon possession. He was a simple house painter. And he somehow went from there to influence the world. He suddenly began to propose the racial theories of a Count somebody; someone that he had no contact with in any way. Hitler influenced by people who have never been influenced before. These are the rabble and there were many brilliant and smart people who bought the whole package. This cannot be explained away by being simply influenced by propaganda and emotion. They were drawn away in the mentality. The drawing room approach to demon possession. Demon possession comes in many different forms.

The art, culture and music of Egypt, considered one of the great civilizations of history; and they were influenced by demon possession. In the Exodus, the firstborn judgment was a judgment against human beings. Without this execution of judgment. Exodus 12:12. The whole civilization of Egypt was upheld by demonism. A civilization of attractive people, brilliant thought and medicine, was actually a civilization of demon possession.

One of the practices was to cut open a vein and drink directly from the vein. This has been documented in Bulgaria and Transylvania. These are all related to demon possession. We have an antithetical attack. If you can understand the communist approach, where they work on one side for peace; and on the other side to build up their military.

Cultural people are attracted by operation drawing room; and both are effective is Bible doctrine. Jesus Christ controls history. Indians also had a lot of demon activity.

From the Constitution up to 1900 or so, demon involvement was at an all time low in the United States. There is a special category of demons which influences rulers. But Hitler, who made one brilliant move after another; suddenly was unable to make any brilliant decisions. Demonism is often associated with antisemitism.

Numbers 33:4 while the Egyptians were burying their firstborn, the Lord also executed judgment on their demons. Isaiah 19:3 demons are powerless to change the course of history. Also I will frustrate their strategy. The history of Egypt is linked to demonism. The great pyramids are not a great system of eschatology; they are related to demonism.

Deuteronomy 19:9–12 Israel is warned not to follow the practices of those who were there before. A list of demon-related activities are given. 1Chronicles 10:13 Saul did not keep the word of the Lord and he asked counsel of a necromancer.

A great amount of demonism in Israel. Isaiah and Jeremiah passages. This will eventually destroy a nation. History of mankind could not be perpetuated if Jesus did not control history.

The last breath of so many dying; and they utter words into the ground.

Satan wanted to discipline Peter. Luke 22:31. God does allow demons to harm people on the sin unto death. Demon activity to administer the sin unto death means maximum pain. 1Corinthians 5:5 (a Corinthian having sex with his mother; and he was turned over to demons for the destruction of his body).

1Timothy 1:19–20 to be turned over to Satan.

Satan's power. He can do eight things. He can blind the mind of a person under influence through religion. Psalm 109:7ff He can shorten life. He can remove people from authority. He can kill. He can persecute children. He can remove wealth. He can turn others against you. He can cut off the posterity to the second generation. Satan is a killer. He has the power of death. He killed Job's children.

Satan is the source of many diseases. He produced the disease of Job.

Demons cause odd behavior, dumbness, deafness, blindness, epilepsy.

Satan can be a healer. He attacks with thesis and antithesis. This gift was used as a temporary gift for the Apostles. Paul did not have this gift in A.D. 62. There were people that Paul could not heal. But by that time, Paul's authority had been established. 2Thessalonians 2:9 Matthew. 24:4

Satan has distracted more people from doctrine by the tongues movement.

A second great victory in v. 20.

Romans 16:20 And in a short time the God of peace will crush Satan under your feet. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you. (BLB)

“The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you. Amen.” The nominative singular subject charis (χάρις) [pronounced KHAHR-ic], the policy of the justice of God in blessing humanity. Salvation is by grace and every imputation of blessing is by grace. The possessive genitive of kurios (κύριος) [pronounced KOO-ree-oss] and Iêsous (Ἰησοῦς) [pronounced ee-ay-SOOCE], plus the possessive pronoun—“our Lord Jesus.” The possessive genitive from egó (ἐγώ) [pronounced ehg-OH], indicates that Paul is talking to believers—our mutual saviour, our mutual Lord, the prince ruler of the Church. Then because of the ellipsis, a style used throughout Romans, the insertion of one word which the syntax demands, usually because there is a predicate nominative without eimi (εἰμί) [pronounced eye-ME]. So it is not adding to the Word of God, it is a part of the translation. Then the preposition meta plus the genitive plural from the pronoun su—“with you.”

The justice of God imputes eternal life. The creation of the human spirit by the Holy Spirit is called regeneration. The person can receive blessings in time and this can be parlayed into eternal blessing. The exploitation of grace is the possession of Bible doctrine.

Because of the grace of God, we have a wall of fire. We do not have protection from demon influence. The second victory is designed to glorify God in time and in eternity.

Romans 16:20 In fact, the God of prosperity will soon crush Satan under your feet [and] the grace of our Lord Jesus be with you.

545 10/13/1978 Romans 16:21–22 Effects of the feminist movement; Timothy; eyes and relaxation of Paul; secretaries of Paul and Napoleon

Bob is fine with various feminist movements. Women are superior to men; but not smarter in general. Beautiful scenery is nice; but it does not compare at all to the beauty of the woman. Women are beautiful and inspiring until they get off the pedestal.

Lloyd George was a total disaster to England just as FDR was to the United States.

No matriarchal societies can achieve stability. The Irish people live in a matriarchal society and the Celtic people up to WWII were in a matriarchal society.

One thing which has helped the ladies is Bible doctrine in the soul. Bob wants women to teach prep school. The last hope for our generation is women stepping up in the prep school.

Verses 21-23, some winners in the royal family of God.

Romans 16:21 Timothy, my fellow worker, greets you; also Lucius and Jason and Sosipater, my kinsmen. (BLB)

Verse 21 – Paul’s team. “Timotheus my workfellow, and Lucius, and Jason, and Sosipater, my kinsmen, salute you.” Timothy is well known. He is called here in the appositional nominative sunergós (συνεργός) [pronounced soon-er-GOSS], a co-worker. With this is the possessive genitive singular from egó (ἐγώ) [pronounced ehg-OH]—“my.” Paul gives status to Timothy, recognizing that he not only has the gift of pastor-teacher. Principle: Timothy was a good pastor, a good teacher. He wasn’t great like Paul, so should he quit? No. Every person who has a spiritual gift for a reason. It has meaning; it is related to the plan of God. Every believer, male and female, has at least one spiritual gift and is to be faithful to the Lord by functioning under that spiritual gift, whatever it is. Do your job as unto the Lord. So when he says, “Timothy my co-worker” he doesn’t say that Timothy is equal with him, he says he’s a co-worker, they are in the same profession and on the same team. Not a full doctrine of Timothy was given, but most of these points were covered.

Timothy

1. Timothy is the son of an unbeliever Greek and a believer Jewess - Acts 16:1-3.
2. He was reared by his grandmother Lois and his mother Eunice - 2Timothy 1:5. Both were supergrace believers representing two generations of supergrace believers. Consequently Timothy had a fantastic spiritual heritage.
3. Timothy was circumcised by the apostle Paul under unusual circumstances - Acts 16:3.
4. He was ordained to the ministry in 1Timothy 4:14; 2Timothy 4:5.

5. He went to Philippi with the apostle, along with Luke - Acts 16:12. He remained to supervise the main Philippian church. Timothy did a great job in Philippi. Those who were there were very responsive to his teaching ministry. He was himself at the time a believer advancing.
6. He was left behind a second time with Silas at Berea - Acts 17:14. Since the Bereans were positive to doctrine, again for the second time he had a great ministry.
7. Having joined Paul at Athens he next went to Thessalonica, according to 1Thessalonians 3:2.
8. From there he was sent to Corinth, and there he failed. For the first time he came up against negative believers, he came up against reversionism, and 1Corinthians 16:10 tells us that he was a total failure. He was too soft, too weak to handle the Corinthians. This failure foreshadows his failure at Ephesus. Timothy was not tough enough with bullies, he lost control of the local church; thus becoming disillusioned with people he moved into reversionism when he got to Ephesus.
9. He shared Paul's first roman imprisonment - Philippians 1:1; 2:19; Colossians 1:1; Philemon 1.
10. Afterwards he started out with Paul on his fourth missionary journey. He was left behind at Ephesus where he failed miserably.

Timothy would never be what Paul is; but that does not mean that he should quit or find a new profession. He is still to keep on going and doing his part in the plan of God.

Then he adds the present active indicative of aspazomai (ἀσπάζομαι) [pronounced as-PAD-zom-ahee], meaning to salute, to greet, to pay one's respects. The aoristic present in for punctiliar action in present time. The active voice: Timothy produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative for reality. Plus the accusative plural direct object from su, meaning all of the Romans believers.

The adjunctive use of the conjunction kai follows, and is correctly translated "also." Then the nominative singular subject from Loúkios (Λούκιος) [pronounced LOO-kee-oss]—"Lucius," one of the prophets and teachers who ordained Paul and Barnabas as missionaries in Acts 13:1. He also spent 18 months with Paul in Corinth. He is an older man than Paul. Those who have cracked the maturity barrier, old and young, are completely relaxed and happy, and are not guilty of inordinate ambition. He has no hangups; when someone mentions Paul, he does not say, "Well, I ordained him!" He is not jealous or upset over Paul's tremendous knowledge and teaching ability.

Next is a nominative singular subject of a proper noun, lászōn (Ίάσων) [pronounced ee-AS-own], "Jason." He was a man who made it in business at a time when the business world was in a state of instability. He never, however, put business above doctrine. He lived in Thessalonica and Paul was his guest. During the riot against Paul his home was attacked. Paul escaped but Jason was seized by the mob and taken to court where he was accused of treason. The charges were dropped after he gave his testimony—Acts 17:5-9. He is now retired and as a businessman with time he is helping Paul. He is a part of the team.

He demonstrates the fact that God has a place for everyone. You do not have to be a pastor-teacher, an evangelist, etc., and the very fact that you are a believer signifies that you received a spiritual gift at salvation and you are just as much in full time Christian service in whatever you are doing in life. Full time Christian service is not the monopoly of a few, it is the privilege of all believers.

Then the connective use of kai because we are dealing now with someone who is very special but in a different way— Sōsípatros (Σωσίπατρος) [pronounced so-SIHP-at-ross], “Sosopitus.” He is only mentioned once in Scripture—Acts 21:4, he is going with Paul on his reversionistic trip to Jerusalem. The appositional nominative suggenês (συγγενής) [pronounced soong-ghen-ACE] means a kinsman, a relative, a fellow countryman. The noun is in the plural, it indicates all of these mentioned were Jews.

Paul went all over the Roman empire and he said nothing about the scenery. He talks about the people. These are the people that Paul loves to be with. Paul was persecuted and maligned.

Romans 16:21 Timothy my co-workers greets you, also Lucius, and Jason, and Sosopiter, my fellow countrymen.

Rapport is the obvious reason for grouping these four together. They all did different things in life, they all had different personalities and abilities, but they all had in common the thing that draws them together: rapport through doctrine. These are believers who are not only advancing in the plan of God but men with whom Paul had great fellowship. All people who are great must have a circle of friends around them with whom they can be totally relaxed.

Romans 16:22 I Tertius, the one having written down this letter, greet you in the Lord. (BLB)

Verse 22 – there was someone who worked for Paul. Paul went almost totally blind and couldn't write himself. An amanuensis is one employed to write from dictation, a secretary. He was one who actually wrote this epistle and others. “I Tertius, who wrote this epistle, salute you in the Lord.” The first person singular personal pronoun egó (ἐγώ) [pronounced ehg-OH], plus the nominative singular subject Tértios (Τέρτιος) [pronounced TER-tee-oss]—“I Tertius” (Latin). We know that he wrote 1Corinthians, 1Corinthians 16:21; 2Thessalonians 3:17. Paul didn't write the letter, he dictated it and Tertius wrote it. But he always wrote something at the end in his own hand. In Galatians 6:11 we see the problem. Galatians was one of the earlier Pauline epistles, and Paul says as he started to try to write, “See with what large letters I have written you in my own hand.” He had to write the letters so large that he could see what he was writing.

Tertius wrote this epistle—the articular aorist active participle from graphô (γράφω) [pronounced GRAWF-oh]. The definite article is used as a relative pronoun, and the antecedent is Tertius. Again, the present active indicative of aspazomai (ἀσπάζομαι) [pronounced as-PAD-zom-ahee]. This time a pictorial present presenting to the mind a picture of a greeting in the process of occurrence. The active voice: Tertius produces the action. The declarative indicative is for historical reality. Plus the accusative plural direct object from the personal pronoun su, plus a preposition en (ἐν) [pronounced en] with the locative of kurios (κύριος) [pronounced KOO-ree-oss]—“in the Lord.”

Bob goes into great detail about Verdia, who was the greatest secretary of all time, the secretary for Napoleon.

Romans 16:22 I Tertius, who wrote this epistle, pay my respects to you in the Lord.

This is the only line written totally by Tertius. He is a junior officer saluting other junior officers. It is recognition of the fact that it takes many pastors teaching many people to move the generation forward.

Lesson #546

546 10/15/1978 Romans 16:23a Concept of the pivot; postulates of the integrity of God; Corinthian honor guard; Roman Empire education

It all starts with the omniscience of God, which always knows everything that has ever existed and will exist. God's omniscience knows what the potential could be.

God knew every person who would believe in Christ and God knew this billions of years before it would happen. One of the greatest periods of history was the Roman Empire. Paul called this the fullness of time.

Only that which is actual is described by election, foreknowledge and predestination (or foreordination). These apply only to believers and what believers do or do not do. Those who make up the pivot are elected, foreknown, and predestined. The unbeliever comes out of the computer as condemned. His volition is known.

Foreknowledge is a very small part of omniscience.

Many liberal historians, Marxists, have all gathered together to be antagonistic toward the Roman Empire. Women, at the beginning, lacked rights; and the empire had slaves. So they don't like it.

History is guided by mature believers during any period of time.

Paul wrote to the Romans in A.D. 58. This was the greatest period in history. By this the world was evangelized for the next 500 years. The Franks, the Celtic peoples, Scandinavian peoples, etc. (Bob named 10 or more) were evangelized as a result.

We are in a drastic period of time for these United States. We have selected about 15 or 20 roads on the way to disaster. We are on the verge of being conquered by the Communists; we are on the verge of internal destruction. But until then, we will function as a client nation in the field of evangelism; and the function of the mature believers will guide society.

If there is a small pivot and a large spinoff, we destroy a nation. Antisemitism is a satanic principle which is adopted by unbelievers and believers both. All of the problems of the world are blamed on the Jews. The shows a lack of any academic training.

Bob was given an envelope at T&P from a kindly old man who claimed to be a Baptist. Bob accepted it and read it and it turned out to be antisemitic propaganda. Most of the people sponsoring the anticommunist events are also antisemitic, making them anti-God and anti the United States. The Baptist church is apparently loaded with it now.

People relate their conservatism to conspiracies. There are always numerous conspiracies and they are designed to put a stop to tactical victories in the angelic conflict. Bob does not want any of the cancer of antisemitism in Berachah Church. Cursing by association has destroyed the conservative movement in the United States. There are Jews and gentiles involved with many conspiracies in this and other countries. Trying to blame Rockefeller and others is ridiculous. It is evil and it has destroyed conservatism.

The pivot is the great key to the present time. Paul permits his own secretary to say a word or two. This emphasizes the importance of the pivot. There is a thermometer to measure a nation. A small pivot means disaster to a nation. A large pivot means a small spinoff; and the nation is preserved.

Socialism is a satanic system to counterfeit the Millennium and to head off the second advent.

God must keep His Word to the Jews. These promises will be kept. Socialism and antisemitism are the two great attacks on God. These may succeed regarding some specific nations, like ours; but they will not subvert the plan of God.

The key is the attitude of believers toward Bible doctrine in any nation.

Rhodesia is a better nation than we are by far. The only thing that will turn around our country is our attitude toward Bible doctrine. Positive volition will turn the whole thing around. We only find this principle in the Word of God which lives and abides forever.

These people that we are studying are the basis for the turning around of the Roman empire. If you want to provide a greater place for your children and grandchildren—be positive toward the teaching of the Word of God.

Bob reviews the 7 postulates of history, also known as the advantages. Without the advantage, there are no advantages. 3 personal and 4 national postulates. Our country's survival depends upon our attitude toward Bible doctrine.

The honor guard of the Corinthian battalion:

Romans 16:23 Gaius, the host of me and of all the church, greets you. Erastus, the steward of the city, greets you, and Quartus, the brother. (BLB)

The secret to the rise of the Roman empire are the names found in the chapter that we are studying.

Verse 23a – “Gaius my host, also of the entire church, greet you,” is the corrected translation. proper noun person: Gáios (Γάϊος) [pronounced GAH-ee-oss], which means, lord; transliterated, Gaius, Gaios. This has become quite a popular name. This is Gaius of Corinth. He was baptized by Paul. Water baptism splits churches and Spirit baptism unifies a church. Paul is glad that he only baptized Crispus and Gaius. Baptism was a means of teaching. Immersion identifies believer with Jesus Christ in His deaths; and coming out of the water is unification with the Lord.

Gaius is one of the few people baptized by Paul, but that is a bit of trivia.

Next is xénos (ξένος) [pronounced XEHN-oss], which means, a foreigner, a stranger; alien (from a person or a thing); without the knowledge of, without a share in; new, unheard of; one who receives and entertains another hospitably; with whom he stays or lodges, a host. Add in ego, so this means, my host. Gaius was successful with a large house; but more successful in his spiritual life. Business can be a distraction to doctrine. God will bless some of us with great business prosperity. But we still place Bible doctrine first. If we do not, that business will be used to discipline you. It is true that most people with wealth are unhappy. Some who start to succeed in business also begin to neglect Bible doctrine. They eventually end up under the sin unto death. Gaius is a great businessman; but he is occupation with Christ. You can be rich or poor; the situation does not make any difference. There is distraction for the church mouse; and distraction for Mickey Mouse. Whatever the circumstances, we have our own distractions. We have two people, one had doctrine and the other did not. One was distracted by success; and one was blessed by success.

Paul lived in the large home for 18 months. He had an extremely large home which accommodated Paul as a guest. Kai + holos + ekklésia. The entire Corinthian church met in Gaius' home. Gaius, my host, and the entire church, greet you. There are four men with the name of Gaius in the Bible.

There were over one million people in Rome; and two-thirds of them were slaves. Slavery was a result of Roman success. The children were educated by these slaves. The greatest system of education was done at home by teacher-slaves. These teacher-slaves were paid; and they saved enough to buy their freedom. Once the account of the slave reached a certain amount, he would be released from slavery.

Every home was a school. There were no teacher strikes. No schools where people could go and pick up liberalism. It was a far greater system than our public and private schools today. We were a great nation before compulsory education; and Bob says that as a highly educated person, with 4 years of college and 5 years of graduate school.

The United States is being forced out of world markets because we cannot compete with Germany and Japan and other nations because our labor force is pricing us out of the market. Any American product is pushed way up in price.

Peter and Paul did not start the Roman church. Maybe Aquilla was the founder of the church in Rome. Apparently, a number of Jews founded the church in Rome.

Lesson #547

547 10/15/1978 Romans 16:23b–25a Politicians; preconceived notions re the plan of God; review of the doctrine of logistical grace

A little bonus for adding a missionary to the list.

Romans 16:23 Gaius, the host of me and of all the church, greets you. Erastus, the steward of the city, greets you, and Quartus, the brother. (BLB)

“Erastus the chamberlain of the city saluteth you, and Quartus a brother.” The nominative singular subject from the proper noun Érastos (Ἐραστός) [pronounced EHR-as-toss], “Erastos.” Cf. Acts 19:22. At the time Paul writes both Timothy and Erastos were with Paul in Corinth, but ten years later when Paul writes to Timothy in Ephesus Erastos is still located there. In 2Timothy 4:20 one of the last people Paul mentions before dying was Erastos, a man who became successful in the function of city government. There have been some excellent governmental officials in Houston. There was a time when crime was low. We had mayors who supported the police; and gangsters were met on the plane and sent back.

Chamberlain is the appositional nominative of oikonómos (οἰκονόμος) [pronounced oy-kohn-OHM-oss] means a steward or manager of an estate. It is used here in the technical sense for the city treasurer (comptroller). With it is a descriptive genitive singular from polis (πόλις, εως, ἡ) [pronounced POH-liss], which means “city”—“Erastus comptroller of the city,” referring to the city of Corinth.

The verb is the present active indicative of aspazomai (ἀσπάζομαι) [pronounced as-PAD-zom-ah-ee], meaning to greet, salute, pay respects to. This is the aoristic present tense for punctiliar action in present time. The active voice: Erastus produces the action. The declarative indicative mood is for historical reality of two things: the actual greeting, and the fact that it is possible to be in politics and government, whether local or national, and to be honorable, and even to advance to maturity. It is possible to be born again and advance spiritually and, at the same time, to be involved in politics. Erastus stands for that particular principle. He maintained this position for a long period of time without being involved in scandal. Nor is he one who wants to get into the history books (like Marilyn Monroe).

Calvin Coolidge image of small government, big people. He believed in big people and he proved it in a marvelous way. He prospered in politics from the divine viewpoint. He did not try to leave his name in history books; he lived his life occupied with the Lord. He is one of the few government officials to advance to maturity. He had obvious blessing in time; and his high office in government was an imputation from the justice of God.

At this time, some believers are occupying offices in the Roman government. If God does not promote you, you are not promoted. To be promoted by divine imputation means great stability. Erastus remained prosperous and successful over many years. His life in [Z] glorified Jesus Christ.

Next is the adjunctive use of kai which should be translated “also” rather than “and.” The nominative singular of the proper noun Κούαρτος (Κούαρτος) [pronounced KOO-ar-toss]—“Quartus.” Apparently he is a local believer who has attained maturity. There is a tradition that he eventually became a pastor in Syria, north of Sidon, but there is no way of knowing whether this is true. Whether it is or is not the fact remains that he is not known for anything in history, except just being a person; a person of insignificance. But there is no such thing as a person of insignificance in the plan of God. The nominative singular subject adelphos (ἀδελφός) [pronounced ad-el-FOSS] simply indicates to us that he was royal family.

Strict policy of T&P is not to recommend a pastor to a church, when you have no facts at all. Most young people have a great deal of arrogance and start out with a tapers’ ministry. There have been opportunities to recommend people; but Berachah doesn’t.

Paul is not recommending Quartus here for anything. The tradition is that Quartus ended up in Syria.

Romans 16:23 Gaius, my host, and the entire church, salute (greet) you. Erastus, the comptroller of the city, greets you; also our brother Quartus.

Closing Points on this Verse

1. In each case, something is said about the first two, establishing them as mature believers. Nothing is said about Quartus except that he is a believer. Also the brother Quartus. This is almost as if Quartus begged to be mentioned.
2. Some possibility that Quartus was guilty of inordinate . Better to over prepare than under prepare. We have a generation who wants everything on a silver platter. The government has been very evil on its treatment of minorities. They are treated like a super race. It is always better to underestimate you ability and over prepare.
3. Arrogance + inflexibility add to this the principle mean that virtue cancels virtue. Ability cancels ability and success cancels success.
4. Suggests that Quartus who is trying to PR their way to glory. It is the wrong approach insofar as God is concerned.

Romans 16:24 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen.

Verse 24 – a verse that reveals the subtleties of false interpretation. “The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen.” Nothing wrong with that verse, except it isn’t found in the original. It is an insertion. The information stated in the verse is correct but it is not found here. Hence, a correct sentence can be an attack upon the Word of God when inserted without justification from ellipsis. Only what God the Holy Spirit has authorized and only what is in sequence is acceptable. This is not in sequence nor is it authorized.

Verses 25-26, the importance of Church Age doctrine.

Doxology

Romans 16:25 Now to Him being able to strengthen you according to my gospel and the proclamation of Jesus Christ, according to the revelation of the mystery having been kept secret in times of the ages,...

Verse 25 – “Now to him that is of power to establish you according to my gospel.” The transitional use of the postpositive conjunctive particle de, usually translated “but” in the adversative sense but here it is translated “now” in the transitional sense. The articular present active participle from the verb dunamai (δύναμαι) [pronounced DOO-nam-ahēe], and the definite article which goes with the participle is a dative singular indirect object definite article used as a personal pronoun referring to God the Father who is author of the divine plan—“Now to him.” The present tense of the participle dunamai (δύναμαι) [pronounced DOO-nam-ahēe] is a static present for a condition which perpetually exists. God always has omnipotence. The active voice: God the Father, author of the divine plan, produces the action of the verb. The participle is circumstantial for both essence as well as the decrees of God. Now, to Him Who is able...

Then the aorist active infinitive of the verb stêrizô (στηρίζω) [pronounced stay-RIHD-zoh] which means to stabilize, make stable. The original use of the verb was to make fast, to support, to fix something so that it stands upright and immovable. The gnomic aorist tense is for a doctrine so fixed in its certainty as to be axiomatic. The active voice: God the Father produces the action of the verb through logistical grace. The infinitive is an actual result of salvation in logistical grace. The accusative plural direct object from su is referring to all believers. “Now to him who is able to support you.” This is a reference to the doctrine of logistical grace.

The Doctrine of Logistical Grace is found back in Lesson #208.

Logistical grace supports us while in [Y]. This is where we are saved and moving forward (ideally) in the Christian life.

Bob believes that God dictated the book of Genesis to Moses.

548 10/16/1978 Romans 16:25b Thesis and antithesis; alternatives; origin of Denominations; doctrine of the mystery (review); arrogant students; speculation

Bob has often considered teaching things which are not taught ever from the pulpit. It all depends upon how much you can take and how much you can stand.

Romans 9 has a simple theology; but it is sometimes difficult to teach it. Bob finds that if he repeats something enough, people eventually get it.

The attribute of God which is important is divine omniscience. The omniscient of God always knew. He knew simultaneous in eternity past what would happen. He knew every thought, every decision and every action of every person and of every angel; and these are known to God simultaneously in eternity past.

Divine knowledge is not coercion. The superiority of God would obviously know the decisions of every creature simultaneously.

If we put facts into a computer then we get facts out of that computer. To break down this simultaneous, instant thought of God, we use the example of a computer. All of the facts of human history are fed into the computer. Two categories of information come out of the computer: one is broken down into three parts: election, foreknowledge, and predestination; and the second category for the unbeliever is condemnation, retribution and judgment.

We have to understand this in one single thought. We break down history logically or chronologically; it is hard to understand that God knew everything that was going to happen.

All of the facts fed into the computer knew that certain people would be positive and certain ones would be negative; at God consciousness and at gospel hearing.

There are two categories: believer and unbeliever.

Theology has gone off its rocker in some places. Some say that man is predestined to hell; and the Bible does not state this. The Bible does state foreordination. The believer is foreordained; the unbeliever is predestined. These words are not used of the unbeliever. Only the believer is said to be elected, foreknown and predestined.

There is Hegelian thinking. When you have the thesis and the antithesis, then you put them together to get the thesis. The Bible does not do this. Every jackass said, "What if Adam did not sin." There is no possibility that Adam did not sin. God's omniscience can answer that question; but probability is never fed into the divine decrees. Only what is true is stated in the Bible. All of these what ifs are arrogant hangups. These are not profound; they are imbecilic. You cannot do theology on speculation. Why speculate on something which is not entered into the computer. What is in the computer is found in the Word of God. If the thesis is stated, but the antithesis is not, the antithesis does not exist. If the antithesis is stated in Scripture but not the thesis, then the thesis does not exist.

There is a group of mealy mouthed pastors who call each other up and tell one another that they are doing a great job. Now they are trying to figure out each week what breakthrough that they have had. Arrogant hangups. They are thinking in terms of inordinate competition with other pastors.

God only fed facts into the computer. Many times the antithesis did not happen, so it is not fed into the computer. What is recorded in the Bible is what happened or what will happen.

When the Roman church, that was straight for 300 years, doctrinally straight. Then Roman popes began to speculate; and Roman bishops had to be profound. They would compete with one another. They would have opposite breakthroughs so they went to poppa for a ruling; and he would say, "Bishop A is right and Bishop B is not." Then this would be written up and become a part of Catholic doctrine.

What is the problem? Why do we have a Roman Catholic church? Why do we have a Methodist group? Arrogance always wants to one-up everyone. When you keep trying to one up people, you eventually one up God. The Scripture demands interpretation and not speculation.

In the Renaissance, they found themselves facing the thinking of Descartes, Spinoza and Kant. So they had to speculate; they had to reconcile their thinking with the dogmas of the church; so they came up with new breakthroughs. You cannot synthesize philosophy and theology. You cannot reconcile them in synthesis. God only fed doctrine into the computer. And if it is not true, then it is false. You do not reconcile the true with the false.

This is how we get false teaching and denominations.

The omniscience of God only fed facts into the decrees. No alternatives were fed into the computer unless they actually existed. No decisions were fed if they did not exist. We do not speculate, what if Adam did not sin? The question is blasphemous or stupid. This is asked by people who are sincere; but sincerity is not a virtue. We will spend our lives learning the facts of Scripture. We do not have time to consider speculation. We will have plenty of time to let God show us what would have happened. Germany sent Lenin to Russia; Germany is responsible for putting Lenin on a train. He went to Sweden, got some money, then got back on the train and went to Russia. Speculating on history is a nice little game. But we do not speculate on the sacred ground of Bible doctrine.

Most people do not know what the facts of history are; let alone speculations of history.

The omniscience of God only feeds reality into the divine decrees. It is done all at one time instantly. God's plan was so designed in eternity past so as to include all events, actions, related to their causes and conditions as a part of an indivisible system, every link being a part of the integrity of the whole. The theological definition of the doctrine of divine decrees: The decree of God is His eternal, holy, wise, and sovereign purpose, comprehending at once all things that ever were or will be, in their causes, conditions, successions and relationships, and determining their certain futurity.

There are two collective elections: Israel and the church. Millions and billions of individual elections.

Foreknowledge is not synonymous with omniscience. Foreknowledge is simply God knowing what will come out of the computer while it is still in the computer.

All of this has a great deal to do with what we are studying and the book of Ephesians.

A reading of Romans 16:17–24

Romans 16:25a Now to Him [God the Father] Who is able to support you...

Into the computer, long before you said to God, “O, God, help...” God knew it and the answer is there as well. No or yes. Everything that is needed to sustain us as long as God plans for us to live. This includes disciplines.

We now have three things in historical sequence. The first in historical order: “according to my gospel.” Second: “and the preaching of Jesus Christ.” Third: “according to the revelation of the mystery.” Those three phrases are listed in their chronological order, in their historical order of occurrence.

First, the prepositional phrase kata plus the accusative singular of euangelion (εὐαγγέλιον) [pronounced yoo-ang-GHEL-ee-on]. Kata plus the accusative usually has to do with the extent of space, sometimes the extent of time. Many times it sets up a nom or a standard. Here it has to do with the historical presentation of information by which the volition of all members of the human race express a positive or a negative, determining whether they will be under the category of election, foreknowledge, predestination, or condemnation and retribution. We translate it, “according to my good news.”

Historically, the gospel was presented immediately after man’s fall. The first time the gospel was needed, the gospel was presented. From the time of man’s fall, right down to the end of time, there will always be the gospel. The opposition to the gospel is intense but it is always there and always will be there. The good news is not only the gospel of salvation but all of the good news pertaining to God’s provision for the human race. Doctrine was provided two thousand years, at least, before the canon of Scripture was begun—after the exodus, around BC 1440. Before that time there was not one word of written scripture, and yet all the information was available.

The second in historical order was when our Lord Jesus Christ came and began His earthly ministry. He not only preached the good news but He added information to it. He became the first prophet of the Church Age. The connective kai indicates the continuation of the prepositional phrase, so we have kata (though not stated) plus the accusative singular from the noun kêrugma (κήρυγμα) [pronounced KAY-roog-mah], a noun which is taken from another noun kêrux (κῆρυξ) [pronounced KAY-roox], meaning a herald. Kêrugma (κήρυγμα) [pronounced KAY-roog-mah] means public communication or proclamation. Plus the objective genitive from lêsous (Ἰησοῦς) [pronounced ee-ay-SOOCE] Christos (χριστός) [pronounced krees-TOHSS]—“and the proclamation [or, public declaration] of Jesus Christ.”

Romans 16:25a Now to Him [God the Father] Who is able to support you and the proclamation [or, public declaration] of Jesus Christ...

The third in historical order: “according to the revelation of the mystery” – the preposition kata plus the accusative singular from the noun apokalupsis (ἀποκάλυψις) [pronounced ap-ok-AL-ooop-sis], meaning “revelation, unveiling, disclosure.” Plus the descriptive genitive singular from the noun mustêrion (μυστήριον) [pronounced moos-TAY-ree-on]—“mystery.” The mystery still has the gospel, but the mystery has something else: the Church Age is in view at this point. Translation: “according to the disclosure/unveiling of the mystery.”^[5]

The gospel took place right after the fall. People were saved by believing in Jesus Christ we have the gospel, Jesus Christ, and then we have the mystery.

We have studied the gospel in many ways and from many points of view. The gospel exists in the Old and New Testaments.

The Old Testament saints did not know about the mystery. This is a special type of doctrine that God kept under wraps until Christ came. Up until this time of Paul, no one knew anything about the mystery. They did not know even the most basic doctrines which we know.

John 12–17 Jesus began to take the wraps off of it. John and Peter and Luke and Mark may have done some little parts of the mystery doctrine, but Paul was the one who developed it. Paul took the wraps off of it and he explained it in detail. When you talk about the mystery, you are talking about Paul. Paul talked about the seed-pickers in Athens. They had about as many brains as a bird. They were really taking the wraps off something which has already been thought and said. They stole from Plato and Aristotle; and Plato is the greatest thief in history; stealing everything from Aristotle. Who did Aristotle steal from? A seed-picker is anyone who steals from someone else. The honest part of scholarship is footnotes; and the dishonest part is what is written on the page.

The man who discovered the atom and the neutron and electron; he stole that from God.

Musterion is a nice way of saying, written by Paul. This came from several words. Jesus used this for Paul, the greatest mind in history. “To you, it has been given the knowledge to know the mysteries of heaven; but not the others.” Parable took something that everyone knew and understood. Something that everyone understood was made into a set of doctrines. Matthew 4:10–11.

The mystery refers to Church Age doctrine. There was a veil covering Church Age doctrine. It begins with the baptism of the Holy Spirit; and the royal family is formed through this baptism. None of these things, from the Holy Spirit or the royal family knew anything until John 12–17 where Jesus taught some of the basic doctrines.

The disciples became Apostles to the church after Pentecost. Peter, James and John understood a small portion of it; but Paul pulled back the veil on this.

1Corinthians 2:7 But we communicate God's wisdom in a mystery, the hidden assets which God predestined before the ages to our glory.

The omniscience of God placed the facts into the computer and they came out as foreknowledge, election, etc. A unique ministry of the Holy Spirit which would be so unique that it would be distorted by the holy rollers and rejected by the milder types, who simply made the choice to be moral. We can predict, we can speculate. We do not know when we will be destroyed by communism or vice versa. A mystery is doctrine; not the elapse of time and what would happen during the Church Age. Only the doctrine is called the doctrine of the mystery. Ephesians 1:8–9 From which grace, He [God the Father] caused to superabound toward us [that's supergrace] by means of all doctrine and divine viewpoint having made known to us the mystery of His purpose and design according to the standard of His good thinking, from which He [God the Father] pre-designed in Him [in Christ]. There was never such a thing before as being in Christ. This is a great key that opens up the mystery. Christ has the royalty and we are in Christ and that is in the decrees.

The relationship of the mystery doctrine to the first advent stated in a sequential historical and chronological revelation: 1Timothy 3:16 And by consent of all, great is the mystery doctrine with reference to godliness [the advance to maturity]; the Unique One [Christ, as eternal God] Who became visible by means of the flesh [the Hypostatic Union], the Same One was vindicated by means of the Holy Spirit [the sustaining ministry of the Holy Spirit except for three hours on the cross when He was being our sins], He was observed by angels [very carefully], He was proclaimed among the nations [very lucidly], He became the object of faith in the world. He was taken up to His place in glory.

This places the mystery doctrine between the first advent and the second advent, which occurs after He returns from glory. The first advent is the strategic victory. A new dispensation is inserted for the tactical victory of [X] + [Y] + [Z]

1Timothy 3:16 And by consent of all, great is the mystery of the spiritual life; the unique One [Jesus Christ] who appeared in a human body was vindicated by means of the Holy Spirit; He was observed by angels; He was proclaimed among the nations; He was the object of faith in the world; He was taken up into glory [ascension and session].

Ephesians 2:3–6 If you have heard of the dispensation of the mystery [and you have], having been given to me [to Paul] for you [royal family] that from divine disclosure [Paul's disclosure] the mystery was revealed to me [to Paul] just as I have previously written in brief face to face with which doctrine of the mystery, when you exegete, you ought to be able to understand my categorical knowledge in the sphere of the mystery of the Christ, which in other dispensations [other periods of time] was not revealed to the sons of men so that now it has been revealed to His holy Apostles, even prophets, by means of the Holy Spirit that the gentiles believers are joint heirs and members of the body and joint possessors of the promise of Christ Jesus through the gospel. It's all there; it just reminds Bob that he is going to have to re-do Ephesians.

Three times, Paul says that this was given to him (but the other Apostles had maybe a 5% cut between all of them. What is the difference between the other Apostles and Paul? None of the 11 were really too bright. John was a sweet person; Peter was impulsive and reasonably bright. They were not academically or mentally as qualified as Paul was. Peter said, "Read Paul's epistles if you want to get the deep things." Peter is like the NT Nahum who followed a plow and saw a vision.

There are not 25 men in America who are prepared for the ministry. That is a tragedy. People are not academically prepared. They do not even know what this means. People are scientifically prepared or prepared for other professions; but there are very few people who are prepared. People are not willing to make the sacrifices for it. The more true preparation that you have, the less arrogance that you have. And the less preparedness, the greater the arrogance.

People call Katy and others and tell about their breakthroughs. All first year seminary students are the most arrogant. Bob would put them through close-order drill. Bob knows because he was one of them (and he was not the worst). Bob still remembers the guys there and they would wink across the room, "Your turn to ask him." He was unable to cope with the philosophical background. He then went to TCU and got the background in philosophy. The arrogance of that class, including Bob. He was there to learn, not to teach. It was a disaster. Paul was the most prepared man in history. He had the intellect and he had the preparation.

The worst kind of arrogance where people think that they are smarter; and they are going to show someone else. Inordinate arrogance.

549 10/17/1978 Romans 16:25c–26a The Doxology (cont.); doctrine of dispensations (review); Millennium; Church Age = the age of writing

Romans 16:25–26a Now to him [God the Father] who is able to support you [logistical grace] according to my gospel, and the proclamation of Jesus Christ, according to the disclosure of the mystery, which...

Doxology

Romans 16:25 Now to Him being able to strengthen you according to my gospel and the proclamation of Jesus Christ, according to the revelation of the mystery having been kept secret in times of the ages,... (BLB)

“which was kept secret since the world began” – the perfect passive participle of the verb sigāō (σιγάω) [pronounced see-GAH-oh] which means to conceal or to keep silent. It can be translated “which has been kept silent” or “which has been concealed.” The perfect tense is a dramatic perfect, which is the rhetorical use of the intensive perfect of completed action and the existing state during all dispensations until the Church Age. In other words, this was sealed information not to be opened until just before the Church Age began. The passive voice: the Church Age doctrine or the mystery receives the action of the verb by being sealed or concealed until our Lord announced it. This is a circumstantial participle, indicating that this was the status quo of this information from the beginning of human history down to the first advent. Plus the dative plural of reference from chronos (χρόνος) [pronounced CHRON-oss], meaning an elapse of time. With it is the dative plural of reference from aiōnios (αἰώνιος) [pronounced ahee-OH-nee-oss], which connotes “without beginning.” Together this is literally, “with reference to long ages past.” This is an idiom for past history, and it should be translated “with reference to past history.” It refers to all of the dispensations prior to the Church Age, and in all of these dispensations there was absolutely no reference to Church Age doctrine. This is a reference to all past dispensations; and there was nothing known about the Church Age. It did not happen until Jesus divulged some of the information.

Romans 16:25 Now to him [God the Father] who is able to support you [logistical grace] according to my gospel, and the proclamation of Jesus Christ, according to the disclosure of the mystery, which has been concealed with reference to past history.

Dispensationalism is the divine interpretation of human history.^[6]

In every dispensation, God administers His plan through a different agency.

The four words for dispensations; the four dispensations.

The Age of the Gentiles (Genesis 1–11). The period of positive volition or innocence; negative volition or conscience; government or divine establishment. There was one language and one race. Attacks by fallen angels against the divine institutions. God destroyed the first UN building. About 2000 years. No written canon of Scripture, apart from the written page. Rarely studied; very few know anything about it. No missionaries. No such thing as a client nation. People saved by faith in Y^ehowah Elohim.

The Age of Israel; the first dispensation with a client nation. We begin with Abraham, a missionary who becomes a nation. Abraham is a father of the Jewish race. This is most of the Old Testament, excepting half of Zechariah and a few chapters in Isaiah. Three periods, the period of the patriarchs. The origin of the Jewish race was unique. Abraham is a Jew, his brother Nahor is a gentile; the Isaac v. Ishmael; then Jacob and Esau.

The omniscience of God fed into the computer only what happened, what was decided, what actions actually occurred. Feed facts into the computer and out comes facts, election, predestined and foreknown. Only believers come out in those categories. You cannot be predestined to hell. Predestination is a technical word that belongs to believers only. In the Scripture, if the thesis is stated, it is a fact; if it is not stated, then it is not necessarily a fact. Foreknowledge is what is factual; and it is not omniscience.

Many races and many languages; then Israel becomes a nation and they become responsible for evangelism. National security related to laws of divine establishment.

The concept of intercalation. There is a dead halt to the age of Israel and the Church Age is inserted.

The Millennium. At the end, Satan is loosed and he leads many astray in a revolution against perfect environment. Universal peace, universal prosperity. Once labor gets its way with guaranteed income, at the end of this time, they are ready to revolt. Human nature under perfect environment is just like human nature in imperfect environment.

Perfect world government under Christ. Because human nature is what it is, we have nations for a balance of power. Perfect objectivity with regards to the application of justice. The scenery will be perfect. There will be no deserts. Plant life will abound. Everyone will have a green thumb. Animals will lose their ferocity. A population explosion. It terminates with the Gog and Magog revolution.

Romans 16:26 ...but now having been made manifest also through the prophetic Scriptures, according to the commandment of the Eternal God, having been made known to all the Gentiles unto the obedience of faith—...

Verse 26 – “But now is made manifest, and by the scriptures of the prophets.” The conjunctive particle de, used to connect two clauses where a contrast is intended, plus the temporal adverb nun (νῦν) [pronounced noon]. This reaches into the picture of our own dispensation—“But now,” referring to the time in which we live, the dispensation of the Church in contrast to all previous dispensations covered by Old Testament Scriptures, the Gospels, especially the synoptics. Then the aorist passive participle of the verb phaneroō (φανερῶ) [pronounced fan-er-OH-oh], where the apostle Paul is brought into the picture; he is the chief revealer and human author of the Scripture with regard to this dispensation. “But now is revealed.” The dramatic aorist tense states a present reality with the certitude of a past event. The passive voice: the mystery doctrine pertaining to the Church Age and the royal family of God receives the action of the verb. The circumstantial participle says the action received is unveiling and revelation—Church Age doctrine is now revealed. There is the ministry of the apostle Paul.

The prepositional phrase dia plus the genitive plural from the noun graphê (γραφή) [pronounced graf-AY] follows, meaning “through writings,” i.e. Scripture. With it is a descriptive genitive plural from the adjective prophêtikos (προφητικός,ή,όν) [pronounced prohf-ay-tik-OSS], which does not mean prophecy in the sense of a future event, but prophecy in terms of proclamation—preaching. It is translated “through the prophetic Scriptures,” indicating that this is simply preaching in writing, and it refers to the New Testament canon which was in the process of formation at the time that Paul wrote. The New Testament Scriptures are called prophetic because they are not completed. But Paul anticipates in AD 58 the completion of these messages and their permanence as the heritage of the royal family.

“according to the commandment of the everlasting God” – kata plus the accusative singular of epitagê (ἐπιταγή) [pronounced ep-ee-tag-AY], “in accordance with the command/decreed” or literally, “by command/decreed of.” Plus the possessive genitive singular from the generic use of the definite article, plus the adjective aiônios (αἰώνιος) [pronounced ahee-OH-nee-oss] and the noun theos (θεός) [pronounced theh-OSS]—“the eternal God.”

Lesson #550

550 10/18/1978 Romans 16:26a Doctrine of the theology of God's plan: (1–3) definition, sovereignty and the will of God

This next doctrine will be covered from Lessons #550–#553. All of this doctrine is found below. Notes from Lessons #573 will be included below. Some of the notes are found in Lessons #574–#576.

The Theology of the Perfect Plan of God

10/18/78; 11/13/78; 8/12/79; 9/3/79

A. Definition and Description.

1. God is perfect, therefore His plan is perfect. A perfect God can only produce a perfect plan. A plan anything less than perfect could only come from someone who is not God. The beneficiaries of the plan are imperfect. This calls for all of divine genius to create, maintain, perpetuate, and continue a perfect plan for imperfect persons. We all are together imperfect beings. How does a perfect God devise a plan for imperfect creatures.
2. The perfect plan of God cannot be divorced from the perfect essence of God, but it must be related to the total depravity of man. Because of this, certain divine attributes must be understood before the divine plan can be understood or appreciated. The problem is that perfect God created a perfect plan for imperfect creatures. As far as God is concerned, we are total disasters, because we are full of human good thoughts, evil, and because we try to shift the blame to others. We cannot change a single attribute of God without changing all of God. Even your worrying about the state of evil in the nation could lead us into becoming involved in human good to fix things.
3. The function of the essence of God in planning and executing the plan requires a summery of a number of doctrines. God has to do the thinking (doctrine) and the working. One of the biggest problems in this plan is to get the recipients of the plan to stop working. (This does not refer to legitimate production.) We want to do something to help God, such as, self-righteousness, emotion, have a pleasing personality, "love everyone." This insertion of human good ideas has obscured the plan of God. We must understand the will, sovereignty, omniscience of God, divine decrees, integrity of God, election, foreknowledge, predestination, retribution, and condemnation.

4. Inasmuch as the volition of man is an instrument created by God for the execution of God's plan, human volition, whether positive or negative, serves the divine purpose rather than hinder it. Negative volition will never stop the plan of God. Arrogance thinks the plan of God depends on you. God can get along without you.
5. Man's failure to execute the plan of God does not hinder or frustrate the plan of God. The plan moves on with or without those involved. No matter how we fail or even resist the plan of God, the plan of God will continue forth unhindered. Fundamentalist Christianity appears to be failing on every front; and yet, that will not impede the plan of God.

B. The Sovereignty of God.

1. God is a person.
 - a. That means that God has personality. But God is an eternal, infinite person. God never had a beginning. Infinite means our finite minds can never completely comprehend everything about God. God has explained Himself to us in terms of human activities called anthropopathisms.
 - b. God thinks and decides; He acts rationally.
 - c. God is perfect and acts perfectly. God's perfection is correlated.
 - d. God has self-consciousness. He is eternally aware of Himself.
 - e. God has self-determination. Eternally He has been making decisions.
 - f. God recognizes Himself as a personality. As such He thinks and acts rationally in compatibility with His integrity.
 - g. Each Member of the Trinity has the same omniscience, the same eternal life, the same sovereignty, etc.
 - h. The Members of the Godhead have different functions and their actions as related to man are different.
 - i. Individual Members of the Trinity are call YHWH. All things depend upon the will of God.
2. The sovereignty of God is bound up in the self-determination and decrees of God.
 - a. God thought out the history of the human race simultaneously in an instant of time. He put all of history into the computer of divine decrees. God knew what you would do, but never coerced your decisions. You are responsible for your own decisions. For example, God is not responsible for your sins.

b. What comes out of the computer of divine decrees about believers is called election, foreknowledge and predestination. All the facts about unbelievers come out as reprobation (total depravity), condemnation, and retribution (judgment in time and eternity). The computer-decrees also prints out the dispensations. God only gives us information which is in the computer-decrees.

c. God is the supreme being of the universe and exists in three persons, each member being co-equal and co-eternal. Planning is assigned to the Father; execution of the plan of redemption is assigned to the Son, and the sustaining of the believer is assigned to the Holy Spirit. But none of this implies inferiority among the Trinity.

3. The sovereignty of God is His absolute dominion over all created beings. This means that the plan of God is not hurt by our failure. We decide to fail, but the plan of God is not hurt in any way by our failure. In the plan of God, everyone on the team fails, but the team still wins.

4. While we have a free will, all things depend on God's will, and nothing is certain apart from God's will. Anything wonderful in life depends on the will and sovereignty of God. That is why as we learn doctrine our will and volition comes into conformity with the will of God in a non-meritorious way. In this way everything depends on the will and work of God.

5. Sovereignty is the power and prerogative of God as creator over creature, as Savior over regenerate, as ruler over positive believer, and as disciplinarian over negative believers.

6. God is the absolute authority. Only legitimate authority in life is what God has delegated, e.g., to police, judges, military, husbands, parents, teachers.

7. Both the sovereignty and omniscience of God are the basis for the divine decrees.

8. The sovereignty or authority of God is manifest as creator, having authority over both animate and inanimate creation. He has authority as Redeemer over all categories of believers. He has authority as the source of all blessing. He has the right to impute blessing in both time and eternity. He has the right to execute His plan and to utilize those who are in the momentum of His plan. He has the right to punish those who fail in His plan.

9. God's authority extends to both possible and actual things.

a. Over possible things God is sovereign in that He leaves them as only possible and not actual, or He has designed them as yet future. For example, God could have run into the garden and stopped man from committing the first sin. It would be a violation of God's integrity to convert possible to actual. It would be unfair in the angelic conflict.

b. In this God renders no account to others, but acts in agreement with His perfect plan and perfect being.

c. With regard to actual things, God is the final and absolute authority, 1Samuel 2:6-8; 1Chronicles 29:11-12; Psalm 145:14; Matthew 20:15; 1Timothy 6:15.

- d. The divine decrees are only the actual. Omniscience knows the possible and all the potentialities. But only reality is fed into the computer. Probabilities are not fed into the computer.

C. The Will of God.

1. There is one all inclusive will and purpose of God concerning all that ever was or ever will be. This originated with God Himself. It is compatible with His perfect character. It is important to remember this when confronted by the foolishness of man or the disasters of history.
2. This will and purpose originate within God Himself, and it is compatible with His attributes.
 - a. Perfection produces perfection. A perfect plan can work with imperfect persons by encapsulating those persons perfectly, while still allowing the opportunity to escape through negative volition and be punished, but by grace to stay inside that encapsulated environment and be blessed by it.
 - b. God must do all the thinking, planning, provision, and work for us. You have nothing to do because the plan is perfect. You can only add imperfection to God's plan. Grace says "forget your works, energy or power; just bring yourself and let Me do the rest." We call this faith-rest.
3. The will of God is objectively designed for His glory, His pleasure, and His satisfaction. It could not be otherwise due to His perfect essence.
 - a. God is glorified in spanking your negative volition. You can't get away from it. You can't get out of God's plan once you've believed in Christ. Even if you die you can't get out of the plan. The evangelist should have told you that you cannot get out of God's plan.
 - b. Grace is our insulation which keeps us in the plan.
4. Since there are three persons in the Trinity, divine will and the actions of God within the Godhead are imminent, intrinsic, and subjective (in a good sense; when used related to man, it has negative connotations; God's subjectivity is perfect as God is perfect).
5. The will of God related to creation is extrinsic (outside of God in that there is human free will), transient (chronological from our viewpoint, but simultaneous from God's viewpoint), and objective (in the sense that the function of divine integrity leads to the ultimate glory of God). We may fail, but God's integrity never fails. Example of Jews being scattered today; does this mean that God will not fulfill His promises to them? Creature volition, which can be outside the will of God.
6. God invented space and time; so that we relate to chronology and location.
7. God's integrity as exercised toward man is objective and for the glory of God.
8. Since God's will is all comprehensive, not the slightest uncertainty could exist as to one of the smallest events without confusion to all. The plan of God has billions of moving parts and they never break down.

- a. Omniscience fed only facts into the computer of divine decrees; every action, decision, thought, and motive into the decrees. God knew everything about history in eternity past; but He only puts into the computer what we would think, decide and do.
 - b. God knew your worst sins before you committed them, yet still he didn't keep you from living. God knew that you would commit these sins; and no matter how horrible, God never lets us down; He still does not cut us off at the pass. We do not exist as probabilities; we exist as actualities. God knew us from eternity past what we are, and yet He still elected us.
 - c. God is not arbitrary with regard to His plan. You don't exist as a probability. God knew what you would be, yet still elected you. That is perfect grace and is perfect God functioning under His perfect plan with imperfect persons.
9. Therefore, all the events of history are interwoven and interdependent, Ephesians 1:11, 2:10-11.
 10. The will of God is eternal. God is not gaining in knowledge. God never learned anything. What God knows at anytime, He has always known. His decisions are based on His eternal omniscience of all the facts.
 11. Since nothing can occur unknown to God, this makes His will unchangeable and certain; this makes His plan victorious and perfect even though imperfect people in His plan fail.
 12. The will of God, as reflected in the divine decrees, will be completed with regard to all of His creatures angelic and human, and to creation in general both animals and inanimate.
 13. Jesus Christ controls history. Knowing this is going to help us keep our sanity under the things which may take place.
 14. God is bound by His integrity, truth, and faithfulness to complete what He has begun. God will end up the winner and have greater glory than He had in the beginning.
 15. The work of God is called providence, by which He molds all events (including sin, good, and evil; all that Satan has done; every idiotic thing our government has ever done) into the fulfillment of His will and purpose. Providence is a technical theological word. Providence was a word used very often during the War Between the States. Providence directs the progress of events (that would be equivalent to Jesus Christ controls history).
 16. While preservation continues the existence of animate and inanimate creatures, providence directs their progress.
 17. Human history is programmed by the dispensations.
 18. The divine objective in human history is revealed in the seven imputations which outline the glorification of God on the part of man.
 19. Therefore, the will of God is directive. God has a plan for our lives (X+Y+Z), and when we progress in that plan, this is the concept of Providence. Providence directs the progress. The seven imputations of the plan of God.

- a. The righteousness of God being imputed to the believer.
 - b. The Holy Spirit creates a human spirit and eternal life is imputed to that human spirit.
 - c. Imputation #6 is all about blessing, which requires capacity in the soul of man. Blessing in time imputed to the righteousness of God.
 - d. The plan of God can only be understood in the light of imputations.
 - e. We are here at God's pleasure; He is not in heaven for our pleasure.
 - f. The good is X+Y+Z
20. The will of God is determinative. God has permitted non-meritorious positive volition to bring us to the place of imputed blessing. Self determination takes us to blessing or to the place of cursing (various stages of discipline).
 21. The will of God is permissive, for negative volition is permitted. The consequences are related to the integrity of God: divine discipline.
 22. The will of God is also preventative, providing the laws of divine establishment, Bible doctrine, the royal family honor code, divine discipline, and preventative suffering to keep human volition and self-determination inside the will of God.
- D. The Omniscience of God. God knows the actual and the probable; but only facts are fed into the computer of divine decrees.
1. God knows perfectly and eternally all that is knowable. This means He knows both actual and possible things. God's perception and sagacity is totally compatible with His essence. Perfect essence means perfect knowledge. Learning with us is progressive, but not with God. God knew everything instantly and simultaneously. We learn from parents, from our own motivation to learn, in school. There are frivolous, imbecilic people who only want to know about interacting with the opposite sex.
 - a. Learning is always progressive. Some have learned more since coming to Bible class than they have learned in their entire lives.
 2. God is eternal, therefore His knowledge is eternal.
 3. God is sovereign, therefore His knowledge is superior. His knowledge is not related to time or space. Because of this, it is important for us to know His superior knowledge by learning Bible doctrine. His knowledge is not related to time or space. We cannot get out of bounds because we are always in time and space.
 4. God is omnipotent, therefore His knowledge is superior to any creature. Its application is greater.
 5. Every minute detail of both angelic and human creation is completely and perfectly in His mind at all times. What we are thinking right now, God knew billions of years ago.
 6. Therefore, the future is as clearly comprehended as the past. Time has nothing to do with God's knowledge.

7. The omniscience of God knows not only the facts of history, including every thought, decision, and action, but He knows the alternatives of every thought, decision and action.
8. God knows all that would have been involved had He adopted any one of an infinite number of plans.
9. God knows all that would have been involved in every case where man's decision might have been different from what it was.
10. There are three categories of divine knowledge.
 - a. Self-knowledge. This includes the fact that the omniscience of God understands the attributes of God perfectly. Not only does each person in the Trinity understand His own attributes, but their co-equality, co-infinity, co-eternity in the other members of the Trinity. Self- knowledge includes understanding divine essence, the Trinity and all things.
 - b. Omniscience is God's understanding all things in creation both actual and possible.
 - c. Foreknowledge is God's knowledge of all the facts concerning believers; it only deals with what is decreed. Foreknowledge comes after the decrees logically. Omniscience feeds the facts into the computer of divine decrees, while foreknowledge is the printout from the decrees.
11. Under omniscience, God knows every decision every creature ever made, plus the alternatives to that decision. He knows every thought and action, plus their alternatives. God knows the results of every decision in history and what would have been the result had the alternative been chosen. The computer-decrees prints out the facts about believers under such categories as election, foreknowledge, predestination, and justification; and the facts about unbelievers under such categories as reprobation, condemnation, and retribution.
12. Therefore, the omniscience of God knows every thought, act, and decision of history, as well as every alternative to every thought, act and decision.
13. Omniscience fed all this information into the giant computer called the divine decrees. The decrees contain only what has happened, and what will happen, and guarantees their certain fruition.
14. Three parts of the divine decrees:
15. Foreknowledge merely acknowledges what is in the decrees. It is divine cognizance of what is in the computer. Foreknowledge deals only with what is decreed.
16. Predestination, sometimes called foreordination and occasionally predetermination, describes what is in the decrees. Foreknowledge is the divine cognizance of these things. Logically, predestination or foreordination occur first, and foreknowledge and election follow.

17. Foreordination establishes the certainty of the content of the decrees. Foreordination is a way of saying the decrees are guaranteed certainly future. Foreknowledge is cognizance of that content.
18. Therefore, foreknowledge is more limited in scope than omniscience.
19. Being omniscient, God knows all that would have been involved had He adopted any infinite number of plans. But foreknowledge refers only to those things which He did adopt.
20. The divine decrees, also called foreordination, predestination or predetermination, alone establish certainty. The content of the computer (foreordination) alone establishes certainty. Therefore nothing was foreknown until it was first decreed. The decrees precede foreknowledge.
21. Foreknowledge is God's cognizance of what will happen, but it does not cause or produce the events. Foreknowledge is God's cognizance of what is in the decrees, but no guarantee of what is in the decrees.
22. Omniscience feeds the facts into the decrees (the computer), but omniscience also knows what is not fed into the decrees. Foreknowledge merely acknowledges what is in the decrees, but does not have anything to do with what was not fed into the decrees. Only historical facts are fed into the computer of divine decrees.

E. The Divine Decrees. Foreordination, predestination

1. The facts in the computer are called by several names, depending on the emphasis in the passage of Scripture. They are called the decree, foreordination, predestination, or predetermination. Recognition of the facts is called election and foreknowledge.
2. Election and foreknowledge refer to what is in the decrees regarding the believer in Y and Z radicals or reversionism. These words only apply to the believer; they never apply to the unbeliever.
3. All the facts in the computer of divine decrees are called "decrees," and cover every thought, action, and decision of every person in the human race. While foreordination or predestination only covers the thoughts, decisions, and actions of believers. The unbeliever is never predestined to anything. He is never under election.
4. The decrees of God are the sum total of God's plan for the human race, anticipated through omniscience of God in eternity past and placed into the decrees.
5. God's purpose, relating to all events of every kind, constitutes one single all comprehensive intention, perceiving all events in omniscience, the free as free, the necessary as necessary, together with all their causes, conditions and relations, as one indivisible system of things, every link of which is essential to the integrity of the whole. The decrees recognizes the thoughts, motivations, and actions of all believers.
6. The decree of God is His eternal, holy, wise, and sovereign purpose, comprehending at once all things that ever were or will be, in their courses, conditions, successions, and relations, and determining their certain futurity. Everything will happen just as God knew it would in eternity past.

7. The decrees of God are His eternal and immutable will regarding the future existence of events which happen in time, and the precise manner and order of their occurrence.
8. By the decrees of God is meant that eternal plan by which God has rendered all things certain, including past events, present events, and future events of both human and angelic history.
9. The omniscience of God has placed in the decrees (the computer of human events) every person of the human race. Though placed in the decrees simultaneously, they all come out chronologically since God invents time and space in which the decrees are located.
10. Therefore the decrees are the perception of eternal omniscience, the eternal purpose of God, the councils of His will and inevitably the promotion of His glory. No matter how many people fail, or how great the evil, it all ends with God winning and with God being glorified. The plan of God depends on God, not on you. That makes doctrine the great issue.
11. Once this information is in the computer (the divine decrees), it is called by many names: foreordination, predestination, predetermination. This determines the certain futurity of both the thoughts, decisions, and actions of human beings.
12. Since the decrees deal only with what will happen, and not with what will not occur, speculation is therefore not necessary.
13. Man with his old sin nature is incapable of pleasing God. Therefore the ministry of the Holy Spirit is designed to sustain mankind in His relationship to God. This is illustrated in efficacious and common grace, the indwelling of the Holy Spirit, and the baptism of the Spirit.
14. No event or occurrence fed into the decrees is directly effected or caused by the decree. Just because it is in the decree doesn't mean that the decree coerces free will for either good or evil. Our free will is not changed by the decrees.
- 15.
16. The omniscience of God distinguishes between the actual and the possible. Only what is actual is fed into the decrees, thus determining the certain futurity of that actuality. Foreknowledge merely knows what is in the decrees.
17. Events in the decrees are effected by causes acting in a manner consistent with reality, Romans 9:11-13. Cause and effect in thoughts, decisions, and actions do not in any way disturb the function of free agency. You still have a free will, but God knows how that freewill will operate. God knows what we will think, what we will decide and what we will do. (The numbering went off at this point).

18. The antecedents of any act in the decrees are a part of the actuality. The antecedents can be a thought, like what you actually decided. Cause and event are the thoughts, decisions, and actions of free agents.
19. God may desire the highest and best for every creature, but the creature can reject the highest and best. Consequently, only what happens is fed into the decrees. God's highest and best may not be what we experience.
20. The decrees of God are efficacious in that they determine all that ever was, is, or will be.
21. Efficacious is related to what is directly wrought by God, in contrast to the permissive will of God, in which the free action and will of His creatures produce secondary causes from the justice of God, i.e., divine discipline, judgment, condemnation, the collective destruction of a client nation, and any of the cycles of discipline.
22. The execution of any thought, decision or action on the part of a creature is not the decree. The omniscience of God anticipates the thought, action, or decision, and that is the decree. The decrees existed in eternity past; the execution exists in time. The decree is used to portray what God thought simultaneously. There never was a time when God did not think these things. You can never fool or surprise God by anything you do.

F. The Foreknowledge of God. This is the printout. This makes nothing certain; but acknowledges what is real.

1. No decree arises from the foreknowledge of God. Foreknowledge makes nothing certain, but merely acknowledges what is certain; it knows what is decreed. Logically foreknowledge follows the decrees, but in reality it was simultaneous with the decrees in eternity past. The omniscience of God knew all that would happen instantly or simultaneously. Foreknowledge merely perceives what God has put into the computer.
 - a. All the actuals of history were decreed simultaneously.
 - b. The probabilities are just as known to God as the actualities, but He didn't stick them into the decrees. If you put non-facts into the computer decrees, then you get a print out of no facts. God deals only in what actually happens: truth.
 - c. The alternatives always outnumber the actualities. This are just as known to God as the actualities. But they were not fed into the computer.
 - d. Obviously, God did it; asking why is not going to do anything for us. That God did it is good enough for Bob.
 - e. God is perfectly happy without creatures, including you. Speculation is a distraction to Bible doctrine. The decrees bring you back into reality. God says, "Forget about what you didn't do, let's take a look at what you did do." Whatever you have done, get back with doctrine and keep moving.

f. If you are worried, then you are speculating as to the alternatives. People waste their time with worry, foreboding or guilt reaction. Guilt reaction is blaspheming.

2. Being omniscient, God knows all that would have been involved had He adopted any one of an infinite number of plans of action.
3. Foreknowledge is knowledge of what occurs in history. But omniscience includes knowledge of what did not occur: the alternative thoughts, actions, and decisions.
4. The omniscience of God fed reality into the computer, while the foreknowledge of God knew all of the print outs, all of the events as certainly future. He knew them because He had already decreed them.
5. Foreknowledge is not knowledge of future events, but cognizance of what is in the decrees.
6. God's foreknowledge does not produce or cause events, but recognizes events which are fed into the decrees.
7. Foreknowledge is a printout.
8. Foreknowledge is not foresight. God does not learn or obtain knowledge.
9. God foreknows all events as certainly future, because in eternity past He decree them and made them certainly future. And the origin was sovereignty plus omniscience. Logically, foreknowledge comes after the decrees.
10. God's decrees relate equally to all future events of every kind. To the free actions of moral agents as well as to the actions of necessary agents; to sinful, the human good and evil, as well as morally correct, gracious, and honorable actions. The worst and the best.
11. Since the divine decrees alone establish certainty, nothing can be foreknown until it is first decreed.
12. Omniscience only decreed what would happen. Therefore, omniscience only fed reality into the computer. Your life is designed by provision to deal with reality. You are designed to cope with every reality of life. Doctrine is designed to deal with reality.
13. Foreknowledge is related only to what God decreed. Foreknowledge only deals with reality and actuality, never the alternatives. Foreknowledge only deals with cognizance of reality. It takes two Biblical terms to differentiate between God's knowledge of actuality and probability, and God's acknowledgment of reality.
14. While omniscience precedes the decrees, foreknowledge logically follows the decrees.
15. Foreknowledge cannot be placed before the decrees. This would blasphemously imply that God was not aware of what would take place and is not the original cause of anything. Foreknowledge makes nothing certain, the decrees are certainty. Foreknowledge acknowledges the reality in the divine decrees.

G. The Will of God (as related to the plan of God).

1. The will of God must be consistent with His perfect attributes. God's will must be consistent with God's essence. There can't be inconsistency in perfect God. All inconsistency comes from the fact we have an old sin nature and a free will. A perfect God produces a perfect plan for imperfect people.
2. God cannot compromise His essence or any part of His essence. He is immutable.
3. God is one in essence but three in personality.
4. Both essence and personality connote self-consciousness and self-determination.
5. Therefore, God did not decree Himself to be, but God from His omniscience decreed all that would ever happen in human history.
6. Therefore, the will of God is manifest in the decrees.
7. The decree of God is His eternal, holy wise and sovereign purpose, comprehending at once all things that ever were or will be in their causes, conditions, successes and relations, and determining their certain futurity. We are imperfect, but the plan we are in is perfect.
8. The several contents of this one eternal decree and purpose are, because of the limitations of our mentality, necessarily perceived by us in partial aspects in both logical and revealed revelation from God. (Partial aspects means categories.)
9. The decrees of God are His eternal and immutable will regarding the future existence of events which would happen in time, plus the precise manner and order of their occurrence.
10. Therefore, the decrees express the eternal plan and will of God by which God has rendered certain all events of history past, present and future. Jesus Christ controls history. Every detail that happens to you is a part of the decrees. God provides for you doctrine as the means of coping with reality in life or enjoying reality in life. If doctrine is a reality, then there is no reality that you cannot deal with.
11. The will of God is the sovereign choice of divine will and mentality (called omniscience) inherent in the essence of God, by which all things are brought into being and controlled, made subject to His pleasure and glorification.
12. There is one all-inclusive will and purpose of God concerning all that ever was or ever will be.
13. This will and purpose originates within God Himself. Therefore, the will and plan of God are objective. Being objective, they are objectively designed for His glory, His pleasure, and His satisfaction. Our blessing comes from His pleasure, glory, and satisfaction. This is illustrated in marriage, where the man receives great pleasure and satisfaction from pleasing His wife.
14. All creatures have been placed into space and time. All events related to space and time were simultaneously decreed.
15. These simultaneous decrees of God result in divine action both within the Godhead and related to creation. Divine action within the Godhead we call subjectivity; it is intrinsic action. But when related to creation we call it objectivity and extrinsic.

16. Distinction should be made between the decree of God in eternity past and the action of God in time. The action of God in time is the execution of the decree of God in eternity past. The execution is not the decree, but logically follows the decree. We know it simply as history.

H. The Characteristics of the Will of God.

1. God's will or the divine decrees are all comprehensive. God understood simultaneously in eternity past every thought, decision and action of every human being.
2. Technically, what is in the divine decrees is the will of God.
3. Not the slightest uncertainty could exist as to one of the smallest events without confusion to all. There was never a thought or decision that God did not know.
4. Therefore all of the events of history are interwoven and interdependent.
5. The will of God is eternal; God is not gaining in knowledge. God knew everything long before it happened. Time and space is our playing field; and long before these things existed, God's will existed.
6. We break this down categorically. There is free will in angels and in people. We will never have a decision or a thought or a personal problem that God did not know about in eternity past. Every problem has a perfect solution.
7. Since nothing can occur unknown to God, His will is unchangeable and certain. Everything was known to God in eternity past. This is a comfort that God knows all of these things, as there is approaching disaster every day in the United States.
8. Since God is perfect, His will is perfect.
9. The free will of God or divine sovereignty is reflected in the decrees of God. The decrees will succeed no matter how many failures exist in us. The decrees of God will be completed no matter what we creatures do.
10. God is bound by His integrity, truth, and immutability (infinite faithfulness) to complete what He has begun. Nothing will hinder this. God's plan depends on God. We can go along for the ride or be crushed by the plan. We can choose the righteousness of God or our own self-righteousness. The second choice means that we try to reinvent the wheel.
11. This is accomplished through the divine policy of grace. Grace is the justice of God blessing mankind totally apart from any ability of man.
12. The divine outline of human history is called dispensations, the programming of the ages. So the plan of God for each one of us must be related to an understanding of what constitutes the Church Age; e.g., the baptism of the Spirit, sealing of Holy Spirit, filling of Holy Spirit, spiritual gifts, and royal family of God.
13. The divine objective is both preservation and deliverance of believers, as well as the glorification of God through the imputation of blessing to believers.

14. The work of God in this respect is called providence, by which He molds all events into the fulfillment of His purpose and eternal pleasure.

15. Therefore, preservation continues the existence of things, but providence directs their progress by way of characteristics of the will of God. The will of God is:

- a. Directive. God has a plan for our lives ($X+Y+Z = \text{plan of God}$). Man has the free will to be in or out of the plan of God. God has meaning and purpose for our lives. We can only miss the boat by our own volition.
- b. Determinative. God has permitted non-meritorious volition to bring us to the place of blessing or cursing. God never tries to tamper with free will.
- c. Permissive. Negative volition to Bible doctrine is permitted by divine justice, which provides discipline as an alternative in time only.
- d. Preventative. It provides doctrine, establishment laws, the royal family honor code, and divine discipline to influence human volition to remain inside the will of God. Coercion is not legitimate, influence is. Satan influences in one direction, God in the other.

16. The will of God is classified under three categories.

- a. What He directly does, e.g., Jesus Christ controls history.
- b. What He permits, e.g., sin.
- c. The overruling will of God. Because of the pivot of mature believers, God will save a nation or prosper an organization, team, business, geographical region.

I. The Extent of the Divine Decrees.

1. God has decreed ends as well as means, causes as well as effects, conditions and instrumentalities as well as events that depend upon them. We classify these as history, God knew them in eternity past. So we cannot blame God for anything. He has given us chance after chance.
2. Some things God has decreed to do Himself immediately, e.g., creation. Other things God accomplished through the action of secondary causes acting under the law of necessity. The laws of divine establishment themselves actually set up many of the ways in which things occur; e.g., the rise in crime when there is no capital punishment.
3. Other things God has decreed to permit free agents to do in the exercise of their free will; e.g., salvation, sin, and spiritual growth.

J. The Divine Decrees and the Glory of God. Remember that each member of the Trinity has the same amount, to the same degree, of the same characteristics, but they exist in three separate persons. They have the same glory. The Father as the author of the divine plan is the One who feeds the facts into the computer-decrees. In eternity past all members of the Trinity had co-equal glory. By the creation of the angels and man, God's purpose was to do something to glorify God and to demonstrate that whatever He does while He was still alone will glorify Him in the end.

1. The decrees unite in one all inclusive and final objective: the glory of God. This is the purpose for the creation of all creatures in time and space. Prov 16:4; Romans 11:36; Hebrews 2:10; Revelation 4:11.
2. Being alone before all creation, the decrees of God concern no one but the members of the Trinity. Therefore, the glory of God and pleasure of God.
3. Being eternal and infinite, the three members of the Trinity are worthy of glory. God's glory is what He is in His essence, His person, and His attributes.
4. As the subject of the divine decrees, it is logical and inevitable that God will be glorified in what He is and what He has decreed.
5. Inasmuch as the manifestation of His glory secures the highest glory for His creatures and their greatest good, it is inevitable that attainment of spiritual maturity and resultant imputation of blessing brings glory to God, and not what we do in production. It is what we think that counts, not our actions.
6. God is pleased and glorified in both advance and continued momentum in the plan of God.
7. The divine decrees are executed through the imputations from the justice of God. This is the basis for the entire plan of God.
8. There are seven imputations which glorify God both in time and in eternity, and they become the tactical victory of the angelic conflict.
 - a. Human life imputation to the soul.
 - b. Adam's original sin amputated to the person at birth.
 - c. The first judicial imputation is our sins poured out on Jesus.
 - d. Justice of God imputes the righteousness of God to the believer at salvation. Also a judicial imputation.
 - e. Eternal life is imputed to God's righteousness.
 - f. God's blessing is imputed to God's righteousness.
 - g. This is how the plan of God is structuralized.
 - h. X+Y+Z is reviewed.
9. Each advance in the plan of God provides divine blessing which glorifies God.
10. Blessing from God and glorification of God are always a potential based on positive volition to Christ at salvation and positive volition to doctrine after salvation.
11. Only what really happens goes into the decrees.
12. Omniscience knew the actual which was put into the decrees, but the potential was not fed into the decrees.
13. God had the good sense to know in eternity past what thoughts, motives, decisions, and actions would carry one believer to maturity and another believer to reversionism.
14. Omniscience handles all the people who didn't live long enough to reach either. Omniscience knows both the factual and potential. On the other hand foreknowledge knows only the factual. God knows the various options that we do not choose.

15. Foreknowledge knows only that which is in the decrees. Reality is fed into the computer. Foreknowledge acknowledges only what is in the decrees. It is the complete printout of what would actually take place. Omniscience knows what is real and what is potential.
 16. The plan of God is consistent with human freedom and volition. God does not coerce or limit human freedom or self-determination. God invented both freedom and volition.
 17. However, distinction should be made between what God causes directly (such as the cross), and what He permits indirectly (such as sin, human good, and evil). Man's free will is the source of sin, human good and evil.
 18. God created man with a free will. Therefore, He permits human volition to function in self-determination. This is the origin of sin and this is why Adam sinned.
 19. God is not the author of sin. Man's free will and self-determination is the cause of sin.
 20. Both sin and the cross are fed into the computer-decrees by the omniscience of God. Both are facts, but have two different sources. All facts are fed into the computer regardless of what the cause may be. And if the cause is a fact, it too is fed into the decrees. God warned Adam about sin and its consequences, but He did not coerce man's free will to avoid sin, nor does God condone or sponsor man's sinfulness. When the woman went to the tree, God did not stand in front of her and say, "Stop." God permits the function of free will as part of the resolving of the angelic conflict.
- K. The Principle of Election (in Romans, this was covered by using Israel as an example; rather than the points below).
1. Election simply deals with the plan of God. The omniscience of God feeds facts only into the computer. All who believe in Jesus Christ are in God's plan. Election is the printout of the decrees with regard to believers, in contrast to condemnation which is the print out with regard to unbelievers in history.
 2. Election is the entire print out on believers. No unbeliever is ever said to be elect.
 3. The election of Christ, the Church, and Israel are the three major elections in history, Matthew 24:1-25:46; Romans 11:7; Ephesians 1:3-6; 1Thessalonians 1:4; 2Thessalonians 2:13; Titus 1:1.
 4. The categories of election include individuals; groups of believers, such as Israel; Christ; the millennial saints; and the Gentiles.
 5. Election is that part of the decrees dealing with the thoughts, decisions, and actions of believers who are related to the plan of God. Election is a printout from the computer.
 6. All election is related to Jesus Christ, Isaiah 42:1, "My elected One," cf 1Peter 2:4-6.

7. Two general elections, Israel and the church. Passages above.
8. Sometime references are to those who are collectively elected; and some references are to Christ as elected; and some references are to individuals who are elected.

L. The Principle of Predestination.

1. You cannot superimpose human thinking on predestination. Hegel's system of synthesis just doesn't work with regard to doctrine. Idiots say that God predestined the unbeliever to hell, i.e., fatalism. If the thesis is stated in Scripture, but the antithesis is not, then the antithesis does not exist, and vice versa. Therefore synthesis is a false system of interpretation in the Hegelian system.
2. Predestination has three different names: predetermination, predestination, and foreordination. They are really synonymous terms with slight shading of meaning.
 - a. Foreordination is God's preconceived and pre-designed plan for believers. Only believers are predestined. Unbelievers are condemned, judged to the lake of fire to remain in their status of reprobation, which is total depravity. The unbeliever is not predestined to hell, but goes of his own choice by negative volition at God-consciousness and Gospel hearing.
 - b. Predestination is that part of the decrees which relates the believers in Christ permanently to the plan of God. Predestination deals with how far you'll go in the plan of God. God knew all the mature believers in eternity past and prepared special things for them.
 - c. Foreordination is synonymous with the decrees, except that it includes and emphasizes logistical grace.
3. No unbeliever is ever predestined, elected, or foreordained. Christ is predetermined, foreordained, and elected. We share the destiny of Christ because we are in union with Christ. Therefore, we are also predestined, elected, and foreordained. The Father predetermined the grace concept of propitiation, as per Romans 3:25, so that election, predestination, and foreordination would always be a printout in this connection.
 - a. The thesis that believers are predestined to eternal life; but the antithesis is not true; that is, unbelievers are not predestined to hell.
 - b. Unbelievers choose to reject Jesus Christ. Or the reject God at God consciousness.
 - c. Aminhotep is the record holder when it came to negative volition. God made it possible for him to continue saying no.
 - d. God fed in the whole concept of logistical support like the wall of fire.

M. The Integrity of God. (Barely covered in Romans; Bob will return to this)

1. Introduction.
 - a. Integrity is the combination of God's perfect righteousness and His perfect justice. In the Bible it is called His "holiness."

- b. Mankind's point of reference is the justice of God. Therefore, since this is our point of reference with God, and since we have received one half of divine integrity, we must understand how perfect righteousness and justice are related to each other in the Godhead and how they function once man has perfect righteousness.
- c. The study of the integrity of God tells us how God can bless imperfect persons as a part of His perfect plan.
- d. Romans is a study of God's righteousness; the imputation of righteousness to the believer.

2. The Love of God.

- a. God's love is complete and total, eternally existing as a part of the being of God. God is love regardless of having any object to love. In eternity past God's love was complete and total; He didn't need us. In eternity future His love will be complete and total with or without us.
- b. This means that God does not fall in love. God doesn't maintain love, nor is His love sustained by emotion. We have to fall in love, and have capacity for love. To have capacity for love we must develop norms and standards in the soul. Most Christians assume that God fell in love with them at salvation, which is a lie and blasphemy. God loves you, but He never fell in love with you; He loved you eternity before you existed. God's love has always existed in the same intensity, and cannot be changed.
- c. Two absolute objects of God's love include:
 - (1) His love for His own perfect righteousness. This is internal, perfect, subjective love. God loves His own perfect righteousness wherever it is found, even in you.
 - (2) His love for the other members of the Trinity. This is external, perfect, and objective love.
- d. In righteousness, divine love for integrity is revealed. In justice, divine hatred for sin, good and evil is revealed.
- e. Therefore all unbelievers are excluded from the divine attribute of love because of their old sin nature, imputed sin, and personal sin. Perfect God cannot love imperfect man.
- f. God can only love His own perfect righteousness. God's love stops at His perfect righteousness. Without God's perfect righteousness we don't have a thing God loves. Perfect righteousness cuts off divine love for imperfection.
- g. While God is truly love, 1John 4:8, the attribute of divine love is not understood by most Christians. The divine attribute is perfect, and totally devoid of emotion, Jeremiah 3:13; Romans 8:39.
- h. The love of God does not need an object in contrast to human love, which cannot exist without an object.
- i. God possesses His love whether there is an object or not. Human love is generated by an object.

N.

The Anthropopathism of Love. We can only understand certain characteristics of God by using human characteristics.

1. An anthropopathism is a human characteristic ascribed to God which He doesn't actually possess, but is used to explain divine policy in terms of human motivation and human frame of reference. God is inscrutable, therefore the need for anthropopathisms.
2. The classical illustration of an anthropopathism is Romans 9:13, "I love that Jacob, but I hate that Esau." Mistranslated everywhere.
3. God neither loves nor hates in human terms, but in order to explain salvation adjustment to the justice of God versus rejection of Christ, two antithetical human characteristics are used. Love and hate are used.
4. John 3:16 Romans 5:8 are examples of the anthropopathism of love. God loves perfection. He does not love anything that is cheerful.
5. While love as an anthropopathism explains divine motivation in terms of human frame of reference, love is not the direct source of blessing from God. Integrity is the source with emphasis on His justice.
6. In righteousness, the divine love for holiness is revealed, and in justice, divine hatred for sin is revealed. What perfect righteousness demands, justice executes.
7. Perfect righteousness rejects man's sinfulness, and justice condemns man's sinfulness.
8. At the cross, the sins of mankind were imputed to the Son, whom the Father and the Spirit loved with an infinite and eternal love. But the integrity of God superceded the love of God in judging our sins on the cross. Justice superceded divine love for the Son. Integrity supercedes every divine characteristic when God is dealing with mankind. The justice of God is our point of reference, just as it was for the humanity of Christ on the cross. He Who knew no sin was made sin for us.
9. God's love exists in alpha time and in omega time.

O. The Point of Reference for Mankind: Justice of God.

1. At the Fall, justice became man's point of reference with God.
 - a. God judged Adam by spiritual death. Adam and the woman had created their very own old sin nature's. The man and the woman were judged by their spiritual death. Each created his and her own old sin nature. After the fall, there were vast distinctions between the man and the woman's sin nature. The woman, as smart as she was, was completely and totally taken in. There never was a woman who could not be deceived. A woman is constructed to rely upon a man; to depend upon a man. The woman is the dependent one. She is geared that way. Man was designed for the active role in life not the passive role. The original woman was not a woman. She would not be deceived by Adam; but she was deceived by that magnificent beautiful pet. The woman did not know what she was doing. Satan in the serpent deceived her. Man knew exactly what he was doing; so the sin nature is passed down through the man. The world is made up of old sin natures; and the justice of God has judged Adam's sin; and that sin is imputed. Good and evil were not judged and they will not be judged until the end of time. There is nothing in man and nothing in the world that God actually loves. If man loved us, that would violate God's character.

- b. God doesn't love the world personally. The world is ruled by Satan, and made up of mostly unbelievers with old sin natures and personal sins. If God loved the world personally, God would not be God.
 - c. God cannot do something in conflict with His perfect integrity, so He can only love those with His imputed perfect righteousness. Mankind's point of reference, therefore, is not the love of God, but the justice of God.
2. The integrity of God is composed of God's perfect righteousness and Justice.
 3. God's fixed policy is that perfect righteousness demands perfect righteousness and justice demands justice. There is no place for love here.
 4. Therefore the policy is that what perfect righteousness demands, justice executes.
 5. In relationship to mankind the divine attribute of love is subordinated to the integrity of God.
 6. Therefore, since God loves His perfect righteousness and every believer receives the imputation of that perfect righteousness at salvation, it follows that our first contact with the love of God is at salvation.
 7. However, even then our point of reference is not divine love. At salvation there is no change in the point of reference. There is only change in the function of the justice of God. For the first time, there is the potentiality of blessing.
 8. The precedent is established by the fact divine perfect righteousness rejects sinful mankind and divine justice pronounces the penalty of judgment and condemns.
 9. Mankind begins by dealing with the justice of God and continues in that precedent even with the imputation of the greatest blessings of time and eternity.
 10. Because the integrity of God supercedes the love of God in the judgment of the cross, the justice of God can only bless mankind where divine perfect righteousness exists.
 11. In fact, divine justice can only impute blessing to perfect righteousness. In this way there is no compromise of divine attributes.
 12. The imputation of perfect righteousness at salvation becomes the only basis of blessing in time or eternity.
 13. Consequently, self-righteousness is excluded from any phase of blessing or favor from God. Perfect righteousness and self-righteousness are mutually exclusive. Perfect righteousness is no good to you if you are self-righteous in any way.

14. Self-righteousness brings cursing from the justice of God, while imputed perfect righteousness is the potential for blessing from the justice of God. They push aside the righteousness of God.

15. The Jews often distorted the Mosaic Law into a system of self-righteousness, which excludes any blessing from the justice of God.

P. Human failure and the Faithfulness of God.

1. The failure of certain ones in the human race does not abrogate the integrity of God. Human failure cannot cancel out the integrity of God.
2. God's integrity is not cancelled because some humans reject Jesus Christ as Savior.
3. God's integrity is not cancelled because believers fail to utilize logistical grace and advance to maturity.
4. Mankind's lack of integrity does not neutralize divine integrity.
5. Since the justice of God is the source of both cursing and blessing, adjustment to the justice of God means blessing, while maladjustment means cursing from that same justice of God. Justice is flexible, but its flexibility is handled through God's perfect righteousness. Justice sends blessing to perfect righteousness and cursing to self-righteousness.
6. Therefore, the justice of God is the source of both blessing and cursing, but never neutral, doing nothing.
7. Whether providing justification or condemnation, blessing or cursing, the integrity of God is maintained by the very function of the justice of God.
8. Since God is infinite, eternal, invisible, incomprehensible, it is necessary for God to reveal Himself to mankind through the content of the Scripture. Doctrine reveals God in terms of human functions, or anthropopathisms. Even though anthropopathisms are used, they don't attack the integrity of God but vindicate the integrity of God. Through perception of doctrine we begin to understand how both the integrity of God and the policy of God work. Therefore we adjust to the justice of God by understanding these things.

Q. The Integrity of God.

1. The integrity of God is infinite, absolute, eternal, and perfect. An integral part of His perfect essence.
2. The integrity of God is not the mere absence of evil or sin. It is the sum total of His perfection and incorruptibility.
3. The integrity of God is not maintained by His will or His sovereignty. It is maintained by His immutable self.
4. The integrity of God therefore is not maintained by human ability, talent or self-righteousness.
5. It is blasphemous to assume that man's self-righteousness can promote divine integrity or the divine plan.

6. Divine perfect righteousness totally rejects human self-righteousness. But God in grace provides all that His integrity demands of the human race. So you'll always have an option between grace and legalism.

7. Consequently, there is nothing man can do to destroy or compromise the integrity of God.

8. The essence of God stands eternally without any help from angels or mankind. God doesn't need our help we need His help. God doesn't need our self-righteousness, we need His perfect righteousness.

R. Divine integrity advances the glory of God.

1. When the justice of God imputes blessing to the perfect righteousness of God, God is glorified by this tactical victory. God is never glorified by what we do. God through doctrine tells us what He has done and what He will do. We cannot be blessed on the basis of anything we do. You are blessed because of who and what God is in eternity past.

2. Imputed perfect righteousness at salvation is the basis for imputed blessing at maturity. God found the way to bless without compromise.

3. God did not do this from human sentimentality or from emotional response to man's pleasing personality.

4. While man often concludes that his self-righteousness pleases God, this assumption is entirely erroneous, since "our righteousnesses are as filthy rags in His sight." e. Neither man's sinfulness or self-righteousness advances the glory of God. Only divine integrity can advance the glory of God.

5. Only God can glorify God. Only God can please God. Only what God provides to us in grace brings us into the picture. It is a true principle that man can glorify God, but you can never glorify God until you understand that only God glorifies God.

6. Therefore, if you are going to glorify God, you have to use what God has provided for you to do so. He has provided it in a non-meritorious way which we call grace.

7. Any maladjustment to the justice of God means no blessing from the justice of God. Therefore no glorification of God. God is glorified when He can bless you.

8. What is true of the individual is also true of a nation or group of individuals.

9. No nation can possess freedom, blessing and prosperity apart from the integrity of God. That means social, economic, and political reform apart from the integrity of God is useless. (This means that great politicians are those who do nothing.)

a. Reform apart from the integrity of God only multiplies the problem, intensifies the evil, including revolution, national degeneracy, and historical catastrophe.

b. Political and theological liberalism seeks social, economic and political reform apart from the integrity of God. This results in the production of evil rather than the solution to a problem in the devil's world.

S.

God's plan begins with salvation.

1. Salvation adjustment to the justice of God results in the imputation of perfect righteousness, called justification.
2. Justification means God is justified to bless us. Man is justified because man has something that belongs to God.
3. Justification means God is justified in saving man and in blessing him after salvation. So justification is the potential for great blessing from God both in time and eternity.
4. When God begins a plan or dispensation he begins with believers. For Israel to be "children of the promise," they had to be born again.
5. The pivot was delivered under Isaiah. Paul calls them sperma instead of another word. In every generation, there will be a spiritual seed of Abraham. This protects the racial Jews.

T.

The Computer-Decrees and Condemnation.

1. Election, foreknowledge, and predestination is information fed into the computer-decrees which deals with the believer only.
2. The omniscience of God also fed into the computer information regarding the unbeliever. This information can be categorized by the word condemnation.
 - a. A large pivot of Jewish believers means prosperity.
 - b. When there is mass historical disaster, there are numerous decisions which beg for it. It is always a matter of self-determination. There are no accidents in history. God controls history.
 - c. Most tragedies can be attributed to the people to whom the tragedies occur.
 - d. Sometimes, there are no deep roots for integrity; and it does not take much for the old sin nature to surface.
3. The justice of God condemns the unbeliever both in time and in eternity. Judgment can be personal or in mass.
4. Therefore the unbeliever is excluded from the plan of God for believers known as election, foreknowledge, and predestination.
5. This means that racial Jews who reject Christ as Savior are not under election, foreknowledge and predestination, but under the principle of condemnation. Under condemnation, they are not the people of God.
6. While information regarding condemnation exists in the computer, it is not classified with election, foreknowledge, and predestination. It is filed under the category of condemnation, Romans 9:8.
7. Therefore, the racial Jew without salvation, are under condemnation.

U.

The Ultimate Issue to the Believer.

1. No believer is ever commanded to reinvent the wheel. The wheel is God's plan from eternity past. God's plan keeps on rolling no matter what. The wheel must turn on the axle of divine imputed perfect righteousness. Without perfect righteousness imputed, we are still in a hopeless situation. When you choose self-righteousness, you try to reinvent the wheel. God invented the wheel and the axle. Our decision is, do we use God's system or our own system. The Jews reinvented the wheel by choose the Law as their means of salvation.

2. Every believer must choose his axle.
 3. The wheel of the Christian life must turn on the axle of your choice.
 4. You must decide which axle you will use. Choosing to reinvent the wheel means you depend upon your own righteousness and not on God's righteousness. God's perfect righteousness or your self-righteousness.
 5. Under self-righteousness you dictate to God your plan of action, what you will do for blessing. You must decide for or against doctrine. If you are negative to doctrine, you must select some form of self- righteousness on which to build your life.
 6. Through self-righteousness you will arrogantly dictate to God what His plan should be. You will be inflexible regarding the non-essentials and flexible regarding the essentials.
 7. The perfect plan of God excludes the ability of man, personality of man, morality of man, ideas of man, and schemes of man.
 8. There is nothing that we can do in order to receive blessing from God. No schemes, no ideas, no works, etc.
- V. All gentiles originate in [X] and the Jewish race originates in [Z]. Isaac had the same spiritual maturity; he had the same God. The same thing happens again with Jacob. Jacob moved through the plan of God to maturity adjustment to the justice of God. To be a true Jew, you must be the spiritual descendant of Abraham. Paul is living at the tail-end of the Jewish people, where they had the Shekinah Glory which lived between the cherubs and the Holy of Holies. The Shekinah Glory became visible to us, the hypostatic union, the God man.

When Rhodesia falls, we may fall with them (if only for the chrome). It may be the beginning of the end for us. Nations beg to be destroyed long before it happens.

You cannot maintain your sanity in historical disaster without Bible doctrine. What is happening in this country no longer in line with Americanism. The bureaucracy of our country is begging to destroy us. Put the bureaucracy out of business tomorrow and balance the budget the next day.

This is not just the liberals. There is evil in the Republican thinking. Conservatives in power have not done any better than the liberals. People are basically selfish. Conservatives Have Old Sin Natures is the name of Bob's new book. We are really confused in this country about history in general. Many of you are natural crusaders, just as Bob is.

551 10/19/1978 Romans 16 Doctrine of the theology of God's perfect plan (3–5j): will of God, providence, omniscience, and decrees of God

Interview with Wm Simon, previous secretary of the treasury. He said, “The economy of this country doesn’t have a prayer.” Are we headed for a crash? He answers yes and talks about this coming to a head. What would be the result of an economic breakdown? We would turn into an economic dictatorship. Big Business is not the reason for our problems. The sadly ignorant public think that the bureaucrats know what they are doing? Then this economy will be like the socialist British economy, stone dead. He blames everyone, people running to the government to be bailed out, including big businesses. All of this has fueled our economic instability. If the money distributed between 1965-1975 on social programs had been paid directly...

We are working until May 11th in order to pay our taxes. What do you think about prop 13? It is a start. More than 60% of Americans get some kind of check from the government. He suggested a flat tax to President Ford.

Congress keeps appropriating more money than we ask for; and Congress insists that we spend it. It is impossible to get rid of dead weight. Once an agency is set up to regulate, it grows by leaps and bounds.

Allowing free enterprise to function, this would solve our problems.

Corrected translation back to v. 25.

We cannot let God down.

Lesson #552

552 10/20/1978 Romans 16 Doctrine of the theology of God's perfect plan (5k–7p): divine decrees, foreknowledge, will of God and decrees

All the notes for this doctrine—The Theology of God’s Perfect Plan—will be placed with Lesson #550.

One of the greatest applications is, fundamentalism has lost time to think in terms of divine revelation. The average Christian is trying to reinvent the wheel and he is looking for the wrong axle upon which to mount his wheel.

The right axle is the righteousness of God; and wrong axle is self righteousness. We choose to build the plan of God on top of the right or wrong axle.

The fact of so many things going wrong in this country is evidence of the negative volition in this country.

So many preachers said the Romans 9 could not be understood in time. Those who are here will have a complete and total understanding. There is no such thing as learning trivia.

If you thought the way forward was self-righteousness, you have a square axle. The wheels will never turn for you. The plan of God was designed to run on God's righteousness.

Lesson #553

553 10/22/1978 Romans 16 Doctrine of the theology of the perfect plan of God (8–14): will, decrees, and glory of God; election and predestination

All the notes for this doctrine—The Theology of God's Perfect Plan—will be placed with Lesson #550.

This doctrine is a fitting end for Romans 16 and a fitting beginning for Romans 9.

The communists have tried to control our industry by controlling oil; and lately, they are trying to control chrome, which is found in Rhodesia and in Russia.

We are responsible for more deaths in the United States by putting a third of the world under communism at the end of WWII. The claim that we love black, brown and other colors of men; but those placed under communism are destroyed.

Bob gives the illustration of Texas v. Alabama (?) game. We experience this in time; but God knew everything that would occur in eternity past.

Crime is evil; and criminals have no rights of any kind.

Our government has taken from the rich to pay the scum who do not work. Some divine punishment is in order. We teach anti-establishment in our schools. Parents are being blamed for the school system.

We are begging for our own destruction. Many will say, “Why isn’t God in the heavens helping America?” We make our own disasters and then we ask God to straighten them out. If anything, God has preserved us, giving us chance after chance to develop a pivot.

When we were born again, we did not have a mother. The agent of regeneration was God the Holy Spirit.

True Israel is not simply the physical descendants of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob; they must be born again. The printout is going to be found in Romans 9–11.

Lesson #554

554 10/22/1978 Romans 16:26b–27 Obedience to authority, self-indulgence; principle of the client nation: Hood's Texas Brigade; "AMEN"

“made known to all nations for the obedience of faith” – the aorist passive participle of the verb gnōrizō (γνωρίζω) [pronounced gnoh-RID-zoh], “having made known.” Whatever we need for life God has revealed it to us. Only our lack of positive volition toward divine viewpoint (Bible doctrine, the Word of God) is going to keep us from having all of the wonderful things that life has provided. The culminative aorist tense views the completion of the canon of the New Testament in its entirety, but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. Once the canon of Scripture is completed the results are perpetuated into every generation. For believers who are interested in doctrine the canon of Scripture is available, it is just a matter of having the volition and the right priorities with regard to them. The passive voice: the New Testament Scriptures receive the action of the verb. The participle is circumstantial for the formation of the New Testament canon. This is followed by a prepositional phrase, eis (εἰς) [pronounced ICE] plus the accusative plural of the adjective páς (πάς) [pronounced pahs] and the accusative plural of the noun ethnos (ἔθνος, οὐς, τό) [pronounced EHTH-noss]—“to all the Gentiles.”

Two things alert us in that phrase. The first is, they are known; they are revealed. The second is that we live in a different dispensation now and the emphasis is on the Gentiles. Then the reason is given. The preposition heís, mia, hen (εἷς, μία, ἓν) [pronounced hice, Mee-ah, ehn] plus the accusative singular from hupakoê (ὑπακοή) [pronounced hoop-ak-oh-AY], which means “obedience.” God has set up a system of authorities. The very meaning of life has disappeared. Words like obedience have no meaning to the public in general. This makes a population unstable. They could not fight a war and WWII. They simply live for self-indulgence.

Next is the ablative singular of source from pistis (πίστις) [pronounced *PIHS-tih*s]. The word has three different meanings. One of them is faith, another is confidence, but the third one is doctrine, i.e. that in which we have confidence. The correct translation here should be, “from doctrine.”

The principle is obvious. Doctrine resident in the soul is not only the means of executing the plan of God but it is the very vigour and reality and capacity for life on this earth.

Romans 16:26 But now [Church Age] is revealed, through the prophetic scriptures, by the decree of the eternal God, having been made known to all the Gentiles for the purpose of obedience [to the plan of God] from doctrine.

Bible doctrine is the key to the execution of the plan of God. A number of passages quoted on the importance of Bible doctrine.

It is obvious the historical disaster is just around the corner for the United States. Hebrews 10:36

Bob speaks of Hood’s brigade. Texas made a great name for themselves. They were a credit to their army and their state. Not for fame or reward, not for place or rank, but in simple obedience to duty as they understood it. They suffered all, endured all, and died.

Romans 16:27 ...to the only wise God be the glory to the ages of the ages, which is through Jesus Christ. Amen. (BLB)

We will be another half year in Romans after this final verse of chapter 16.

Verse 27 – “To God only wise, be glory through Jesus Christ for ever. Amen.” The predicate nominative singular subject with the generic use of the definite article. The word is doxa (δόξα) [pronounced DOHX-ah]—“the glory,” referring to what God is and God’s purpose in all of creation.

Then the two adjectives, nomos (νόμος) [pronounced NOHM-oss] and sophos (σοφός) [pronounced sof-OSS], in the dative singular, part of the indirect object, with the noun theos (θεός) [pronounced theh-OSS]—“to God alone wise.” The adjective sophos (σοφός) [pronounced sof-OSS] refers to the omniscience of God. The omniscience of God knew everything in history, the actual and the probable.

The prepositional phrase dia plus the genitive of Iêsous (Ἰησοῦς) [pronounced ee-ay-SOOCE] and Christos (χριστός) [pronounced krees-TOHSS]—“through Jesus Christ.”

Then the dative singular indirect object from the relative pronoun hos whose antecedent is theos (θεός) [pronounced theh-OSS]. Then because of ellipsis we insert the verb to be—“is,” and the predicate nominative “the glory.” Plus the prepositional phrase eis (εἰς) [pronounced ICE] plus the accusative plural of aïôn (αἰών) [pronounced ī-OHM] which is also repeated in the genitive plural, meaning literally, “to the ages of the ages,” which is simply an idiom meaning “for ever and ever.”

Then the word amên (ἀμήν) [pronounced am-ANE]—"I believe it." I could also refer to epignôsis (ἐπίγνωσις) [pronounced ehp-IHG-noh-sis]. It is one thing to say "Amen," just to hear the sound of your own voice; but it is something else to say "I know it; I accept it; I appreciate it."

Romans 16:27 To God alone wise, through Jesus Christ [the revelation of the wisdom of God], to whom is the glory forever and ever. Amen

Lesson #555

555 10/26/1978 Romans 9:1–14 Intro. Jewish problem; doctrine of Israel's preeminence; conspiracies; future of Israel

Chapter 9

Pain and suffering and death separate the men from the boys. Those with doctrine can move ahead and find blessing in these things. Bob thinks we have three months until things become obviously wrong to the hoi polloi. The stupid jerk on the street does not realize just how great we have had it in the United States. We need to remember the principles that we have learned in Bible class.

We have never had a worse group of leaders as we have in the past twenty-five years. We have just completed Romans 12–16 with doctrine for virtually every situation in life.

We are about to launch into one of the greatest theological sections of the Word of God. This will be a complete change of pace. A lot of theology but without a lot of application. Bob expects many to quit. The idea that you need a lot of people in the church is ridiculous. Bob makes no apologies. He has given a little sampling. We will hear more about decrees and election than ever before.

Bob is going to give the translation of the first 14 verses:

Romans 9:1 I am communicating doctrine [positive affirmation], I am not lying [negative affirmation], my conscience bearing witness [joint testimony] with me in the Holy Spirit.

Romans 9:2 That I have a great sorrow and constant pain in my right lobe.

Romans 9:3 For I could wish that I myself would be accursed [cherem], consequently separated from the Christ [but it cannot be] for the sake of my brethren [racial Jews], my fellow countrymen [national Jews] according to earthly descent [Abraham, Isaac and Jacob].

Romans 9:4 Who are Israelites, to whom is the adoption and the Shekinah Glory and the unconditional covenants and the gift of the Law and the worship of the true God and the promises [which is the manifestation of the integrity of God]

Romans 9:5 From whom are the fathers [the regenerate ancestors Abraham, Isaac and Jacob], in fact from whom is the Christ, the one who came in the flesh, the one who is God, ruler over all, extolled [praised, eulogized] forever. Amen.

Romans 9:6 However this is not to imply that the word of God has failed. For not all who are descended from Israel are really Israel.

Romans 9:7 Neither because they are Abraham's seed are all racial Jews the children of the inheritance; but, in Isaac your seed shall be elected.

Romans 9:8 This means that the descendants of the flesh [racial Jews], these are not the children of God; but the children of promise are imputed for seed.

Romans 9:9 For the word of the promise is this, At this time [maturity adjustment to the justice of God] I will come to impute blessing, and Sarah will have a son.

Romans 9:10 And not only [previous case history]; but also Rebecca when she had become pregnant from one, Isaac our father.

Romans 9:11 For though the twins [Esau and Jacob] had not yet been born, and though they had not yet accomplished anything, good or evil, in order that the predetermined plan of God [the divine decrees] might remain in status quo in relationship to election.

Romans 9:12 Not from works, but Him Who elected, it was said of her, the older Esau shall be subservient to the younger Jacob.

Romans 9:13 Just as it stand written [quotation from Malachi], I love that Jacob but I hate that Esau.

Romans 9:14 Therefore to what conclusion are we forced? There is no injustice with God, is there? Emphatically no.

Romans 9–11 explains the decrees, attribute, foreordination, and everything that God does for us.

Chapter 9 – Israel in part is selected; chapter 10 – Israel at present is rejected; chapter 11 – Israel in the future is accepted.

We have to settle some matters. Israel's present discipline does not withhold the glorious future of Israel in the Millennium and eternity.

The Doctrine of Israel's preeminence. This was covered back in Lesson #75 (so any additional notes from this lesson were added back there).

Any family with a lot of money has to be conspiratorial in order to survive. The liberals were wealthy and they put the conservatives out of power. But the socialists put the liberals out of business.

Bob has seen ten conspiracies in Berachah Church.

There are conspiracies all the time. This is a group of people wanting to gain power or to keep power.

If you want to be really stupid, believe in the Rockefeller conspiracy or the Rothschild conspiracy. Most banks normally want to control more money than they do.

All it takes for a conspiracy is 3 sin natures gathering together and desiring something. Every reversionist is a one-man conspiracy.

God has made certain promises or covenants with born again Israel. God bestowed favor on born again Jews, those with +R and eternal life. Paul's great concern in the first few verses of Romans 9 is, too many Jews are keeping the Law for their salvation. They are observing the Law like the rich young ruler. Paul directs them back to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.

Too many Jews were reinventing the wheel; they were offering up their own self-righteousness.

A system of freedom, privacy, property and authority was set up. This was done by the Mosaic Law. To have freedom and to maintain it is a military. There was a system of law and a great judicial system. All of this is the Mosaic Law. Free enterprise was preserved by a sensible tax system.

The Mosaic Law is a conditional covenant and not a part of salvation. It protected freedom and the concepts of freedom. There is nothing in the Mosaic Law which saves.

Codex 2 presents salvation; but it is not salvation.

The future of Israel. The dispensations help us to understand this as well as the covenants made to Israel. There is a nation today called Israel. It is not the theocracy that will exist in the Millennium. Even Israel today is a gentile nation. It is not a client nation to God.

Chapter 9 Outline:

The uniqueness of Israel – verses 1-5.

The premise: All Israel is not Israel – verse 6.

The premise is illustrated by the formation of the Jewish nation – verses 7-18.

The premise is illustrated by the essence of God – verses 19-29.

The premise is illustrated by the salvation of the Gentiles – verses 30-33.

Lesson #556

556 10/27/1978 Romans 9:1 Colonel Blimp; triple oath of Paul; inspiration of Scripture; conscience; unconditional covenants secure

Colonel Blimp is the movie tomorrow, unannounced. He was very wise. His whole life was structured so that everything he learned was to make the right decision at the right time. Every decision that he made was right and honorable and people do not catch this.

There are at least 100 doctrines connected to the first 15 verses. Bob reads them.

This next section is very theological. This is the very heart and soul of doctrinal theology. Many commentators have said, we are not to understand these chapters until we get to heaven.

God's Sovereign Choice

Romans 9:1 I speak the truth in Christ. I am not lying. My conscience testifies for me in the Holy Spirit... (BLB)

Verse 1 — Paul's triple oath. It begins with a positive affirmation, he starts out on a very positive note. "I say the truth in Christ." This begins with a present active indicative of the verb λέγω (λέγω) [pronounced LEH-goh] — to speak, to talk, to communicate. Here it means to communicate. The present tense is a perfective present denoting the continuation of existing results, a past fact emphasized as a present reality, the existence and the creation of the New Testament scriptures. The active voice: Paul produces the action of the verb as a part of his triple oath. The triple oath indicates Paul's honor, integrity, which he has indicated in so many ways. But in addition to his honor and integrity it now indicates his emotion. Paul is emotionally related to the Jews. When he uses this triple oath it isn't accidental, it is to indicate that everything that he has taught in such a magnificent way from his genius is nothing compared to his emotional involvement with the subject. So that Romans chapters 9,10,11 are not only elliptical but because of the grammatical construction necessary to indicate one's emotions related to the subject we have some of the more difficult Greek. This is not the type of thing that a first, second, third, or even fourth-year Greek student can handle because it involves many unusual idioms, many hapax legomenas, many phrases and clauses which are related in a most unusual way, many unusual uses of the post positive and other categories of particles, conjunctions, and so on. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality. “I communicate.”

Then he adds the accusative singular direct object from the noun alêtheia (ἀλήθεια, ας, ἡ) [pronounced ahl-Ā-thi-ah], and while the word mean truth it also means doctrine, and that is the translation here. It is used here for the content of Christianity as an absolute truth, therefore doctrine. The absence of the definite article emphasizes the high quality of the noun and it is translated simply as a part of the positive affirmation of a triple oath, “I communicate doctrine.”

To emphasize that he has not lost the mentality concept he deals with his own relationship to the Lord. In one prepositional phrase he emphasizes the very purpose of the Church Age — in the baptism of the Spirit, the concept of the formation of the royal family of God beginning with the baptism of the Spirit on the day of Pentecost, and concluding with the Rapture of the Church when the royal family is called out; and he relates all of this to the fact that even though all of us carry burdens and sorrows and face undeserved suffering and face many adversities in life we still have a stabilizer — the prepositional phrase en (ἐν) [pronounced en] plus the locative singular of Christos (χριστός) [pronounced krees-TOHSS].

So far we have the phrase, “I communicate doctrine in Christ,” or “I am communicating doctrine in Christ.” In this phrase Paul separates himself from the Old Testament writers and their gift of prophecy. Paul writes with the gift of apostleship rather than that of an Old Testament prophet.

Next we have the negative affirmation which deals with his own personal integrity. This is something that is very important. When anyone is dealing with God’s Word, with Bible doctrine, with those things that God has used and has chosen to reveal Himself to man, integrity is the order of the day.

“I lie not” — two words, the present middle indicative from the verb pseudomai (ψεύδομαι) [pronounced PSYOO-doh-mai] plus the negative ou (οὐ) [pronounced oo] (the negative which is used with the indicative) — “I am not lying.” The progressive present tense denotes linear aktionsart or the maintenance of academic integrity, intellectual honesty. It denotes the persistence of honor code integrity in Paul’s communication of Bible doctrine. The middle voice is the indirect middle which emphasizes the agent as producing the action rather than participating in its results. The indirect middle is very similar to the active voice except that it produces a closer link between the subject and the verb. The indicative mood plus the negative is for the historical reality that Paul was not only a man of great genius but, unlike most men of great genius, he was able to make the practical application of his genius to reality.

“my conscience also bearing me witness” — this is a genitive absolute. The purpose of the genitive absolute — which has a noun, a pronoun, and a participle all in the genitive case but are not connected grammatically with the rest of the sentence — is to separate this affirmation of a co-witness completely from the other two affirmations and to make it unique. The genitive absolute used here is not Koine Greek, it is Attic Greek. So unusual is the third part of this oath that he actually goes back to the Classical and the Attic Greek construction for a genitive absolute. The genitive absolute include the following: a genitive singular from a noun, suneidêsis (συνείδησις) [pronounced soon-Ī-day-sis]. The noun is in the genitive case but in the genitive case it is the subject of the participle. The word is “conscience.” With this is the instrumental of association singular from the personal pronoun egó (ἐγώ) [pronounced ehg-OH]. In the instrumental of association the personal pronoun is translated “with me.” Also we have a genitive singular from the definite article used as a possessive pronoun, translated “my.”

Then the genitive singular, present active participle from the compound verb summarturêō (συμμαρτυρέω) [pronounced soom-mar-too-REH-oh] [sum = with; martureō (μαρτυρέω) [pronounced mar-too-REH-oh] = to testify, support, bear witness] which means to make a joint testimony, to bear witness with. The corrected translation of the Attic Greek genitive absolute is “my conscience bearing witness with me,” or “my conscience bearing joint testimony with me.” Everything that he says is compatible with his conscience and, as we will see in the rest of the oath, compatible with the ministry of God the Holy Spirit. The customary present tense of the participle is for what habitually occurs or what may be reasonably expected to occur when one is under the ministry of the Holy Spirit writing scripture. The active voice: Paul as the human writer of Romans produces the action of the verb. The participle is circumstantial for the formation of the canon of the New Testament, God the Holy Spirit being the author using human beings who are properly qualified.

“in the Holy Spirit” — en (ἐν) [pronounced en] plus the locative singular of pneuma (πνεῦμα) [pronounced PNYOO-mah] and hagios (ἅγιος) [pronounced HA-gee-oss].

God's Sovereign Choice

Romans 9:1 I speak the truth in Christ. I am not lying. My conscience testifies for me in the Holy Spirit... (BLB)

Romans 9:1 I am communicating doctrine [positive affirmation], I am not lying [negative affirmation], my conscience bearing witness with me in the Holy Spirit. It is God the Holy Spirit who is ultimately the source of scripture.

This is a three-part oath.

There in an inhale and an exhale. Paul inhales information revealed to him by the Holy Spirit; and his writing is the exhale. 2Samuel 23 Jeremiah 1:9 Mark 12:36 and other passages confirm this. The exhale is in writing exactly what God wanted communicated.

Next we have the word “conscience” which was a part of the genitive absolute — suneidêsis (συνείδησις) [pronounced soon-Ī-day-sis] [sun = with; eidêsis is from oida (ὶδῶ) [pronounced OY-da]] means to know with, which is a norm or a standard.

The soul has volition; the soul has emotion; the soul has a conscience, which is what we are talking about here. Some information is given here about the conscience, but not the entire doctrine.

False teachers have a distorted conscience. Legalism sets up a false conscience. There is a testimony of the conscience.

Principle

1. Note that the conscience is under the authority of the Holy Spirit for guaranteed accuracy in the communication and writing of scripture.
2. This triple-compound oath is especially necessary because what Paul has to say condemns the Jewish unbeliever. It excludes the Jewish unbeliever from the unconditional covenants and the future Millennial reign of Messiah and eternal heaven.
3. Paul will first express great sorrow that so many of his race, the Jews, and so many of the nation of Israel will be excluded from salvation because they have rejected Christ as Messiah.
4. The fact that many Jews are going to hell because they have rejected Christ as saviour does not void the unconditional promises made to Abraham, reiterated to Isaac and Jacob, to David, and to Jeremiah. All a part of the same covenant but categorically divided into Abrahamic, Palestinian, Davidic, and New covenants to Israel.
5. The only way to be included in the unconditional promises/covenants is to believe in Adonai Elohim — Jesus Christ the revealed God of the Old Testament. This is their only hope. Paul will make the greatest appeal to the Jewish people in these three chapters of Romans.
6. The justice of God is totally fair, which means every Jew, every person, in history has a chance to be saved. The imputation of human life at birth is a guarantee that we have the opportunity to believe in Jesus Christ.
7. The exclusion for Israel is the same exclusion that pertains throughout history. Any exclusion is based upon negative volition at God-consciousness, rejection of Jesus Christ at gospel hearing.
8. Because some Jews have rejected Christ it does not abrogate the unconditional promises as given in the covenants. It doesn't change the plan of God for those Jews who believe in Christ. God's faithfulness is not changed if some people choose not to believe in Jesus.
9. Nor does the rejection of some change the future of Israel. Israel has a future and all Jews who follow the spiritual heritage of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, being born again, will be in that future.

10. The promises of God to Israel or the unconditional covenants will be fulfilled to the election of grace, except for the Church Age where believing Jews merge will believing Gentiles to become something unique — the royal family of God forever.
11. Self-determination is a great issue in this parenthesis (Romans 9-11) because the unbelieving Jews despise the grace way of salvation and reject faith-righteousness, the imputed righteousness of God, and substitute their own righteousness. They have in effect reinvented the wheel and it disturbs Paul that the Jews of his own generation (and many generations since) have reinvented the wheel. The wheel is the plan of God and it runs upon the axle of imputed righteousness of God. Nothing in the plan of God runs on human righteousness or human ability or human works.
12. Because of the rejection of some Jews God does not cast off or abandon His people. As an Israelite and a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ Paul in the next verse expresses his burden of sorrow for those who have excluded themselves by not appropriating eternal salvation.

Lesson #557

557 10/29/1978 Romans 9:2 Paul's burden for Israel; patriotism; Soviets re slavery and U.S. communications; Josephus

Real life is when you go it alone; when you are not being cheered on by a crowd. Pain, sickness and illness is simply a test for what you have inside of you. Or, what do you do when your friends all turn on you? The first movies that they had was meant to be a propaganda film for Britain in the middle of WWII. But this was about a man who had to go it alone without being cheered on.

We have as believers the royal family honor code; and we have this which allows us to go it alone. You must live your life alone and you must die your life alone. You must depend upon your own norms and standards; and those things in your soul.

Sometimes your desires go beyond what you are able to appreciate; and you gain that which is beyond your ability to appreciate. The unbeliever can also develop capacity for life through the laws of divine establishment.

Romans 9:2 ...that my grief is great, and unceasing sorrow is in my heart. (BLB)

Verse 2 — the beginning of the expression of his burden. “That” — the conjunction hóti (ὅτι) [pronounced HOH-tee], used after the transmission of an oath to indicate the content of his burden. This is actually a continuation of the sentence begun in verse 1 with the oath. With it are words lupē (λύπη) [pronounced LOO-pay] moi estin (ἐστίν) [pronounced ehs-TIN] megalê = megas (μέγας, μεγάλη, μέγα) [pronounced MEH-gas] — “there is to me a great sorrow.” First is the present active indicative of the verb eimi (εἶμι) [pronounced eye-ME] which is literally translated “there is.” The present tense is a present of duration, it denotes what was begun in the past and continues into the present time. The active voice: Paul produces the action of the verb as his burden for Israel. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of concern — concern without fear, burden without panic. He is a man of honor, a man of maximum doctrine resident in his soul, therefore he can clearly and lucidly see the fall of Israel. He can understand that Israel is about to be destroyed under the fifth cycle of discipline.

No restrictions on the press reporting the Vietnam war; but nothing about the killing of thousands by the North Vietnamese; and the slaughter taking place in Cambodia.

We are facing disaster everywhere we turn. Bureaucracy has a colossal arrogance. Bureaucracy will destroy a republic. You cannot have tyranny and freedom coexisting. Benedict Arnold looks like a saint next to our modern politicians.

We will be destroyed as a nation unless Jesus Christ turns back disaster, which is about to come down upon us. Communism knows that most of the people in this country are afraid of war and can be easily blackmailed.

Then we have the dative singular of possession from the personal pronoun egó (ἐγώ) [pronounced ehg-OH] — “to me.” It forms a part of a Greek idiom. There is no exact equivalent for this idiom in the English and therefore while it is literally, “There is to me a great sorrow,” we say in English, recognizing the idiom, “I have a great sorrow.”

Next we have the predicate nominative feminine singular from the adjective meγas (μέγας, μεγάλη, μέγα) [pronounced MEH-gas] and the noun lupē (λύπη) [pronounced LOO-pay] — “great sorrow.” The absence of the definite article before meγas (μέγας, μεγάλη, μέγα) [pronounced MEH-gas] indicates the fact that this is the highest quality of sorrow, a sorrow which is legitimate, honorable. It is honorable to carry such a burden at such a time in history. And the burden is not crushing him personally. Because he has doctrine he has flexibility and he continues to carry on and to fulfill his responsibility even with this great sorrow.

The time of the gentiles is the period of history when there are no Jewish client nations. Only gentile client nations. God is represented by client nations; and these are only gentile nations. Rome for many hundreds of years was the first client nation. The Irish in the days of Patrick; in the days of Colombo; England for a few hundred years; the United States for the past 200 years. This will continue to the end of the Church Age. Israel will not be a client nation to God until the Tribulation and the Millennium.

All of the trends can be turned around if we all advance to maturity through knowledge of Bible doctrine. The honor code demands patriotism. No matter how many hippies, freaks and cowards run the other way... We are being propagandized to...vote for human good.

Public education is destroying this generation of young people. HISD is become a detrimant to our education. We need to decentralize our population and to spread out.

Our military is set to stop the communists for three days. Communication at squad level, which is hand signals; visual signals. That is our most efficient and most important system of communication which the Russians have planned for.

Principle: a) No believer who lives in a client nation to God can watch the disintegration of that nation without carrying the burden and having a great sorrow. b) The royal family honor code demands patriotism. For those citizens in a client nation, born in a client nation under God, patriotism is the order of the day.

“and” — the connective use of the conjunction kai, indicating that this is intensified at this moment but it does not destroy his personal happiness, his personal relationship with the Lord. He is still occupied with Christ.

“continual sorrow” — the nominative singular from the adjective adialeíptōs (ἀδιαλείπτως) [pronounced ad-ee-al-IPE-toce] which means unceasing, constant, something you live with but something that does not change your happiness or blessing.

“sorrow” — odunē (ὀδύνη) [pronounced od-OO-nay] which means pain. “I have constant pain.”

“in my heart” — he has pain in his body but that is nothing compared to the pain that he has in his soul. This is the locative of sphere from kardia and it means heart, the right lobe of the soul, plus the possessive genitive singular from the personal pronoun egó (ἐγώ) [pronounced ehg-OH], translated “my.”

Romans 9:2 ...that my grief is great, and unceasing sorrow is in my heart. (BLB)

Romans 9:2 That I have a great sorrow and constant pain in my right lobe.

Principle

1. In this verse Paul states the fact of his great burden without revealing its content. The burden is stated without revealing the content. The content will come in the next four verses.
2. In the next three verses Paul will specify Israel as the subject of his grief and pain in his right lobe. Paul has to carry this burden alone. Only Paul can hurt for Paul. Yet, even though he hurts and goes it alone he can handle it because of doctrine.
3. While these same Jews were unrelenting in their maligning and persecuting of Paul he was unrelenting in his concern and burden for them. Paul was persecuted wherever he went; and Paul was burdened for them.
4. Being a Jew and a believer in Christ Paul understands the failure of Israel. He also understands the solution to the problem and he knows that the solution is still available.
5. Understanding the issue and having the burden intensifies his concern for them but does not erase his honor code function. He doesn't change, get on a crusade, a soap box. He carries on and never loses his honor. He moves on with doctrine.

6. Even though Paul is an apostle to the Gentiles he never abandons his concern for the Jews and his desire for their salvation.

Lesson #558

558 10/29/1978 Romans 9:3 General Westmoreland re Vietnam; Paul's wish to be a sacrifice for the Jews; doctrine of CHEREM=cursed; racial cf. true (spiritual) Jew; concern for the lost

Westmoreland speaks of Vietnam in a perspective. "To make good the commitment. An estimated one-eighth killed in Cambodia. Human rights not existing. The flicker of the torch of freedom in Vietnam has been lost. It was a shabby performance by the United States of America. There are lessons to be learned. The Gulf of Tonkin of 1964 gave the president the ability to carry on the war there. The president should have asked for a renewal of this resolution every year. The administration was afraid of a direct debate. Deferring college students was injurious to our society. Discriminatory and undemocratic. ROTC on the campus because whipping boys. The media reporting on the TET offensive were deceptive. When they realized that they had misjudged the situation, no media retracted their errors.

Lying and cheating by young men to stay out of the military. It encouraged our enemies and prolonged the war.

Vietnam was the most and the least reported war in history. Hanoi could influence the media but South Vietnam could not. War cannot be waged by the military alone; it requires the full support of the nation.

This was the first war fought without censorship. We were open to manipulation by an enemy.

Romans 9:3 For I could wish myself to be a curse, separated from Christ for my brothers, my kinsmen according to the flesh,... (BLB)

Verse 3 — the subject of Paul's burden. It begins with the explanatory use of the particle gar — "For." With it is the imperfect middle indicative of the verb eúchomai (εὐχομαι) [pronounced YOO-khom-ahēē] which means to pray, to wish for something. Here it means to wish. "For I could wish." The voluntative imperfect tense expresses a wish or desire which cannot be realized because of an intervening obstacle. Hence, a quasi optative is actually present in the voluntative imperfect. The imperfect expresses a thought which is unattainable. It means if effect, I would like to pray but I cannot, I can only wish for the impossible.

Paul is stating what he recognizes because of the great principle of the omniscience of God which knew all of the facts before they happen. All of these were placed in the computer of divine decrees and then printed out of the decrees in terms of the believer — election, foreknowledge, predestination; in terms of the unbeliever such concepts as condemnation. God knew in eternity past what free will decisions would be made. The voluntative imperfect tense indicates Paul recognizing that he faces a hopeless situation as far as Israel is concerned. He is aware of the negative volition toward the gospel and the negative volition toward Bible doctrine as expressed by his own people. He understands thoroughly and completely their problem, their difficulty. He is so burdened for them, knowing that they are destroying themselves. Over 20 years after Paul was writing they would be destroyed. This was his terrible burden, he could see it coming. We have a reciprocal middle voice or a redundant middle in which the middle voice, accompanied by the pronoun egó (ἐγώ) [pronounced ehg-OH], emphasizes the reflexive force of the middle voice. “I myself” is the way it is translated. This idiom is based on the fact that the reflexive force is inserted to aid the function performed by the middle voice. “I myself would like to pray.” The indicative mood is potential, it is a potential indicative of impulse.

With this is the attributive use of the intensive pronoun autós (αὐτός) [pronounced ow-TOSS], which is where we get “myself.” This is followed by the present active infinitive of the verb eimi (εἶμι) [pronounced eye-ME], translated “to be.” The tendencial present is used for an action which is desired but is not actually taking place. The active voice: Paul would like to produce the action of the verb, it’s quasi optative. The infinitive is the infinitive of conceived result which follows the nature of a case or is assumed to be as a consequence.

Next we have the predicate nominative singular from anathema (ἀνάθεμα) [pronounced an-AHTH-em-ah], the Greek word for “curse.” This is a very technical word, however, because it is used in the Septuagint for a very strange noun called chêrem (כֶּרֶם) [pronounced KHĀ-rem]. When chêrem (כֶּרֶם) [pronounced KHĀ-rem] was translated from the Hebrew to the Greek the anathema (ἀνάθεμα) [pronounced an-AHTH-em-ah] was used, and it means actually the object of a curse. With this we have to insert the inferential particle oun (οὖν) [pronounced oon] which demands a conclusion from what precedes. It is translated “consequently.” Then the prepositional phrase apó (ἀπό) [pronounced aw-PO] plus the ablative of separation from the proper noun Christos (χριστός) [pronounced krees-TOHSS] — “consequently [separated] from Christ.”

Because Paul is a believer this is impossible. It is impossible for any believer, now matter how apostate or how evil, to be separated from Christ. There is nothing the believer can do to separate himself from the Lord Jesus Christ. Once the believer is in union with Christ to be cursed is impossible.

Principle

1. This is just another illustration of the fact that there are certain things which prayer cannot change and which prayer cannot accomplish. Prayer cannot take away the believer’s salvation or his relationship with the Lord. Therefore there is no imprecatory prayer that anyone could utter that would change God’s mind about a single believer.
2. Therefore to pray effectively you must understand doctrine so as not to waste your shots on impossible targets.

3. As an unbeliever Paul tried to keep the Jews away from Christ, as Saul of Tarsus. Now as a believer he is burdened for the Jews, that they will come to Christ.
4. These two extremes demonstrate Paul's great love for the Jews. He had a great love before he was saved and doctrine only intensified his love for Israel.
5. In his burden for Israel Paul has gone as far as he can go to demonstrate his love and his concern for the Jews. He has expressed an unattainable wish, an impossible desire to be cursed so that his brethren the Jews will believe in the Lord Jesus Christ.
6. In the pain of his soul Paul could wish no more than this. It is the perfect and most lucid expression of pain in the soul. It is an impossible wish.
7. The obstacle, then, to fulfilling the wish or prayer is the fact of Paul's eternal salvation which cannot be canceled even by his own intense wish, his own burden for the salvation of the Jews. Therefore it expresses his burden even though it cannot be fulfilled.
8. Under the principle of individual self-determination there is no sacrifice Paul can make by which the Jews will be saved. The only sacrifice was made on the cross; and Paul can announce this to his brothers, according to the flesh.
9. Under the principle of free will, the principle of self-determination, each Jew must make that decision for himself. He must decide for himself whether he will believe in the Lord Jesus Christ or not.
10. Self-determination is the volitional issue in the angelic conflict.
11. That anathema (ἀνάθεμα) [pronounced an-AHTH-em-ah] should be used for chêrem (כְּרֵם) [pronounced KHĀ-rem] is the Septuagint is not surprising. Therefore the principle of the anathema (ἀνάθεμα) [pronounced an-AHTH-em-ah] or chêrem (כְּרֵם) [pronounced KHĀ-rem]:

Let's look at the principle of the curse.

Cherem

1. Chêrem (כְּרֵם) [pronounced KHĀ-rem] means what was consecrated to God without capability of being ransomed, something that is given to God, consecrated to God, and it cannot be redeemed. The meaning of chêrem (כְּרֵם) [pronounced KHĀ-rem] is found in Leviticus 27:28,29 — “Nevertheless, any cherem thing [any proscribed thing, any banned thing, any cursed thing], which a man puts under a ban [to set apart] to the Lord out of all that he has, whether of man or of animals, or of the fields, or of his own property, shall not be sold and shall not be redeemed: for every cherem thing is most holy to the Lord. No cherem person, who may have been banned [cheremed] shall be ransomed, he shall be put to death.”
 - a. Jericho is a perfect illustration. God said that when the walls of Jericho fell, as inevitably they would, everything inside was cherem with the exception of Rahab the prostitute and her family — the only believers. This means that all of the people had been dedicated to the Lord and were to be killed. They could not be redeemed, they could not be saved. Therefore the army had to go in and execute every man, woman, child, and even baby, because they were under cherem. They were dedicated to the Lord. Jesus Christ controls history and they had now reached a place of madness where the hydrophobia would spread throughout history. They had to be destroyed, except Rahab and her family. Cherem also applies to things, and it means that every materialistic thing that was found was to be dedicated to the Lord and put in the treasury.

- b. This is the very same word that Paul is using. He could wish himself to be accursed. Paul would like to cherem himself, or become anathema so that Israel could be saved.
2. But such a prayer violates the principle of self-determination in the angelic conflict. Free will is the order of the day and therefore because each person must determine for himself this cannot be.
3. The firstborn of Israel were redeemed by the death of another. The children as well as the animals were automatically under cherem. Every firstborn belonged to the Lord but cherem in the case of children was redeemable by the death of an animal. This is illustrated by Galatians 3:13. In other words, the firstborn of Israel were redeemed by the death of another. Because of that they were not cherem, but anything that was under cherem had to be redeemed. So the firstborn was an exception to cherem. In Galatians 3:13 Christ is said to be cherem. He is the ban for our sins. Translation: “Christ has redeemed us from the curse of the law, having become a curse [cherem] for us; for it stands written, Cursed is everyone who hangs on the wood.” When our Lord Jesus Christ was on the cross He could not be brought down from the cross. He could not be redeemed, He was under cherem. He had to die, He was cherem for the sins of the world.

Joshua 6:17-19 — the chêrem (כֶּרֶם) [pronounced KHĀ-rem] put on Jericho. That means that nothing could be redeemed whether it was human, animal or material. The exception was born-again Rahab and her family. Jericho was dedicated to the Lord as the first city in the land to be attacked and therefore it was dedicated to the Lord in an unredeemable manner. “And the city shall be under the ban [chêrem (כֶּרֶם) [pronounced KHĀ-rem]].” Achan violated the ban — Joshua 7:1.

Joshua 6:17–19 The city shall be under the ban (cherem; it is not redeemable); it and all that is in it belongs to the Lord. But as for you, only keep yourselves from the things under cherem lest you covet and seize some of the things under the ban; and so you will make the camp of Israel accursed and bring trouble on it. ; therefore, all the silver and gold, all the articles of bronze, the iron, all are holy to the Lord; they will go into the treasury of the Lord.

The walls of Jericho fell outward, and archeology confirms this. Israel defeated Jericho; but the were unable to defeat a smaller city, Ai, because Achan had some of the condemned items. He violated Chêrem; he stole from the Lord. He was executed. Achan goes down as one of the dogs of history. The ban could only be removed by Achan dying.

“for my brethren” — the preposition hupér (ὑπέρ) [pronounced hoop-AIR] plus the ablative plural from adelphos (ἀδελφός) [pronounced ad-el-FOSS], used here for the Jews. With it is the possessive genitive singular from egó (ἐγώ) [pronounced ehg-OH] — “my brethren.” Paul is a Jew. It is translated “on behalf of” or “for the sake of my brethren.” “Brethren” or adelphos (ἀδελφός) [pronounced ad-el-FOSS] is used here for the racial Jew plus the national Jew. Paul would like to be chêrem (חֵרֵם) [pronounced KHĀ-rem], a substitute for the entire Jewish race and Jewish nation as a guarantee of their salvation.

Principle

1. The Jew is the youngest and greatest of all races in history.
2. Gentile Abraham became a Jew at age 100, after reaching maturity and being circumcised.
3. Abraham had several sons but the Jewish race is perpetuated through only one — Isaac. By self-determination Ishmael was eliminated from the perpetuation of the Jewish race. Isaac was a believer and the Jewish race was perpetuated through him.
4. Isaac had twin sons, one a Jew and one a Gentile. The eldest should have been the source of perpetuating the Jewish race — Esau. But Esau was an unbeliever and remains a Gentile, whereas Jacob the youngest of the twins was a believer and the perpetuation of Israel goes through him. The God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob is the Lord Jesus Christ. The true Jew is the regenerate Jew.
5. Jacob’s twelve sons formed the nucleus.
6. Therefore Abraham is known as the father of the Jewish race. Moses is known as the father of the Jewish nation.
7. Anyone who has the genes of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob is a Jew — but that is Jew in the sense of the race of Jews. There is a religious Jew who is an adherent to Judaism but this includes Gentiles by race who adhere to Judaism. Therefore a Jew is used here for the race only, the progeny of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. The true Jew is a believer.

“my kinsmen” — we have the appositional genitive plural from the compound suggenês (συγγενής) [pronounced soong-ghen-ACE] [sun = with; gênos (γένος) [pronounced GEHN-oss] = race] a race of people. It refers here to Paul’s fellow countrymen, fellow citizens, members of the same race, members of the same nation; plus the possessive genitive of egó (ἐγώ) [pronounced ehg-OH] — “my fellow countrymen.” “according to the flesh” — here is the great gap between them, they are still in the flesh and not in Christ. We have kata plus the accusative of sarx (σάρξ) [pronounced sarx] — “according to earthly descent” would be a good translation. The nation of Israel begins with Moses and the Exodus. There is no Jewish nation or Jews functioning under national standards until the Mosaic law. They were the first client nation in history.

Romans 9:3 For I could wish that I myself would be accursed [cherem], consequently separated from the Christ for the sake of my brethren [racial Jews], my fellow countrymen [national Jews] according to earthly descent [Abraham, Isaac and Jacob].

Principle

1. The more Paul was separated from Israel through his perception of doctrine and his spiritual advance the more sensitive he became to the tragedy of Israel. You cannot advance spiritually without becoming sensitive to the tragedy of life and the people who live it.
2. To have such a fantastic spiritual heritage as the Jews and miss the boat of salvation was almost more than Paul could bear.
3. Both the formation of the Jewish race and the origin of the Jewish nation of Israel emphasizes Jesus Christ as the God of Israel.
4. Therefore to be a Jew and not to believe in Christ, the God of Israel, is overwhelming to the apostle who sees the Jews as being so close and yet so far. In the very sacrifices that they offer they have the answer in their hands, but they fail to see that Jesus Christ is the Lamb of God who takes away the sin of the world.
5. Paul's burden existed in proportion to the number of Jews who had rejected Christ as saviour, the number of contemporary Jews who in self-determination had said no to the gospel.
6. Once Paul as Saul of Tarsus had tried to destroy Christianity. But now Paul the believer sees Christianity as the natural, logical result, as the perpetuation of the spiritual heritage of Israel. He sees Christianity also as the logical result of Messiah's first advent.
7. The need to call out a royal family of both Jew and Gentile is apparent to Paul. The royal family is made up of Jew and Gentile. While Gentiles might not have the background or the frame of reference to the Church Age, every Jew by spiritual heritage and by their own dispensation [dispensation of Israel] have the background. Therefore Paul has the desire that they might link their spiritual heritage with the work of Christ on the cross. The relationship between Israel's spiritual heritage and the doctrine of the Church Age is so obvious to Paul that he desires the impossible.

559 10/30/1978 Romans 9:4a Hardness of Pharaoh vs. divine power; Priest (Client) Nations; adoption in SPQR; spiritual heritage of Israel. (BLB)

Some rulers are famous for having integrity and others famous for having no integrity. Thutmose III is Egypt's greatest son. His son came to the throne with a great empire developed by his father. Aminhotep II is the son. He has great power; great authority; and no honor. So God kept him alive and protected him so that he could come face to face with Moses. He would lie and cheat where Moses was concerned; and no integrity. So all Egypt and the entire world could be evangelized due to him. He was dishonest; he was a crook; no honor, no integrity. He abused power. He had no sense of responsibility. He had the greatest power in the world in his day. In plagues 1–6; it says that his heart was hardened; but in 7–10 God hardened his heart, allowing him to live with maximum scar tissue on the soul. God permits tyrants and evil men to rule to demonstrate that His power is infinitely greater than any person who rules in this world. If we should have a dictator in the United States, we are related to One Who is greater. 9x Pharaoh said yes, and then he said, no, because he lacked integrity.

No matter what disasters occur, Jesus Christ controls history. God permits some great disasters, but He is still in control.

This is the direction in which we are working. The FBI keeps in touch with Bob through an old friend. Because of this, he knows that more women are killing themselves with a gun. This indicates that we are getting closer to a disaster and people are unable to cope.

Bob suggests that we are looking at coming into an horrendous depression. We will have a big war sooner or later; and a lot of people are going to be hurt as a result. Bible doctrine is the solution. We are living on the edge of a fantastically large volcano. If you are smart, you go on doing what you are doing, taking in Bible doctrine.

Many of you have photograph albums; and they become a basis for remembering wonderful times and people.

Once you understand the Jew, you understand history. We are going to launch into vv. 4–5, the spiritual something of Israel.

Romans 9:4 ...who are Israelites, whose is the divine adoption as sons, and the glory, and the covenants, and the lawgiving, and the service, and the promises;... (BLB)

Verse 4 begins with a relative pronoun, and with it we have the spiritual heritage of Israel. It begins with the nominative masculine plural from the indefinite relative pronoun ὅστις [pronounced HOHS-tiss]. It refers to category. It is different from the ordinary relative pronoun because it is a categorical word. It refers to a specific category in the human race — the Jew only. Hence, the indefinite relative pronoun is used for a specific category, it refers to believers and unbelievers, race and nation; it refers to the Jews, to their background, their heritage, their origin as a nation.

With this is the present active indicative of the verb eimi (εἶμι) [pronounced eye-ME] — “who are (of such a category to be).” Then we have the historical present tense which views a past event with the vividness of a present occurrence. The active voice: the Jews produce the action. This is the declarative indicative for historical reality. Next is the predicate nominative plural from Israēlītēs (Ἰσραηλίτης) [pronounced is-rah-ale-EE-tace] used for the descendants of Jacob in contrast to Esau. Esau is a Gentile; Jacob is a Jew. They are twins but of two different races. So the word is used for the Jews as a covenant people, as a client nation to God known as Israel, for Hebrew-speaking Jews in contrast to Hellenistic Jews. Technically, the word “Israelites” refers to the Jews of the twelve tribes from the Exodus to the death of Saul — 2Samuel 2:9,10t,17,28. Hence, “Israelites” refers to the client nation from the Exodus to the divided kingdom. Jacob’s name was changed to Israel which means “prince of God.” The first client nation in history was given a title of honor to indicate that it had an honor code. Its honor code was something that believer and unbeliever alike could accomplish — the laws of divine establishment. But its honor code went into the spiritual realm which only the believer Jew could actually accomplish or attain. Paul refers here in using this word as it is brought into the Greek — Israēlītēs (Ἰσραηλίτης) [pronounced is-rah-ale-EE-tace] — for Jews as both a race and a client nation of God under the title Israel. “Who are Israelites.”

Abraham as over against Nahor. Isaac as over against Ishmael. Jacob as over against Esau.

Principle

1. When you start with a spiritual heritage you start with salvation. Spiritual heritage must start at the point of regeneration. Esau is a Gentile; Jacob is a Jew. They are twins but of two different races. Jacob continued the principle of salvation. Bob does not know how far Jacob went in the spiritual life.
2. It refers in the second place to spiritual heritage advance to maturity as over against reversionism.
3. Paul is not here distinguishing between the northern kingdom and the southern kingdom but to the entire Jewish race wherever it is found. Paul is referring to the Jew as a sacred league of thirteen tribes (Joseph had the double portion, Ephraim and Mannaseh).
4. Israelites in the sense of having a spiritual origin. Abraham v. Nahor; Isaac v. Ishmael; Jacob v. Esau. No spiritual heritage without regeneration. The line goes through regeneration.

Israel was the first client nation to God. It was called the priest nation because every believer in the nation and every citizen was regarded as a priest to God. A client nation is a national entity operating under divine institution #4, responsible for custodianship of Bible doctrine as it exists in any period of history. The first client nation had the Torah, the five books of Moses, and that is the spiritual heritage of the first client nation. In the five books of Moses is everything necessary for the function of a client nation. A client nation is not only a nation that has on the temporal side the laws of divine establishment, but on the spiritual side it has the freedom from the laws of divine establishment providing true evangelism, the opportunity for spiritual growth, and missionary function. Then, in our dispensation, with the Jews scattered under the fifth cycle of discipline we must add a haven for the Jews — no anti-Semitism. The word “client” wasn’t used until we get to the times of the Gentiles. Instead we have the words “priestly nation” — Exodus 19:6. That is in contrast to the fact that they had the Levitical priesthood. The entire nation was considered to be a priest nation and their spiritual function was under a specialized priesthood, the Levitical priesthood. In Hosea 4:6 what happened to Israel as a client nation is clearly presented — the fall of the client nation. The success was spiritual, the failure was spiritual — lack of doctrine. The restoration of Israel as a priest nation is given in Isaiah 49:5–8 [And now says Jehovah, Who formed Me \[Jesus Christ\] to be His servant, to bring Jacob back to Him \[the future restoration of Israel\] in order that Israel might be gathered to Him, for I \[Jesus Christ\] am glorified in the sight of Jehovah \[God the Father\] and My God will be My strength \[that is, resurrection\]. He decrees the Father, He says ‘It is too small a thing that You should be My servant to raise up the tribes of Jacob and to](#) restore the preserved ones of Israel. My God the Father will also make you the light of nations so that My deliverance will be to the ends of the world. So decrees Jehovah, the Redeemer of Israel, the Holy One, regarding the despised One [Jesus Christ] regarding the One abhorred by the nation, the servant of rulers: 'Kings shall see and come to attention; princes shall bow down on their knees because of the Lord Who is faithful and the Holy One of Israel Who has elected you. So decrees Jehovah, 'At the right time I have answered you. Therefore, on the day of deliverance [the second advent] I have helped you; consequently, I will keep you and give you for a covenant of the people [the restored nation of Israel] to restore the land of Israel, to cause them to inherit the desolate heritage [which describe the Jewish nation at the present time; instead of having a spiritual heritage, they have a desolate heritage; and they will continue to have a desolate heritage until the restoration at the 2nd advent]. The restoration of the priest nation of Israel will have a direct effect upon the future of all gentile nations. This will occur at the second advent and the Millennial reign of our Lord, and it will go on into eternity.

As goes the believer of the nation; so goes the nation.

Our freedom and our success and our very existence right now, and our great prosperity is based upon having the Jews in the United States today.

The fundies are all out in the tulies today, with their getting involved and telling you how it will all work out.

In Isaiah 61:5-7 — in the future we are going right back to that same client nation under the principle that God is faithful, under the principle that what God starts God finishes. God started Israel as a client nation and He is going to finish Israel as a client nation forever. This is one reason why the United States of America is so blessed, as we are an umbrella for the Jews. Because we are a haven for the Jews, we have identified ourselves with the original client nation and the future client nation. We must provide for them an umbrella of protection. By so doing, we have fulfilled one of the greatest privileges. There is evangelism and we give that a check (C-); the teaching of doctrine, and the sending out of missionaries (also a C-). Our big fat plus is our relationship with the Jews.

Isaiah 61:5–7 Strangers will stand and pasture your flocks; foreigners will be your farmers and wine producers and you will be called the priests of Jehovah [good wine and good food in the Millennium] you will be called the priests of Jehovah; you will be spoken of as ministers of our God; you will eat the wealth of nations and in their glory you will boast. Instead of your shame [today, the Jews are out under the 5th cycle of discipline] you will have a double portion; and instead of humiliation, they will shout for joy over their portion [the restoration of Israel]. Therefore, they will possess a double-portion in their land, everlasting happiness will be theirs for I Jehovah love justice [it is the justice of God which sustains the United States of America today].

Bob thinks the antisemitism will raise its ugly head in America. The day that this happens, we have had it. Minorities have made all kinds of demands; the Jews have made no demands. In times of revolution, in times of socialism and welfare state, the very people who have done the most for us are ignored completely. No accident there. That is satanic. The drive to adopt a child from southeast Asia.

We are blessed because we have said to the Jews, “You come over here; you are welcome and you are one of us.”

The Constitution does not call upon us to be anti any race or any group.

The rest of the verse describes who the Israelites are.

“to whom pertaineth the adoption” — the genitive of reference plural from the relative pronoun hos (ὅς) [pronounced hohç], translated “to whom.” Israelites are the antecedent and adoption is another chink in this marvelous spiritual heritage.

We have the predicate nominative from huiiothesía (υἰοθεσία) [pronounced hwee-oth-es-EE-ah], which means to place as an adult son. It is translated here “adoption” but the translation has nothing to do with the custom where a couple do not have children and they adopt children. This has to do with recognizing someone as an adult son. The word is taken from the practice of the Romans. Huiiothesía (υἰοθεσία) [pronounced hwee-oth-es-EE-ah] is taken from two Greek words: huios (υἱός, οὐ, ὅ) [pronounced hwee-OSS] = an adult son; tithêmi (τίθημι) [pronounced TIHTH-ā-mee] = the verb to place — to place as an adult son. This was a Roman custom conferred at the time of adulthood on a natural child, not on what we call today an adopted child. It means to recognize a son as an adult and to legally declare him as such under Roman law. Roman citizens were only those who were recognized by your family as an adult (which would be somewhere between 14–16). This was an adoption certificate.

They could adopt one’s own son; but one could also adopt another born of other parents. This is how Octavius succeeded... Octavius had no son, so he adopted his stepson, was by his third wife, and he became known as Tiberius. People came to the throne in Rome not because they were a natural son, but they might be a grand son, a step son, a grand nephew.

Lesson #560

560 10/31/1978 Romans 9:4a Principle and amplification of the doctrine of (biblical) adoption: live up to heritage; Jews under the Nazis

We are looking at the Roman custom of adoption. Even in the word, there is the concept of an older or an adult son. Romans were more interested in the adoption certificate than they were in the birth certificate.

The uncle of Caligula came to the throne. I, Claudius is a reference to this man. He lost his wife who married his niece; who was married to Lucius Hanna barbus Nero (?); and they had a child, and Caligula adopted him. Then Caligula was poisoned soon after.

Adoption was, as far as things go, the will. Christ is the huios of God; the adult son of God. Christianity really does not have a clue as to what Son of God means. He is an heir to the Father. He is adopted into the royal family. All believers become legally adopted sons at the moment of salvation.

For us, there must be life in the soul; and eternal life imputed at salvation. We start out without capacity; but with spiritual growth, we develop it. Ephesians 1:4–5 is one place where adoption is used. Galatians 4:1–5

Most of these notes were placed with the Doctrine of Adoption in Lesson #212.

561 11/01/1978 Romans 9:4b Heritage of Americans and Jews; synonyms of "Jew"; SHEKINAH glory and the integrity of God

Influx of people who are uninformed about our culture or heritage cannot continue on with that heritage. No one seems to have this perspective anymore. People between 18 and 30 should have been anxious to go to Vietnam, but instead, there are student protests. We have idiotic females getting a BS in bureaucracy and they go into businesses and shut them down. They have no concept of our heritage. Most people in this country are socialists, which is antithetical to our heritage of freedom. We should have been exposed to our culture from the cradle.

We have racial problems when that is no race in the Constitution. People talking about rights, about races, but they have no idea as to our freedom and heritage.

Social life today is ludicrous. The whole concept is fun and games leading to sex. No idea about love and romance and courting. A few drinks and the old phrase, "Your place or mine."

Even people in the ghettos are better off than living in a palace in Russia.

We are eternally connected to God though His justice.

Missing about 25 min. of notes here (about 15:00 to 4:00).

We have problems that we should not have. Freedom vs. evil; free enterprise vs. welfare state. We are becoming a nation of morons; a nation of emotional neurotic people.

If someone ends up loving you, then pray that they have personal integrity.

No counseling outside of class; because all of the counseling is given in class.

Bob would charge $1000 per half hour; but the good thing about paying for advice; you will probably take it.

God gives us His righteousness. We should not try to reinvent the wheel and use our own self-righteousness as some sort of wheel with a square axle.

The Jews saw the cloud over the Tabernacle. Only once a year, the High Priest would go into the Holy of Holies. One cherub represents justice and the other represents holiness. The word holy refers to two attributes of God, combined into one known as integrity.

God knew which Jews would believe in Jesus Christ. The print out is election; and the Jews who believe print out as elect. The printout for those who would not believe print out as reprobate or as condemned. Only the elect are adopted. Only the adopted are elected. If you are not elected, then you are not foreordained and you are not predetermined. If you are not predetermined, then you aren't nothing.

A graduate of Dallas Theological Seminary told his congregation that no one would understand Romans 9 until after we die. The revelation of God is designed to be understood in time.

A huge amount of idioms in Romans 9. It took Bob five days to work out one verse; so if anyone so much as bats an eye at that time...

From Abraham to the end of the Jewish Age, skipping the Church Age; and then into the Tribulation and the Millennium. God is faithful to the Jew; and, because of that, we know that He will be faithful to us. There is no way that we can cancel the faithfulness of God.

The Source is greater than the gift; the Source is greater than the reality; the Source is greater than the imputation.

Once you believe in Jesus Christ, you cannot in any way cancel the integrity of God. God's integrity is not cancelled because of our failure. God does to react to us.

Romans 9:4 ...who are Israelites, whose is the divine adoption as sons, and the glory, and the covenants, and the lawgiving, and the service, and the promises;... (BLB)

The promises of God are all related to eternity and therefore in order to be qualified for the heritage they had to be adopted, which is flipping over the coin and is the other side of election. Therefore by believing in the Lord Jesus Christ, the God of Israel, they are adopted, they are elected, they are participants in the heritage of Israel forever.

“and the glory” — the connective use of the conjunction kai setting up a list, correctly translated “and.” Kai can be translated other ways depending on whether it is adjunctive or ascensive. Ascensive is translated “even,” adjunctive is translated “also,” and the intensive kai is translated “in fact.” Then we have the predicate nominative singular from doxa (δόξα) [pronounced DOHX-ah] — “and the glory.” No form of human glory is involved here. The simplest explanation for doxa (δόξα) [pronounced DOHX-ah] here is the Hebrew word Shekinah. The word means residence. It is a word not found in the scriptures but the verb is found there — shâkan (שָׁכַן) [pronounced shaw-KAHN], which means to dwell. The noun is Shekinah and this describes the glory that we have here because this glory is Jewish heritage. There is a word in the Old Testament which is the exact equivalent, and that is kâbôwd (כְּבוֹד) [pronounced kaw^b-VODE] which is used for the essence of Jehovah in 1Chronicles 29:11. It is also used for the glory of God which came down to the tabernacle. God resided between the cherubs. So the Shekinah glory is the presence of the second person of the Trinity, the God of Israel, between the cherubs. This is found in Exodus 25:22 cf. Leviticus 16:2. You have to have the two verses side by side to get the picture.

The Shekinah glory is also connected with the second advent of Christ in Isaiah 60:2 — “For, behold, the darkness shall cover the earth, and gross darkness the people: but the LORD shall arise upon thee, and his glory shall be seen upon thee.” This is the darkness which will cover the earth immediately prior to the second advent of Christ. The second advent: “Behold every eye shall see him” — everyone is in a supernatural darkness. So the glory mentioned here is this same glory, the personal presence of the Lord Jesus Christ. No nation ever had a greater heritage than the personal presence of the Lord Jesus Christ between the cherubs over the mercy seat — the Shekinah glory.

This is also related, then, to the second advent where the adoption occurs. Only believers can be adopted and at the second advent only believers of Israel will be there to see it. In Hebrews 9:5 we have the cherubs on each side of the mercy seat mentioned in connection with doxa (δόξα) [pronounced DOHX-ah]. The cherubs are merely representations of the highest form of angelic creatures. Glory refers to the personal presence of God the Son, the Lord Jesus Christ. The very presence of God overshadows the mercy seat. The glory therefore refers to the presence of the Lord Jesus Christ as the God of Israel. There is a reference to this in James 2:1. Christ is mentioned as the Shekinah glory by implication — “the glory.”

Only the elect are adopted; only the adopted are elect. To be a Jew and to have the physical heritage — the genes of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob — and not to be elected, and not to be adopted, and not to be foreordained, and not to be foreknown — a recognition of the foreordination of the decrees — is the burden that Paul carried in the only mind that could carry it. He was the only one who understood it.

The Shekinah glory doesn't refer to the entire essence of God but it refers to and emphasizes specifically two attributes of God — righteousness and justice, which combine to be called in old English the holiness of God, and in modern English the integrity of God.

Lesson #562

562 11/02/1978 Romans 9:4c Honor code of Colonel Blimp; SHEKINAH and ICHABOD: unconditional covenants: Abraham and Palestine; EL SHADDAI

The days to come could be very difficult days. Disaster seems to be on the horizon. How it will manifest itself could be economic disaster or military disaster. Or there could be a decline of leadership and decline of the people of the United States. To where we do not appreciate freedom or the teaching of the Word of God.

Colonel Blimp is a man who lived by honor and by standards. Honor is never anachronistic. Our domestic policy and foreign policy is detrimental. People who do not think like Americans; and we face adversities in the future; and we should accept these adversities as a challenge.

Bob is reading the great stories of the Victorian Cross.

Romans 9:4 ...who are Israelites, whose is the divine adoption as sons, and the glory, and the covenants, and the lawgiving, and the service, and the promises;... (BLB)

Charge of the Light Brigade was actually a result of many screw ups. This resulted in the killing of many good men and horses.

No matter how many erroneous decisions have been made from our leaders; no matter how many failures, no matter how much human viewpoint; we should be able to handle it and handle it magnificently.

Jews have distorted their physical birth and have misunderstood the promises; and they did not recognize that, what made Israel great, was not the racial relationship, but the spiritual seed of Abraham.

When a son was 14–16, the father would proclaim his son hijos and throw the toga virilis around his shoulder, the toga of manhood. Adoption means being recognized as a son of God; and adult son.

The failure of some Jews to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ and relate their physical birth to their adoption [the new birth] does not abrogate the integrity of God nor the magnificent spiritual heritage. The heritage is still there, it will be there in every generation, it will be open to any Jew who believes in Christ, minus the Church Age where we have a different election, an inserted election; the Church is elected royal family of God, and that is the exception.

Israel was a client nation to God, the agent for missionary activity abroad and Bible teaching at home — God's first client nation. In arrogance racial Jews had been emphasizing their physical heritage — Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and their physical relationship to these noble men. Therefore they emphasized physical birth and they distorted the doctrines which are found in the unconditional covenants, they distorted and misunderstood the promises with regard to Israel's glorious future. And, to add to it, they personally were not able to recognize that the thing that made Israel great is not the physical relationship, not the racial relationship, but the spiritual seed of Abraham. In order to understand it Paul uses the great doctrine of adoption where a natural son of a Roman is like a slave in the home until such time as he reaches maturity the father would take the son aside in the presence of all the family and friends and pronounce the magic words of maturity — huio̅s (υἱός, οὐ, ό) [pronounced hwee-OSS] Romanoús (ροῦς) [pronounced noose]. Adoption means huio̅s (υἱός, οὐ, ό) [pronounced hwee-OSS] Theou, a son of God, and adult son. So the Jewish heritage is not the physical seed of Abraham, being a racial Jew, having the genes of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, but it is the adoption whereby having faith in the Lord Jesus Christ — Adonai Jehovah Elohim, the God of Israel; by believing in Him they enter into the new birth (regeneration), recognizing that all of the promises of God, divided into the covenants. For the future of Israel as a nation and the future of every individual Jew in that nation is dependent upon regeneration; being not the physical seed by the spiritual seed of Abraham. Therefore, Paul in expressing this point is developing the fantastic spiritual heritage of Israel, the greatest spiritual heritage in history.

Only Israel has had the Shekinah Glory as a part of their heritage. But this is meaningless if all they have is physical birth and not the regeneration.

The Shekinah glory is mentioned in several passages. A word that was used in the past was Ichabod — 1Samuel 4:21-22, “And she called the boy Ichabod, [Ichabod simply means “no glory”] saying, the glory has departed from Israel” — a reference to the Shekinah glory — “because the ark of God was taken.” This means that a boy was named on the basis of an historical event. When the ark was removed from the holy of holies the glory, the personal presence of the Lord Jesus Christ, was no longer there. The presence of the Lord Jesus Christ between the cherubs on top of the ark was the Shekinah glory.

This glory was a part of the heritage of Israel and this same Jesus, the God of Israel, came back as the glory of Israel in another way, expressed in John 1:14 — “And the word became flesh and tabernacled among us.” This means that the Shekinah glory which dwelt between the cherubs came into a human body, so that we have the God-Man or the hypostatic union. “And we beheld his glory.” The word “tabernacled” plus the word doxa (δόξα) [pronounced DOHX-ah] means the Shekinah glory. This is John’s message, another Jew speaking to his own people. The Shekinah glory took human form, became true humanity — “... the glory as of the uniquely-born one from the father, full of grace and doctrine.” While the Jews had the Shekinah glory in the past they cannot have it in the future forever apart from believing in the Lord Jesus Christ.

“and the covenants” — kai hai diathêkai (διαθήκαι) [pronounced dee-ath-AY-kī]. This is the predicate nominative plural from the noun diathêkê (διαθήκη) [pronounced dee-ath-AY-kay], referring to the covenants, the unconditional covenants to Israel in contrast to the conditional covenant which is called the law. This is referring primarily to the Abrahamic covenant, though others are included as well. The Abrahamic covenant was the beginning of the Jews and the beginning of God’s promises to Israel. The whole issue in these covenants is very simple: God is faithful; God keeps His word. The only Jews to whom these promises are pertinent are the spiritual rather than the natural or physical seed of Abraham because only those Jews who receive the imputation of divine righteousness, as did Abraham. So diathêkê (διαθήκη) [pronounced dee-ath-AY-kay], the covenant, is a disposition made by God to Abraham in this case. We are dealing with the heritage of Israel. Like all the covenants this is a part of the divine decrees. Abraham is a beneficiary without merit. God promised certain things unconditionally certain things to Abraham and his seed. But not his physical seed, his spiritual seed. “All Israel is not Israel.” Starting in Genesis 12:1-3 Abraham received promises. Then for the rest of his life — chapters 13, 15, 16,22 — promises were added together and we simply call them the Abrahamic covenant, it is merely a summary of everything that God promised to Abraham and to his seed, his spiritual seed.

Genesis 12:1 emphasizes the isolation and separation necessary for the development of the new race. Verse 2 — the great nation is made up of two categories. This does not refer to the seed of Ishmael or the five sons Keturah. The great nation is the nation Israel, called the Jews, called Hebrews, synonymous terms. This great nation is elected but not adopted until the second advent, because while Israel has been great in the past it is nothing compared to what will happen in the Millennial reign of the Lord Jesus Christ. Israel will be the source of blessing for the entire world. Israel in the Millennium is the great nation. Israel in eternity after the Millennium is the great nation. And the only ones who can be in that nation who are racial or physical Jews are those who are qualified by having +R and by having eternal life. Verse 3 — anti-Semitism is one of the most vicious things in life.

Bob reviews several verses into Genesis 12.

Paul is disturbed because so many Jews think that they have all of these promises coming to them; but they do not, not unless they have been born again.

Genesis 13:14-16 — the Palestinian covenant. Verse 15 — “and to your seed,” not the Jewish race, not to the physical seed but to the spiritual seed, those Jews who are born again. Genesis 15:18-21 — “to your seed,” born again Jews. This covenant was confirmed to Isaac — Genesis 26:3,4. The Abrahamic covenant was confirmed one more time: to Moses, Exodus 6:2-8. Until Moses there was no nation Israel. They were in their infancy with no army, police force, or establishment laws to protect them, and God would take care of them until they became a nation. This is what El Shaddai means — the “God of many breasts.” In other words, the Jews did not operate under the laws of divine establishment until the Exodus.

The Hittites had control of the Euphrates River; and all of this will belong to the Jews. This was confirmed to Isaac in Genesis 34.

Lesson #563

563 11/03/1978 Romans 9:4d Benefits of the Mosaic Law vs. U.S. government evils; four divine institutions; Jew's feasts and responsibilities

Romans 9:4 ...who are Israelites, whose is the divine adoption as sons, and the glory, and the covenants, and the lawgiving, and the service, and the promises;... (BLB)

...and the deposit of the Law... is the next phrase.

A federal income tax is right in principle. It is the practice of the income tax which is the problem. It should be a straight 10% straight across the board. That is honest and compatible with honor and integrity of a government. Our government is arrogant, arbitrary and totally against our freedom. If you are a young person, ask about OSHA or about the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

Our foreign policy is idiocy. There is no deep, underlying purpose for our foreign policy. In spite of all of these failures, we still have prosperity because of the Jew. When God established Israel as the first client nation in history, He gave the Mosaic Law in order to define laws and principles for all legitimate governments. These were applied to a theocratic government (but there has only been one).

The more people involved in a decision, the worse that decision will be (that is Bob's principle). A stupid person making a decision on his own is better than 1000 people coming to an agreement on a decision. Generally, the majority is always wrong.

One day, Bob noticed that all of the walls were grey. It was a neutral color as a compromise.

These laws in Exodus apply to all forms of government. There was only one democracy in history and that was the Athenian democracy.

Bob has two forebears who signed the Constitution. We have allowed too many people to have a say in how things are run.

Bob is there to protect us and our privacy. John Calvin, who was a great theologian, took over a city. He set up one of the most awful tyrannies that you could ever imagine. Under the principle of grace, you have toleration. Grace tolerates a lot of standards.

There must be certain rules that we all follow. This is because of the doctrine of the depravity of man. Our population continues to increase. The great number of old sin natures, the greater the chance of problems and loss of freedom. Every sin nature has its own brand of sin which comes into conflict with other sin natures.

We are discovering that all the human good that we want is too expensive. The greatest way to lose your money is human good. You should respect each others property and privacy and you can get along. But if they try to steal your property or intrude upon your privacy, we need laws to deal with such people.

You will need a wall of defense to keep other nations from coming in to destroy you. There must be courts and systems of justice. There must be principles of sanitation.

Berachah is a very clean congregation. It is thoughtfulness of others. You try not to be a distraction to others. These are all related to law; laws of how to live with many other people. This way each person maintains his freedom, his property and his privacy.

We have the gift of the Law with the highest individual standard of living. Ours is the only country in history where even those who are in poor circumstances are far better off than people throughout the rest of the world.

There must be laws for survival and for freedom. We are aware of the divine institutions. Everyone should be able to make individual lawful decisions without coercion. Freedom is the basis for true evangelism. The raising of one's hand or the walking of an aisle or standing in front of people all violate your privacy; and people coming up to talk to you about what you just did—that also violates your privacy. No public demonstration is necessary for anything in the Christian life.

There is the demand that the the next phrase is ...the worship of God...

The Passover followed by the Feast of Unleavened Bread. 50 days after is the Feast of Pentecost, the first week of June. It represents to setting aside of Israel as a client nation. This brought in the concept of gentile nations being client nations to God.

Romans 9:29 tells us what a true Jew is. The key was the circumcision of the heart.

All of the offerings and feast days had meaning. All of this is included in the worship of God.

...and the promises,... which emphasize the faithfulness of God.

Romans 9:4 Who are Israelites, to whom is the adoption and the Shekinah Glory and the unconditional covenants and the gift of the Law and the worship of the true God and the promises [which is the manifestation of the integrity of God]

Principles

1. In the previous dispensation, Israel as a race had custodianship of divine truth, being responsible for communicating and preserving it.
2. Client nation Israel was a priest nation. The canon of Scripture was formed in Israel. Evangelism and setting up of doctrine.
3. National Israel fulfilled the plan of God. Also a missionary base. Two categories of missionaries, like Jonah and Daniel.
4. Shortly after the insertion of the Church Age, Israel was dispersed under the fifth cycle of discipline. Leviticus 26.
5. The interruption of the Jewish Age around A.D. 30 and discipline to Israel in A.D. 70. These are not recognized by Israel today.
6. This double curse is removed whenever a person believes in Jesus Christ. They cannot rely upon their physical birth. Their physical birth gives them a spiritual heritage.

7. When the Jew in the present dispensation believes in Christ, he is no longer a Jew but royal family. His cursing is turned to blessing.

1977 Romans

Lesson #564

564 11/05/1978 Romans 9:4 Mosaic Law: codices and principles of; Jewish problem; spiritual heritage and arrogance problem of the Jews

We are studying Paul's concern for the Jews.

The commandments do not define sin, as it is more complex than that. Morality and freedom are in the decalogue.

There are the ordinances, which are the spiritual code. This is the Tabernacle, the holy days, etc.

The third part are the judgments. Freedom, privacy, property, marriage, taxation, are all covered. There is sanitation, quarantine, evidence, punishment.

The Mosaic Law was given specifically to the Jew.

The Jews believed that, because they were born Jews, that they were attached to God. While man is born physically alive, he is also born spiritually dead. But condemnation must precede salvation. Regeneration is key and that is the true issue. Spiritual heritage is related to the new birth.

Our point of reference is the justice of God. This allows blessing to flow from God to man without compromising the essence of God. The imputation of divine righteousness and eternal life is the true heritage of Israel.

The promises of God are fulfilled at the 2nd advent. Nation Israel alone was the sole recipient of the Mosaic Law. It was not given to the gentiles. Deuteronomy 4:8 Romans 2:12–14. Not give to the church. Acts 15:5, 24 Romans 6:14 Galatians 2:19 The pharisees and other Jews distorted the Law; and they failed to understand the great lesson of history. Abraham is in the line of descent, but his brother Nahor was not. The promises do not come down to Ishmael but to Isaac.

Having received the Law, the Jews should have recognized that no one could keep the Law. The function of free enterprise, of the laws of divine establishment, of authority, are all set up in the Mosaic Law. The Mosaic Law and the rest of the Old Testament was written for our instruction.

Our prosperity has come to us through observing the divine laws of establishment and free enterprise has been the great secret to our blessing. Profit is godly and legitimate; and yet profit is taught to be a bad thing.

It is the spiritual heritage of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob that counts. This introduces the Jewish problem.

The Jewish Problem

1. Paul recognizes the special privileges in the previous age; but the Jews have no advantages apart from regeneration in the new age. Paul's burden is that Jews do not have these special privileges in the Church Age.
2. The Jewish unbeliever to live in the past dispensation of Israel can only distort his heritage by legalism and self-righteousness. The rich young ruler is an example of this.
3. When God administers the fifth cycle of discipline, He removed the arrogance of Israel. The northern kingdom went out under the fifth cycle of discipline under the Assyrians; and the southern kingdom went out under the Chaldeans. From A.D. 70 forward, only a gentile nation can be a client nation.
4. The unbelieving Jew clings to the Mosaic Law and the ritual of the past. He has ritual without reality.
5. Ritual without reality produces arrogance and self-righteousness.
6. Self-righteousness deludes itself into thinking that it is doing the will of God.
7. Human self-righteousness is assumed to be divine righteousness. The application today superficially: people will look for the walking the aisles, being baptized, or weeping great tears of repentance. But Jesus completed salvation on the cross. Salvation is uniformly the same. The Jews gain eternal life the same way that we do. When they reject Christ as Savior, they set up a system of works.
8. The legalistic Jews sets up ritual over reality.
9. While God approves His Own righteousness, He does not approve of Jewish self-righteousness. God has found a way to bless man; God has found a way to have a perfect plan for imperfect persons. All blessing goes from the justice of God to the righteousness of God. This is what is wrong with the liberals. This is why many Christians are deluded. They think that they can intrude on the righteousness of God. God will bless man when he has capacity. God could promote us and provide us with every kind of prosperity. But if we lack capacity, then there is no way for us to appreciate it. Self-righteousness does not work. That is reinventing the wheel. The believer who follows the legalistic Jew tries to reinvent the wheel. You cannot reinvent the wheel with self-righteousness. The Jew is simply a photograph of the individual believer's soul.
10. The spiritual heritage of the past focused attention on the God of Israel.
11. The unbelieving Jew accepts his rituals but not Jesus Christ.
12. The self righteous Jew in keeping the Law is religious without being regenerate. The self righteous Jew tries to keep the Law for salvation.

Romans 9:4 ...who are Israelites, whose is the divine adoption as sons, and the glory, and the covenants, and the lawgiving, and the service, and the promises;... (BLB)

The two angels standing atop the Mercy Seat, representing justice and righteousness. Between the cherubs the Shekinah, which is the presence of the Lord Jesus Christ. This means that they could not enter into the Holy of Holies. They failed to understand as a part of their spiritual heritage.

Spiritual Heritage and the Jew

1. This was a genuine spiritual heritage for the first client nation in history. This demands faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, the God of Israel.
2. All the ritual enumerated points to the reality. Jesus Christ is the reality.
3. The legalistic Jewish unbeliever has dishonored the integrity of God, but he violates the very law by which he seeks salvation.
4. Pronomian perversion of the Law become antinomian blasphemy of the Law.
5. Arrogance and hypocrisy contradict right doctrine. This produces religious hypocrisy.
6. The spiritual heritage of the past, that is Israel's past, is being ignored in the time of Paul. The Jews are losing the greatest opportunity that they could have which is believing in Jesus Christ.
7. Therefore, Paul's burden, the Jew will adjustment to the justice of God or the justice of God will adjust to the Jew through temporal judgment. Believing in Christ is eternal life. We are one of the few countries follow the Jewish system of sanitation. The simplest things in our life would be the greatest thing ever in the life of any ancient king. The problem for the Jew is the spiritual code, not the establishment code.
8. The failure of some Jews does not cancel or abrogate the faithfulness of God. The unconditional covenants will be fulfilled.
9. The unbelief of some does not cancel out the faithfulness of God.

There is also an arrogance problem. The Jews have a fantastic heritage; but a great heritage always has the trap of arrogance. They have a reason to be proud of their heritage. They were far advanced over us.

The Arrogance Problem

1. Since the preeminence of Israel is related to Bible doctrine, neither doctrine nor its source can be neutralized by Jewish rejection of Christ.
2. In other words, grace is never cancelled by those who reject grace. The failure of some does not abrogate the grace of God.
3. Grace is never neutralized by whatever others do or fail to do.
4. Therefore, grace continues to be the policy of the grace of God. The situation is very simple blessing from God is available to any with continued positive volition toward doctrine.
5. Man's failure cannot
6. Lack of integrity in mankind does not cancel the integrity of God.

7. Man acquired integrity and morality; but it is not good enough for the integrity of God. The self-made man is not acceptable to God.
8. God's integrity includes His righteousness and His justice. Therefore, God has set up the policy. Divine blessing is imputed to its target or its home. This is true during depression or prosperity. The plan of God rolls on whether man fails or succeeds. Man can be blessed in the worst of circumstances. Arrogance always comes up with the worst solution. Arrogance by passing laws against anti-social activity. The greater good for the greater number is the function of human good. You cannot have freedom and equality at the same time.
9. Justification can only exist when God imputes His righteousness; at the moment of faith in Christ.

Why does this verse appear here? What does this verse mean?

1977 Romans

Lesson #565

565 11/05/1978 Romans 9 Iranians; self-righteousness; Jews reject the visible God; principle of divine integrity and Shekinah glory

If there is nothing worth living for, there is nothing worth dying for; and vice versa. There can be all kinds of disasters; national disaster, economic disaster. Life is not made wonderful by what you have. It is not based upon great relationships in life.

Occasionally television does something which is good.

socialism is the #1 evil today; and opens us up to tyranny. Many of our problems have been compounded over socialism.

If we are smart, we will profit because of the failure of Israel.

Romans 9:4 ...who are Israelites, whose is the divine adoption as sons, and the glory, and the covenants, and the lawgiving, and the service, and the promises;... (BLB)

The heritage of Israel is our present possession because so many things from the Old Testament have direct application and have many wonderful advantages spiritually in our growth. So a study of Romans 9 has to be justified in two ways. The obvious one is that it is in the Word of God, but secondly, the content deals with the Jew. We are never going to be very far removed from Israel for while Israel is out under the fifth cycle of discipline today we must remember constantly that it is Israel who has, in effect, passed the gauntlet on to us in order that we might carry on as a client nation. Therefore, if we are smart we will profit by the failures of Israel. Obviously the Jews at the time that Paul wrote were missing the boat with regard to their heritage, they failed to see it in the light of doctrine and instead they saw it in terms of history. Often this results in the human viewpoint rather than the divine viewpoint of life.

Putting Verse 4 Together

1. God is holy. This means that God has integrity. Holiness is the integrity of God, both His righteousness and His justice.
2. The integrity or holiness of God is not attained by God or some sort of divine achievement. God has integrity but it was not attained, it wasn't developed.
3. The integrity of God is eternal, absolute, infinite. It has always been a part of His perfect essence.
4. The integrity of God is not the mere absence of evil, it is the sum total of His perfection.
5. Therefore the integrity or the holiness of God is neither maintained nor attained, it is God's immutable, eternal self.
6. The being of God cannot be better or worse for God is eternal, immutable, unalterable, an absolute being who is eternally consistent.
7. The holiness or integrity of God is composed of those two important attributes, justice and righteousness.
8. God's righteousness is perfect, therefore not only does God's righteousness reject sin, human good and evil but it also provides varying systems of condemnation in administering punishment to sin, human good and evil.
9. The principle on which man observes the justice of God: God's righteousness demands perfect righteousness, and what the righteousness of God demands the justice of God executes. God's righteousness can only demand perfect righteousness; God's justice can only demand perfect justice.
10. Therefore the spiritual heritage of Israel in the past dispensation was designed for their justification through faith in Christ, not for their arrogance, not for their self-righteousness, and not for their rejection of the God of Israel. Arrogance plus self-righteousness rejects the plan of God not only with Jews but even with believers.
11. Human self-righteousness is actually an arrogant rationalization. It is the fantasy of comparing one's strength against the weakness of another.
12. Righteousness cannot be built or constructed on unrighteousness. Therefore justification is built on the imputed righteousness of God. Everything that God does to bless us inevitably is on the foundation of His imputed righteousness and not on any system of self-righteousness which we have developed. Self-righteousness is the wrong axle for the wheel on which the plan of God turns, God's righteousness imputed is the basis for it all.
13. The self-righteous type is trying to compete with God, and this is tantamount to blasphemous arrogance.
14. The grace of God provides all that the integrity of God demands for the human race through the God of Israel, Jesus Christ. That is the basis for the spiritual heritage of Israel and, furthermore, that is the basis for the spiritual heritage of the Church as the royal family of God.

Above the Tabernacle was the cloud by day and the pillar of fire at night (this would be when Israel was in the desert-wilderness of Sinai). The Presence of the Revealed God was hidden from view.

All of the holidays were related to Jesus Christ; all the great feasts were related to the same thing. Man is a free agent; but he is always looking for someone to blame.

During the first advent, the unbelievers saw the Lord with their own eyes and they still rejected Him. The Shekinah Glory was on this earth for 33 years.

Foreknowledge recognizes what is in the decrees. Omniscience fed what is certain into the decrees. Bob guarantees that it won't take 4 days to cover another verse. It might take 5 days.

The Shekinah Glory existed right there at the Mercy Seat. In order for sin to be paid for, the Shekinah Glory had to become flesh.

You can only get into [Z] through the teaching of Bible doctrine. The royal family honor code is the Christian way of life. No blessing in [Y], that is logistical support. You are supported by space, time, rations, spiritual provision. Many categories of logistical support. You get the capacity for blessing in [Y].

The Divine Integrity and the Shekinah Glory

1. Jesus Christ, the God of Israel, became humanity and the son of David for the express purpose of fulfilling the Levitical offerings and bearing our sins on the cross. The ritual shadows of the Old Testament were all fulfilled in the work of Christ on the cross. The Shekinah glory became flesh — “The Word became flesh and tabernacled amongst us.” Jesus Christ, the God of Israel became true humanity so that the Shekinah glory would not only be apparent and seen by the Jews, for acceptance or rejection, but so that the Shekinah glory could actually do what the Shekinah glory had been doing in fact since Israel began.
2. The justice of God judged our sins which had to be imputed to Christ on the cross so that the justice of God could give the righteousness of God to anyone who would believe in Christ — to the Jew first and also to the Gentile. Why the Jew first? Because the one who hung upon the cross was the son of David. He was the fulfilment of the Davidic covenant. He was a Jew. He was the Shekinah glory now visible. The Lord Jesus Christ in hypostatic union is the visible Shekinah glory. The Jew is first because the prince ruler of the Church is a Jew. The greatest theologian the Church has ever seen, Paul, is a Jew. The writers of the New Testament were Jews. The heritage of the Jews is given to the Church to give us motivation and momentum in our advance to maturity. So it is always the Jew first. And why not, as there is magnificent blessing for us gentiles as a result.
3. At the cross God condemned our sins in Christ so that He could commend doctrine to the soul, to the Jew first and also to the Gentile. Psalm 85:10 — Grace and doctrine have met together; righteousness and reconciliation have kissed each other. When grace and doctrine meet it is the presentation of the gospel. God took the greatest theologian of the Church Age, a Jew, and makes him the Apostle to the gentiles.

4. There is nothing man can do to destroy or compromise the integrity of God. No failure of man can change the integrity of God.
5. Man's self-righteousness does not glorify God, but God's righteousness justifies man when imputed at salvation. After salvation, we have the judicial imputation of righteousness. There is a volitional matter; will we be positive toward God's plan or will we be negative and go to self-righteousness. We do not reinvent the wheel. The wheel and axle is the plan of God; when we try to reinvent the wheel, we insert self-righteousness for God's righteousness. So we tithe or we make some great sacrifice for God in some way or improve our morality.
6. The integrity of God gains nothing from man's righteousness, but man gains everything from the integrity of God when God imputes His very own righteousness at the moment of salvation.
7. The pattern for this and the heritage of Israel began in Genesis 15:6. The Jewish race was not founded upon Abraham's physical genes, it has a spiritual origin. Abram was an Akkadian. That is his physical genealogy. The Jewish race is not based upon anything physical. That is all [X]; and the Jewish race begins in [Z]. There is nothing spiritual in [X].
8. God does not gain from man, man gains from God. The very birth of the Jewish race portrays that principle. The Jewish race originated with a spiritual factor — Abraham cracking the maturity barrier.
9. There is no point in angelic or human history where the integrity of God is compromised or gains anything from man's self-righteousness.
10. God's righteousness is not established by man, but man's integrity is established by God.
11. Therefore God does not need our help, we need God's help.
12. Therefore the imputed righteousness of God at salvation is not only the key to divine blessing but the basis for the royal family honor code.
13. Therefore the principle emerges: The integrity of God advances the glory of God in both angelic and human history. There is a lot of failure in angelic history and in human history. God's integrity, nevertheless, advances His glory.
14. Under divine provision man can glorify God but man cannot advance the glory of God. The glory of God pre-existed man and all creatures, including angels.
15. The unbeliever Jew distorted the law which is both spiritual and establishment in the heritage of Israel. No one was ever saved by keeping the law. It delineated principles of establishment and freedom, it portrayed the person of Christ, but it was not an instrument of salvation.
16. Put another way, the law is incapable of making the Jew righteous before the integrity of God. The law demands a capability of perfection and absolute standard beyond man's ability.
17. Therefore the law cannot produce righteousness in the Jew, it cannot produce anything equivalent to the perfect and eternal righteousness of God. The law can only condemn the Jew and demonstrate his inadequacy to save himself. The law is an instrument of condemnation, only the judgement of Christ on the cross is the instrument of salvation.

Romans 9:4 ...who are Israelites, whose is the divine adoption as sons, and the glory, and the covenants, and the lawgiving, and the service, and the promises;... (BLB)

The personal presence of the God of Israel was of no use or advantage to the Jew who rejected Jesus Christ. There is no advantage apart from positive volition.

People claim that they would do anything if they could be around the Lord when he was here in bodily form. But the key is not Him being here on earth; the key is if we have Bible doctrine in our souls.

Lesson #566

566 11/06/1978 Romans 9:5 Origin of Gentiles (X radical) and Jews (Y); negative volition of the Jews; passiveness to Bible doctrine and persecution; reality

All the gentile races of history were formed in [X]. Shem, Ham and Japheth are the source of all gentile nations. This is all based upon physical descent.

The Jewish race originated from Abraham in [Z]. He was a mature believer. The Jewish race has a spiritual origin. To be a true Jew, one must possess the genes of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.

Romans 9:5 ...whose are the patriarchs; and from whom is Christ according to the flesh, being God over all, blessed to the ages. Amen. (BLB)

Verse 5 is not correctly translated in the King James version. In fact the incorrect translation is extremely devastating to a concept here regarding the second advent. This is actually a continuation of the spiritual heritage of Israel with some other things added.

It begins with the genitive possessive plural from the relative pronoun hos (ὃς) [pronounced hohç], whose antecedent is found at the end of verse 3 — “of whom.” This is the generally accepted interpretation, but much better is the ablative of source plural here — “from whom.” Then we insert the present active indicative because of Pauline ellipsis in which the verb is implied, though omitted. “From whom are.”

Next is a predicate nominative plural plus the generic use of the definite article which comprehends a category as a single whole — “the fathers,” patêr (πατήρ) [pronounced pat-AYR]. This is a reference to the regenerate ancestry of Israel. Abraham, Isaac and Jacob are the line of the Jewish race, the line of the seed of Abraham because each one was born again and each one reached maturity. The emphasis on the origin of the Jew and which separates the Jew from the Gentile forever is the fact that he originates from regeneration.

The Concept

1. The secret to the foundation of the Jewish race is regeneration, therefore it is very difficult for Paul to see his fellow countrymen reject Christ as saviour. For while they are Jews by physical seed of Abraham they are not Jews by regeneration. They have not followed the pattern of Abraham — Genesis 15:6.
2. While Isaac had a stepbrother, Ishmael, Isaac is the chosen one through regeneration. The same thing is true of Jacob and Esau. The difference is always regeneration. One is a believer and a Jew; the other is a gentile.

“and” is an intensive use of the conjunction kai, translated “in fact.” Add to this the prepositional phrase ek (ἐκ) [pronounced ehk] plus the ablative plural from the relative pronoun hos — “from whom.” Then, again, because of ellipsis we insert the verb “is,” present active indicative of eimi (εἶμι) [pronounced eye-ME]. And finally we have a predicate nominative, ho Christos (χριστός) [pronounced krees-TOHSS] — “the Christ.” “In fact from whom is the Christ.” The generic use of the definite article emphasizes the uniqueness of the person of the Lord Jesus Christ.

With this is an accusative neuter singular from the definite article to. This is an accusative of general reference and demands the insertion of a pertinent infinitive. It is translated “the one coming.” Then we have kata plus the accusative singular from sarx (σάρξ) [pronounced sarx] — “in the flesh.” “who is — eimi (εἶμι) [pronounced eye-ME], articular present active participle — “the one who is.” The static present tense represents a conditions perpetually existing — the hypostatic union. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action, becoming visible. No longer do we have the Shekinah glory between the cherubs. Eternal God becomes true humanity, and once He becomes true humanity He is visible to Israel with the same results as existed under the principle of the Shekinah glory. With the cloud over the tabernacle by day and with the pillar of fire by night they knew that the Shekinah glory was dwelling between the cherubs, but it did not make any difference to too many in Israel. And again, people being what they are, unstable, unpredictable in every possible way; total depravity still applies and there was still negative volition. So the old story! “If I could just see the Lord. If He would just come and touch me on the head. If I could just follow Him or walk around with Him a little while, everything would be all right.” Of course, that is 100 per cent wrong. It is doctrine that makes the difference, doctrine is the reality. If you are positive to doctrine then you do not need the Lord Jesus Christ holding your hand. The participle here is circumstantial for the deity of Christ. Then we have the predicate nominative singular theos (θεός) [pronounced theh-OSS] — “God.”

Finally, we have a preposition — epí (ἐπί) [pronounced eh-PEE] plus the genitive plural of pás (πάς) [pronounced pahs], translated “over all.” “... one who is God,” and again this is elliptical, it means “ruler over all” and refers to the second advent of Christ. The incarnation and resultant humanity of Christ demonstrated two things: a) It was the means by which the sins of the world were literally imputed to the Lord and judged; b) But it has a relationship to Israel. Israel would always have an excuse that they could not see the Shekinah glory, all they could see was the cloud or the pillar of fire which was above the tabernacle. And since they couldn’t actually see it there was a stumbling block to their faith.

So the Shekinah glory comes and it visible, and the same negative volition that existed in the Old Testament existed in the coming of our Lord so that actually being face to face with the Lord did not make any difference. The incarnation and resultant humanity of Christ does not in any way demote the second person of the Trinity. Christ, although true humanity, continues to be eternal God forever and as God He still has all of the attributes of God as well as the attributes of perfect humanity. He is, then, the last Adam

Romans 9:5a. "From whom are the fathers [the regenerate ancestors Abraham, Isaac and Jacob], in fact from whom is the Christ [the Shekinah Glory of the Old Testament], the one who came in the flesh, the one who is God, ruler over all."

The rest of the verse is a command to praise, to recognize and to fulfill the very purpose for which the God founded the Jews. It starts with a verbal adjective, eulogêtos (εὐλογητός) [pronounced yoo-log-ay-TOSS]. This is never used of men, it is only used of God. It is a verbal adjective, it is derived from the adverb eû (εὖ) [pronounced yoo] plus the verb légô (λέγω) [pronounced LEH-goh] which means to speak well, to praise, to extol, to eulogize. A transliteration is eulogize. Eulogêtos (εὐλογητός) [pronounced yoo-log-ay-TOSS] is equivalent to baruk [the verb is barak], "being praised" or "being blessed." So it is used as liturgical formula, it becomes doxological for the eternal glory of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Israel had it all. Never in all of history. Until the Exodus and the formation of the nation, and until the construction of the tabernacle, never did anyone have the personal presence of God in their midst as a nation. That is because Israel was a client nation and because they were a priest nation. This was to be to their advantage because this is the only race, the only nation, the only people who were ever founded or originated on a spiritual basis. The Jews had everything going for them. The Jewish race is based upon being formed in [Z]; yet here they are, in Paul's time, they are living in [X].

The Jews of Paul's generation were losing out. Some remained as unbelievers; and those who believed were not moving forward in the Christian life.

We face a similar problem in this nation. We are begging for the destruction of our nation.

But here is the principle: You can have everything in the world going for you and still destroy it all with negative volition. There are two opportunities for negative volition. The first is at salvation and the second is a persistent negative volition toward doctrine after salvation. You can be aggressive about anything in the world but if you are passive toward doctrine you've had it. The exploitation of advantage is the exploitation of spiritual advantage. It is the spiritual advantage that counts.

Houston was once a great city; where the police force was honorable and effective. Bob first regarded Houston as one of the most exciting cities to be in. Men of courage handled the affairs of the government. There was moral courage in the office of mayor. Now there is a passiveness which has moved in.

Bob saw part of a movie about public transportation in NYC. He would not watch the entire movie. It is called a subway. Passive people burrow underground. A guy gets on with a knife and he and his friend begin to intimidate those around him. Everyone sat there. Men were bullied, pushed around; and they did nothing. They live in a passive city, where cowardice hides under the principle that we must not interfere with anything.

The passive attitude of anything takes precedence over Bible doctrine. You cannot live a life of convenience and have capacity for life. You will never have blessing. The Jews became passive and their priorities were wrong.

One view of the 5 or 6 million Jews brutalized by the Nazis. They were passive. They lined up. Where did this passive attitude originate from? This comes from having everything going for them. They were wealthy, they were successful, they were prosperous; but they were passive about doctrine and they were passive about the Nazis. If you are passive about what counts, then you will be passive in a crisis.

The genes of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob have produced the most brilliant people in history. It is hard to find a stupid Jew. Stupid gentiles can be found everywhere.

As a believer in Jesus Christ, living in the United States of America, we have more than everything going for us. And living in Texas, we have much more than everything going for us. This is all cancelled out when you are passive about Bible doctrine.

We have accepted the welfare state. We have accepted that which is evil, communism and socialism. In England, socialism came in through parliament. They became a socialistic state. No matter who seems to benefit from it, you never settle an argument based upon experience. For every person who has benefitted from socialism, there are thousands who have been ruined by it. And the other part of the scam work for government.

Then we have eis (εἰς) [pronounced ICE] plus the accusative plural of aîōn (αἰών) [pronounced ī-OHN] — “forever.” While it means “to the ages” it is simply an idiom meaning forever.

This is followed by the liturgical conclusion, amên (ἀμήν) [pronounced am-ANE], emphasizing the function of GAP, converting gnôsis (γνώσις) [pronounced GNOH-sis] resident in the left lobe into epignôsis (ἐπίγνωσις) [pronounced ehp-IHG-noh-sis] resident in the right lobe. Only epignôsis (ἐπίγνωσις) [pronounced ehp-IHG-noh-sis] doctrine resident in the right lobe can be converted into growth, to momentum, to motivation, to capacity for life, making life meaningful and worthwhile.

Romans 9:5 From whom are the fathers [the regenerate ancestors Abraham, Isaac and Jacob], in fact from whom is the Christ, the one who came in the flesh, the one who is God, ruler over all, extolled [praised, eulogized] forever. Amen.

Principle

1. Paul's ellipsis reveals his excitement and his concern for Israel.

2. We have inserted into the verse a liturgical doxology, but it is an elliptical liturgical doxology reminding the unbelieving Jew that Jesus Christ is the God of Israel, that He is the Shekinah glory, that His personal presence with Israel was without precedent and without parallel in any nation in history, and that it was climaxed by making Himself visible by coming in the flesh — the hypostatic union.
3. Since Jesus Christ is the God of Israel Paul's concern for the unbelieving Jew is intensified, and the intensity of his concern is expressed in ellipsis.

This anticipates the next verse, where all Israel is not Israel.

Romans 9:5 From whom are the fathers [the regenerate ancestors Abraham, Isaac and Jacob], in fact from whom is the Christ, the one who came in the flesh, the one who is God, ruler over all, extolled [praised, eulogized] forever. Amen.

Principle

1. The Jews of the dispensation of Israel had the Shekinah glory, the personal presence of the Lord Jesus Christ dwelling in the holy of holies between the cherubs.
2. In spite of this, in every generation there were Jews who rejected Christ as saviour.
3. This negative volition is dramatized by the incarnation in which the Shekinah glory becomes visible to the Jews through the hypostatic union — John 1:14. And the Word became flesh and tabernacled among us. And we beheld His glory as the uniquely-born from the Father, full of grace and full of doctrine. They actually saw Him, the Shekinah glory. They saw His grace, they heard His doctrine, they were face to face with Him, and they still rejected Him. That is why you have to have first advent and second advent. There has to be a demonstration to Israel, which in effect becomes a demonstration to the entire world, that even though the Lord personally comes to visit you and talks to you personally, performs miracles for you, does everything so that you can actually see grace and doctrine, man still has free will. Man still has self-determination, man is still a free agent, a free agent rejecting the Lord Jesus Christ. There is the tragedy. What a ghastly thing it is to realize how evil man is. Man is at his worst at the cross; God is at His best at the cross. The one who was hanging on the cross was not only the Shekinah glory, the God of Israel, the son of David, the future ruler of Israel, God, ruler over all, but at the same time He was the only saviour. Who said no? Dumb Gentiles? No, smart Jews! Reality with regard to God is what you think; that God not only invented the world that you see, but He invented thought, vocabulary, philology. He invented something where reality is in your thought. Principle: Guts are not found in the bowels but in the mind. Intestinal fortitude is incorrect; guts are in the soul. It is what you think that counts.
4. The metamorphism of the Shekinah glory into the hypostatic union dramatizes the negative volition of Israel into their rejection of Christ as Messiah. But it does more than that for Israel is a photograph of the individual soul of Gentiles and therefore it dramatizes what the human nature is like.

5. The Jews were never permitted to enter the holy of holies where the Shekinah glory dwelt, except the high priest once a year who entered twice on the day of atonement — once for himself and once for the people. And when he came out the people would want to know what the Lord looked like. A smart priest would open a scroll and say, “Here is what he looks like right here!” That is what is wrong with people, they want to see it with their eyes instead of understand it with their mentality.
6. But no Jew has an excuse for his negative volition because the Shekinah glory became visible to Israel with the incarnation of the Lord Jesus Christ.
7. The first advent of Christ allowed Israel to see the Shekinah glory. But Israel rejected the Shekinah glory in the person of the Lord Jesus Christ — Adonai Elohim, the God of Israel.
8. Seeing the Shekinah glory in person only intensified negative volition. So that all Jews of every generation who reject Christ are without excuse.

Realize and beauty is what you have in your soul. All of this comes from thought. Your capacity for life is going to depend upon thought. It is because you have doctrine in your soul. Happiness is not in what you have, but in what you think. Doctrine in the soul can't be taken away from you.

Guts are not found in the bowels but in the soul.

The average Christian today wants a miracle; and they have nothing in their soul to cope with a disease.

A professional gambler; he found that if he came for a couple nights and listened, and it changed his luck.

Romans 9:5 From whom are the fathers [the regenerate ancestors Abraham, Isaac and Jacob], in fact from whom is the Christ, the one who came in the flesh, the one who is God, ruler over all, extolled [praised, eulogized] forever. Amen.

The Jews saw the Shekinah Glory in the flesh, but they said no.

1977 Romans

Lesson #567

567 11/07/1978 Romans 9 Origin of the Jew cf. of the Gentile race; dead baby saved; spark of life permanent; virgin pregnancy; negative volition of the Jews

We are going to pull together a few principles before moving onto v. 6.

The Unique Origin of the Jewish Race

1. The origin of the Jewish race is totally spiritual in contrast to the origin of all other races. All Gentile races originate through physical birth. The Jewish race is absolutely unique; it originates through spiritual birth and the momentum there after related to maturity. All gentile races originate in [X]; but the Jewish race originates in [Z]. The Jewish race is the only race with a spiritual heritage. The secret to the origin of the Jewish race is Abraham becoming a Jew after salvation and after cracking the maturity barrier.

2. All Gentile races are descendants of Noah through Shem, Ham, and Japheth.
3. But the Jewish race is descended from Abraham through Isaac and Jacob. Nahor was descended from Shem, but he was in [X], so he is not a Jew. The same thing with Ishmael, Abraham's five other sons; and Jacob's twin. Bob places all of these people in [X].
4. The question arises as to what precisely does this imply.
5. The Jewish race originated when Abraham was 100 years old; but more important, a mature believer.
6. The Jewish race originates from the spiritual birth and resultant spiritual growth of Abraham.
7. Therefore the origin of the Jews and the origin of the Gentiles are entirely different.
8. Paul's burden is related to the fact that negative volition has blinded the Jews to their origin. Their origin is spiritual; they are not great because of their physical genes. It is their origin to which they are blinded, so that having the genes of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and being very proud of their descent, they have selected self-righteousness rather than God's righteousness, and therefore missed the boat.
9. The true Jew can never be a Jew by simply possessing the genes of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. The true Jew must possess the spiritual heritage of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. The spiritual heritage is the new birth.
10. There is no way for any physical seed of Abraham to inherit the promises to Israel — the unconditional covenants. Only the spiritual seed of Abraham is qualified to inherit through the imputation of divine righteousness and eternal life at salvation.

The key for the Jew is to receive the judicial imputation of God's righteousness.

The believer and unbeliever will always have human life in their souls. The believer has eternal life in the spirit as well. No way can anyone in the human race override the imputed righteousness after having faith in Christ; or eternal life in the human spirit at the same time. The Jew who does not have either of these does not have his full Jewish heritage and will spend eternity in the Lake of Fire.

Bob was his father's only son and he was to inherit millions (which his father cancelled out).

The Jews went into Galatia after Paul and said, in order to enjoy the heritage of Israel, they must learn and keep the Mosaic Law.

Bob once memorized Romans in the KJV, but he did not know what it meant.

Paul will use rhetorical dialectics in his reasoning; and who understands this? Smart Jews would understand it.

Paul makes the extreme statement...

Romans 9:3 For I could wish that I myself would be accursed [cherem], consequently separated from the Christ [but it cannot be] for the sake of my brethren [racial Jews], my fellow countrymen [national Jews] according to earthly descent [Abraham, Isaac and Jacob],...

Jesus came to the nation which had the Shekinah Glory. Jesus tabernacled with them and they absolutely rejected Him. The covenants are mentioned after the Shekinah Glory. You must believe in Jesus Christ first; and then the covenants apply.

Principles. Let's go back to the imputation of human life to the soul. Once this occurs, there is no way to destroy that human being. He is a creature forever. There is no sin, no evil, that will destroy that life. This is a permanent arrangement. Human life is never destroyed. Physical death does not destroy human life. Human life exists forever, either with God or in the Lake of Fire. There is no power of earth which can remove human life from the soul. The analogy is, there is no power on earth or in heaven which can remove eternal life from the regenerated soul. In the womb, there is no living soul but reflex motility. There is no human life until God imputes it to the human soul.

When Adam committed his first sin, he originated the sin nature. It has existed, thereafter, forever.

When a child is born and life is imputed and the child dies before reaching accountability, that child is saved because he/she was condemned at birth. There must be condemnation first.

Lesson #568

568 11/08/1978 Romans 9:6 Racial (physical seed) cf. true (spiritual seed) Jews; terminal self-righteousness; all born into X-radical

vv. 1-5 is the first paragraph; the second paragraph is simply v. 6.

Romans 9:6 And it is not as that the word of God has failed. For not all who are of Israel, are these Israel. (BLB)

Verse 6 – the premise regarding Israel. The Greek sentence actually begins o)ux o)ion de hóti (ὅτι) [pronounced HOH-tee], which is literally, “But it is not such as that.” We have the post positive conjunctive particle de, translated “But.” It emphasizes a contrast with what was just said. Next is the strong negative ou (οὐ) [pronounced oo] which is preceded by an insertion in order to render into English the elliptical concept here. We precede with the insertion of the present active indicative of eimi (εἶμι) [pronounced eye-ME] and translate, “But it is not.”

Next comes the predicate nominative neuter singular from the correlative relative pronoun hoios (οἷος) [pronounced HOY-oss]. This is what warrants the insertion of eimi (εἶμι) [pronounced eye-ME]. In the predicate nominative hoios (οἷος) [pronounced HOY-oss] demands the verb to be. With the negative hoios (οἷος) [pronounced HOY-oss] means “not such as” or “not as implying.” We can translate, “But it is not as implying that.” The verse actually begins, “However, this is not to imply that.”

The way that Paul is putting this together in the Greek, it is pure genius. He is apparently going back to Attic Greek.

“the word of God hath taken none effect” – we have the nominative singular subject ho logos (λόγος, ου, ό) [pronounced LOHG-oss]. Logos (λόγος, ου, ό) [pronounced LOHG-oss] is more than just “word,” logos (λόγος, ου, ό) [pronounced LOHG-oss] means thought. Thought is impossible apart from vocabulary. To have thought you have to put words together. Then the possessive genitive singular from theos (θεός) [pronounced theh-OSS] with the generic use of the definite article. Literally, “the word of the God,” but the generic use of the definite article to denote that the canon of scripture is absolutely unique means that you do not have to translate the article, so we simply translate it “the word of God.”

The principle behind this is very important. The entire Old Testament is the spiritual heritage of Israel. It contains the unconditional covenants, the promises to Israel regarding the future of that race and that nation. Put together they add up to something very wonderful for Israel. In other words, they are going to have something that is absolutely beyond the imagination. Reduced to temporal language it spells out a nation forever, a people of God forever, a people under a theocracy forever. But not only in eternity but in time as well, time referring to the millennial reign of Christ. The problem is that because of the insertion of the Church Age and the administration of the fifth cycle of discipline to the nation of Judah it does not follow that Israel has no future. The insertion of the Church Age is known to the unbelieving Jew as the times of the Gentiles. The Jews were always the client nation to God in the Old Testament. The times of the Gentiles means the Jews are excluded from being a client nation. This is very discouraging to the Jews for it appears as though by calling out a royal family, the Church, that God is not going to keep His word and is not going to fulfill His promises to the Jews as a nation, as well as individuals. The insertion of the Church Age has complicated the problem for the Jews. The Jews are so discouraged that they need to be reminded about what is said in the Old Testament. They seem to have lost track of such things; and the nation has become discouraged.

This is not to imply that the Word of God...

Now we have a verb, the perfect active indicative of ekpiptō (ἐκπίπτω) [pronounced ehk-PIHP-toh] [ek (ἐκ) [pronounced ehk] = from; piptō (πίπτω) [pronounced PIHP-toh] = to fall], which means to fall from or to fall off. It comes to mean to fail. It was used by sailors as a nautical expression for drifting off course, or to run aground on something, but here in this context it means to be in vain, to lose force and validity, and therefore to fail. "However this is not to imply that the word of God has failed." The perfect tense is a consummative perfect it emphasizes the process presenting the past act and the present apparent result. The active voice: the Word of God alleges to have produced the action in the thinking of the unbeliever Jew, in the thinking of the believing Jew who is in reversionism. In other words, the majority of contemporary Jews in Paul's time. The indicative mood is a potential indicative since the Word of God has never failed. The potential indicative indicates this is an allegation without foundation. Israel's present discipline and the failure of the individual Jew does not and cannot neutralize the promises of God or the plan of God as revealed in the Word. The failure of any individual or the failure of any nation does not in anyway cancel anything in the Word of God.

This is not to imply that the Word of God has failed...

Principle

1. Individual and collective failure does not hinder the plan of God, nor the validity of the Word of God.
2. The plan of God and the Word of God moves on with or without us. God does not need us to fulfill His plan, but we need Him.
3. Collective or individual failure of the Jew does not abrogate the promises of God for Israel – and specifically for the regenerate of Israel. The Jews rejected the Shekinah Glory.
4. Human failure simply cannot hinder the advance of the plan of God.
5. The failure of the unbeliever or believer does not imply the failure of the Word of God which reveals the plan of God.
6. Rejection of Jesus Christ, the God of Israel, puts the Jews outside of the plan of God and the unconditional covenants to Israel.
7. Human rejection of Christ does not imply that the Word of God has failed but simply the Jew has failed to use his free will and his self-determination to believe in Christ.
8. The alternative of divine judgment is just as clearly presented in the Word of God as the blessings of grace. The fact that many Jews are under divine judgment in every generation does not hinder the promises of God to the Jews. It just means that some through the function of their own free will missed the boat.
9. The Word of God promises judgment in time as well as in eternity to the Jew who rejects the God of Israel. To the Jew who rejects Jehovah Elohim or Jesus Christ that has always been true – in any generation, Old Testament or New.
10. The Word of God has not failed the Jew; the Jew has failed the Word of God.
11. God's promises have not become untrue to the exclusion of a portion of the Jews, for God's promises can only be valid to Jew or Gentile who has +R and eternal life. Therefore God's promises are valid only to the believing Jew who is the true Israel.
12. Scripture defines true and false Israel on the basis of attitude toward the Lord Jesus Christ. That has always been true since Jehovah, the Adonai of the Old Testament is the Lord Jesus Christ, and we are just dealing with a different language.

13. True Israel believes in the God of Israel, Jesus Christ, just as Abraham their father in Genesis 15:6 Romans 4:3.
14. True Israel follows the pattern of Abraham by believing in the Lord Jesus Christ. The promises of God are always valid to true Israel.

“For they are not all Israel, which are of Israel” – ou (οὐ) [pronounced oo] gar pantes (πάντες) [pronounced PAHN-tehç] hoi ek Israêl, houtoi Israêl. This is quite different from what is in the King James version. Literally, “For not all of those from Israel, are Israel.” This may not help much because the literal translation follows the word order, but this is not the correct order in English. Still using the literal translation but rendering the real meaning of the phrase, “For not all who are descended from Israel are really Israel.”

This begins with the explanatory use of the conjunctive particle gar. Next is the negative adverb ou (οὐ) [pronounced oo], denying the reality of an alleged fact. What is the alleged fact? That if you have the genes of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and the twelve patriarchs you are Israel. You are Israel as far as your physical birth and descent is concerned, as far as the imputation of human life at birth, that is true. But Abraham was regenerate, Isaac was regenerate, Jacob was regenerate. The origin of the Jewish race is regeneration. This all adds up to the fact that it is the spiritual seed of Abraham who is the true Israel.

This is followed by the nominative masculine plural subject from pás (πάς) [pronounced pahs], referring to the physical seed of Abraham, the imputation of human life to the soul at birth – those who have the physical genes of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. So pás (πάς) [pronounced pahs] refers to racial Jews. Next is the nominative plural from the definite article hoi. It is used for a relative pronoun. The antecedent is pás (πάς) [pronounced pahs] which is also nominative plural. “For not all who.”

Now we must insert a verb because we are talking about, from the prepositional phrase that follows, antecedents – the preposition ek (ἐκ) [pronounced ehk] plus the indeclinable proper noun Israêl (Ισραήλ) [pronounced is-rah-ALE]. Now we must insert again, this is very elliptical. We have the nominative masculine plural from the demonstrative pronoun houtos (οὗτος) [pronounced HOO-tos] for the subject, and it emphasizes the true Israel composed of all believers in Christ, the spiritual seed rather than the physical seed. The demonstrative force of houtos (οὗτος) [pronounced HOO-tos] should be translated “really.” With it is a second use of the indeclinable pronoun Israêl (Ισραήλ) [pronounced is-rah-ALE], referring to the true Israel composed of born again believers.

Romans 9:6 However this is not to imply that the word of God has failed. For not all who are descended from Israel are really Israel.

Principles

1. Having the genes of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob is not automatic salvation. Jews are born in [X] (just as all gentiles). This is origin. Jews are counting on their birth, but they are born in [X] just as all gentiles are. They believe that they are God’s people automatically from birth. They take themselves out of [X] and see themselves as being in [Z], but they cannot get there without faith in Christ. This is a terminal case of self-righteousness. The origin of the Jewish race was from Abraham being in [Z]; but this does not put those descended from him in [Z].

2. The promises of God contained in the Abrahamic, Palestinian, Davidic, and New covenants to Israel do not apply to racial Jews who have rejected Christ as saviour. Racial Jews in [X] cannot claim any of those covenants.
3. To qualify under the unconditional promises of the Jewish covenants, the racial Jew must become a regenerate Jew. That means faith in the Lord Jesus Christ as the only saviour. He was revealed both in the Old Testament and in the New Testament.
4. The real Israel, then, is the regenerate Israel. This is why Jesus emphasized to Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews, "You must be born again." God must be fair to all of the Jews who have believed in Jesus Christ; and all the gentiles who have believed in Jesus Christ.
5. The unconditional promises of God contained in the covenants to Israel are not the birthright of every racial Jew. They belong to true Israel, the born again Jew only. The Jew who rejects Christ as saviour has the birthright of divine punishment only. The precedent was set at the fifth cycle of discipline administered in AD 70.
6. Divine blessings to Israel, including salvation, do not come to Israel through the first birth but through the second birth. It is physical seed versus spiritual seed.
7. In this phrase, "For not all who are descended from Israel are really Israel," is the distinction between the racial and the regenerate Jew, for there is nothing in physical birth which provides prerequisites for blessing. You must have imputed righteousness and you must have eternal life.

The actions of the Nazis is another form of terminal self-righteousness; and they were wiped out for their antisemitism.

When you start judging someone else, you are assuming God's prerogatives and you get clobbered.

Romans 9:6 However this is not to imply that the word of God has failed. For not all who are descended from Israel are really Israel.

Principle

1. God's plan for the Jew is the same as God's plan for the Gentile – salvation adjustment to the justice of God through faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. And 1John 3:23 tells us what the will of God is for all He imputes human life plus Adam's original sin. It is God's will that you believe in the Lord Jesus Christ. That is the will of God for Jew and Gentile.
2. Until the Jew has believed in Christ his spiritual condition is no better than the Gentile and it could get far worse because he is a Jew.
3. The only issue in [X] is "What think ye of Christ?"

4. It is only after salvation through faith in Christ that the plan of God and the promises of God for Israel take effect.
5. Abraham as an unbeliever was a Gentile; he was a Sumaro-Akkadian. As a mature believer he became a Jew. He lived the first one hundred years of his life as a Gentile. He became a Jew at his circumcision which was the moment of his maturity adjustment to the justice of God.
6. The fulfillment of the Abrahamic, Palestinian, Davidic and New covenants to Israel demand eternal life and a resurrection body – the eternal part. They demand in time the imputation of +R.
7. The problem of Israel, then, is compounded and intensified when they reject Christ as saviour.
8. Therefore the real Jew is not the racial Jew, the real Jew is the born again Jew. Jewish genes are great but there is no spiritual connotation.

Lesson #569

569 11/09/1978 Romans 9:7a X+Y+Z re Gentiles and Jews; doctrine of the true Jew; imputation of Adam's sin + condemnation; legitimacy vs. regeneration

The media has the gall to try to teach us history. We have a good man as governor in Texas. The media are implying that he will be like the last governor (which is ludicrous).

Principle

1. God's plan for the Jew is the same as God's plan for the Gentile, namely freedom to hear the gospel, freedom to accept or reject the gospel. The plan of God goes on with the principle of salvation adjustment to the justice of God through faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, who is not only the saviour but also the God of Israel.
2. Until the Jews have believed in Christ the spiritual condition of the individual Jew is no better than a Gentile.
3. Therefore the only issue is, "What think ye of Christ?" This issue applies to the Jew and to the Gentile.
4. It is only after salvation through faith in Christ that the plan of God and the promises of God for Israel take effect. This is because after faith in Christ the individual Jew receives the imputation of divine righteousness and the imputation of eternal life, and therefore is qualified for blessing from God.
5. Remember that Abraham became a Jew at 99. At that time he had already been a believer in Christ for some time, and he was at that time a mature believer. Abraham was a Gentile for the first 99 years of his life and from 100 onward he was a Jew.
6. Abraham as an unbeliever was a Gentile. He was descended from Noah through Shem; he was a Semitic Gentile. But Abraham as a mature believer became a Jew; he was a Jew at the point of his circumcision.

7. Consequently the fulfilment of the Abrahamic, Palestinian, Davidic and New covenants to Israel demand imputation of divine righteousness first, eternal life imputed first, and eventually in eternity a resurrection body.
8. The problem of Israel is compounded and intensified by rejection of Christ as saviour.
9. Therefore the real Jew is not the racial Jew, the real Jew is the born again Jew, the Jew who believes in the Shekinah glory, the Lord Jesus Christ.
10. In physical birth the Jew possesses the genes of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. But being the physical seed of Abraham does not save him.
11. In regeneration the Jew possesses the imputation of divine righteousness, the imputation of eternal life. This anticipates a resurrection body, and a combination of these things sets up the potential for blessing in time and blessing in eternity.

Paul was mean and evil. He went around and killed Christians in the name of Judaism. Paul realized, when he was saved, was the worst sinner that ever lived.

Adam's original sin is imputed to us at birth; and condemnation must be applied first before salvation. If you cut out Adam's original sin, you have human life in the soul and but a sin nature in body; and a person would not be condemned until he committed his first sin.

The Concept of the True Jew

1. True Israel is composed of the children of God rather than the children of Abraham – Galatians 3:26.
2. Therefore the divine election of Israel is limited to those racial Jews who have been born again through faith in Christ.
3. It was Isaac rather than Ishmael, Jacob rather than Esau, who is true Israel. The twin brother is set aside. The key is the new birth.
4. Therefore election cannot be disassociated from eternal salvation. In other words, this means that the omniscience of God in eternity past knew the actual and the probable. Only the actual was fed into the computer of divine decrees. Into the computer goes Esau – unbeliever; Jacob – believer.
5. Therefore the election of Israel goes through the line of regeneration. Jacob was elected; Esau was condemned.
6. Salvation adjustment to the justice of God through faith in Jesus Christ is the qualification for the election of Israel.
7. The promises of the Word of God are only valid to the regenerate of Israel, not to the racial Jew.
8. Isaac, therefore, is distinguished from Ishmael and Jacob is distinguished from Esau through regeneration.
9. Regeneration, not primogeniture [exclusive right of inheritance to the firstborn] is the issue. The true Jew through physical birth has the genes of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and through regeneration possesses the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob; the Lord Jesus Christ, Adonai Elohim, the Shekinah glory.

The premise illustrated in the formation of the Jewish race and nation, verses 7-18.

We start simple and work to complex. V. 7 is simple. In verses 7-9 we have the first case history, the case history of Isaac and Ishmael.

Romans 9:7 Nor because they are seed of Abraham are all children. Rather, "In Isaac your offspring will be named." (BLB)

Verse 7 – “Neither” is the negative conjunction oude (οὐδέ) [pronounced oo-DEH]. It means not even or neither. Plus the conjunction hóti (ὅτι) [pronounced HOH-tee] used as a causal conjunction and therefore used to introduce a subordinate causal clause. This is translated “not even because” or “neither because.”

Next is the present active indicative of the verb eimi (εἶμι) [pronounced eye-ME]. The present tense of duration denotes what has begun in the past and continues into present time. It began in the past with Abraham’s circumcision – the origin of the Jewish race – and continues into the present time – the formation of the race through Isaac and Jacob, and then the twelve patriarchs. The active voice: the racial Jew who possesses the genes of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob produces the action of the verb. The declarative indicative mood is for the historical reality of the existence of the Jewish race.

We also have a predicate nominative singular from the noun sperma (σπέρμα) [pronounced SPEHR-mah] – “seed.” It is a reference to the physical seed of Abraham. It refers to the racial Jew. “Neither because they are the seed.” Plus the indeclinable proper noun Abraam (Ἀβραάμ) [pronounced ab-rah-AHM]. In other words, being of the seed of Abraham is not enough for being a true Jew.

Next we have the nominative plural from the adjective pás (πάς) [pronounced pahs], referring to all racial Jews, plus the predicate nominative plural from teknon (τέκνον) [pronounced TEK-non], meaning “children,” referring to believers in Christ. Teknon (τέκνον) [pronounced TEK-non] is used here for children in the sense of inheritance. In other words, all racial Jews are not true Jews. “Neither because they are Abraham’s seed [posterity, descendants] are they all children of the inheritance.”

Abraham had eight sons. Ishmael, then Isaac; and then six others. Three different mothers. First the Egyptian slave girl; then the princess Sarah. Keturah during Abraham’s final years. She was very productive. One of those Arabs owned a big chunk of sand where Mecca is now. Just because Sarah was a better woman, that is not why her son inherited. That is human viewpoint all the way. We’d almost have to say that Abraham loved Keturah the most.

Lesson #570

570 11/10/1978 Romans 9:7b Doctrine of the true Jew; self-determination and election of Jews; divine decrees printout: election and condemnation

Bob reading Sports Illustrated. All about frog gigging with Ron Guidry.

We are responsible for growth in grace, sending out missionaries, teaching Bible doctrine, and providing a haven for the Jews. We are studying three chapters.

Vv. 1–5 uniqueness of Israel
V. 6 All Israel is not Israel
vv. 7–18 All Israel is not Israel.
Vv. 19–29
vv. 30–33 the salvation of the gentiles.

First 6 verses reviewed.

Romans 9:6 However this is not to imply that the Word of God has failed. For not all who are descended from Israel are really Israel.

A review of The True Jew doctrine (in Lesson #569)

Final remarks on v. 6:

Between the cherubs was the Shekinah Glory; but the Jews could not see it. The Shekinah Glory came in the flesh in the fullness of time. When Jesus arrived, they heard the Lord teach and they saw His marvelous miracles. But the negative response was strong enough to warrant the discipline of the fifth cycle of discipline. The only thing left behind that the Shekinah Glory had been there is the gospel given to the Jews in the gentile languages (which Jews had learned from previous fifth cycles of discipline).

The times of the gentiles for the Church Age began in A.D. 70. From that time forward, only gentile nations will be client nations to God. When the Church Age is ended, there will be 144,000 Jewish evangelists called out to evangelize the world. The nation Israel today is not a client nation.

It is the plot of Satan to destroy the Jews. When you run into false-conservatives who spout antisemitic conspiracies. The Jews are not the cause of all the problems of this world. The problems of this world are caused by Satan and by the old sin nature (“me and thee”). About the only reason that our nation remains a client nation is because he was a haven for the Jews.

Bob returns to points, which I think is the true Jew doctrine.

The physical seed or racial aspect is [X], but the true Jew is [Y] or [Z].

Principle

1. Both Isaac and Ishmael had self-determination through the function of their own free will.

2. The omniscience of God knew in eternity past, before creation, that the firstborn, Ishmael, would use his free will to say no, to reject Christ; while the second-born Isaac would use his free will to believe in Christ.
3. To be a child of inheritance one must possess both imputed righteousness from God and eternal life. Genesis 15:6. Righteousness becomes the home or the target for the blessing of God.
4. The righteousness of God and eternal life are only imputed as salvation adjustment to the justice of God through faith in Christ.
5. Since the omniscience of God knew that Isaac would believe in Adonai Elohim and Ishmael would reject Christ He put the facts of history into the computer of the divine decrees before time began. (Remember that the decrees only contain facts. Alternatives always exist. Probability is never fed into the computer though probability can be a reality by finding out in eternity from God exactly what would have happened. God knows the alternatives but He never enters them into the divine decrees)
6. Election, foreknowledge and predestination merely acknowledge what is in the computer of divine decrees.
7. Take foreknowledge. It is not the same as omniscience. The foreknowledge of God makes nothing certain but merely acknowledges what is in the decrees, therefore what is certain. Foreknowledge only can acknowledge what is certain but foreknowledge makes nothing certain.
8. Likewise, election and predestination merely recognizes what is in the computer of divine decrees. But neither election nor predestination makes anything certain in themselves.
9. Election, foreknowledge and predestination are theological categories to describe what is in the decrees, while the omniscience of God knows beforehand what decisions would be made and what decisions would not be made. Therefore in eternity past the omniscience of God simultaneously entered all reality into the decrees.
10. The omniscience of God knows the free will of every person and every decision and every alternative that will occur in every moment of history. It is all in the decrees.
11. The omniscience of God even knows what would have happened down to the last generation of history if alternate decisions had been made by you.
12. But only Isaac's decision to believe in Christ is fed into the computer of divine decrees, resulting in Isaac being the one who is elected. Genesis 17:21; 21:12; Hebrews 11:18.
13. This is why Jesus Christ is called the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. Hence, the title for then God of the Jews is the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.
14. Ishmael was the firstborn, the natural but not the spiritual seed of Abraham.
15. Ishmael did not possess either the imputed righteousness of God or eternal life.
16. While Ishmael and his stepbrothers through Keturah are the source of many Arab nations they are not the children of the inheritance. Arabs are goy.
17. Only Isaac was the natural and spiritual seed of Abraham, qualified through regeneration to be the heir of the promises and of the Abrahamic covenant.

18. The Word of God has not failed the Jews but the Jews have failed the Word of God by rejecting the Lord Jesus Christ who is the Shekinah glory. This is the great concern of Paul.

Romans 9:7 Nor because they are seed of Abraham are all children. Rather, "In Isaac your offspring will be named." (BLB)

"but" is the adversative conjunction allá (ἀλλά) [pronounced ahl-LAH], it sets up a contrast between Isaac and all of the other children of Abraham. Isaac is unique and therefore the whole of Israel becomes unique. The concept is to introduce Genesis 21:12. This passage is quoted in Romans 9:7 as well as Hebrews 11:18. The principle: to be an heir of the promises of God one must possess the righteousness of God as well as the life of God. Next is the preposition en (ἐν) [pronounced en] plus the indeclinable noun Isaak (Ἰσαάκ) [pronounced ee-sah-AHK].

Sarah laughed inwardly when she heard that she was going to have a child. So that child was named laughter (Isaac).

Then we have the nominative singular subject, sperma (σπέρμα) [pronounced SPEHR-mah], and with it the dative singular indirect object from the personal pronoun su. This personal pronoun means literally, "a seed to you." "In Isaac a seed to you." This is an idiom for "your seed."

Then the future passive indicative of the verb kaleô (καλέω) [pronounced kal-EH-oh], used here for election. This is a gnomic future tense in the Greek for a statement of absolute fact. The passive voice: Abraham's racial seed, the Jews or the descendants, produce the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for historical reality. Literally, "In Isaac your seed shall be elected [designated]."

Romans 9:7 Neither because they are Abraham's seed [posterity] are all racial Jews the children of the inheritance; but, "in Isaac your seed shall be elected [or, designated]." (Genesis 21:12, where God was speaking to Abraham concerning Isaac)

God is able to look down through the corridors of time. It is not simply that Isaac was a believer in the Revealed God and Ishmael wasn't. The key is, there is no extended future when it comes to the faith in the Revealed God in the line of Ishmael. It will continue for a few generations and then stop (those generations will actually be named in the Bible in the line of Ishmael; and later in the line of Esau). But, faith in the Revealed God is going to continue for many generations in the line of Abraham through Isaac (which line is going to culminate in the human birth of the Revealed God, Jesus Christ). No Savior was going to be born through the line of Ishmael. That line would be a dead end, insofar as God was concerned. That does not mean that there would be no one in that line who believes in the Revealed God in the future. A few would; but the key to the Messiah is following out the line of Abraham through Isaac. (My notes, not Bob's)

Principle

1. The Jewish race began with Abraham's attainment of maturity and is represented by his circumcision when he was about 100 years old. Many of us were born of Noah, through Japheth.
2. The foundation of the Jewish race, therefore, is unique and it forms one of the two elections of human history, the other being the church – that is, two elections specified by dispensations. There are actually four elections altogether: the election of the Gentiles, the election of the Jews in the dispensation of Israel, there is the election of the Church, and there is the election of the millennial saints.
3. This is illustrated by the fact that the Jewish race originated from those who believed in Jehovah Elohim or the Shekinah glory, Jesus Christ.
4. Abraham is the first Jew while his brother Nahor remained a Gentile.
5. Abraham was a believer, therefore under the categories of election, foreknowledge and predestination there is a printout under those categories in the decrees.
6. The omniscience of God knew all the knowable, whether actual or possible. God knows every decision every human being will ever make.
7. God knows the result of every decision in history and also knows what would be the result had free will determined to select another alternative. Therefore the omniscience of God knows what happens in history, or could have happened, or would have happened under different circumstances. So omniscience fed all of this into the giant computer, which we call the divine decrees, and only what actually happens is contained in those decrees. In turn, the content of the decrees is revealed or printed out under certain categories – election, foreknowledge, and foreordination. These categories merely acknowledge what is reality before reality occurs historically. Therefore in the decrees we have Abraham and Isaac as the origin of the Jewish race. Since Israel is an election of God it must originate with regeneration for the possession of eternal life and the potentiality of divine blessing.

571 11/12/1978 Romans 9:8 Universal military training; Clausewitz; Jews: unique origin of and heirs of the promises of God if born again

Universal military training was a part of Israel's heritage. All young men in Israel at 20 and older was subject to military service. The exception was a man taking a new wife. He got a year off. After that, he was liable for military training. It was a privilege to go. Each generation must be in training for war in order to maintain the freedom and sovereignty of Israel.

Many of the people who was antagonistic toward the Israelites were left in the land. The testing was military training under combat experience. So that all the generations of Israel may be taught war.

Luke 14:31 For what king when he advances to meet another king in battle will not first sit down and determine if he is able to plan and fight an army twice the size of his army.

You must have a great officer corps. There will never be a successful army without a good officer corps.

2Samuel 22 He God will train my arms to fight. Psalm 18:34 144:1 are also verses on being trained for war.

This is contrary to the slop of liberal churches today. They try to act as though man, by man's efforts, can end warfare. Man cannot abolish warfare; and man cannot save himself. If our Christian president understood these principles, he would not have abandoned the B1 bomber.

A review of the first 7 verses.

The doctrine below was first presented in Lesson #567. These points in the original notes do not really line up with the points below...especially at the end.

The Unique Origin of the Jewish Race (2)

1. The origin of the Jewish race is totally spiritual, based on regeneration, in contrast to the origin of all Gentile races based upon physical birth.
2. All Gentile races are the descendants of Noah through Shem, Ham, and Japheth. The origin of all gentile races is [X]; but the Jews are related to [Z].
3. The Jewish race originated with Abraham after both salvation adjustment to the justice of God followed by maturity adjustment to the justice of God – maximum doctrine in the soul before Gentile Abraham became Jewish Abraham.
4. Since the Gentiles originate from physical birth and the Jews originate from spiritual birth no racial Jew can be a real or true Jew until he personally believes in the Lord Jesus Christ, the Shekinah glory, the God of Israel.
5. At the moment of faith in Christ the real Jew receives that is necessary for blessing in time and the fulfilment of the divine promise to Israel in eternity – the imputation of divine righteousness and eternal life. This is origin and not perpetuation.
6. Paul's burden is related to the fact that negative volition has blinded contemporary Jews to their spiritual origin.
7. The contemporary Jews in Paul's day are suffering from terminal self-righteousness having failed to equate the Lord Jesus Christ with the invisible Shekinah glory.
8. So the true Jew can never be a true Jew by simply possessing the genes of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. He can only be a true Jew by possessing the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.
9. There is no way for any physical seed of Abraham to inherit the promises of Israel. Only the spiritual seed of Abraham is qualified to inherit through regeneration and resultant imputation of divine righteousness and eternal life.
10. No physical Jews becomes a real Jew until they believe in Jesus Christ. For blessing in time, there must be the imputation of divine righteousness. One must believe in the Lord Jesus Christ so that the justice of God imputes the righteousness of God to the new believer.

11. There were a number of points left out in the middle.

The Shekinah Glory was located between the cherubs on the Mercy Seat. When you have doctrine in the soul, then you have seen the Shekinah Glory. Jesus Christ came in a human body and He was fully visible; but this made no difference whatsoever. The Jews still rejected Him.

Romans 9:8 That is, the children of the flesh, these are not children of God; but the children of the promise are regarded as offspring. (BLB)

Verse 8 begins with the nominative neuter singular from the demonstrative pronoun houtos (οὗτος) [pronounced HOO-tos]. It is used with reference to what precedes and is used with the present active indicative from the verb eimi (εἰμί) [pronounced eye-ME]. It expresses a statement of doctrine pertinent to the argument. It is translated “That is,” but it is simply idiomatic for “This means.”

Next is the negative adverb ou (οὐ) [pronounced oo], it denies the reality of an alleged fact – “not.” The objective negative adverb demands another present active indicative of eimi (εἰμί) [pronounced eye-ME], and we translate this “these are not.” This is followed by the nominative plural subject from the noun teknon (τέκνον) [pronounced TEK-non] for “children,” emphasizing inheritance, children as being heirs. Then we have the possessive genitive singular from the noun sarx (σάρξ) [pronounced sarx], which refers to the racial Jew.

Then we have another nominative neuter plural subject, a demonstrative pronoun again, houtos (οὗτος) [pronounced HOO-tos]. This time it refers to the racial Jews, those who have the genes of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. This means the descendants of the flesh. Here again we insert the present active indicative of eimi (εἰμί) [pronounced eye-ME] which goes with the negative ou (οὐ) [pronounced oo] – “these are not.” This means that the descendants of the flesh [the racial Jews] are not.”

Next is the predicate nominative plural from teknon (τέκνον) [pronounced TEK-non], used for children who are heirs. And finally, the possessive genitive singular from theos (θεός) [pronounced theh-OSS] with the generic use of the definite article to indicate God as unique – the God of Israel. “This means the descendants of the flesh [racial Jews], these ones are not children of God.” That means being a Jew does not mean automatic salvation, automatic heirship, automatically becoming the heir of Abraham.

Principle

1. Being a Jew does not imply automatic salvation. The racial Jew is like all human beings; he must be born again. In the origin of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob there were promises made to each one, and these promises were forever. But you cannot have forever promises unless you have eternal life like God. To miss the boat on this is the greatest of all tragedies to Paul. Paul was the greatest Roman of all and the greatest Jew of all. He carried the greatest burden in life for the Jewish people.

2. Unbelieving Jews are racial but not regenerate. All Jews like gentiles are born into [X] and they must be born again.
3. To be an heir, a child of the promise to Abraham, the racial Jew must believe in Christ and become the regenerate Jew.
4. The racial Jew may have self-righteousness by keeping the law but this is not good enough. He must have imputed righteousness from God, following the pattern of Abraham – Genesis 15:6. Abraham was saved before Genesis 12. It is found in Genesis 15:6 because God is enumerating the blessings to him.

We are in the process of going down as a nation. We have violated all the principles of preparedness as a nation. The pivot of the United States is what is preserving our nation.

When Paul died, Nero died within a few months. And SPQR would become the first gentile client nation to God. The true start of Rome begins with Vespasian and his son Titus. It begins with the Flavians, not the Claudio Julians.

The omniscience of God always knew which racial Jews would believe in Jesus Christ; and which ones would depend upon their own self-righteousness. The rich young ruler is an example of one who wanted to depend upon his own self-righteousness. Only those Jews who believe in Christ are in the election.

Foreknowledge acknowledges those who are fed into the computer as those who are believers. Omniscience only feeds into the computer what is real. Election includes those Jews who believe in Christ only, following the path of Abraham in faith. This recognizes true Israel. Predestination, foreordination deal only with the Jews who exercise faith in Christ. These printouts deal with true Jews only. All Israel is not really Israel.

“but” is the adversative conjunction allá (ἀλλά) [pronounced ahl-LAH]. This sets up a contrast between the racial Jew who is physically descended from Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and the regenerate Jew who follows the spiritual pattern of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob; plus the nominative plural subject, teknon (τέκνον) [pronounced TEK-non], referring to an heir, a child who is the heir. With it is a possessive genitive singular from the noun epaggelia (ἐπαγγελία) [pronounced ehp-ang-ehl-EE-ah], and it refers to the content of the Abrahamic, Palestinian, Davidic and New covenants to Israel – “the children of the promise.”

“are counted” – present passive indicative from the verb logizomai (λογίζομαι) [pronounced log-IHD-zohm-aī] for imputation. It means to impute, to calculate, to count. The static present tense here represents a condition which is assumed as perpetually existing. It takes for granted that it is a forever situation. The passive voice: the regenerate Jews received the action of the verb, they have believed in Christ and are qualified for the promises. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of fact.

Plus the preposition phrase, eis (εἰς) [pronounced ICE] plus the accusative singular of sperma (σπέρμα) [pronounced SPEHR-mah] – “for the seed.” There is no definite article here, and that calls attention to the qualitative aspect of Abraham's seed. The qualitative aspect is that Abraham was born again.

Romans 9:8 This means that the descendants of the flesh [racial Jews], there are not the children of God; but the children of promise are imputed for seed.

1977 Romans

Lesson #572

572 11/12/1978 Romans 9:8–9 Primogeniture vs. regeneration re origin of the Jewish race and covenant promises to Israel

Romans 9:8 This means that the descendants of the flesh [racial Jews], there are not the children of God; but the children of promise are imputed for seed.

Principle Behind Verse 8

1. The promises of the Abrahamic covenant were not confirmed to Ishmael, nor to the sons of Keturah, but to Isaac. This emphasizes the fact that the line of Israel was based not only on the physical progeny of Abraham but, more important, his spiritual progeny.
2. In other words, Isaac was a believer; Ishmael was not. The omniscience of God knew in eternity past that Abraham, Isaac and Jacob would believe in Christ, whereas Nahor, Ishmael and Esau would not believe.
3. When omniscience fed Abraham, Isaac and Jacob into the computer they printed out under the principle of election, foreknowledge and foreordination.
4. However, when the omniscience of God fed Nahor, Ishmael and Esau into the computer they printed out reprobation and condemnation.
5. The origin of the race of Israel is election, foreknowledge and foreordination.
6. Therefore the apostle Paul was concerned for the racial Jew who, though the physical posterity of Abraham, is not the spiritual seed of Abraham.
7. Paul sees the tragedy of being a racial Jew without being a regenerate Jew.
8. Only the regenerate of Israel are the children of the promise or the heirs of the unconditional covenants.
9. To benefit both in the Millennium and in eternity, the Jew must be born again to receive the promises of the Abrahamic, Palestinian, Davidic and New covenants.

Principles

1. The fact that God rejected the unregenerate Jews is based upon the fact that they rejected Jesus Christ as their Savior. Many racial Jews would reject Christ as Savior and the omniscience of God fed this reality into the computer and it printed out condemnation.
2. The unconditional promise to Israel are based upon the divine decrees. Those promises are found in the abrahamic, Palestinian, Davidic and New covenants. Those require the imputation of divine righteousness and eternal life.

3. The racial Jew is close. He has the genes of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. But he is also far away because he does not have the imputed righteousness. These imputations can only occur at salvation.
4. Physical birth does not cut it for the Jew.

More Principles

1. The Jew must be in the divine decrees under election, foreknowledge and foreordination to qualify.
2. Such qualification depends on believing in the Lord Jesus Christ, the God of Israel and the Shekinah glory.
3. For the Jew who rejects the Lord Jesus Christ as saviour he can only print out under condemnation. He does it from his own free will.
4. The condemnation cannot possibly receive the promises of God without compromising divine attributes.
5. To be a Jew physically, then, is of no benefit unless one is a Jew spiritually through faith in Christ.
6. Election is not made conditional through descent from physical birth, or the heritage of the racial Jew, or by keeping the Mosaic law. Election is God's free exercise of grace toward those who believe in Christ.
7. Therefore the hereditary people of God in the Old Testament are not the racial Jews but the born again Jews.
8. Furthermore the rejection of the majority of Jews does not abrogate the promises of God. God's word does not fail to Abraham and to his seed but to receive the promises of God to Abraham's seed the racial Jew is not qualified. He must be qualified the same way his father Abraham was qualified – faith in the Lord Jesus Christ.
9. Therefore, only faith in Christ qualifies for reception of divine promises. The prerequisites are only found through faith in Christ – imputed righteousness and eternal life. Therefore, in the race and nation of Israel only the elect, the foreordained, the foreknown are beneficiaries of God's promises. Therefore the remnant of Israel according the election of grace is always the true Israel, those who have believed in the Lord Jesus Christ. Remember, the promises of God have not been cancelled because some Jews have refused to believe in Christ. God unconditional and eternal promises are for the elect of Israel, not for the race of Israel.

Romans 9:8 This means that the descendants of the flesh [racial Jews], there are not the children of God; but the children of promise are imputed for seed.

Romans 9:9 For this is the word of the promise: "At this time I will come, and to Sarah there will be a son." (BLB)

Verse 9 – "For" is the explanatory use of the postpositive conjunctive particle gar. This means an additional explanation is forthcoming. With it is the nominative singular subject ho logos (λόγος, ου, ό) [pronounced LOHG-oss], referring to the content of God's specifics communicated to certain people in the human race, i.e. Abraham; plus the possessive genitive singular from the noun epaggelia (ἐπαγγελία) [pronounced ehp-ang-ehl-EE-ah], referring to unconditional promises, guarantees from the integrity of God. We have an ellipsis again and therefore the insertion of the present active indicative of eimi (εἶμι) [pronounced eye-ME] is demanded by the next word, the predicate nominative singular from the demonstrative pronoun houtos (οὗτος) [pronounced HOO-tos]. "For the word of the promise is this."

Now follows a quotation from Genesis 18:10. The Lord Jesus Christ had come to visit Abraham to encourage him and to add to his repertoire of divine promises to be fulfilled in the future. And He [Jesus Christ] said, "I will surely return to you when the time revives next year; and behold, Sarah, your wife, shall have a son." Verse 12 – "And Sarah laughed within herself." When she heard the promise she laughed. Isaac means laughter. The Greek says literally, "According to this time I will come, and there will be to Sarah a son."

The prepositional phrase kata plus the accusative singular from the demonstrative pronoun houtos (οὗτος) [pronounced HOO-tos] and then the noun kairos (καιρός) [pronounced kī-ROSS] – "at this time" or "during this time." At the time promised. At this time Abraham attained maturity adjustment to the justice of God and the resultant blessing imputed was the resultant resuscitation of his sexual function.

The future active indicative of the verb érchomai (ἔρχομαι) [pronounced AIR-khoh-my] – "I will come." This means to come with the purpose of imputing blessing. The predictive future indicates an event which is expected to occur in future time. The active voice: Jesus Christ who is speaking with Abraham as the angel of Jehovah promises to fulfil the action. The indicative mood is declarative – the reality of the imputation of divine blessing to mature Abraham, the revival of his sexual function. For 13 years, Abraham had no sexual function at all. When his ability to have sex was restored, so was Sarah's ability to have children.

Next we have the connective kai in which the concept of the blessing is given. With it is the present active indicative of eimi (εἶμι) [pronounced eye-ME] – "and there will be. The future tense, again, is predictive. The active voice: Sarah is going to produce the action in her pregnancy from Abraham. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of divine imputation to Sarah; she is included in the promise. The verb eimi (εἶμι) [pronounced eye-ME] plus the dative case is an idiom meaning to have. We have the dative singular from the proper noun Sárpha (Σάρρα) [pronounced SAR-hrah]. The dative of indirect object means that Sarah is going to benefit from this – "there will be to Sarah" or "Sarah will have." Then the predicate nominative of huios (υἱός, οὐ, ό) [pronounced hwee-OSS] indicating that this one is the child of the promise.

The omniscience of God knew in eternity past that Abraham would attain spiritual maturity, that he would be circumcised in preparation for the new race – an indication that God intended to keep His word and provide for Abraham the heir from his own loins. And so a year later through the imputation of sexual prosperity Abraham would have a son who would perpetuate the new and unique race. The omniscience of God knew that Isaac would believe in the Lord Jesus Christ and that Ishmael would not, that Jacob would believe in Christ and that Esau would not. The printout is based upon the fact that God knew in eternity past what each free will would decide. God did not determine this; the free agency of each individual determined it. Omniscience separates out the reality from the probability. The free agency of each individual made their own decision and these decisions were printed out as the divine decrees.

Romans 9:9 For the word of the promise is this: At this time [maturity adjustment to the justice of God] I will come to impute blessing, and Sarah will have a son.

Principle

1. The foundation of the Jewish race and the nation should alert every Jew to the fact that natural generation is not enough. The true Jew is both the natural and spiritual seed of Abraham.
2. It is true that the racial origin descends through Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. The question arises, But why not through the firstborn, like Nahor who was the firstborn in Abraham's generation, Ishmael and Esau. Here we have the whole connotation of primogeniture or the inheritance of the eldest son set aside. So we have the principle that there is no advantage in primogeniture. The concept is that the elder will serve the younger because doctrine takes precedence in life and in eternity.

The Brits have had great soldiers and great administrators and this is because they practice primogeniture. These men always had a good education and good training; and nothing was left for anything but the first son.

However, it was the opposite when it came to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob; who were the younger ones. Doctrine takes precedence in life and eternity. Abraham reaches maturity; doctrine takes precedence. The peons of heaven lack doctrine; the great ones in heaven all have Bible doctrine. No equality in heaven because that would make God unfair.

Life only had meaning if you have doctrine. There are times at Christmas when any sane person wants to be alone. It is impossible to lose out under doctrine.

Why is Abraham a Jew but Nahor a gentile? Isaac was a Jew, but Ishmael was a gentiles.

Lesson #573

573 11/13/1978 Romans 9:10 Intro. doctrine of the theology of God's perfect plan (review 1-4): definition; sovereignty, will, and the omniscience of God

Review of outline; review of translation.

There is the basis for the interpretation of Romans 9-11. Reviewing the theology of God's perfect plan, which is back in Lesson #550. All notes will be there.

574 11/14/1978 Romans 9 Doctrine of the theology of the perfect plan of God (review 5–10): decrees, will, glory, and pleasure of God; thought

The first 9 verses are read.

Reviewing the theology of God's perfect plan, which is back in Lesson #550. Some notes will be there. Some of those notes are found below.

God's purposes relating to all events of every kind constitute one single all-comprehensive intention, perceiving all events in omniscience, the free as free, the necessary as necessary together with all causes, conditions and relations as one indivisible system of things, every link of which is essential to the integrity of the whole. This means that all cause and effect was known to God and all of it was perfectly related. The decree of God, then, is His eternal, holy, wise and sovereign purpose, comprehending at once all things which ever were, or will be, in their causes, conditions, successions and relations, and determining their certain futurition. The decrees of God are His eternal and immutable will regarding the future existence of events which will happen in time, and of the precise manner of their occurrence. By the decrees of God, then, we mean the eternal plan of God by which God has rendered all things certain, whether past events, present events, or future events of human history. This means not only human history but the angelic conflict as well. So the omniscience of God has the good sense to know everything that ever would occur by way of a thought. The omniscience of God has placed in the computer of human events everything that would be thought, every decision that every free will would ever make, and every action or deed. Not only that but they are all interrelated just as they occur in history. So they are known to us as they occur in history but they were known to God in eternity past.

The decrees, then, are the perception of God's omniscience, the eternal purpose of God, the councils of His will, the promotion of His glory; but not just His glory, His pleasure. Once this information is in the computer it is called foreordination or predestination dealing with future events. That simply means certain futurition of decisions, thoughts and actions of all people. The decrees deal only with what will happen, not with what will not occur. Infinite intelligence knows what will happen regarding every creature – like who will believe in Christ, who will reject Christ as saviour, what believer will retrogress into reversionism and what believer will be positive.

Man with the old sin nature within himself is incapable of pleasing God – not only the factor of sin which was judged on the cross but, worse than that, human good. Human good is just as evil as sin. Therefore the ministry of the Holy Spirit is designed to actually sustain mankind in his relationship with God. This is illustrated by both common and efficacious grace as well as the indwelling and the filling of the Spirit. The principle then: No event or occurrence fed into the computer is directly affected or caused by the decree. Omniscience distinguishes between the actual – what is fed into the decree – and the possible which is not fed into the computer. Only what is actual, what actually will occur in history, is fed into the computer. Events in the decrees are affected by causes acting in a manner consistent with reality, cause and event or thoughts and decisions of free agents.

The decrees of God are efficacious in that they determine all that ever was or ever will be, and at the same time efficacious in relationship to what is directly wrought by God, in contrast to the permissive will of God. The execution of any thought or any decision or any action on the part of a creature is not the decree. The omniscience of God anticipated the thought, the decision, or the action and fed it into the decree.

6. The foreknowledge of God. No decree ever arises from the foreknowledge of God. Foreknowledge makes nothing certain, it simply acknowledges what is actually decreed. Foreknowledge is not synonymous with self-knowledge or with omniscience. It is an entirely different category, a category that does not exist until the decrees exist. Being omniscient God knows all that would have been involved had He adopted any one of an infinite number of plans of action. But the plans of action are all related to actuality – what is actually fed into the computer. Foreknowledge is a knowledge of what occurs in history, but omniscience includes knowledge of what did not occur. The omniscience of God fed reality only into the computer and what He fed into the computer is only related to omniscience, never to foreknowledge. Foreknowledge is not knowledge of future events, it is merely the acknowledging of what is in the decrees. It is cognizance of what is in the divine decrees. God's foreknowledge does not produce or cause any events, it simply recognizes what is fed into the computer, and foreknowledge is a printout. Foreknowledge is not foresight. God does not learn or obtain knowledge. God knows instantly everything that is ever knowable. God knows all events as certainly future because in eternity past He decreed them. He fed reality into the computer from His omniscience. The printout is foreknowledge, the feeding of information is omniscience.

God's decrees relate equally to all future events of every kind -- to the free actions of moral agents as well as the actions of necessary agents, to the sinful, the human good, the evil as well as the morally correct and gracious action. Since the divine decrees alone establish certainty nothing can be foreknown until it is first decreed. Omniscience only decreed what would happen and therefore omniscience only fed reality into the computer. Foreknowledge is related only to what is decreed. Again, foreknowledge acknowledges what is in the decrees. So omniscience precedes the decrees; foreknowledge is technically simultaneous with the decrees but logically it follows. Foreknowledge cannot be placed before the decrees, this would be a blasphemous implication that God was not aware and was not the original cause.

7. The will of God. The will of God must be consistent with His own perfect attributes and His own eternal essence for there can be no compromise of His attributes. Immutability tells us this; His integrity tells us this. It is impossible for God to compromise His attributes. Because of this, therefore, we have to understand the will of God in relationship to man's free will, man's function as a free agent. God cannot compromise His essence. God is one in essence, three in personality. Both the essence and personality connote self-consciousness and self-determination. God did not decree Himself to be. God decreed from His own omniscience. In other words, all the was fed into the decrees was fed from an eternal being who never ceased to exist at any time, who never came into existence at any time, who has always existed in the perfect state in which He finds Himself. The will of God is manifest in the decrees because the decrees cover everything in history. a) God's will is the divine decree. Not the slightest uncertainty could exist as to one of the smallest events without confusion to all. Hence, all of the events are interwoven and they are interdependent. b) The will of God is eternal. The will of God existed in eternity past, long before time and space existed.

Up until 8 months ago, Houston was a great major city. We have people from all over the country moving into the sovereign republic of Texas and polite Texans are in the minority.

God not only fed facts of history into the computer as thought, decision, and action, but He also fed into the computer solution available under the principle of your volition. In other words, God is still a gentleman and the volition of God which always existed created the volition of man and gave alternatives which always have a solution. The solution is always preparation on a daily basis. Principle: The crisis in life which is personal and the crisis in life which is national is something you are never prepared for except on a daily basis. God has a plan in the decree, and God's plan moves on with you or without you. There is only one way to move on with the plan of God. You have to make daily decisions. As soon as you begin to make daily decisions you are going to face real problems in the sense of distractions from listening to doctrine, problems in the sense of discouragement in listening to doctrine.

So God's will is God's policy. God's policy for dealing with the believer is grace. The divine outline of human history as dispensations is a part of the will of God, part of the policy of God. The divine objective is the preservation and the deliverance of the believer. Again, providence is a part of the picture, the system by which God molds all events into the fulfilment of His eternal purpose and His eternal pleasure. Preservation continues the existence of things; providence directs their progress. Therefore the will of God for this study is: Directive: God has a plan for our lives; determinative: God has permitted non-meritorious volition to bring us to the place of either blessing or cursing; permissive: negative volition toward doctrine is permitted but divine justice deals with that negative volition and the consequences are awesome. The fourth concept of the will of God is preventative, and that is the provision of doctrine, the provision of the laws of divine establishment, the function of the royal family honor code, divine discipline, to keep the volition inside the will of God.

9) The extent of divine decrees. God has decreed ends as well as means, causes as well as effects, conditions as well as instrumentalities, events and everything that depends on them. Some things God has decreed to do Himself – called immediate. This is creation. Other things God accomplishes through the actions of secondary causes acting under the law of necessity. Other things God has decreed to promote or permit free agents to do in the exercise of their free will. And all of these categories of events in the computer of decrees are certainly future from this time, and tomorrow from that time, etc.

10) Divine decrees must be related to the glory of God. The decrees unite in one all-inclusive final objective the glory of God and the pleasure of God. Those are two sides of the same coin. Being alone before all creation as the Father, the Son, and the Spirit the decrees of God concern no one but the members of the Trinity. Therefore, whoever pre-existed the decrees is the one who will be glorified in them.

There will be no equality in heaven. Freedom guarantees no equality. You cannot have freedom and equality.

God cannot lose because of His decrees. The only difference is, creatures will enjoy this eternal state with God.

The shock is, the highest glory that man can attain has nothing to do with action of deeds. If the liberal is an animal, the socialist is a beast.

The communists have figured out how to do things to the mind. Doctrine allows us to have a fence around our thinking.

Lesson #575

575 11/15/1978 Romans 9 Education; doctrine of the theology of God's perfect plan (10–13a): imputations, election, predestination, integrity of God; divine attribute of love

From a collection of essays from Mortimer Adler written over a period of about 40 years. Liberalism cannot give a defense of their philosophies without contradiction. The college graduate is not a liberal artist or a liberated mind. The founding fathers did not speak a pure political truth unmixed with error. They were misled by some of them (like Rousseau).

Democracy depends upon leaders and followers. The students confuse authority with autocracy. Through the discipline, men have the authority to rule themselves.

Freedom and equality cannot coexist.

The decrees unite in one objective, which is the glory of God.

Reviewing the theology of God's perfect plan, which is back in Lesson #550. All notes will be there. However, the notes previous transcribed for this lesson are below.

Vv. 10–12 Jacob and Esau.

The divine decrees and the glory of God (Not sure where this was taught)

* Being alone before all creation the decrees of God concerned no one but the members of the Trinity, therefore the glory of God and the pleasure of God.

* Being eternal, being infinite, God the Father, God the Son and God the Holy Spirit are worthy of glory. God's glory is what He is in His essence and in His person.

* As the subject of the divine decrees it is logical and inevitable that God will be glorified in what He is and in what He has decreed.

* Inasmuch as manifestation of His glory secures the highest glory for His creatures – maturity adjustment to the justice of God – and their greatest good it is inevitable that attainment of spiritual maturity and resultant blessing from the justice of God brings glory to God. He is glorified in such action and because of His integrity there is imputation as a result.

* God is pleased and God is glorified both in momentum and in advance in the plan of God.

* The divine decrees are executed through imputations from the justice of God. The whole plan of God is structured on the doctrine of divine imputations.

* There are seven imputations which glorify God in both time and eternity, and these seven imputations become the tactical victory of the angelic conflict.

* Each advance in the plan of God provides divine blessing which glorifies God. Blessing of God and glorification of God are potentials based on positive volition toward Christ at salvation and positive volition toward doctrine after salvation.

* Only what really happens goes into the decrees.

* Omniscience knew the actual which was put into the computer and the potential which was not put into the computer. So you have to say omniscience knows potential and actual, foreknowledge merely recognizes what is decreed or foreordained.

* God had the good sense to know in eternity past what thoughts, motives, actions, decisions would carry one believer to maturity and another believer into reversionism.

* Omniscience knows the factual and the potential while foreknowledge knows only the factual which is fed into the computer decrees. Foreknowledge is a printout; omniscience feeds the computer.

* The plan of God is consistent with human volition and freedom. God is the inventor of freedom. He is the inventor of freedom and the author of human volition. He does not tamper with His own invention. God is coerce or limited self-determination. However, distinction should be made between what God causes directly – such as the cross – and what God permits indirectly – such as sin, human good, and evil.

The following notes came from this and the previous lesson.

11) The principle of election. The omniscience of God feeds the computer of divine decrees facts, only what is actual. Election is a part of the decrees related to believers only, and election is a printout from the computer. Omniscience in eternity past knew everyone who would believe in Christ throughout all history. Election is that part of the decrees dealing with the thoughts, decisions, actions of believers who are related to the plan of God. All election is related to the Lord Jesus Christ – Isaiah 42:1; 1Peter 2:4-6. The written Word deals with two general elections: Israel (Matthew 24:1-25:46; Romans 11:1-7) and the Church (Ephesians 1:3-6; 1Thessalonians 1:4; 2Thessalonians 2:13; Titus 1:1).

12) The principle of predestination. Predestination runs under three words: predestination, foreordination, predetermination. Foreordination is God's preconceived and predesigned plan for the believer. It is synonymous with the decrees, except that it includes logistics. In other words, God's plan for every believer includes logistical grace. Predestination is that part of the divine decrees which relates believers in Christ permanently to the plan of God. It has nothing to do with the unbeliever. There is not one scripture that ever says the unbeliever is foreordained, predestined or predetermined. The Father predetermined the grace concept of propitiation, as per Romans 3:25, so that election, foreknowledge and predestination would always be a printout in this connection.

Bob likes Thackeray and not Dickens.

Love of God

1. God's love in eternity past was complete and total even before the divine discipline. And when all is said and done, God's love will continue to be complete and total. God is love, apart from having an object.
2. This means that God does not fall in love. We have to fall in love. Before that, we have to have capacity for love. Edwardian and the Romans had their children raised until age twelve or so. We must develop norms and standards of the soul and some people never do. Next to the shell game, the greatest odds are in marriage. Too much concentration on the exterior. All of our thinking about love is based upon falling in love. Christians think that God falls in love with us. That gives some emotions. God does not maintain love; nor is His love sustained by emotion.
3. God loves His Own personal righteousness. That is internal, subjective and perfect. God the Father has always loved His Own righteousness. God also loves the other Members of the Godhead. External, objective and perfect.
4. If you had one thing to choose of the things given to us by God, that choice should be His perfect righteousness. This is because God loves His righteousness.
5. In righteousness, divine love for integrity is revealed. In justice, hatred for sin, human good and evil is revealed.
6. Therefore, all creatures are excluded from the divine attribute of love. We have the sin nature, imputed sin and committed sins. When it says that God so loved the world, that is an anthropopathism.
7. While God is love, this love is not understood. Righteousness demands righteousness; justice demands justice.
8. The love of God does not require an object.
9. God possesses His love whether there is an object or not. Most references in Scripture of God's love are the anthropopathism of love. God will possess the exact same love in the end as the beginning.

10. The love of a child means very little. The love of a dog might be more important.
11. Bob has read and studied everything in the Bible about love; so that is all he needs to know about it.

Lesson #577

577 11/17/1978 Romans 9:10a Doctrine of the theology of God's perfect plan (14–15); origin of the Jewish race excludes primogeniture and human factors

Reviewing the theology of God's perfect plan, which is back in Lesson #550.

Repeating the translation. The first nine verses are not the most difficult verses of this chapter. Some of you are ready and tapping your foot to move on.

What is coming is elliptical; and there are idioms; and there is some classical Greek. Those who persist will benefit. Bob has averaged as much as a week on a verse.

Points Covered in Lesson #576

14. The computer and condemnation.
 - a. Election, foreknowledge and predestination is information fed into the computer of divine decrees, dealing with the believer only. The unbeliever is never said to be predestined or foreknown or elected. These are terms which apply to the believer only.
 - b. The omniscience of God also feeds into the computer information regarding the unbeliever.
 - c. This information can be categorized many ways but a simple way is condemnation. The printout is condemnation.
 - d. The justice of God condemns the unbeliever both in time as well as in eternity.
 - e. The unbeliever is excluded from the plan of God for believers known as election, predestination and foreknowledge.

- f. This means that racial Jews who reject Christ as saviour are not under election, foreknowledge and predestination, but under the principle of condemnation. And under condemnation they are not the people of God.
 - g. While condemnation information exists in the computer it is never classified with election, foreknowledge and predestination.
 - h. Therefore the racial Jew without faith in Christ is under that condemnation, as noted in Romans 9:8.
15. The ultimate issue for the believer.
- a. No believer is ever commanded to reinvent the wheel. The wheel is God's plan which has existed from eternity past. God's plan keeps rolling no matter what. The wheel must turn on an axle and the axle is divine righteousness – God's righteousness imputed.
 - b. Every believer must choose his axle.
 - c. The wheel of the Christian life must turn or spin on the axle of his choice.
 - d. You must decide which axle you will use – the one that God has provided, which is +R; or invent your own which is some form of self-righteousness. If you choose self-righteousness you reinvent the wheel, you dictate to God the course of action.

So much then for the perfect plan of God which excludes the ability of man, the personality of man, the morality of man, the works of man, the ideas of man, the schemes of man. There is nothing you can do to ever receive blessing from God. God set it up for you. When you believed in Christ God did the same thing that He did for Abraham. He imputed His own divine righteousness and that becomes the home or the target for blessing in time; that sets up the potential for the plan of God. So obviously, any function of our righteousness is never going to impress God – Isaiah 64:6.

Romans 9:10 And not only so, but also Rebecca, having conception by one, Isaac our father,...

Verse 10 – “And” is the post positive conjunctive particle de. With it is the negative adverb ou (οὐ) [pronounced oo], and the adverb monon (μόνον) [pronounced MOHN-on] – “And not only.”

Ishmael and Isaac, Jacob and Esau

1. This is a reference to the previous case history of Ishmael and Isaac.
2. Human viewpoint might object to the first case history. It might object on the basis of the fact that Ishmael, the firstborn under primogeniture, was also a bastard.
3. The issue is not really legitimate versus illegitimate birth, good mother versus bad mother. Neither physical birth nor the character of the mothers, nor any other human factor is the issue. This is confirmed by the second case history now brought into focus.
4. In this second illustration twins are born to Rebecca. One mother and one father. Twin sons.

5. The eldest twin is a Gentile; the youngest twin is a Jew. Obviously primogeniture is set aside.
6. The difference between them was not in their natural birth, their personality, or anything related to their human birth. Their difference was in their spiritual birth or lack of it.
7. In eternity past the omniscience of God knew that the firstborn, Esau, would reject Christ as saviour. This means that his printout includes condemnation for all eternity, many types of discipline for time. But the thing that is in focus here is that he was not a Jew, he was not born again. So omniscience fed into the computer of divine decrees information, resulting in the election of Jacob and the condemnation of Esau. Bob teaches Jacob +R and Esau –R.

Sarah was often angry. Joan Crawford went out and adopted a baby girl. That the girl should have been grateful all of her life. Crawford got mad sometimes. Bob thinks one of the lowest things is to be adopted by someone and then wrote a nasty book about her mother, talking about her bad temper and drinking. This is not a flaw. Children should be seen and never heard. Bob thinks there is nothing lower than this.

Sarah was a good mother; but possibly protective too much of Isaac. She demanded respect and she used authority as a parent.

Regeneration and the Jewish Race

1. Physical descent, natural birth, is worthless in the transmission of divine promises and the imputation of divine blessing.
2. Only regeneration through faith in Christ can qualify the racial Jew to be an elect Jew.
3. Without salvation there is no imputation of divine righteousness and eternal life. Therefore the prerequisites for fulfilling the unconditional covenants are not there.
4. The twin boys had a common physical origin – the same father and the same mother. The differences between them are not in the physical realm, although some existed.
5. Jacob was tricky, a coward, and very strong.
6. Jacob is a Jew, Esau is a Gentile, and the difference between them is spiritual, not physical.
7. Consequently the true Jew is not in the physical descent from Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, but in the spiritual seed – regeneration.
8. This explains Paul. No wonder Paul was concerned about the racial Jew who in rejecting Christ as saviour has rejected the true Israel, the spiritual seed.
9. The line has to go somewhere. It has to have a spiritual future. Jacob's line had a spiritual future; Esau's line did not have a spiritual future. Esau's descendants would become antagonistic toward Jacob's line. (My comment)

578 11/19/1978 Romans 9:10b Origin of Jews and inheritance of covenants only by regeneration; twins by 2 fathers, Pharaohs

God's omniscience. Every deed and thought and intention known by God in eternity past. All of the possibilities are known to the omniscience of God; but only what happened/would happen is programmed into the computer.

Jacob was not the heir under the laws of primogeniture; but by faith in Jesus Christ, he became the elected one. Election describe Jacob and other believers; it is not a word applied to unbelievers.

Election, foreknowledge and predestination describe Jacob only, they never describe any unbeliever. The difference between the twins is not simply Jew and Gentile, it is far more important than that; it is the difference between a believer and an unbeliever.

Principle: "And Not Only"

1. Physical descent in natural birth is absolutely worthless in the transmission of divine promises and the imputation of divine blessing. Physical descent produces condemnation only.
2. Only regeneration or salvation adjustment to the justice of God through faith in Christ can qualify the racial Jew to become the elect Jew.
3. Without salvation, then, there is no imputation of divine righteousness or eternal life. These are the prerequisites for the fulfilment of all of the promises contained in the Abrahamic, Palestinian, Davidic and New covenants to Israel.
4. The twins, Jacob and Esau, had a common origin. They had the same father and the same mother. But the difference between Jewish Jacob and Gentile Esau was salvation – regeneration.
5. True Israel is being of the spiritual seed of Abraham. This is why not all Israel is Israel. This is why Paul has a great burden for the racial Jew.

Abraham began by having divine righteousness imputed to him after believing in Jesus Christ; but this and eternal life are the basis for him moving forward spiritually.

Romans 9:10 And not only so, but also Rebecca, having conception by one, Isaac our father,... (BLB)

“but” is the adversative conjunction allá (ἀλλά) [pronounced ahl-LAH] which is used to provide an additional case to the previous one; and with it is the ascensive use of the conjunction kai. While kai is a conjunction, in its ascensive use it acts as an adverb. This means that we are going to make a point now and from this will come even a more shocking point later on in the passage. Then we have the nominative singular subject from the proper noun Rhebékka (Ῥεβέκκα) [pronounced hreb-BEHK-kah] – Rebecca. This refers to the wife of Isaac. “And not only [the previous case history]; but also Rebecca.”

Next comes the present active participle of the verb echô (ἔχω) [pronounced ECHKH-oh] which means to have. It is the customary present here which denotes what habitually occurs. Also to the reader this is a historical present viewing a past event with the vividness of a present occurrence. It is brought right out of the past to be used as a spiritual illustration. The active voice: Rebecca produces the action of the verb. This is a temporal participle, we translate it “when she had.”

Then we have the accusative singular direct object from koitê (κοίτη) [pronounced KOY-tay], the Greek word for copulation. It is usually translated “when she became pregnant” because most Greek scholars of the past had a strong tendency toward asceticism. This is followed by the prepositional phrase ek (ἐκ) [pronounced ehk] plus ablative from heís, mia, hen (εἷς, μία, ἓν) [pronounced hice, Mee-ah, ehn] – “from one.” That is, Isaac, her husband. The words “from one” is important; plus the proper noun Isaak (Ἰσαάκ) [pronounced ee-sah-AHK]. Then we have a genitive of relationship, patêr (πατήρ) [pronounced pat-AYR], plus a possessive genitive plural from the personal pronoun egó (ἐγώ) [pronounced ehg-OH] – “our father,” for all Jews, racial and regenerate.

Three women provided children for Abraham: Hagar, Sarah and Keturah. The key is not the mother in these children; but the future of these men and their lines. Israel fails, generation after generation, but there was always a pivot. They continue to evangelize, they continued to add to the Word of God; they continued to teach Bible doctrine. When the pivot was too small, they would face the discipline of God; the fifth cycle of discipline.

Romans 9:10 And not only [previous case history]; but also Rebecca when she had become pregnant from one, Isaac our father.

Lesson #579

579 11/19/1978 Romans 9:11a Printouts from divine decrees; doctrine of election (revised 1–2); foreknowledge and predestination

Romans 9:11 ...for they not yet having been born nor having done anything good or evil, so that the purpose of God according to election might stand,... (BLB)

Verse 11 -- We begin with the explanatory use of the post positive conjunctive particle gar. This particle indicates that this is going to be a parenthesis to explain the case history of the twins. After the word gar we insert the twins, Esau and Jacob, who are the subject of this verse. Next comes the adverb mêpō (μήπω) [pronounced MAY-po], translated “not yet.” It is a negative adverb. Then follows the genitive absolute with the aorist passive participle from the verb gennáō (γεννάω) [pronounced gen-NAH-oh] which means to be born. The genitive absolute is a group of words, including a participle, in the genitive case. Usually there is a noun and a participle in the genitive case. They are not grammatically connected with the rest of the sentence. In this genitive absolute we have the participle which is gennáō (γεννάω) [pronounced gen-NAH-oh], we have a noun but the noun is missing in this case and therefore we have to insert the subject, the twins, Esau and Jacob. They are a part of the genitive absolute. This is understood from the previous verse. What we have in corrected translation is: “For the twins [Esau and Jacob] though not yet having been born.” The aorist tense of the participle is a constantive aorist, it refers to a momentary action of the existence of the foetus in the womb. This is before birth, before life. The passive voice: the unborn twins receive the action of the verb. Before human life is imputed, before the twins had life, they had done neither good nor evil. They had done nothing to distinguish one from the other; one could not be said to be better than the other. This is the first issue. The genitive absolute is used in the Greek in order to indicate that this is the principle being illustrated, and it must be emphasized. This is a concessive participle recognizing an historical fact before the fact actually occurred, which is why we have to add the word “though” in the translation.

All personal sins have already been judged; so good and evil are the issues of the angelic conflict. Human life is imputed to the soul; and that human life is forever. Human life cannot be removed from the soul.

Principle

1. Esau and Jacob were a foetus in the womb but the omniscience of God had known for billions of years that Jacob would believe and Esau would reject Jehovah Elohim, the God of Israel, the Lord Jesus Christ, the Shekinah glory.
2. Esau and Jacob were not yet human beings but the omniscience of God had known for billions of years that one would be a believer and one would be an unbeliever. He knew exactly how the free will of each one would function. Therefore only facts were fed into the computer of divine decrees. Esau was fed into the computer: “unbeliever”. It was known that he would reject Christ as saviour; Jacob was fed into the computer: “believer.” He would believe in the Lord Jesus Christ. That is why the printout of Esau is condemnation and the printout from the computer of Jacob is election, foreknowledge, predestination or foreordination. These printouts have nothing to do with the function of freewill; they do not coerce freewill, they merely acknowledge what free will would accomplish in time.
3. Therefore the omniscience of God fed these facts into the computer of divine decrees.
4. In the printout the foreknowledge of God acknowledged that Jacob would believe, and therefore he was elected and foreordained.
5. Election, foreknowledge and predestination apply to the believer only. They are never used in connection with the unbeliever. This is an extremely important point and this is where many of the followers of John Calvin in his theology have become very confused, for Calvin himself did not go this far. The principle is based upon human viewpoint thinking, upon the Hegelian fallacy that for every thesis there must be an antithesis and when you put thesis and antithesis together you have synthesis. That’s fine when you are dealing with human factors but it will never work with the Word of God. For example, thesis: the believer in the Lord Jesus Christ is said to be foreordained, predestined, or predetermined. That is true. The Bible teaches that as a printout of the divine decrees. Some go on and start to deduce from that the antithesis, i.e. the unbeliever is predestined to Hell. It is true that the unbeliever will spend eternity in the lake of fire, but it is untrue, it is erroneous, incorrect, to say that the unbeliever is predestined to eternal Hell. He goes to eternal Hell from his own negative volition, therefore predestination is never used in connection with the unbeliever. So the synthesis would be wrong if you say that the believer is predestined to eternal life and the unbeliever is predestined to eternal Hell. That is incorrect all the way. It is true that the unbeliever goes to the lake of fire, that is a part of condemnation. It is true that the believer is said to be predestined, foreordained, and predetermined. But this is a printout: election, foreknowledge, predestination. These are for the believer only, these are categories and they are restricted to the believer. Never in the Bible does it say the unbeliever is predicted to the lake of fire. The unbeliever is a printout called condemnation, called judgement, but the printout merely deals with what is in the computer categorically, so that you cannot ever say that the unbeliever is predestined to the lake of fire. The unbeliever is never predestined to anything. The unbeliever determines from his own free will, self-determine. He is an agent of free will and therefore he has the right to determine for himself, and he is never in the category of election, foreknowledge or foreordination.

6. Esau prints out from the computer, firstborn. He was the one who was born first through physical birth. But he was rejected from the origin of the race of Israel.
7. Election acknowledges what is in the decrees, therefore election acknowledges all decisions to believe in Christ and relates them to the plan of God. It is not connected with the unbeliever in any way.
8. The omniscience of God knew every thought, every decision, every action of the twins. Furthermore, there never was a time when the omniscience of God did not know these things. The omniscience of God knew billions of years ago in eternity past and the decrees deal with time, with space, with mankind. But the omniscience of God always knew these things and the omniscience of God only fed historical facts into the computer. The alternatives, the probabilities, the possibilities, were not fed into the computer.
9. The omniscience of God fed only facts of reality in history into the computer of divine decrees.
 - a. Fact a: Jacob would believe in Christ, therefore Jacob was foreknown, elected, and predestined.
 - b. Fact b: Esau would reject Jesus Christ as saviour, therefore Esau would be condemned, rejected for the line of Israel. Regeneration set aside the order of primogeniture - the eldest son becoming the heir. The order of physical birth was set aside, therefore the first born twin remained a Gentile and the younger twin became a Jew, the line for the origin of Israel. The Jewish race, then, was formed by regeneration rather than by natural generation.

We now have a negative disjunctive particle mêde (μηδέ) [pronounced may-DEH], it is translated “and had not.” Then we have the genitive absolute aorist active participle from the verb prassô (πράσσω) [pronounced PRAS-so], a verb which is in contrast usually to poieô (ποιέω) [pronounced poi-EH-oh]. Poieô (ποιέω) [pronounced poi-EH-oh] means to do; prassô (πράσσω) [pronounced PRAS-so] means to practice. It also means to accomplish. We translate it, since it is going to be a concessive participle and a part of the genitive absolute, “and though they had not accomplished.” The culminative aorist views the action of the verb in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. They were not yet born, they had done absolutely nothing. The active voice: the twins, Esau and Jacob, produce the action of the verb which is negative.

Now we have an object of the participle, the accusative neuter singular from the indefinite pronoun tís (τις) [pronounced tihç] — “anything” — “and though they had not accomplished anything.” Then we have two words: the accusative singular direct object agathos (ἀγαθός) [pronounced ag-ath-OSS] which refers here to divine good — Romans 8:28; then the rest of the disjunctive particle, “or,” then the accusative direct object from phaulos (φάυλος) [pronounced FOW-loss]; some manuscripts have kakós (κακός) [pronounced kak-OSS] instead, “evil” — “and though they had not accomplished anything, good or evil.”

Long before Jacob received the imputation of human life at birth and long before his salvation through faith in Christ the omniscience of God knew these things and fed them into the computer of divine decrees and the printout is simply election. Since the verb prassô (πράσσω) [pronounced PRAS-so] is translated “accomplish” it implies attainment. Therefore the Holy Spirit through the dictation of the apostle Paul would use two words of great significance — agathos (ἀγαθός) [pronounced ag-ath-OSS] which describes momentum in the plan of God, and phaulos (φάυλος) [pronounced FOW-loss] which describes the inevitable reversion which results from rejecting Christ as saviour.

Next we have a purpose clause, a final clause which is used to express a purpose, a name, or an objective. It is introduced with the conjunction hina (ἵνα) [pronounced HEE-na], and a final clause not only uses this conjunction but the verb will be in the subjunctive mood indicating it is a future purpose — “in order that.” With this we have a subject, the nominative singular subject from prosthesis (πρόθεσις) [pronounced PROTH-es-is]. We know that prosthesis (πρόθεσις) [pronounced PROTH-es-is] means the predetermined plan. It is used in Ephesians chapter one for the plan of God. Then we have a possessive genitive from the noun for God, theos (θεός) [pronounced theh-OSS], and that means “the predetermined plan of God.” Translation: “in order that the predetermined plan of God.”

Remember that prosthesis (πρόθεσις) [pronounced PROTH-es-is] is defined in Ephesians 1:11 where it is related to the verb proorizô (προορίζω) [pronounced proh-ohr-IHD-zoh] for foreordination: “In whom Christ we have received an inheritance [or a destiny], having been foreordained” - the aorist passive participle of proorizô (προορίζω) [pronounced proh-ohr-IHD-zoh] — “according to a prosthesis (πρόθεσις) [pronounced PROTH-es-is] [predetermined plan] from the one [God the Father] putting into operation the all things according to the decree from his own will.” In Ephesians 1:11 we have all of the printouts for the believer. A “predetermined plan of God” is the divine decrees.

Next we have “might stand.” We have the preposition kata plus the accusative singular from the noun eklogê (ἐκλογή) [pronounced ek-log-AY]. Kata plus the accusative denotes an extension in space, so it can be translated “over, through, in, upon.” It also denotes relationship to something, as it does here. So it is translated “in relationship to eklogê (ἐκλογή) [pronounced ek-log-AY] [election].” Then we have the verb, the present active subjunctive of ménô (μένω) [pronounced MEH-noh], which means to remain, to abide. This is a present active subjunctive and it means “might remain in status quo.” We get that translation from the static present tense which represents a condition as perpetually existing — the decrees of God. The active voice: the divine decrees or the predetermined plan of God produce the action of the verb. The subjunctive mood is used to indicate a purpose clause.

Romans 9:11 For though the twins [Esau and Jacob] had not yet been born, and though they had not yet accomplished anything, good or evil, in order that the predetermined plan of God might remain in status quo in relationship to election.

The Doctrine of Election

A. Orientation

1. Election is always a readout dealing with the believer only. Election orientation, then, begins with the divine attributes of God, and it deals with a specific attribute which is omniscience: God knows eternally, perfectly and simultaneously all that is knowable, whether actual or possible. Omniscience is God’s knowledge related to creatures. (There is also God’s self-knowledge) In relationship to creatures He not only knows eternally, He knows perfectly and He knows simultaneously. Remember that God fed all of the facts of history simultaneously into the computer of divine decrees. Foreknowledge is a third category of God’s knowledge. It has nothing to do with omniscience. Foreknowledge is merely acknowledging what is in the decrees. Foreknowledge makes nothing certain, it merely acknowledges what is in the decrees.
2. Psalm 139:1-6
 - a. Verse 1 — “O Jehovah, you have searched me and you know me.” The search existed in eternity past before any of us existed.
 - b. Verse 2 — “You have known when I sit down and when I get up.”
 - c. Verse 3 — “You have computed my journey [through life], my lying down, in fact you are intimately acquainted with all my ways.”
 - d. Verse 4 — “Even before there is a word on my tongue, behold, Lord, you know it all.”
 - e. Verse 5 — “You have surrounded me behind and before, and laid your hand on me.” God has protected us so that we can fill out our time. We have an advance guard and a rear guard; we have a point.
 - f. Verse 6 — “Such knowledge is too wonderful for me; it is too high, I cannot attain to it.”
3. Hebrews 4:13 There is not a created thing hidden from His sight. But all things are naked and have been exposed to His eyes, to Whom we must give an account.
4. Acts 15:8 Says the Lord Who knows these things from old.
5. Acts 15:18 Says the Lord Who does these things which were known in eternity past.

B. Orientation to the concept of Election (not yet defined):

1. Every minute detail of thought, every decision and every action is completely known and perfectly understood at all times. That is the omniscience of God.
2. Every detail of life is in the mind of God at all times. Therefore, to God the future is as clearly perceived as the past.
3. God's perfect and eternal knowledge is not subject to development, to reasoning, to regretting or foreboding.
4. The decrees of God therefore are illustrative of this principle. The decrees are simply a giant computer. God knew all of the facts and fed them simultaneously into the computer. The omniscience of God knew everything that has ever happened and ever will happen, and He knew them simultaneously in eternity past.
5. However, one category was not fed into the computer: the probable. The actual or the facts of human history were fed into the computer of divine decrees.
6. The facts fed into the computer are described in Isaiah 46:9,10 — "Remember the former things long past, for I am God, and there is no other; I am God, there is no one like me, declaring the end from the beginning and from ancient times things which have not been done, saying 'My decrees will be established, and I will accomplish my good pleasure'." We must remember that God is not in heaven for our pleasure, we are on earth for His pleasure.
7. What is fed into the computer of divine decrees by the omniscience of God falls into several classifications — i.e. facts concerning believers and facts concerning unbelievers. Everything related to the believer falls into one category; everything related to the unbeliever falls into another category.
8. Therefore the computer gives out information regarding believers under at least three categories: election, foreknowledge, predestination. Again, these are printouts for the believer only.
9. The computer decrees also give out information regarding the unbeliever, under such things as degeneration, condemnation, judgement.
10. The omniscience of God feeds facts into the computer known as the divine decrees. The facts related to the believer in Christ are categorized in a printout either by election, foreknowledge, or predestination. In other words, you feed facts into the computer and you receive facts out of the computer. Facts are fed into the computer by the omniscience of God; facts are received out of the computer pertaining to believers under the category of election. Facts received out of the computer pertaining to the unbeliever can be called and summarized condemnation. But we are dealing with the believer only in this doctrine, the doctrine of election.

C. Definition and description

1. By definition election is the plan of God for believers only. Furthermore, election is the plan of God for believers related to a specific category. In other words, election is a categorical subject.

2. Election is that part of the divine decrees which relate the believer to the plan of God in a specific period of history.
3. Election always relates to those who are believers, those who have trusted in Christ as saviour - 2Thessalonians 2:13 We should always give thanks for you [believers], for God has elected you from the beginning for salvation through sanctification by the Spirit, and faith in the truth.
4. This election is also related to foreknowledge in 1Peter 1:1–2 ... who are elected according to the foreknowledge of God the Father, by the sanctifying work of the Spirit [baptism of the Spirit], unto obedience and sprinkling of the blood of Christ [the work of the Son, the basis for salvation].
5. By comparing Ephesians 1:4 with 1:5 we see election related to predestination — “just as he has elected us in him before the foundation of the world ... so he predestinated us to adoption as sons through Jesus Christ.”
6. Election, therefore, is one of the three categories of facts in the divine decrees regarding the believer.
7. Election emphasizes the plan of God for the believer.
8. Foreknowledge emphasizes the divine cognizance of what is in the computer.
9. Predestination establishes certainty, therefore predestination or foreknowledge becomes synonymous with the decrees — synonymous in the sense that there is a definite relationship. What is in the computer must come out.
10. The divine decrees or predestination alone establish certainty. Therefore nothing could be foreknown until it was first decreed.
11. Omniscience places the facts into the computer while foreknowledge merely acknowledges what is in the computer regarding the elect.
12. Therefore election, foreknowledge, predestination, are all dealing with the same facts: the content of the decrees regarding believers. But they cover these facts from a different viewpoint.
13. Various words are used for election. In the Hebrew, bachir — Isaiah 42:1; 45:4; 65:9,22. In the New Testament we have two Greek nouns: eklektós (ἐκλεκτός) [pronounced ek-lek-TOSS] and eklogê (ἐκλογή) [pronounced ek-log-AY]. Eklektós (ἐκλεκτός) [pronounced ek-lek-TOSS] is used for election in such references and representative passages as Matthew 24:22, 24, 31; Romans 8:33; Colossians 3:12; 1Timothy 5:21; 1Peter 1:2. Eklogê (ἐκλογή) [pronounced ek-log-AY] is used in Romans 11:5, 7, 28; 1Thessalonians 1:4. Very rare, but it does occur, is a compound noun suneklektoj used in 1Peter 5:13. In addition there are also some Greek verbs: kaleô (καλέω) [pronounced kal-EH-oh] which means to call or elect. From it we get another noun sometimes used for election klhsij.

Election, then, is the plan of God for the believer designed in eternity past, entered into the divine decrees by the omniscience of God in eternity past. While not a part of our subject,

God has a predetermined plan for the elect angelic creatures. Those involved are called elect angels in 1 Timothy 5:21. Election always takes a believer in the decrees and relates him to his time in history. For example, if we had lived in the dispensation of the Age of Israel then we would be in the election called Israel. We live in the Church Age; our election is the royal family of God. Jesus Christ is said to be in election also, so there are different elections depending upon the dispensation in which you live.

Denver Post used to be a great paper; and the article seems to be okay. The person who wrote this speech is not a believer. Paul Johnson wrote this speech; he is a bank credit analysis person. If capitalism fails, another economic dark age awaits. Bob suspects that this guy might even be anti-Christian. One recovery after Rome took 800 years. The factory system was the way to freedom.

Apparently, 3% growth rate is unusual. Humanity in the 1780s began to hit the right formula known as industrial capitalism.

C. The election of the Lord Jesus Christ

1. In eternity past the omniscience of God not only fed facts about believers into the computer but He also fed facts about unbelievers, and then He fed facts about the unique Person of all human history - the shekinah glory becoming visible, the Lord Jesus Christ. Isaiah 42:1 — “Behold my Servant,” a reference to the Lord Jesus Christ. He is called the servant because He has come to fulfil the ministry of God the Father — “whom I sustain; my elected one in whom my soul delights. I have put my Spirit upon Him.” It is the word “elected one” that is important here. The Lord Jesus Christ is called an election. Election is related to the cross also; not only to His birth, His first advent, but in Acts 2:23 — “this one, delivered up by the predetermined plan and foreknowledge of God, you nailed to the cross.” In other words, fed into the computer was the cross, and therefore foreknowledge acknowledges simply what is in the computer. The omniscience of God knew this in eternity past. Foreknowledge and omniscience are not the same. 1 Peter 2:4 — “And coming to him as to a living stone, rejected by men, but elected and precious in the sight of God.” Again, Christ is called “elected.”
2. 1 Peter 2:6 — “For contained in the scripture: ‘Behold I lay in Zion a chief corner stone, elected, also he who believes in him will not be put to shame.’”
3. Principle: The election of the Lord Jesus Christ is the foundation for all other elections. All elections are composed of believers only.

- a. The dispensation of the Gentiles, a period of time in which there were only Gentiles on the earth. There is an election for each of these dispensations.
 - b. The Age of Israel in which a new race is added, the Jewish race.
 - c. The Church Age, the calling out of the royal family, the pre and the post-canon periods.
 - d. The Age of the King, the Millennium which last for 1000 years.
4. Faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, which is a free will function, a function of self-determination, non-meritorious self-determination, is the key to any election. It is the key to the election of Israel, it is the key to the election of the Church.
 5. Faith in the Lord Jesus Christ is the key to the election of the royal family of God forever - the Church Age group. So the Lord Jesus Christ is called "the elect one," and the key to all elections is faith in Christ as He was revealed in the past, as He is revealed in the present.
- D. The election of the royal family of God.
1. The basis for the election of the Church - royal family of God - is the baptism of the Holy Spirit which occurs at the moment of faith in Christ. At the moment we believe in the Lord Jesus Christ God the Holy Spirit enters us into union with Christ as He is seated at the right hand of the Father. That is current positional truth. We are also entered into union with Christ as he died on the cross, and that is retroactive positional truth or the big divorce from the old sin nature.
 2. No Church Age believer can understand God's plan for his life or the significance of his royal status until he understands the election of the Church. 1Thessalonians 1:4 — "Knowing, brethren beloved of God, his election for you." The participle is incorrectly translated. It should not be translated "knowing", it is an imperative participle, and it says, "You know [now]." You can't learn enough about your election. It is a command to learn about your election as orientation to the plan of God for your life. You will never understand God's plan for your life until you understand your election. You are elected royal family with a purpose on earth and a purpose in eternity. The purpose in eternity is not as important now as understanding the purpose on earth. 2Thessalonians 2:13 — "But we are obligated to give thanks for you [royal family], beloved by the Lord, because God has elected you from the beginning' — from eternity past. No election apart from faith in Christ — "to salvation through sanctification from the Spirit" — the baptism of the Holy Spirit that enters us into union with Christ and forms the royal family of God — "and faith in doctrine" — you are royal family you have to get with it: doctrine, more doctrine, and more doctrine. 1Corinthians 1:2 approaches it from a slightly different angle — "To the church of God which is at Corinth, to those who have been sanctified in Christ Jesus [the baptism of the Spirit], saints [royal family] by election, with all who in every place call upon the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, their Lord and ours." There's the story; you have to be a believer to be elected. Election is a printout of the divine decrees for believers only, just as predestination is a printout for believer only, just as foreknowledge is a printout for believers only. Colossians 3:12 — “As elected ones of God, holy and beloved, put on the affections of grace compassion.” 2Timothy 1:9 — “The one having saved us, and having elected us into a holy station of life [royal family], not according to our works but according to his predetermined plan, even grace [the name of the plan], which has been given to us in Christ Jesus before human history.” Ephesians 1:3-6 - “Worthy of praise and glorification is the God even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the one having provided us benefits by every spiritual blessing in the heavenlies in Christ [our election], even as he has elected us for himself in Him before the world began ... in love having foreordained us to the adoption as sons through Jesus Christ to himself, according to the good pleasure of his will, resulting in recognition of glory from the source of his grace, from which he has pursued us in grace in the beloved one.” Verse 11 goes onto say, “In whom Christ we have received an inheritance [destiny], having been foreordained according to a predetermined plan [divine decrees] from the one [God the Father] putting into operation all things according to the decree from his own will.”

3. One of the greatest passages on election relates it to the plan of God and to the believers in the Lord Jesus Christ in Romans 8:28-34 — “We know in fact that to those who love God all things work together for the purpose of the good [agathos (ἀγαθός) [pronounced ag-ath-OSS]], to those who are the elected ones according to a predetermined plan.” Omniscience knew the actual and distinguished it from the probable. Omniscience knows the probable — what would have happened if you had made different decisions — but only the actual was fed into the decrees as facts. The “predetermined plan” takes cognizance of human volition. “We know that whom he foreknew [foreknowledge], he also foreordained as conformed ones to the image of his Son, that he might be the firstborn among many brethren [royal family of God];” — foreknowledge is a printout about believers only; “and whom he foreordained [or decreed], these same one he also elected; and whom he elected these same ones he also imputed righteousness [justification]; and whom he justified, these same ones he glorified [glorification is the imputation of divine blessing to imputed righteousness].” “Therefore, face to face with these things, to what conclusion are we forced? If the God is for us, who is against us? The God who did not even spare his own Son, but on behalf of us all he delivered him over to judgement; how shall he not with him in grace give to us the all things? Who will bring accusation against the elect of God? God is the one who justifies; who is the one who condemns? Christ Jesus is the one having died, yes, rather having been raised, who is at the right hand of God, who also makes intercession for us.”
4. The application of doctrine, then, to election is the motive for the royal family of God to advance to maturity, and therefore motivation becomes momentum. For example, Ephesians 4:1 — “Therefore I, the prisoner of the Lord, continue to encourage you to walk in a manner worthy of your station of life [royal family], to which station you have been elected.” Election is for the believer only. Titus 1:1 — “Paul, a slave of God, and an apostle of Christ Jesus, according to the doctrine of God’s elected ones and the full knowledge of doctrine according to the norm of godliness.”

- E. The election of Israel.
1. The election of Israel — Romans 9:4-13. Verse 7 — “but [quotation from Genesis 21:12] in Isaac your posterity [your seed] shall be elected.” Romans 11:2 — “God has not rejected his people whom he foreknew.” In other words, every believer in Israel who is in the divine decrees as a believer is also elected. Election, then, has always been the basis of appeal to Israel.
 2. In Isaiah 45:4 — “For the sake of Jacob my servant, and Israel my elected one, I have also called you by your name; I have given you a title of honor though you [unbelieving Jews] do not even know me.” Nevertheless, the principle: Israel will always have an elect, and that elect formed the pivot that kept the Jewish nation in great prosperity during the time they were functioning as a priest nation. Now that that has been discontinued (70 AD) the Jews who reach maturity in every generation determine the prosperity of Israel during the period of being scattered — the Church Age and the Tribulation.
 3. Isaiah 65:9 — “Therefore I will bring forth from Jacob a seed [the elect of Israel], out of Judah an inheritor of my mountains, even my elected ones will inherit it, and my servants will dwell there.” So the elect or believing Jews have a glorious future in the Millennium. There is a pivot of mature believers in Israel during the Tribulation —
 4. Matthew 24:21,22: “but because of the elected ones.” This pivot determines blessing to the Jews scattered throughout the earth. They will bring safety to Jews in the land of Israel.

Election is the content of the divine decrees related to believers in the Lord Jesus Christ, assigned to their various dispensations. Election is a category of divine decrees which explains the omniscient viewpoint of God. Each dispensation has its own election which is related to the divine policy for that dispensation, and as goes the elect in any dispensation so goes the client nation to which that elected one is attached.

581 11/21/1978 Romans 9:11c–12 Characteristics of nations and heritage from Jacob vs. from Esau; high authority and arrogance

The notes appear to be missing for this and some of the following lessons.

Romans 9:11 ...for they not yet having been born nor having done anything good or evil, so that the purpose of God according to election might stand,... (BLB)

We have the objective negative adverb ou (οὐ) [pronounced oo], denying the reality of the allegation. With it is a prepositional phrase, ek (ἐκ) [pronounced ehk] plus the ablative plural of ergon (ἔργον) [pronounced EHR-gon] — “not from works” or “not by works.” Election excludes all human works. Election forms a circle around you and excludes your human personality as the basis of pleasing God. Election cuts out the nonsense about blessing. You cannot be blessed because of your works, you cannot be blessed because of your personality, you cannot be blessed because you have become a very moral, upright pillar of society. Election is a printout designed to say that there is only one thing that attracts divine blessing: your imputed righteousness or justification. That is the only thing.

Back to Romans 9:11 — “For though the twins [Esau and Jacob] had not yet been born, and though they had not accomplished anything good or evil, in order that the predetermined plan of God [the divine decrees] might remain in status quo in relationship to election, not of works, but of Him Who calls [or, elects].”

Closing Principles on V. 11

1. The omniscience knows the free will of man, but does not tamper with his free will.
2. X
3. Nothing can intrude on the free will of man.
4. Faith in Christ is the total absence of human merit. Faith is a system of self-determination and nonmeritorious perception.
5. This verse denies the extreme of supralapsarianism which makes God the author of sin.
6. In the next chapter, the casting away of racial Jews is attributed to their rejection of Christ as Savior.
7. Such rejection was known by the omniscience of God and fed into the computer of divine decrees. Only facts were fed into the computer. The printout is different. Election and predestination deal with believers only. The believer is in the plan of God and no human ability and no human talent or work or function or anything else that man can do. No human function can enter the plan of God for divine approbation or divine reward.

We cannot add anything imperfect to the plan of God and gain blessing. We cannot be moral for blessing. We cannot do things that we don't like doing for blessing. In a perfect plan, the blessing of God must be given to perfect righteousness.

Romans 9:12 ...not of works, but of the One calling, it was said to her, “The older will serve the younger.” (BLB)

Aorist passive indicative of rheô but it became the aorist passive indicative for legô. Autos is used for the 3rd person personal pronoun. Dative of advantage.

Both boys had sin natures; and they were both cheaters.

These verses start and end in different places depending upon your basic Greek manuscript.

Romans 9:12 Not from works, but Him Who elects, it was said of her, the older Esau shall be subservient to the younger Jacob.

Some people never learn how to handle authority. It means many responsibilities more than you realize. Even nice people become instant monsters when given more authority than they ought to have. Some husbands cannot handle it at all; and if they have children, it is even a greater problem. You do not know when you are well-off. Authority is the greatest monster-maker since Frankenstein.

Esau was not as good as Jacob was when it comes to handling life, situations, to have leadership ability; he just did not have it. Esau spent his whole life trying to prove himself to be better than he was. He was always gone, out trying to hunt, showing himself to be better than his brother. Doctrine is a thought, not a muscle. Mentality is the issue. The Jacobs of this life will always outdo the Esaus.

Jews can orient to things very quickly in life; they have tremendous adaptability. Jewish people do not get on the dole; like the Japs.

Points on V. 12

1. The unconditional gracious promises to Abraham could only be fulfilled by regeneration; not natural generation.
2. Esau did not parlay their position into
3. The foreknowledge of God recognized what the omniscience of God put into the divine decrees.
4. The statement of the foreknowledge of God made nothing certain; it recognized free will. It acknowledged what was certain.
5. The natural seed of Abraham cannot be the election of God.
6. Since Esau would be an unbeliever, he would not be included in divine election and he could not receive the blessings of Abraham.
7. Therefore, only the spiritual seed of Abraham can be included in the unconditional promises of the Abrahamic covenant.
8. It was the attitude of the twins; not the order of their birth.
9. Jacob was not a better person than Esau. He may have been worse.
10. Esau and Ishmael were not rejected for parentage or sinfulness but for rejecting Jesus Christ.
11. Not being the spiritual seed of Abraham and not having the imputation of divine righteousness or eternal life, Esau and Ishmael were not qualified for divine blessing.
12. Therefore, Paul is burdened for the Jews. They have rejected the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.
13. The natural seed of Abraham is not the selection of God; only the spiritual seed.
14. The divine heritage of Israel is spiritual. No Jew is a true Jew until they believe in Jesus Christ.

Principles

1. Israel and Edom are in the womb of Rebecca.
2. At the time that Paul wrote, the Edomites had completely disappeared from history. They were defeated many times under David. There were Ideumeans and Nabatians. They were a wild tough people. Romans did not defeat them. But these were completely destroyed or absorbed. The Edomites disappeared from history; but there was no authority-orientation. They were wild and great individual fighters, but they could not respect anyone's authority. They were not good military types because they could not recognize anyone else's authority. They could be defeated in detail. They could not recognize authority long enough.
3. On the other hand, the progeny of Jacob, the Jews, will never disappear from history. They were on the verge of destruction when Paul wrote. But the Jews have continued right now to this time in history. The very presence of the Jews on this earth is a demonstration of the faithfulness of God. The Jews exist on this earth, even though Satan seeks to destroy them.
4. No Jew would ever receive the gracious promises without being born again. As great as they are, regeneration is the key. God cannot give salvation or blessing unless we have half of His integrity.
5. Jacob superseded Esau because of salvation adjustment to the justice of God. Jacob believed in Jesus Christ and this was known to God in eternity past.
6. Omniscience fed into the computer of divine decrees resulting in Jacob's election and foreordination. Because Jacob was elected and foreknown. This does not eliminate Jacob as a free agent. Everyone who believes in Jesus Christ is in the plan of God. Election, foreknowledge and predestination.
7. God's foreknowledge does not hinder or change the function of our free will.
8. God did not foreordain sin; He is not the Author of sin.
9. Jacob and Esau were both sinners. Jacob opted for God's solution. '
10. The heritage of Israel is spiritual. Accepting the divine solution to sin and death.

One more principle and then a major doctrine.

Lesson #582

582 11/22/1978 Romans 9 Battle of Arnhem; R.E. Lee re providence; doctrine of divine decrees (revised 1-2): mechanics, function and omniscience

There is a special schedule for Thanksgiving. The new bulletin.

We are in Romans 9:12

Book on the Battle of Arnhem, and he describes this on a day-by-day basis. The person who pays is the man in the ranks. The high-ranking officers who mess it up come through unscathed. Great courage revealed. As soon as the jeeps drove away with the wounded, the fighting began again. They were using 50% German arms. The armies were interlocked. They never knew who would be in the next trenches out of sight. Each face had eternal looks on them. They all seemed to have a permanent look. Surrenders and a breakdown of morale. Some units fought with stubborn determination. People began to do mad sort of things. No rations in many places. If the units were properly trained, they were good. No training and the people broke down completely.

We are facing great historical disaster. We have been studying the problem of Israel and what the Jew is like.

God Chose Jacob and Not Esau

1. The Jews, following the line of Israel, are described in Matthew, Oh Jerusalem, Jerusalem; who stones the prophets. How often I would have gathered you together. But you were not filling. This is the principle of negative volition.
2. It is the same old story. Men ask for what they really want; and they get what they ask for. Everyone gets what they ask for. When a nation goes down, they ask for it.
3. Jesus controls history, but He did not create sin, good and evil.
4. They come from the free will of man.
5. God has fed the facts into the computer of divine decrees. The omniscience of God only feeds actuality into the computer. Election, foreknowledge and predestination are the readouts. God knew every thought, decision and action of every person in history. We know this as the perfect plan of God.
6. Man is responsible for his own condemnation.
7. To man belongs the responsibility of the ruin of the old sin nature.
8. The divine decrees prints out facts of believers and unbelievers.

This brings us to the doctrine of divine decrees.

General order #61 11May 1863 signed by Robert E. Lee. With deep grief, the commanding general announces to the army, the death of Lt Genl T. J. Jackson, who expired on the 10th Inst at a quarter past three P.M. The daring Skill & energy of this great & good Soldier, by the decree of an All Wise Providence are now lost to us. But while we mourn his death, we feel that his Spirit Still lives, & will inspire the whole army with his indomitable courage & unshaken Confidence in God, as our hope & strength. Let his name be a watchword to his Corps, who have followed him to victory on So many fields. Let his officers & Soldiers emulate his invincible determination to do every thing in defense of our beloved Country.

Robt E. Lee demonstrates his understanding of Bible doctrine; speaking of providence and decrees. If he can understand the doctrine of divine decrees, then so can you.

The Doctrine of the divine decrees, found below, was taken from NB#2; but it is very close, and word for word in some places. I will keep all of these notes together, even then this is spread out over many classes. These notes will start in Lesson #582 and kept all with this lesson, but the individual points will be taken from Lessons #583, #584, #585, #586:

Divine Decrees (2)

Israel 116-117, 11/1/91, Israel 66-67; Ephesians 11-13, 274 Romans #327

A. Definition and Description.

1. Definition.

- a. The decree of God is His eternal (always existed), holy (perfect integrity), wise (the application of omniscience to creation), and sovereign purpose, comprehending simultaneously all things that ever were or will be in their causes, course, conditions (status), successions (interaction with others that leads to certain decisions), relations, and determining their certain futurity.
 - (1) This definition begins by expressing the source of the decrees. "Comprehending" refers to divine omniscience.
 - (2) The definition also expresses the attributes of God in terms of divine will in human history.
 - (3) The definition emphasizes that the omniscience of God knew simultaneously in eternity past everything that would happen in human history (the thought, action, and decision of every person in his life), furthermore, everything in relation to all of the things pertaining to it.
- b. The several contents of this one eternal purpose are, because of the limitations of our mentality and faculties, necessarily perceived by us in partial aspects and logical relations (from Scripture). Therefore, we classify the decrees as being plural, but in reality it is all one decree. We take this up one issue at a time.
- c. A fortiori logic is a part of God's divine decrees.
- d. The decrees of God are His eternal and immutable will regarding the future existence of all events which will happen in time and the precise manner and order of their occurrence.
- e. By decrees is meant the eternal plan by which God has rendered certain all of the events of the universe (angelic history, human history) past, present, and future.
- f. The decrees of God are the chosen and adopted plan of God for all of His works.
- g. We conceive of this in three types of time, but technically, eternity past and eternity future are not time per se. History to us is the past; but to God, everything in history was passed before it began. What you think is a fact; and what we will think in the future is also a fact to God. Eternity past we call alpha time; eternity future we called omega time. God knew us by name and He knew our thoughts and actions even before anything was created.
- h. God fed our thoughts and decisions into the computer. God knew in eternity past everything that we would think and do. God also fed other things into the computer, like logistical grace. Those who would receive blessings in time. Blessings require capacity for blessing. The secret is the capacity of the soul. We don't have anything that cannot be taken from us.

- i. The Presbyterian shorter catechism says: "The decrees of God are His eternal purpose according to the counsels of His own will whereby for His own glory He has foreordained whatever comes to pass."
- j. The decrees are the all-inclusive will and purpose of God concerning all that ever was or will be, which originates wholly within Himself (omniscience), and which He Himself alone must have objectively designed for His own glory and for His satisfaction.
- k. By accommodation to creatures of time and space subject to subdivisions reaching out to the falling of the sparrow, all decrees were simultaneous, not given by stages. However, because of the finite mental limitations of man, we must perceive them by logical and chronological progression. The human mind, when thinking properly, thinks according to logic and chronology.
- l. All decrees are efficacious in that they determine all that ever was, all that is, and all that ever will be, but the decrees are viewed by man from two standpoints.
 - (1) Efficacious means that which is directly wrought by God from His sovereignty.
 - (2) Permissive means that which is appointed by God to be accomplished by secondary causes or by the free will and action of agents (the free will of man).
- m. There are five characteristics of the decrees.
 - (1) The decrees are all-comprehensive. That means that not the slightest uncertainty could exist as to one of the smallest or most insignificant of events without confusion to all. Therefore, all events in the life of every person are interwoven and interdependent. God is not the author of confusion. Everything you think, why you think it, and the environment in which you think it, was all known to God in eternity past. This also says everything in life is a chain of cause and effect events.
 - (2) The decrees are eternal. God is not gaining in knowledge. What God has known at any time He has always known. Omniscience means God knew simultaneously everything that ever was or will be in their causes, conditions, successions, and relations.
 - (3) God is perfect; therefore, His decrees are perfect. They are not perfect in content, because they include sin, failure, etc. But everything that would ever happen was always known to God. His is a perfect system of comprehension. God's plan is perfect for imperfect man.
 - (4) The decrees are unchangeable and certain. Nothing can possibly occur to necessitate a change. God is never "caught" not knowing something. God has never had to make any changes or any adjustments in the divine decrees.
 - (5) The decrees are the free choice of God in eternity past. (This is the most important point to understand, one which many theologians do not understand.) God is not bound to follow any necessary path. Having decreed, however, He is bound by His infinite faithfulness and truth to complete what He has begun. The free choice of God is very important, because God, from His own sovereign volition, invented free will in two categories of creatures, angels and mankind, so that both categories can choose for or against God.

- (6) Time and space are the place. God knows every sparrow that falls, down to the most insignificant item.
- n. Ephesians 2:10 For we are His production [we have the provision of computer assets in our very own portfolio; i.e., election and predestination], having been created in Christ Jesus [the formation of the royal family of God and a new spiritual species resulting in positional sanctification by which every believer becomes the heir of God and has equal privileges under predestination] for good achievements [in momentum in the divine dynasphere as a part of equal privilege of election] which God has prepared in advance [divine provision of your portfolio of invisible assets], that we should walk by means of them [utilization of our computer assets].
- o. The decrees of God are His eternal purpose regarding you according to the counsels of His own wisdom and His sovereign will, whereby for His own glory (we are created for His own glory) He has programmed into the computer decrees all that will come to pass in the function of the human race in history. In the decrees, the sovereignty of God and free will of man coexist in human history.
- p. The principle of precreation reality.
 - (1) Inasmuch as the decrees were simultaneously known by God, they were simultaneously decreed by God. To appreciate the decrees, one must understand the nature of omniscience as a part of divine essence.
 - (2) Of all the decrees, five are related to the purpose of God in election. Therefore, they are called in election the five elective decrees. From this comes the concept of lapsarianism.
 - (3) The decrees must be in logical order. This is the subject of the doctrine of lapsarianism. Though the entire decree is one thought in the mind of God, the principle of cause and effect is involved in human thinking and understanding. The term lapsarian refers to the doctrine of divine decrees from the standpoint that man is a fallen being.
 - (4) Lapsarianism provides the logical order for the five elective decrees. (See the doctrine of Lapsarianism.) The correct logical order is:
 - (a) The decree to create.
 - (b) The decree to permit the fall.
 - (c) Unlimited atonement.

- (d) The decree to motivate by means of election and glorify God through the deposit of escrow blessings.
- (e) The simultaneous decrees of election and predestination, and to apply salvation to those who believe in Christ. The Bible states that man is the object of grace after, not before, the fall in John 15:9, Romans 11:5-7; Ephesians 1:4-6; 1Peter 1:2.

2. Distinctions.

- a. The distinction between the decree and the execution of the decree in our thinking means the one logically follows the other. However, the execution itself is not a part of the decree itself. The decree occurred in eternity past, the execution occurs in human history. The false views of lapsarianism fail to take cognition of this.
- b. Distinction should be made between God's laws and God's decrees. Laws regulate human conduct, while decrees are God's plan and action in eternity past. Laws can be broken; the decrees of God can never be broken.
- c. Distinction between God's desires, like election, and the rejection of God's desires must be understood. God knows all your negative acts but doesn't interfere with your free will; for this would prevent the angelic conflict from ever being settled.
 - (1) For example, while sin and death are displeasing to God and incompatible with His divine nature, nevertheless, they belong to the decrees under the category of the fall of man.
 - (2) For example, while loser believers are displeasing to God and incompatible with His sovereign will, nevertheless, they belong to the decrees, having a printout from their PROM chip. We all have a PROM chip with our name on it, expressing our positive or negative volition toward God's sovereign will for our lives.

3. The Analogy to the Computer.

- a. God's eternal and sovereign will for every believer is expressed in the Romans chip, having printouts such as election, glorification, justification, and predestination.
- b. In further explanation, the decrees of God are pictured as a giant computer, and the omniscience of God feeds the facts into the computer.
 - (1) The Romans chip is the sovereignty of God chip. It is an integrated circuit into which unchanging data can be read, but into which no new data can be written, a perfect illustration of God's knowledge of history in eternity past. Romans stands for "read only memory."
 - (2) The PROM chip is the free will of man chip. PROM stands for "programmable read only memory." It is an integrated circuit with fixed data that can be read but not altered.
 - (3) By analogy, your life can be read but not altered. You have privacy and can make good or bad decisions.

- (4) The entering of data is performed after the PROM chip is manufactured. The omniscience of God programmed into this PROM chip how you would function in time.
 - (5) All PROM chips contain data regarding the function of the free will of man in history. He fed the facts simultaneously in eternity past. The facts include everything you ever think, decide, or do in the past, present, and future. This doesn't tamper with your free will.
 - c. All logistical grace, and those who would be blessed and their blessings, were fed into the computer decrees. God knew every problem, heartache, and situation you would face before you ever existed. (Therefore, you insult God when you pray "God help," as if He didn't already know you needed help.)
 - d. The computer of decrees prints out facts about believers under the categories of election, foreknowledge, predestination, justification and glorification. It also prints out facts on the unbeliever under the categories of reprobation, condemnation and retribution.
- 4. The Decrees and Omniscience.
 - a. The decrees of God are the sum total of God's plan designed in eternity past relating to all events of every classification collected into one single all-comprehensive whole through the omniscience of God. The decrees of God are His plan, His protocol plan.
 - b. The omniscience of God is the key to understanding the decrees. God has three categories of divine knowledge.
 - (1) Self-knowledge. Each person of the Godhead has infinite and eternal knowledge about Himself and the other two members of the Trinity.
 - (2) Omniscience. God knows all the knowable simultaneously about creatures, both the actual and the possible, but only the actual is programmed into the decrees.
 - (3) Foreknowledge. It merely acknowledges what is in the decrees but does not make anything certain; the believer still has free will that is uncoerced. (See the doctrine of Predestination.)
- 5. The Decrees and Election.
 - a. Election is the sovereign right of God over His creation. It is the expression of the sovereign will of God for believers only in eternity past, i.e., that you have the most fantastic blessings for time and eternity. Ephesians 1:4, "Since He Himself has elected us in Him before the foundation of the world." The decrees begin with election. provides
 - b. Election and predestination provide equal privilege and equal opportunity for all believers.
 - (1) The equal privilege of election is God's decision to make every Church Age believer a royal priest forever.

- (2) The equal opportunity of election is God's provision of logistical grace support for every Church Age believer.
 - (3) The equal privilege of predestination is God's decision to enter every Church Age believer into union with Christ forever through the baptism of the Holy Spirit and resultant positional sanctification. This creates a new spiritual species.
 - (4) The equal opportunity of predestination is God's provision of the divine dynasphere for the Church Age believer in time.
6. The Problem of Misinterpretation of the Decrees.
- a. Example: If the decrees make all things certain, then some say there is no occasion for man to use means, being unable to avoid the results decreed. In other words, why use any means if you are going to end up under predestination in the same situation?
 - b. This ignores the fact that God has decreed the means as well as the ends, and that all God expresses in election is His desire that we all be rich from blessing.
 - c. Man's destiny is the outworking of his own thinking, motivation, thinking, and decisions, which God knew and entered into a PROM chip. God knows all, yet that does not interfere with your PROM chip. God's knowledge of the facts does not interfere with their outworking in time.
 - d. The decree of God removes no man from what, within the sphere of his own experience, is the outworking of his own choice, acting from his own judgment, based on his own desires, thoughts and circumstances. Whatever free will choice anyone makes is the execution of the decrees. No decree opposes human freedom. God's knowledge in eternity past in no way effects or interferes with our thoughts, motives, decisions, or actions. Knowing our failures, God went ahead with the plan anyway; that's grace.
 - e. All decrees are efficacious in that they certainly determine all that ever was or will be. However, there are both efficacious decrees, things which God does directly, and permissive decrees, things which God permits as the function of free will.
 - f. Some things God has decreed to do Himself. That is called immediacy. Others things come to pass through the action of secondary causes acting under the law of necessity. Other things He decreed free will agents to do in the exercise of their volition. Yet one category is rendered by the decree of God as certainly free as the other. Mankind never acts outside of the decrees.
- B. The Mechanical Function of the Computer of Divine Decrees.
- 1. The Knowledge of God.
 - a. The Omniscience of God. The omniscience of God is God's objective knowledge of the universe and all creatures.
 - (1) God is eternal; therefore, His knowledge is eternal. God is sovereign, His knowledge is superior, and not related to human or angelic limitations.

- (2) God's omniscience is consistent with his essence.
- (3) God is infinite; therefore, His knowledge is without boundary or limitation, hence, absolute and eternal knowledge. His knowledge is infinitely superior to creature knowledge.
- (4) Every minute detail is in His mind at all times.
- (5) God is sovereign; therefore, His knowledge is in control at all times.
- (6) Time has nothing to do with God's knowledge. The future is as perspicuous as the past.
- (7) All of God's knowledge is simultaneous. God knows perfectly, eternally, and simultaneously all that is knowable both actual and possible. There never was a time in eternity past or human history when God did not know all the knowable about everything. Such perception and sagacity is totally compatible with His divine essence. Every minute detail of both angelic and human creation is completely and perfectly in His mind at all times.
- (8) God's knowledge is never irrational, speculative, theoretical, unknown, or forgotten.

b. General Characteristics of the Knowledge of God.

- (1) God is eternally Himself in three coequal, co-infinite, and coeternal persons. Therefore, each person in the Godhead knows Himself to be beyond comparison in His eternal and absolute knowledge of all things.
- (2) God's knowledge is never complicated by ignorance, absurdities, or emotional reaction.
- (3) God cannot change or be inaccurate in His knowledge. Divine knowledge is absolute.
- (4) God's knowledge cannot be more or less than it is.
- (5) While divine self-knowledge is related to the persons of the Godhead, omniscience is really divine knowledge related to creatures- angelic, human, and the animal kingdom.

c. There are three categories of divine knowledge.

- (1) Self-knowledge, which includes knowledge of the divine essence, the other members of the Trinity, and all things related to God.
- (2) Omniscience, which deals with creation, angelic and human, both actual and possible.
- (3) Foreknowledge, which is knowledge of what is in the decrees related to believers only. The foreknowledge of God makes nothing certain, but merely acknowledges what is certain; what is in the decrees regarding believers.
 - (a) As far as believers are concerned, there are numerous categories of printouts from the computer decrees: foreknowledge, election, predestination or foreordination, justification, and glorification.

- (b) Foreknowledge means nothing can be known until it is first decreed. Therefore, God foreknows all events as certainly future because He has decreed them as certainly future.
 - (c) God's decrees relate equally to all future events of every kind; to the free actions of moral agents as well as to the actions of necessary agents; to sin evil and human good, as well as to moral, divine good, and honorable thoughts, decisions, and actions.
 - (d) Foreordination or predestination alone establishes certainty. Foreordination is a synonym for the decrees. Predestination is technically the printout for believers.
 - (e) Foreordination is an act of the infinitely intelligent and wise God in determining the certain futurity of all events. Omniscience decreed everything simultaneously and not by stages, because it was all in the omniscience of God in eternity past.
- d. Omniscience.
- (1) Under the omniscience of God, all decrees were simultaneously known to God and simultaneously decreed by God in eternity past. There never was a time when God did not know all the knowable.
 - (2) God knows perfectly, eternally, and simultaneously all that is knowable both actual and possible. The omniscience of God also knows the alternatives to history; i.e., "iffy" history. God knows exactly what would have happened had another course of action occurred, but this is not entered into the computer decrees. Therefore, the omniscience of God knows every thought, act, decision of history and how they relate, plus what the alternatives would have been. God knows all that would have been involved in every case where man's decision might have been different from what it was. Divine knowledge about creatures is programmed into the computer of divine decrees. While the possible and alternatives to reality are known to God, only the reality is programmed into the computer of divine decrees. There are two categories of memory chips in the computer of divine decrees: the ROM chips are programmed by the sovereignty of God, the PROM, or free will of man chips, are programmed by the omniscience of God.
 - (3) The principles of history are related to God's knowledge.
 - (a) In human history, the sovereignty of God and the free will of man coexist, and this coexistence is by divine decree.
 - (b) God's knowledge of human volition has nothing to do with the function of that human volition in time. This is why God does not stop you from making bad decisions. God invented creature freedom.

- (c) The omniscience of God simply knows and has always known every decision of every human beings in history and every thought that preceded it and every motive that was involved as well as every action that followed.
 - (d) God knew billions and billions of years ago that Isaac would believe in Jesus Christ and Ishmael would not. Therefore, the printout for Isaac's PROM chip is regeneration and true Israel, and the printout for Ishmael's PROM chip is condemnation and exclusion from the new racial species of Israel. Every human being, in the same way, has his very own PROM chip.
- (4) The concept of historical sins.
- (a) In addition to every person in history having his own PROM chip, there is another PROM chip which includes all human beings in history. The omniscience of God programmed into this PROM chip all personal sins in history. On the Cross, God the Father called for the printout of this chip and imputed all personal sins to Christ and judged every one of them. Since both sins of cognizance and sins of ignorance are the function of human volition, every sin in human history was imputed to Christ and judged by God the Father on the Cross.
 - (b) The sovereignty of God and free will of man coexist by divine decree in human history. Even though God gives a perfect volition, He imputes Adam's original sin to the genetically formed old sin nature for condemnation at the point of physical birth, so that we are qualified for salvation automatically.
- e. Therefore, omniscience perceives the free as free (God will never tamper with your volition), the necessary as necessary (divine justice as our point of reference), together with all their causes, conditions, and relations, as one indivisible system of things (every cause and effect is related to another cause and effect, and so on, so that the course of human history is just as man thinks it, wills it, and does it), every link of which is essential to the integrity of the whole. If we understand this, we will never again complain, feel neglected, or sad or left out.
2. The Decree Itself.
- a. The omniscience of God fed only facts into the computer decrees.
 - b. This was accomplished simultaneously in eternity past.
 - c. The decrees have become the complete and consummated right of the sovereignty of God determining the certain futuration of all things in human history.
 - d. No event is directly effected or caused by the decrees.

- e. But the decree itself provides in every case that the events shall be effected by causes acting in a manner consistent with the nature of the event in question. (You are never deprived of your free will.) God never changes the decree of what will happen and never tampers with your actions.
 - f. Therefore, in the case of every free will act of a moral agent, the decree itself provides at the same time the following.
 - (1) That the agent shall be a free agent (self-determination). When you were given life, you were given self-determination. Therefore, you are accountable for your own bad decisions.
 - (2) That the antecedents and all antecedents of every act in question shall be what they shall be. Whenever you make a decision it shall be the result of decisions before that. The circumstances will be what they are, the facts will be what they are, and God knows what you're thinking and will decide. Man's acts are a result of man's free will, not because the sovereignty of God causes man to perform the act.
 - (3) That all present conditions of the act shall be what they are. The action takes place in a moment of time and is your very own act.
 - (4) That the act shall be perfectly spontaneous and free on the part of the agent. There is no coercion.
 - (5) That it shall be certainly future.
 - g. Hence, the decree from God's will settled only what His creation would be.
 - h. Because God cannot contradict His own nature or His being, the essence and attributes of God necessitated His willing the highest and best for mankind.
 - i. The decrees of God are His eternal and immutable will regarding the future existence of events which will happen in time and the precise manner and order of their occurrence. The decisions are made, the circumstances are all there on tape; we just see things as they unfold in history. We know how it's going to turn out, but it's still fun watching things unroll. Your life is on tape, and the tape is running. God wouldn't be God if He didn't know it all beforehand. Yet God never violates your volition.
 - j. The decrees express the eternal plan and will of God by which God has rendered certain all events of history, past, present and future.
 - k. Therefore, the decrees are eternal and simultaneous knowledge of omniscience expressing the will of God by which all things are brought into being and controlled, made subject to His divine pleasure, and result in His eternal glory.
3. The Printout Applying to Believers.
- a. The printout applying to believers includes election, foreknowledge, predestination or foreordination.

- b. Foreordination is also known as predetermination. Predetermination is an act of the infinite and eternal omniscience of God determining the certain futuration of all events related to the believer.
- c. Foreknowledge is not the same as omniscience. It is more limited because it deals with only the actual, and only with believers.
- d. Being omniscient, God knows all that would have been involved had He adopted any one of an infinite number of plans of action as well as the consequences had man chosen alternatives.
- e. Foreknowledge refers only to those things which are within the plan of God, adopted for the believers only.
- f. The decree alone establishes certainty. Nothing could be foreknown until it was first predetermined or decreed.
- g. Therefore, God's decrees never originate with His foreknowledge. The logical order is: omniscience, foreordination (the decree), then foreknowledge. The decrees make all things certain, not foreknowledge. God's foreknowledge only knows what is certain.
- h. Election is the plan of God for believers only.
 - (1) Election is the key to the Jewish problem related to the four unconditional covenants.
 - (2) The second birth is required of all Jews to be a true Jew.
 - (3) These promises can only be fulfilled to the elect, to those who believe in Christ. There lies the great problem in every generation of Israel: to possess the genes of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, but not to follow them in regeneration.
 - (a) Romans 9:11-12 For though his twins had not yet been born, and had not accomplished anything good or evil, in order that the predetermined plan of God might stand on the basis of election, not because of works, but because of Him who calls, it was said to her, 'The older will serve the younger.' God knew in eternity past that Jacob would believe in Christ for salvation and Esau, his twin brother, would not believe.
 - (b) Hebrews 12:17 For you know that even afterwards, when he [Esau] desired to inherit the blessings, he was rejected, for he found no place for a change of mind, though he sought for it with tears. Esau's scar tissue of the soul completely clogged up his stream of consciousness and garbage in subconscious finished the job of blocking gospel information from circulating in his soul. All he had left was emotion, and emotion will not save anyone. In eternity past, God the Father entered this information into the computer of the divine decrees. Crying for salvation is an insult to the work of Jesus Christ on the Cross.
 - (c) Regeneration sets aside the order and precedence of physical or natural birth. There is no equality in biological life, but in the soul life created by God at birth, there is equal privilege and equal opportunity for every member of the human race to believe in Christ and have spiritual life. No one is handicapped by biological life because God provides equality of opportunity to believe in Christ.

(d) Hebrews 4:13 And there is no creature hidden from His sight, but all things are open and laid bare to the eyes of Him with whom we have to do.

(4) The gracious unconditional promises can only be fulfilled to the elect, to those who at the moment of faith in Christ receive the imputations of perfect righteousness and eternal life.

C. The Will of God and the Divine Decrees.

1. There is one all-inclusive will and purpose of God concerning all there ever was or will be from the beginning of history until its termination.
2. This will and purpose of God originated within Himself long before any creature ever existed.
3. This means the will and purpose of God related to the decrees is designed for the glory, pleasure, and satisfaction of God.
4. All creatures have been placed into space and time. Furthermore, all events related to space and time were simultaneously decreed. They result in divine action.
 - a. Related to the Godhead, these actions are immanent, intrinsic, and subjective.
 - b. Related to creation, these actions of God are extrinsic (cognizant of angelic and human volition), transient (chronological in their function), and objective (the function of divine justice as the point of reference for the human race).
5. God did not decree Himself to be. God eternally existed before and outside of the decrees. Therefore, the decrees do not act upon God, but God acts upon the decrees.
6. God's decrees are efficacious, determining all that ever was or will be, including the directive, permissive, and overruling will of God.
7. All things depend on God's will and nothing is certain apart from God's will. There comes a point in theology where God's will and the decrees must be understood as synonymous.
8. God's decrees originate from His own omniscience in eternity past separating fact from fiction.
9. Therefore, distinction must be made between the omniscience of God and the foreknowledge of God.
10. God's decrees do not originate from His foreknowledge.
11. The foreknowledge of God makes nothing certain; it merely perceives what is certain, what is decreed. Only the decrees or foreordination makes anything certain.
12. Therefore, nothing can be foreknown until it is first decreed. This means you never have to run to God and say, "Oh God! Help!"

13. Foreknowledge is cognizance of what is decreed.
14. Distinction has to be made between the decrees of God and the desires of God. The decrees include a lot of things which are not God's desires, because the decrees include all things you think, say or do. Many things in the decrees are not the desires of God.
15. Sin, human good, and evil are not the desires of God but are in the decrees because they are performed by our free will.
16. God desires His perfect will and sovereignty, but both angelic and human creatures use their God-given free will and self-determination to violate the desires of God. So the decrees contain both the will of God and desires of God. The decrees are the all-inclusive will of God.
17. God does not desire to cast His creatures into the lake of fire forever, but it is so decreed under the printout of retribution for all who express negative volition at God-consciousness and at Gospel hearing.
18. God does not desire the discipline of believers, but it is decreed for all carnality and reversionism.

D. The Divine Decrees and the Blessing of Man.

1. All imputations are the organization for the plan of God. There are seven imputations in the plan of God.
 - a. Human life is imputed to the soul. It remains in the soul forever. This means children and morons who do not reach or cannot reach the age of accountability receive automatic salvation. Since condemnation precedes salvation, they must be condemned before they can be saved. Human life can never be separated from the soul.
 - b. Adam's original sin is imputed to the old sin nature, automatically condemning each member of the human race at birth.
 - c. At the point of faith in Christ, eternal life is imputed to the human spirit, created by God the Holy Spirit (called regeneration). This provides eternal security, since once given, God can never take away eternal life.
 - d. Perfect righteousness is imputed as a judicial imputation to the believer at salvation. This creates a grace pipeline for the imputation of all blessing to the believer.
 - e. On the cross the sins of the world were imputed to Jesus Christ in His spiritual death.
 - f. Blessing in time is imputed to perfect righteousness previously imputed to the believer when the believer cracks the maturity barrier.
 - g. Blessing for eternity is imputed to the believer's perfect righteousness at the Judgment Seat of Christ.
2. Equation of imputation plan of God. $X [I/HL + I/AOS = P1 \text{ (salvation) } + \text{ doctrine (gospel) } = H1 \text{ (confidence of imputation of eternal life at salvation) }]$
 $+ \text{ (salvation) } Y [JI/Sin + JI/+R = P2 \text{ (potential of blessing in time) } + \text{ doctrine } = \text{ Hope 2 (confidence in escrow bless when we reach maturity) }] + \text{ (maturity) } Z [I/EL \text{ (+ in X radical) } + I/Blessing \text{ in time (+ in Y radical) } = P3 \text{ (the potential of blessing at the Judgment Seat of Christ) } + \text{ doctrine } = H3] = \text{ the protocol plan or imputation plan of God.}$

3. Principle of this Formula.
 - a. The omniscience of God in taking cognizance of the fall of man graciously provided a plan based on imputations from divine justice.
 - b. This plan involves the omniscience of God feeding into the computer of divine decrees seven imputations which provide maximum blessing for mankind in time and eternity.
 - c. The decrees contain the historical reality of every member of the human race in degree of attainment.
 - d. Non-meritorious human volition can fall short of any potential of God's plan.
 - e. To what extent every individual advances in this plan was known to the omniscience of God in eternity past and fed into the computer.
 - f. In too many cases the potential exceeds the reality. Only the reality was decreed.
 - g. From this fact emerges the principle that the attainment of divine blessing through imputation is the means God has chosen to glorify Himself and to give Himself pleasure.
 - h. Therefore, the glory of God is related to the believer's advance to maturity and resultant imputation of divine blessing.

E. The Decrees and the Glory of God.

1. The decrees unite in one final and all-inclusive objective the glory of God, Proverbs 16:4; Romans 11:36; Hebrews 2:10; Revelation 4:11.
2. Being alone before all creation, the decrees of God concern no one but the members of the Trinity and their eternal glory. There is nothing you can do to promote God's glory. You can glorify God, but you cannot promote His glory. Your failure doesn't stop His glory. Nothing depends on you; everything depends on God.
3. Being eternal and infinite, God the Father, Son, and Spirit are worthy of all glory.
4. God's glory is what He is and always has been in eternity past, and always will be.
5. As the origin and subject of the divine decrees, it is inevitable that every thought, decision, and action in history will glorify God. That means the plan moves on with or without you. The plan of God never stops moving. If you are to advance along with the glory of God, you must develop thought, i.e., learn doctrine.
6. God is glorified in what He is and in what He has decreed.
7. Since manifestation of His declarative glory also secures the highest glory for His creatures and their greatest good (Rom 8:28), it is inevitable that imputing blessing to the mature believer will glorify God. It will emphasize His grace and exclude human talent and human good.
8. To the finite mind the decrees are many, but to God they are all one plan, embracing both cause and effect, both means and end.
9. The decrees include every detail in the experience of every creature, including such minute aspects as the very hairs of your head being numbered.

10. The decrees of God related to His plan are those sovereign purposes of God which are efficacious, accomplished by God alone apart from creature ability, mentality, talent, function, and sacrifice.
 11. Therefore, God is glorified and pleased in the momentum and advance of believers within His plan.
 12. The omniscience of God knew in eternity past what thoughts, decisions, and actions would carry one believer to maturity and another to reversionism. God has prepared the most magnificent things for both categories by way of escrow blessing, but He has also prepared the most horrible discipline for the reversionistic believer.
 13. While omniscience knew the factual and potential, only the factual was fed into the decrees. Foreknowledge only knows what omniscience feeds into the decrees. Anything decreed by God will inevitably glorify God; it could not work out any other way.
- F. The Decrees and Human Freedom.
1. God does not decree mankind to sin, but He decrees that human beings have free will function of their volition with the option to sin or not to sin.
 2. God does not decree anyone to believe in Jesus Christ for eternal life, but He does decree that all human beings have free will-the function of human volition with the option of believing in Christ or rejecting Christ.
 3. While God permits sin, He does not sponsor sin. God was cognizant of all human sins in eternity past and the omniscience of God fed that knowledge of sin into the computer of divine decrees without being the cause of any sin in human history.
 4. While God permits the rejection of Christ as savior, He does not sponsor it or encourage that rejection. In human history, the sovereignty of God and free will of man coexist as an extension of and resolving of the prehistoric angelic conflict.
 5. At the termination of human history, the justice of God will judge all those who reject Christ as savior.
 6. The justice of God imputed all personal sins of human history to Christ on the Cross and judged each one of them. This is the basis for the divine invitation to every member of the human race to believe in Christ.
 - a. Repeated rejection of Christ, when exposed to the gospel, produces scar tissue in the stream of consciousness of the soul's right lobe.
 - b. Esau rejected the gospel so many times that when he wanted to be saved, there was nothing left in his stream of consciousness except emotion.
 - c. No one can be saved by emotion. Salvation is a matter of faith in Christ and how you feel is inconsequential.
 - d. The decree of God removes no person from what-within the sphere of his own experience-is the outworking of his own choice based on the function of his own volition.
 7. Under the law of volitional responsibility, sin is a matter of personal decision and such decision carries a liability in time.

- a. Under the law of volitional responsibility, every human being must take the responsibility for his own thoughts, his own decisions, and his own actions.
- b. Human volition is the source of good decisions from a position of wisdom and strength, as well as bad decisions from a position of lust and weakness.
- c. While all personal sins were judged on the Cross, all sins and evil decisions have natural consequences of suffering in life, therefore, liability.
- d. While all sins were judged on the Cross, personal sins carry liability in time (not in eternity, since personal sins are not an issue in eternity at the Last Judgment) and are subject to the law of volitional responsibility.
- e. The function of human volition in making decisions is the source of the sins of ignorance as well as the sins of cognizance. Therefore, each of us is held responsible by God for his or her own decisions.
- f. Scripture.
 - (1) Gal 6:7, "Be not deceived, God is not mocked; for whatever a person sows, this he will also reap."
 - (2) Hos 8:7, "For they sow to the wind, and they reap the whirlwind. The standing grain has no heads; it yields no grain. Should it yield, strangers would swallow it up."
 - (3) Col 3:25, "For he who does wrong will receive the consequences of that wrong which he has done, and there is no partiality."
 - (4) Prov 12:13, "An evil snare is the transgression of the lips, but the person with integrity will escape from trouble."
 - (5) Prov 19:3, "A person's own folly ruins his life, yet his heart rages against the Lord." A fool blames God for his own bad decisions and consequent discipline from the Lord.
- g. Conclusion.
 - (1) Sin's liability creates punitive action from God.
 - (2) Therefore, while all sins are judged at the Cross, personal sins carry liability from God under the law of volitional responsibility.
 - (3) However, at the Great White Throne judgment, the unbeliever is never indicted on the basis of his sins because his sins were judged at the Cross, but on the basis of his good deeds. You cannot commit a sin without it effecting someone else, without it hurting someone else. The liability for personal sins does not extend outside of time. Sin is not a liability outside of time, i.e., in eternity. Therefore, there is no contradiction between your liability for personal sins in time and the judgment of all personal sins on the Cross.
 - (4) Rom 9:10-13 is a printout of the divine decrees, where the omniscience of God knew simultaneously in eternity past that

Jacob would believe in Christ and Esau would reject Christ to the point of developing maximum scar tissue.

8. In the function of the rebound technique of 1John 1:9, the purpose is to recover fellowship with God and to recover the filling of the Holy Spirit through citing personal sins to God the Father. As a result, two things can happen to the believer with regard to the liability of sin: the believer is forgiven and the sin liability is completely removed, or the believer is forgiven and the sin liability continues and punitive suffering is replaced by suffering for blessing.
 9. The decree of God removes no person from what-within the sphere of his own experience-is the outworking of his own choice based on the function of his own volition.
 10. The plan of God and the decrees of God are totally consistent with human freedom and volition. God does not limit and coerce human freedom or violate self-determination. Free will isn't free unless man can decide against God and His plan.
 11. However, distinction must be made between what God causes directly (such as the Cross), and what God permits indirectly (such as sin and evil).
 12. God created man with a free will. Therefore, He permits human volition to function in self-determination; otherwise, there would not have been the fall of man. It is His permissive will. The permissive will is just as much a part of the decrees which glorify God as the directive will. Remember the decrees are simply human history in the mind of God in eternity past before any creature existed.
 13. God is not the author of sin or evil. Free will and self-determination is the origin and source of sin, good, and evil.
 14. Both sin and the cross are fed into the computer by omniscience. One is the direct will of God. The other is the permissive will of God. But the permissive, directive, and overruling will of God are all a part of the decrees.
 15. The sovereignty of God and the free will of man coexist by divine decree. Every decision and desire of God and man were recorded on Romans and PROM chips respectively. Omniscience programs this data into the decrees.
- G. Practical Application of the Divine Decrees.
1. Since the decrees of God are the sum total of God's plan and indicate His purpose designed in eternity past, they must inevitably center around Jesus Christ as the God-man.
 2. Therefore, the free will of man must face the issue of Christ, the issue of His work on the cross; for it is at the cross that the sovereignty of God met the free will of man for the glory of God and the momentum of the plan of God.
 3. Under the divine policy of grace, the work of salvation is accomplished by God while man benefits apart from his own human merit.
 4. God's plan in eternity past was so designed so as to include all events, all actions related to their causes and conditions as a part of one indivisible system, every link being a part of the integrity of the whole.

5. Without violating human volition, God has provided and designed a plan so perfect that it includes direction, provision, preservation, function, plus cause and effect for all believers.
6. Under this plan God has decreed to do some things directly, some things through secondary agencies (Israel and the Church), and some things through individuals (e.g., Paul).
7. This means there are primary, secondary and tertiary functions within the plan of God. But all of these functions constitute one all-comprehensive plan which is perfect, eternal, and unchangeable without any loss of integrity ever. This is why the plan of God is so consistent with human freedom and does not unfairly coerce human freedom. The revelation of the decrees is found only in the Bible. Therefore, the most important priority of the Christian life is perception of doctrine.

Why did God say, "I love Jacob and I hate Esau?"

What is the deal with God hardening pharaoh's heart.

Bob had to read about 200 commentators on Romans 9 and he has never read so much tripe in all of his life. It was pitiful. To correct this, we must begin with the simplest of things, which is the doctrine of divine decrees.

Bob uses the Saturday Night movies as an illustration. When he has not seen a movie before, he does not know how it is going to work out. He may have a great desire that this or that happens, but this is already on tape.

Lesson #583

583 11/23/1978 Romans 9:12 Doctrines of thanksgiving and divine decrees (2c-3): mechanics and characteristics, video tape analogy

The Doctrine of Divine Decrees is continued (I have it in two places in these notes), all notes are in Lesson #582. Some illustrations and stories will be noted below:

All capacities for life are related to Bible doctrine. Thanksgiving is capacity for life. It is a total appreciation of all that life has to offer. It is a mental attitude first directed toward God and then directed toward others.

There was a new race produced in [Z] rather than in [X]; the fourth and final race in human history. Abraham at about age 100 became a Jew. His brother Nahor remained a gentile. Isaac had seven brothers, and they were all gentiles. Jacob and Esau are twins. Jacob was fed in as a believer; Esau as an unbeliever.

The origin of the Jewish race was regeneration. The Jews lost track of their own heritage. They do not inherit the promises unless they have been regenerated.

The Shekinah Glory became flesh and lived among us.

Psalm 100:3 Know that the LORD, He is God! It is He who made us, and we are His; we are His people, and the sheep of His pasture.

Amos 4:5 ...offer a sacrifice of thanksgiving of that which is leavened, and proclaim freewill offerings, publish them; for so you love to do, O people of Israel!" declares the Lord GOD.

Hebrews 13:15 Through him then let us continually offer up a sacrifice of praise to God, that is, the fruit of lips that acknowledge his name.

Colossians 3:15 And let the peace of Christ rule in your hearts, to which indeed you were called in one body. And be thankful.

Blessing in time and blessing in eternity glorify God. We are thankful for logistical grace and the opportunity to grow in grace. Thanksgiving should be related to blessing and there is no blessing until we crack the maturity barrier.

In our city, we know that free enterprise is not dead. People have come from the highways and the byways of our country. Houston is the great boomtown of the world. Houston is blessed because of Bible doctrine. Houston is the most free enterprise city in these United States.

We should understand the great blessing of Houston and that it is based upon the teaching of Bible doctrine and the spiritual maturity of many people in the Houston area. Our current mayor and chief of police do not understand these things, but some former ones would be close in understanding these things.

We are preparing for certain aspects of Romans 9: the hardening of pharaoh's heart and the relationship of God with Jacob and Esau.

The Doctrine of Divine Decrees is continued (I have it in two places in these notes), all notes are in Lesson #582. Some illustrations and stories will be noted below:

Bob watching the beta tape is like the facts fed into the computer of divine decrees.

God knew billions of years ago how your free will will function.

Earl Campbell was apparently the quarterback for the Oilers at this time, as Bob mentions him several times. The whole purpose of the printout is so that we are elected and can enjoy the greatest blessings from God.

Romans 9:12 ...not of works, but of the One calling, it was said to her, "The older will serve the younger."

584 11/23/1978 Romans 9 Doctrine of divine decrees (4–8): will and glory of God, blessing and freedom of man; California cult and equality

Equality takes precedence over freedom in this cult. Freedom and equality cannot coexist. Equality always means tyranny. This is a front for socialism. This cult became a system of tyranny. Brotherhood and love were a front. Impersonal love for everyone; personal love for only a few.

Indian revolt. Many of the British were isolated. It is coming to the United States. Doctrine is the only thing that will make the difference.

Lesson #585

585 11/24/1978 Romans 9:13a; Malachi 1:2–3 Battle of Arnhem; doctrine of anthropopathisms (pt.1–4): illustration, love 1 and 2

Romans 9:13 As it has been written: "Jacob I loved, but Esau I hated." (BLB)

Doctrine of Anthropopathisms

Israel 110-112,119 11/3/91; Romans #585 (9:13) Ephesians 1337, Ephesians 266; Anti-Sem 6

A. Definition and Description.

1. An anthropopathism ascribes to God a human characteristic which God does not actually possess, but is used to reveal and explain God's policy toward mankind in terms of human frame of reference by the use of language of accommodation.
2. Accommodation means that human modus operandi is ascribed to God, such as human affection or human sins, so that man can understand divine policy and attitude in terms of his own frame of reference.
3. Unless this doctrine is understood, the believer is going to be in a state of confusion about the doctrine of divine essence.
 - a. For example, in Psalm 106:45 we are told that God changed His mind or repented, but God is immutable and cannot change His mind. But 1Samuel 15:29 says, "the glory of Israel [Jesus Christ] will not lie or change His mind; for He is not a man that He should change His mind."

- b. Psalm 110:4 The Lord [God the Father] has made a solemn promise and will not change His mind. You are a priest forever, after the order of Melchizedek.
 - 4. In order to explain divine policy to mankind in terms of human frame of reference, human characteristics are ascribed to God to explain His policy to human beings. An anthropopathism is a human characteristic such as: love, hate, wrath, change of mind, scorn, compassion, longsuffering, remembering. The Greek word ANTHRO means man; "pathism" means a function of the soul with outward manifestation. Hence, an anthropopathism ascribes a human characteristic to God which God does not possess and which is not a divine attribute.
 - 5. The purpose of the anthropopathism is to explain to us in language we can understand the divine attitude, policy, or modus operandi toward a person or persons, so that mankind can adapt to the divine policy or understand the divine policy. We are accommodated so that we can understand divine modus operandi. The anthropopathism is designed for human adjustment, by which a person understands God's policy, God's grace related to that policy, or God's judgment related to that policy.
- B. The Classification of Anthropopathisms.
- 1. Non-sinful anthropopathisms.
 - a. Love. Malachi 1:3; 2Corinthians 9:7, "God loves a cheerful giver." Romans 9:13, "Just as it stands written, `I have loved Jacob but I hate Esau.'"
 - (1) The anthropopathism of love is an expression of divine motivation, approval, and acceptance. This is not the same as the divine attribute of love-God is love. Love and hate explain God's approbation on Israel and disapprobation of the Arabic peoples.
 - (2) God does not hate. Hatred is a sin. God "hated" Esau because did not and would not believe in Christ, Hebrews 12:17, "For you know that even afterwards, when he [Esau] desired to inherit the blessing, he was rejected, for he found no place for repentance, though he sought for it with tears." When the scar tissue of the soul equals the garbage in the subconscious, you have reached the point of no return regarding believing in Christ for salvation. Therefore, all you can turn to is emotion.
 - b. Compassion. Psalm 119:71, 75; Lam 3:33; 2Corinthians 4:17; Colossians 1:24; 2Timothy 1:8. God does not have this human characteristic but it helps to explain His grace policies. Psalm 78:38, 111:4, 112:4, 145:8.
 - c. Longsuffering and Patience. Exodus 34:6; Numbers 14:18; Psalm 86:15; 2Peter 3:9.
 - 2. Sinful anthropopathisms.
 - a. Hatred. Psalm 5:4-6; Malachi 1:2-3; Romans 9:13. God does not sin; therefore, He does not hate. This only explains divine policy-why God is doing what He is doing. Hatred is a sin but is ascribed to God merely to express divine disapproval of Esau in terms mankind can understand. Since man understands hatred as disapproval, he understands divine policy in terms of human frame of reference.

- b. Anger and wrath. Numbers 22:22; Psalm 88:16; John 3:36; Romans 1:18, 9:22; Ephesians 2:3; Revelation 19:15; Psalm 5:4, 7:11, 90:11, 103:8, 106:40. These characteristics describe God's holiness and justice directed toward unbelievers.
- c. Scorn. Prov 1:26; Psalm 2:4, 59:8, 37:13. To scorn means to ridicule someone. It is unkind and thoughtless, a sinful function. Scorn involves mental attitude sins. Again, these passages use human frame of reference to explain divine policy.
- d. Vengeance. Deuteronomy 32:35; Psalm 94:1, 99:9; Isaiah 34:8, 61:2; Jeremiah 51:6; Romans 12:16. We are to leave our court case in the hands of the Supreme Court of Heaven. Vengeance is language of accommodation to express God's policy of perfect justice.
- e. Repentance in which God is the subject. Repentance means a change of mind, which in humans is a sign of instability. God is immutable and decreed everything, and therefore, cannot change His mind. So the anthropathism of repentance of God describes the policy of divine discipline and judgment in Genesis 6:6 Exodus 32:14 1Samuel 15:35 Psalm 90:11-13 Jeremiah 15:6, 26:3,13 Ezekiel 24:14 Amos 7:3-6 John 3:9-10 Zech 8:14.
- f. Jealousy.

C. The Attribute of Divine Love Versus the Anthropathism of Divine Love.

- 1. To rightly divide the Word of truth, the believer must distinguish between the divine attribute of love and the anthropathism of love. This is just as important as distinguishing between dispensations.
- 2. Love is complete and total from all eternity past as a part of God's infinite being.
- 3. This means God cannot, will not, and never did fall in love, nor does He maintain love, nor is His love sustained by emotion. God is totally without emotion. God is not a sucker for tears. God is only impressed by what He does for you, not by what you do for Him.
- 4. Like all divine attributes, God's love belongs to God's being. God is love regardless of having any object of love. Man must always have an object. But there has never been a time when God needed an object for His love.
- 5. There are two objects of divine love.
 - a. Subjective love toward His own holiness or integrity (justice and righteousness). This is God's subjective love. There never was a time when God did not love His righteousness. When we believe in Christ, the justice of God imputes His righteousness to us and God loves that imputed righteousness in us. So the believer is actually the object of divine love as an attribute rather than as an anthropathism, but justice is still his point of contact with God. Justice imputes blessing at the Judgment Seat of Christ in eternity just as it does in time at the point of spiritual maturity.

- b. Objective love toward the other members of the Trinity. Each Member of the Trinity loves the others.
 - 6. While God is love (1John 4:8), the love of God as a divine and infinite attribute is not understood by the finite mind of man.
 - 7. All creatures are excluded from the attribute of divine love except where divine righteousness has been imputed.
 - 8. The justice of God and faith in Christ is the issue. God loves His own righteousness. Therefore, when it is imputed at the moment of salvation, God's attribute of love is directed wherever divine righteousness goes. You have become the object of God's infinite and eternal love.
 - 9. Because the love of God is perfect, it is totally devoid of human emotion. Jeremiah 31:3; Romans 8:39.
 - 10. The divine attribute of love does not need an object for love; this is in contrast to human love which must always have an object. Divine love is an absolute, while human love is progressive or retrogressive.
- D. The Anthropopathism of Divine Love. Most often the love of God is an anthropopathism. This is human love ascribed to God, even though God does not love sin, human good or evil. Love helps to explain the motivation of God.
- 1. The classical illustration is Romans 9:13, "I have loved Jacob, but I hate Esau."
 - 2. John 3:16 Malachi 1:2–3 All the sins of the world would be imputed to Christ. This is explained, to some degree, by the use of "love." Human love gives; so we understand God giving by means of the motivation of love.
 - 3. God neither loves nor hates in terms of human modus vivendi, but in order to explain the spiritual status of the twins, the anthropopathism of love and hate are ascribed to God. God is neither humanly noble nor humanly sinful. This is only language of accommodation. This explains divine policy. This is understandable to most people.
 - 4. The anthropopathisms of love and hate simply indicate that the omniscience of God knew in eternity past that the free will of Esau would reject Christ as savior and the free will of Jacob would believe in Christ.
 - a. The anthropopathism of love explains in human terms the fact of Jacob's salvation adjustment to the justice of God through faith in Christ. Esau's failure to believe in Christ is explained by hatred from God. Human characteristics are used so the dumbest of dummies can understand. In the case of Esau, human volition acted independently of the sovereignty of God. In the case of Jacob, he complied with the sovereignty of God.
 - b. The anthropopathism of hate explains in human frame of reference the fact of Esau's rejection of Christ as Savior or his maladjustment to the justice of God and consequent judgment.
 - 5. The love and hate anthropopathisms express the supreme court of heaven's two judgments in the case of two different people, one a believer and one an unbeliever. God has exercised His right of judgment on the basis of knowing simultaneously in eternity past all the facts of every person in history. The righteousness of God is expressed in the anthropopathism of hatred, i.e., in terms of human frame of reference. John 3:16 2Corinthians 9:7 cheerful giver = big spender

6. While love as an anthropopathism explains divine motivation in terms of human frame of reference, love is not the direct source of blessing from God.
7. The direct source of blessing is the justice of God.
8. God doesn't bless man from human sentimentality or emotional attraction.
9. Man erroneously concludes in his own self-righteousness that he must do something or say something to please God and receive blessing.
10. Therefore, man builds up a system of working and striving, which eliminates grace and rejects divine integrity.
11. The integrity of God is always the issue. Man's point of reference in time as well as in eternity is always justice. God found a way to bring man into relationship with Himself and bless mankind without compromising any divine attribute.
12. The key is justification which is a function of divine justice, never a function of divine love. Because we deal with divine justice, the most repulsive member of the human race can have the most marvelous blessing. The most repulsive and unlovely person in the human race can receive blessing from God.
13. Through justification, God is free to bring sinful man into eternal relationship to Himself and impute blessing to him in time and eternity.
14. Perfect God has a perfect plan designed for sinful, self-righteous, full of human good, evil people.
15. God loves His own righteousness with an infinite and perfect love. In perfect righteousness divine love for holiness is revealed.
16. Righteousness demands righteousness and justice demands justice. What righteousness demands, justice executes. This is the basis for divine blessing to man; divine love is never the basis. To explain this principle to mankind, language of accommodation ascribes to God human love as an anthropopathism.
 - a. The anthropopathisms of love and hate in Romans 9:13 do not imply that God is prejudice; for God has perfect, eternal, immutable integrity. God's perfect integrity is maintained by His sovereign will. Therefore, it is a part of His unchangeable or immutable self.
 - b. God is fair. It is impossible for God to be unfair. No greater demonstration of divine justice exists than was demonstrated at the Cross. Romans 5:8, "But God demonstrates His own love toward us, in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died as a substitute for us." The anthropopathisms of love and hate do not imply any lack of integrity on the part of God, Romans 9:14, "Therefore, to what conclusion are we forced? There is no injustice with God, is there? Definitely not!" Anthropopathisms do not represent the character of God; they represent the policy of God.
17. Principles.

- a. Esau rejected Christ. Therefore, he did not possess divine righteousness or regeneration (eternal life).
- b. Jacob believed in Christ as his savior. Therefore, he possessed imputed righteousness, resulting in his justification. At the same time, he received through regeneration eternal life.
- c. In the language of accommodation, justification and the possession of eternal life is expressed by the anthropopathism of love.
- d. In the language of accommodation, condemnation is expressed in the anthropopathism of hate.
- e. Since the righteousness of God demands equivalent righteousness and eternal life, the justice of God must condemn the lack of divine righteousness and the lack of eternal life, therefore, the anthropopathism of hate. This explains to human beings in language of accommodation the attitude of God toward those who reject Christ as savior.
- f. In grace, God provided all that His perfect righteousness demanded from the human race.
- g. At the moment of faith in Christ, God provides by imputation His very own righteousness. Since Jacob had God's very own righteousness, God said, "I love Jacob, but I hate Esau."
 - (1) If Esau had been accepted through the primogeniture principle of physical birth, then the perfect righteousness of God would have been compromised. But the integrity of God can and does condemn the self-righteousness and unrighteousness of mankind. This condemnation is expressed in the case of Esau, who stood on his own righteousness, as God's hatred of him.
 - (2) It is impossible for God to compromise His righteousness. Therefore, God cannot be unrighteous in dealing with any person, and He expresses it, not in terms of his character or essence, but in terms of language of accommodation.
- h. The fact that Esau rejected Christ and choose the way of condemnation does not reflect on the perfect justice of God but on the wrong decision of Esau. The condemnation of Esau as an unbeliever vindicates the justice of God, being totally consistent with His perfect divine integrity. The issue is obvious: Is God, who inflicts condemnation and judgment on the unbeliever, unrighteous, unfair, or unjust? No! On the contrary, the function of divine justice in condemnation confirms and strengthens divine integrity. There can be no blessing to mankind apart from the integrity or holiness of God.

E. Conclusion.

- 1. The complexity of a doctrine such as Anthropopathisms is not going to be understood unless other doctrines are understood first. Understanding the doctrine of Divine Essence must precede a consideration of the doctrine of Anthropopathisms. When both are mastered, the believer is forced to a biblical conclusion: in human history, the sovereignty of God and the free will of man coexist by divine decree. In fact, mankind was created to resolve the prehistoric angelic conflict, where creature volition and the sovereignty of God was also an issue.

- a. Human volition duplicates the same free will which angels possessed in eternity past. To duplicate the prehistoric angelic conflict, man was created to resolve it. Therefore, mankind had to be tested in the perfect environment of the Garden with only one divine prohibition. Just as there was only one way that Satan could sin, so Adam and the woman could only sin in one way-disobedience to one divine prohibition.
 - (1) Satan violated the divine prohibition when he said, "I will make myself like the Most High God." Isaiah 14:14.
 - (2) When in Genesis 3:5, Satan said to the woman, "For God knows that in the day you eat from it, your eyes will be opened and you too will be like God, knowing good and evil." Satan tempted the woman with the idea that God was holding out on her and did not want her to be as smart as He was. So we have an exact duplication, in principle, of the original fall of Satan.
 - b. Human volition was tested in the perfect environment of the Garden, which duplicated the perfect environment of the holy mountain of God, mentioned in Ezekiel 28:14,16. Perfect mankind in the Garden could only sin through the function of his own free will in opposition to the sovereignty of God. This duplicates Satan's original sin through the function of his own angelic volition in opposition to the sovereignty of God.
 - c. When man's negative volition originated the first sin and the sin nature in the human race in the Garden, this resulted in instant spiritual death. Therefore, God provided another tree for mankind for his positive volition. That tree is the Cross.
2. In eternity past, the omniscience of God programmed the computer of divine decrees with such facts as to who in history would believe in Christ and who in history would reject Christ. God's knowledge of this fact does not predetermine what man's decision will be. God has declared each person a free agent to make his or her own decision. This is why Jesus Christ is declared to be the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, Matthew 22:32; Mark 12:26; Luke 20:37; Acts 3:13, 7:32.
 3. Even though the sins Esau were imputed to Christ on the Cross and judged, Esau rejected Christ as savior and lost his eternal inheritance. Esau's function of free will to repeatedly reject the gospel placed him outside the Abrahamic covenant. When salvation through faith in Christ is rejected, the sovereignty and justice of God has the right to condemn, the right to judge. When a person like Jacob believes in Christ, the sovereignty of God has the right to make him a true Jew, the heir of the unconditional covenants. When his brother Esau rejects Christ, the sovereignty of God has the right to keep him in the status of an unbeliever. The sovereignty of God and the justice of God have a right to deal in any way with one person in grace and another in condemnation. When grace is rejected, there is nothing left but judgment from the integrity of God.

4. The failure of certain human beings to respond to the gospel by believing in Christ does not abrogate the integrity of God. God does not cancel His faithfulness or abrogate His integrity because of human failure.
5. Believers do not relate to God on the basis of anthropopathisms like love and hate, but on the basis of actual divine attributes. For example:
 - a. The imputation of divine righteousness at salvation is through faith in Christ. It results in instant justification. We become the objects of God's personal love because we possess His righteousness. This is the basis for logistical grace.
 - b. At the moment of faith in Christ, God the Holy Spirit creates a human spirit and God the Father imputes eternal life to that human spirit. It was the grace of God to which we responded.

Lesson #586

586 11/25/1978 Romans 9:13b Jacob cf. Esau in decrees; freewill; conspiracies; human freedom and divine decrees

Romans 9:13 As it has been written: "Jacob I loved, but Esau I hated." (BLB)

We have started verse 13, "As it stands written", used to indicate a quotation from the Old Testament — Malachi 1:2,3. We begin with the concept of the principle which is found. We have an accusative singular definite article used with the proper name "Jacob." It starts out ton lakôb (ἰακώβ) [pronounced ee-ak-OBE]. The definite article in the accusative case plus the indeclinable proper noun, Jacob, whose identity is well known to the reader and therefore the definite article. However, the definite article is really used here as a demonstrative pronoun to call special attention to this person who was no better or no worse than his twin brother but turned out to be one of the great people of history through the grace of God. Because the definite article is in the accusative case it is also assumed therefore that Jacob, an indeclinable proper noun, is also in the accusative case and therefore the direct object. This means that God is the subject. The corrected translation: "that Jacob."

Malachi 1:2–3 "I have loved you," says the Lord. But you say, "How have You loved us?" "Was not Jacob Esau's brother," declares the Lord. "Yet I have loved Jacob; but I have hated Esau."

Next we have the aorist active indicative from the verb agapaô (ἀγαπάω) [pronounced ahg-ahp-AH-oh] — "I loved that Jacob." The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. It refers to a fact which extends over a long period of time, from the time that Jacob believed in the Lord and received the imputation of divine righteousness. The justice of God and the righteousness of God form the holiness or the integrity of God. The justice of God imputed to Jacob at the moment he believed in Christ: divine righteousness. Therefore the love of God which in eternity past always loved His own righteousness now loves Jacob who is the possessor of His righteousness. The active voice: God produces the action of the verb as an anthropopathism which indicates divine approbation and includes the idea of propitiation. This is a translation, by the way, of the qal active participle of the Hebrew 'âhêb (אָהַב) [pronounced aw-HAYV^B], which is the verb to love. In the qal active participle it means a continuous thing. With this we have the post positive conjunctive particle de used as an adversative conjunction emphasizing the contrast between an attitude toward Jacob and the attitude toward Esau.

Next we have another accusative singular direct object from the definite article used as a demonstrative pronoun as well as the proper noun Esau. So we have “that Esau.” Notice that the direct object comes first because it emphasizes the person and the difference between the twins. Then we have the aorist active indicative from the verb miseô (μισέω) [pronounced mihs-EH-oh] which is a mental attitude sin of hatred and is correctly translated, “but I hated that Esau.” That aorist tense again is a constative aorist which contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, and refers to the fact that Esau refused to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ; whereas, eventually have his twin Jacob believing in the Lord and he became the origin of the Jewish race. The active voice: God produces the action of the verb as an anthropopathism which indicates the divine attitude toward Esau in terms of language of accommodation. Hatred is a sin; God is not a sinner. God is perfect and cannot sin. God does not actually hate Esau but in order to explain His divine policy in terms of language of accommodation, divine policy toward unbelievers, the anthropopathism is used. We can understand hatred and therefore we can understand that Esau as an unbeliever was under a principle or policy of disapprobation. The indicative mood is declarative for language of reality and anthropopathism. This is not the actual attitude of God, this is the attitude that we can understand .

Principles

1. The omniscience of God fed only facts into the computer of divine decrees. Only the actual was fed into the computer and the actual finds Esau, unbeliever; Jacob, believer. They are twins: one is a Jew; one is a Gentile. The difference between them: one was born again; one was not.
2. The printout for Jacob was election, foreknowledge, predestination; whereas the printout for Esau was reprobation, condemnation, retribution or judgement.
3. Both Jacob and Esau had the same free will, had the same opportunity for salvation.
4. When Jesus Christ was nailed to the cross the sins of both Esau and Jacob were imputed to Christ and judged by the justice of the Father. Again, the same opportunity. One used his free will to believe in Christ; one used his free will to reject Christ.
5. It was the will of God that both Esau and Jacob be saved. That was the directive will of God: He wanted both of them to be saved.
6. The fact that Jacob believed in Christ and Esau rejected Christ indicates the reality of human volition acting independently of the sovereignty of God.

7. This emphasizes the fact that the divine decrees do not coerce or tamper with human volition. The divine decrees merely record what happens in history before it happens.
8. The divine decree of foreordination establishes certainty with regard to the believer.
9. God's decrees do not originate from His foreknowledge, they originate from His omniscience which feeds the facts into the computer. To put foreknowledge before omniscience or on a par with omniscience is the beginning of a series of confusions that result in a total and complete blackout with regard to the Christian way of life. These doctrines have a great deal to do with what constitutes the Christian way of life and to put foreknowledge on a par with omniscience, even though both are functions of God, is one of the most disastrous things that could happen.
10. The foreknowledge of God makes nothing certain, it merely perceives what is certain. What is certain is the fact that you have free will. What is certain is the fact that your free will is going to make X number of decisions. What is certain is the fact that God knew what your freewill would do. He doesn't coerce it. There is always the idiot who comes along and says, "Well if God knew I was going to sin why didn't He stop me?" That is the mentality of an ant! It is almost unbelievable that people could be so stupid as not to understand how great God is. Obviously He knows and obviously He created us free will. If He created us with free will obviously the one thing He is not going to do is to tamper with it because if He does it isn't free will, it is God's will. And if it isn't free will but God's will, then what are we doing here? The answer is: Not a thing, we are simply robots, and the angelic conflict is not resolved.
11. God's decrees determine only the certain futuration of events but the decrees do not directly affect or cause any event. Cause and effect is the interrelationship of innumerable volitions.
12. The decree itself provides in every case that the event shall be affected by its own causes, acting in a manner consistent with the nature of the event in question. God knew that Esau would reject Christ and that Jacob would believe in the Lord.
13. Again, in the case of every free act of a moral or responsible agent the decree itself provides that at the same time the agent [you] shall be a free agent. His antecedents and all of the antecedents of the act in question shall be what they are. All the present conditions of the acts shall be what they are and the act shall be perfectly spontaneous and free on the part of the agent.

Illustration: Until a lady gets married she is a totally free agent. Then one day she makes a free will decision in which she accepts some man and he is her husband. Once she does that she has surrendered a part of her volition to him and therefore he makes decisions. One day she might want to stay in bed and catch up on sleep but the husband says she is going to get out of bed and come to church. Then you have exactly what we have here. She surrendered her free will to him and he makes the final decisions. That is cause and effect. She accepted of her own free will the authority of the husband. Probably the greatest issue in marriage is that the woman surrenders her volition to the husband so that the husband can overrule her at any time. But you still have the interaction of volitions. You have the female challenge; you have the male veto. The doctrine of decrees recognizes all of these interacting functions of free will.

Everyone in the world cannot use his free will to do the same thing at the same time. So God has put order in the human race. He set up rules. Rule #1: Your soul and your volition in your soul is the first authority. If your soul said to you, for example, it is time to exercise. Your body objects. Your soul overruled it, so you exercised. That is called self-discipline but it is really a system of authority. Rule #2 is just as simple: When you have two souls — one male and one female type — the male must call the shots. He takes additional responsibility. Then when you have two or more — “or more” being children — then both the male and the female have authority over the children, so that the children must be subordinated to the volition of their parents. Authority makes it possible for all of us to live together and so authority becomes a tremendous issue in life. Authority makes it possible for a maximum number of free people to follow the principles of freedom to their state of inequality.

A moral agent is not someone who keeps the ten commandments, a moral agent is someone who recognizes the authority principles of divine establishment.

14. God foreknows all events as certainly future. He knows this because He has decreed them and foreknowledge is merely the printout. Omniscience feeds the facts.
15. God's decrees relate equally to all future events of every kind, to the free actions of moral agents as well as the actions of necessary agents (There's the relationship between free will and authority), to the sinful as well as the honorable actions.
16. This means that God has decreed ends as well as means, but it also means that God has decreed means as well as ends.

You had nothing to say, you had no free will choice with regard to your parents. Only God knew who your parents would be and He knew it billions of years ago. You had nothing to say about it, but once you came into the world as a child of parents eventually your own volition began to function. The omniscience of God fed into the computer of divine decrees a Gentile by the name of Abraham. God knew that this man would have eight children. He also knew the law of primogeniture. But He knew that not the first born but one by the name of Isaac, the second born, would be Israel. He also knew that Isaac would have twins and that one would be a Jew [Jacob] and that one would be a Gentile [Esau]. He knew that Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob would be the origin of a new race, an elected race, God's chosen people. What does that mean? It became necessary in the course of human history to have a special nation to represent God, to become the recipients of divine revelation to be put in writing — the canon of the Old Testament. It became necessary for one nation to become the missionary nation, and to also set a precedent for all national function in the areas of freedom and establishment. Then it became necessary for this freedom to become the basis for evangelism, and from the evangelism to the advance to maturity. There had not been in history, in its first two thousand years [the Age of the Gentiles] such a nation. Internationalism inevitably occurred. Internationalism really is a system whereby Satan rules the world, gains control of the world (communism, Catholicism are both international organizations). That is what is wrong with the United Nations or any system of internationalism, religious or political. Therefore God started a new dispensation, the dispensation of Israel, and God's chosen people is simply a way of saying election.

For what purpose? So that there would be starting with the Exodus a national entity who would represent God in evangelism, in spiritual growth, in missionary activity. That continued throughout the dispensation of Israel until the Jewish Age came to a screeching halt after the ascension and session of Jesus Christ. Then the Church Age began as the formation of the royal family and some forty years after the Church Age began Israel went out for the last time under the fifth cycle of discipline — 70 AD. In August of 70 AD when Jerusalem fell, the times of the Gentiles began. The times of the Gentiles is a phrase used by Paul in the New testament to indicate the fact that no Jewish nation from that time on until the second advent would be or could be or is qualified to be a client nation to God; that, in fact, Israel would be scattered throughout the earth. While occasionally in history many of the Jews would come together to form a nation in the land which had been promised to them they could not be a client nation to God and will not be a client nation to God. Their concentration in the land merely incites Satan to seek to destroy them. During the times of the Gentiles Gentile nations would become client nations to God. And above all, in the times of the Gentiles the client nation to God must be a haven for the Jews. The Jews must be protected not only from the usual tyrannies of history but for the abnormal tyranny of history which has always existed. Satan's primary objective has been, a will continue to be until he is cast into prison at the second advent, to destroy the Jew. Therefore, it becomes absolutely necessary that a client nation provide a haven for the Jews, to give them the same rights as we have as citizens, and to make sure that anti-Semitism never rears its ugly head. Anti-Semitism is like a grenade with the pin out, it is the quickest way to destroy a nation and pro-Semitism is the quickest way for a nation to have blessing.

The US is a client nation; and we continue to send out missionaries and we continue to provide a haven for the Jews (since there is no longer a Jewish client nation).

It is dangerous when antisemitism creeps into any client nation or into any of its citizens.

The great blessings that we have as a nation is because of the Jews in our country.

There are conspiracies in the world against the United States, but these are communist conspiracies.

17. Therefore God's purposes relating to all events of every kind constitute one single all-comprehensive intention, comprehending all events, the free as free, the necessary as necessary, together with all their causes, conditions, relations, as one indivisible system of things, every link of which is essential to the whole.
18. The decrees do not oppose the human freedom of Esau and Jacob; they guarantee certainty.
19. No decree opposes human freedom. Decrees do not coerce human volition, even as the foreknowledge of God does not coerce human self-determination.
20. These only have to do with the certainty of the action. The decrees guarantee the certainty: guarantee that you would dissent, that you would reject certain doctrines, that you would be come a liberal bleeding-heart do-gooder, that you would do this, that you would do that, etc.

21. Human freedom exists in the sphere of and on the plane of human experience.
22. No human being ever acted outside of the divine decrees. The decrees are merely all the facts of history in their sequence, in their relationship and interrelationship, in their cause and effect, the free functioning as the free and the necessary functioning as the necessary. To say that someone could act outside of the divine decrees would be a denial of the omniscience of God.
23. It is important to distinguish between what God causes and what God permits. God does not decree man to sin but He decrees that man may have a free choice to sin. While God permits sin He does not sponsor sin. The omniscience of God fed the facts of sin into the computer, so it is a fact and it is a part of the decrees, but such sins or actions or functions of human good and evil God does not approve, God does not sponsor. In other words, God decreed that human volition would eventuate in acts of sin, acts of human good, that sin would eventuate as a result of freedom — free thought, free decisions, free actions. Sin is a reality anticipated by the omniscience of God, and not only anticipated but in reality God took all of the sins [knowing them all ahead of time] and saved them all up. Here is how important the omniscience of God is. If it were not for the omniscience of God we wouldn't be saved. For salvation the omniscience of God knew billions of years ago that our free will would be involved in X number of sins, and He took those sins and imputed them to Christ on the cross. In other words, the omniscience of God had to know ahead of time every sin we have ever committed so that it could be judged, so that when the gospel is presented to you so you could believe and have eternal life because the omniscience of God already had fed into the computer all of your sins, and they were all collected and imputed to Christ. So without the omniscience of God salvation would be impossible.

Jacob and Esau both committed a certain number of sins and all of their sins were judged on the cross. So the message to Esau and Jacob was, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ as thou shalt be saved." Esau kept saying no, and Jacob one time said yes, he believed on the Lord following the pattern of Abraham and in that moment he had eternal life. The line and the origin of Israel is regeneration, not physical birth. Esau said no to regeneration, Jacob said yes. The decree of God removes no man from what within the sphere of his own experience is the outworking of his own choice. One used his free will and said yes; one used his free will and said no. All of these factors are combined in the computer of divine decrees so that what man thinks, what man decides, what man does, is simply the execution of the divine decrees: facts fed into the computer by the omniscience of God.

Lesson #587

587 11/25/1978 Romans 9:14 Omniscient use of actual and probable; integrity and sovereignty of God vs. freewill and self-righteousness of man

12 noon session

Romans 9:13 Just as it stand written [quotation from Malachi], I love that Jacob but I hate that Esau.

Principles

1. The members of the Holy Trinity — God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Spirit — who eternally existed alone before any creature existed the omniscience of God, having complete knowledge of everything that would ever happen in history, fed these facts into the computer.
2. It should also be emphasized that what God did not feed into the computer, namely what did not happen but could have happened, is known to Him. Once a person believes in the Lord Jesus Christ and is born again he could die in the next few minutes. How can God reward or not reward, impute eternal blessing or not impute eternal blessing? The omniscience of God now takes a probability. What if that person had lived to be 100 years old. The omniscience of God knows exactly what would have happened. So the omniscience of God projects a period of time necessary for determination, knowing this probability, and the reward or lack of reward is based on that projection. This is the only case of where the omniscience of God takes a probability and uses it as a determining factor. So God is fair when it comes to the judgement seat of Christ and the imputation of blessing in time. Condemnation at birth means, no matter what, we are saved if we die prior to God consciousness.
3. The decrees do not deal with probabilities or possibilities but only with realities or actualities.
4. The omniscience of God only fed into the computer what would happen, which in turn would be the cause of other happenings. God fed into the computer of divine decrees the decisions of Esau and Jacob regarding Christ.
5. This became the cause for perpetuating the Jewish line, the Jewish race, through Jacob, which had the effect of determining the true Israel on the basis of regeneration rather than natural generation. The omniscience of God knew billions of years ago that Abraham would believe. God chose Abraham to be the father of the Jewish race. For 99 years Abraham was a Gentile; at age 100 he became a Jew. Then Isaac would follow the pattern, and then Jacob. So the readout for Abraham, Isaac and Jacob is election: Abraham, Isaac and Jacob and their progeny are elected. This is why the Jews are called God's chosen people. Chosen means elected. They are elected on the basis of regeneration — Foreknowledge, predetermination, foreordination, predestination. Only believers are said to be predestined. The alternatives: Nahor remained a Gentile, Ishmael, remained a Gentile, Esau remained a Gentile, and they are under the principle of condemnation. That is the printout. So true Israel always prints out election, foreknowledge and predestination on the basis of believing in Christ. Only the Jews who move into [Y] will be recipients of the promises of God. The born again Jew is the true Jew.

Some people will be taken up by the rapture, even if they are saved for only 5 minutes. What is their reward then? God uses His omniscience to determine what that person would have done over the next 20 or 30 or 70 years.

Romans 9:14 What then shall we say? Is there injustice with God? Never may it be! (BLB)

Verse 14 — the rhetorical question. Is this really fair? This is Paul using a debater's technique to anticipate the objections to the anthropopathisms. How can you be fair if you love and hate? Hatred implies bias even as love implies bias. How can God be God and how can God be just and give all to one twin and nothing to the other?

We start out with the nominative neuter singular from the interrogative pronoun τίς (τίς) [pronounced tihç] — “What.” We also have the inferential post positive conjunctive particle οὖν (οὖν) [pronounced oon] which is translated “therefore.” It is used in the form of a question as an idiom of conclusion. We are going to draw a conclusion from the origin on the Jewish race.

Next we have the future active indicative of the verb λέγω (λέγω) [pronounced LEH-goh]. The deliberative future is used where questions of uncertainty follow this pattern. We have a rhetorical question, a debater's question, anticipating those who object. The active voice: Paul uses the rhetorical debater's idiom to force a correct conclusion rather than a false one. This is the interrogative indicative in which the indicative assumes that there is an actual fact which may be stated in answer to the question. The idiom is translated literally, “What therefore shall we say?” But the correct translation is, “Therefore, to what conclusion are we forced?” It is an idiom. The rhetorical question introduces debater's technique to emphasize the perfection of divine attributes. The question is taken from the anthropopathism of hate. God does not hate, this is a policy statement. The statement that God hates Esau raises the question of God's integrity, especially as related to His righteousness. It also raises the question regarding the fullness of the justice of God in loving Jacob and hating Esau.

Paul anticipates the objection and has the answer for it locked and loaded.

Then we have, “Is there unrighteousness with God?” The predicate nominative singular adikia (ἀδικία) [pronounced ah-dih-KEE-ah] — “unrighteousness,” demands the insertion of a verb. So we put in the present active subjunctive. There is the actual negative here and the reason we know it is the present active subjunctive from eimi (εἰμί) [pronounced eye-ME] rather than the indicative is because we are told by what Paul wrote. He wrote mê (μή) [pronounced may] instead of ou (οὐ) [pronounced oo]. ou (οὐ) [pronounced oo] takes the indicative; mê (μή) [pronounced may] takes the subjunctive. So we know exactly what to insert in this ellipsis. The word adikia (ἀδικία) [pronounced ah-dih-KEE-ah] really means injustice. “There is not injustice, is there?” is the correct translation. Then we have the prepositional phrase, para plus the dative singular of the definite article plus the noun theos (θεός) [pronounced theh-OSS] — “There is not injustice with God, is there?” The negative mê (μή) [pronounced may] in a question demands a negative answer. The negative ou (οὐ) [pronounced oo] would demand a positive answer.

There is more than an implication here because this is debater's technique. We have the strongest of all negatives which as it stands in the Greek is simply mê genoito (μὲ γένοιτο) [pronounced MAY GEHN-oyt-oh], translated “God forbid.” Obviously, there is no word for God here. The word for God is theos (θεός) [pronounced theh-OSS] but it isn't found here in the original. We have another negative mê (μή) [pronounced may] plus the aorist optative of gínomai (ἵναμι) [pronounced GIN-oh-my]. so we translate it, “Let it not be so” or “Emphatically no.” The gnomic aorist tense of gínomai (ἵναμι) [pronounced GIN-oh-my] is for a strong denial. The active voice is a strong negative producing the action of the verb. The optative mood is a deliberative optative, a debater’s optative, used for a doubtful attitude on the part of the hearer but not the writer. The writer assumes the doubt of the hearers in order to answer that doubt.

Romans 9:12 Therefore to what conclusion are we forced? There is no injustice with God, is there? Emphatically not.

Principle A

1. It is blasphemous to impugn the integrity of God, both His perfect righteousness and justice are beyond such blasphemy.
2. Anthropopathisms [love and hate] express divine policy in language of accommodation. God neither loves from His attribute nor does He hate from His essence. Hatred is a sin; God cannot sin.
3. The anthropopathisms do not imply that God is prejudiced, they merely state language of accommodation, human frame of reference, so that the issue can be understood.
4. The anthropopathisms of love and hate indicate that the omniscience of God knew that the free will of Esau would reject Christ and the free will of Jacob would believe in Christ.
5. Furthermore, God has the right to bless and judge on the basis of His justice.
6. Since God’s righteousness demands equivalent righteousness and God’s justice can only execute what the righteousness of God demands, any judicial decision from the justice of God cannot be unrighteousness. It follows that any judicial decision from the justice of God could not be, is not, unrighteous.
7. When the unbeliever rejects Christ as saviour he also rejects the righteousness of God. The alternative is judgement, always.
8. This also becomes a problem with the believer who actually possesses the righteousness of God imputed at salvation.
9. No believer is ever commanded to reinvent the wheel [analogous to the plan of God from eternity past].
10. The wheel must turn on its axle and every believer must choose the axle: the righteousness of God imputed or his own self-righteousness.
11. Therefore the believer must decided between the axle of divine righteousness or his own self-righteousness. Choosing one’s own self-righteousness is tantamount to blasphemy, it impugns the character of God. God has given us what we need for His plan — imputed righteousness — and by going to our own self-righteousness we have impugned the character of God.

Romans 9:12 Therefore to what conclusion are we forced? There is no injustice with God, is there? Emphatically not.

Principle b

1. The doctrine of divine essence resolves the apparent [but not real] contradiction between the sovereignty of God and the free will of man. It resolves it in the sphere of the divine decrees, the content of the computer.
2. Man was given free will in order to resolve the angelic conflict.
3. Therefore man's free will in resolving the angelic conflict must be tested. It was tested from the beginning in perfect environment. In the garden one tree was forbidden and to say no, just about one thing, becomes an instant test for volition.
4. Innocent man in the garden could only sin through the function of his own free will in opposition to God's prohibition. God's prohibition came from His sovereignty, so it was the free will of man versus the sovereignty of God.
5. When man's negative volition originated the first sin the result was spiritual death — first the woman, then the man — God provided another tree, the cross, for the test of volition. So with the original tree, the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, there was a negative prohibition; but the second tree, the cross, there was a positive command: "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ."
6. Divine omniscience had the good sense to know in eternity past that Esau would reject Christ as saviour; Jacob would believe in Christ.
7. In fact, in eternity past the omniscience of God fed only facts into the computer: such facts as who would believe and who would reject Christ as saviour.
8. Eternity plus the omniscience of God means that there never was a time when God did not know everyone who would believe and everyone who would reject Christ as saviour.
9. The unconditional promise to Abraham was given to a mature believer. These unconditional promises could only be fulfilled to a believer in the progeny of Abraham for only believers have the imputed righteousness of God. Abraham's physical seed could never receive the promise, only his spiritual seed. That is why God only reiterated the promises regarding Israel to Isaac in the second generation, and Jacob in the third, though there were half brothers and full brothers involved. God could only give to Jacob the promise that he gave to Abraham and Isaac — the chosen people promises, the land promises, the unconditional promises for the Millennium and eternity.
10. Even though the sins of Esau were imputed to Christ on the cross and judged Esau rejected Christ as saviour. From his own free will he said no. He had the same opportunity as his twin brother but he said no.
11. Esau's negative volition placed him outside of the Abrahamic covenant for the promises of God to Abraham could never apply to Esau, they could only apply to Jacob. God is the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, He is not the God of Abraham, Isaac and Esau. Now we have Jews in every generation who have the genes of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, but the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob is not their God. They really follow the pattern of Esau. If you do not believe in Christ you do not have His imputed righteousness, and if you do not have His righteousness imputed these promises of being the elect and God's people, and occupying a land forever, are impossible. They can only apply to the spiritual seed of Abraham, never to the physical seed.

12. When salvation is rejected God has the sovereign right to condemn, to judge, just as when salvation is accepted God has the sovereign right to impute His righteousness, and then at a future time to provide blessing to that imputation. God has rights that are compatible with His character.
13. God did not save Jacob because he was moral and good and self-righteous. Furthermore, He did not condemn and judge Esau because he was bad, evil, or sinful.
14. The key to the adjustment to the justice of God is attitude toward the Lord Jesus Christ, the only saviour — John 3:36.

Lesson #588

588 11/25/1978 Romans 9 Anthropopathisms show the divine policy re positive or negative volition (+V or -V); immutable integrity of God; grace provides what +R demands

Summary Points

1. The failure of Jews to believe in Jesus Christ does not abrogate the integrity of God.
2. We must distinguish between the characteristic love and the anthropopathism of love.
3. The problem exists in the mind of man, where he confuses the attributes of God with the anthropopathisms. Love and hate explain in language of accommodation with regards to believers and unbelievers.
4. God does not cancel His faithfulness due to our failures.
5. We as believers do not relate to God on the basis of anthropopathisms but on the basis of God's integrity.
6. Love and hate are anthropopathisms which help to explain acceptance or rejection.
7. The anthropopathism of love apply to Esau and to Jacob until Jacob goes negative.
8. The anthropopathism of Romans 9:13...the omniscience of God knew who would believe and who would not. John 3:16 Romans 5:8 these all anticipate salvation. Love and hate the result of ? Esau rejected Christ and lived out his life in [X].
9. The unconditional promise to Abraham could only be perpetuated to his grandson who believed in Christ, not to the one who rejected.
10. The preeminence of Israel is related to unconditional promises, and they are found in the Abrahamic, Palestinian, Davidic and New Covenants to the Hebrew people.
11. Every generation of history since the giving of these covenants has had Jews who rejected Jesus Christ as Savior.
12. The existence of these unbelievers does not cancel the integrity of God. Rejection of God's plan does not hinder the plan of God.
13. Esau's failure does not abrogate the Abrahamic covenant.
14. Grace is never neutralized by what others do or fail to do.

15. The justice of God stands and never falls because of human failure. The justice of God is a stabilizing factor. The justice of God is the point of reference to mankind; total complete and absolute stability.
16. In other words, lack of integrity in mankind does not cancel out the integrity of God or His grace policy.
17. Even though every rejection of Christ as Savior impugns the integrity of God, God's integrity continues to function perfectly.
18. Salvation adjustment to the justice of God results in the imputation of divine righteousness and eternal life.
19. Maladjustment receives condemnation from that same justice.

One great weakness in man. This is true of the human soul. A person can have great courage and honor in time of disaster, but fall apart during prosperity. A person can be kindly and friendly to someone who is friendly to them; but when this person turns against them, where the other one cannot handle this situation. We have all have a friend who turned to dung. That is a weakness. You build up a strength in love? This is called instability when you seek to discredit them, to malign them, to judge them, to get into some form of vengeance.

God's integrity is totally stabilized. Divine righteousness determines that divine justice cannot be unfair. Justice must deal with the facts.

Often in life, we have a game plan, but when it is not working, we begin to panic.

One More Principle

1. Adikia means legal injustice. It also connotes partiality, prejudice. Man's unrighteousness. It means to be subject to bribery. It is not holding to justice. No injustice has been done to Esau. People who come to hear doctrine, but they are not really interested. People have come for months to find something to criticize. They find something that they feel is legitimate, and they go their way knowing this is a terrible church and Bob is a terrible pastor.
2. Since righteousness demand righteousness and justice demand justice, God must condemn the lack of divine righteousness in Esau. All rapport is based upon possessing the righteousness of God.
3. God and His grace provides all the His integrity demands. God demands perfect righteousness and He also provides it.
4. It is impossible for God to be unrighteous.
5. There is nothing that man can do to destroy or compromise the integrity of God. The plan of God does not depend upon any of us; it depends upon the integrity of God.
6. Man's self-righteousness cannot glorify God. God's integrity condemns man's unrighteous and self-righteousness.
7. There is no point in angelic or human history where the integrity of God is compromised or gains anything from man's improvement or self-righteousness.

8. No one can establish or take anything from the integrity of God. God's righteousness is perfect and eternal. God cannot be compromised even by Esau.
9. God is perfect justice and He cannot be unjust with any member of the human race.
10. God does not love or hate in terms of human modus vivendi. However, love and hate are used to describe God's attitude toward each of us.
11. An anthropopathism is a human characteristic like a sin or a virtue; it ascribes to God something that He does not possess or do.
12. Neither justification or condemnation is designed for perfect people. We are all imperfect. The very words imply today depravity of man.
13. Neither Esau nor Jacob were perfect; they were both condemned and sinful from birth.
14. Justification and condemnation were designed for sinful people.
15. All people have the same opportunity to choose justification from God or condemnation.
16. The fact that some choose condemnation does not imply that God is unjust. The condemnation of the unbeliever vindicates the justice of God and indicates stability.

Romans 9:12 Therefore to what conclusion are we forced? There is no injustice with God, is there? Emphatically no.

The source never changes. No matter how attractive the unbeliever is, the unbeliever is still condemned. This shows a total lack of prejudice on the part of God's integrity. God's plan does not compromise God's character. Without the integrity of God, man is nothing. He accomplishes nothing; he attains nothing. We have nothing apart from the integrity of God. If God does not promote us, we are not promoted.

Romans is the epistle of the integrity of God. This is the true meaning of Thanksgiving. There is no such thing as blessing to man apart from God's integrity.

Lesson #589

589 11/26/1978 Romans 9:15a; Exodus 33:18–19 Moses: vs. reversionistic Israel and Pharaoh and sees X+Y+Z in the divine decrees

All gentile races have their origins in [X]; but the Jews in [Z]. The origin of the Jewish race is the key to their problem.

Romans 9:15 For He says to Moses: "I will show mercy to whom I may show mercy, and I will have compassion on whom I may have compassion." (BLB)

Verse 15 – now Paul suddenly makes a turn in the road. This is sanctified sarcasm. He now compares the best of self-righteous Jews, like the rich young ruler, to a Gentile who is execrated by Israel. That Gentile is Pharaoh Amenhotep II. When we get through this will see that Paul has used the final and last appeal. He realizes that the Jews racially are smart, that they are quite quick when it comes to some system of sarcasm. In fact, they have used their sarcasm on others because of their great mentality. Now the greatest genius of history, a Jew himself, absolutely floors and shocks the entire Jewish nation by his comment that the unbelieving Jew is no better than the Pharaoh who hardened his heart and who in turn was the beneficiary of one of the most unusual experiments in history – God hardened his heart.

We begin in this verse with Moses who apart from the apostle Paul is the greatest genius in history. In the Old Testament the greatest of all people is Moses; in the New Testament the greatest of all people is Paul. This, of course, excludes the Lord Jesus Christ who as the God-Man is absolutely unique.

Verse 15 is the beginning of a dissertation on the hardening of Pharaoh's heart. But we do not start with Pharaoh; we start with the greatest man of his own generation and one of the two greatest men of history. "For" is the explanatory use of the postpositive conjunctive particle gar, an explanation relating the problem of the Jews to the time when the Jewish nation began. Next comes the present active indicative from the verb légō (λέγω) [pronounced LEH-goh], which means to speak, to say, to communicate. The aoristic present is for punctiliar action in present time. The aorist tense only presents punctiliar action in past time and occasionally in the Greek it is necessary to demonstrate it in the present, therefore the aoristic present tense. The active voice: God produces the action of the verb in His dialogue with Moses in Exodus 33:19. The indicative mood is declarative for the historical reality of this dialogue and its quotation here as introducing the principle and the problem of Israel: "All Israel is not Israel." There is also a dative singular indirect object from the proper noun Môseus/Môsês/Môusês (Μωσεύς/Μωσής/Μωῦσῆς) [pronounced moce-YOOÇ, moh-SACE] – "Moses."

Aaron did a magnificent job making the golden calf statue. The worship continued for days and it became one long licentious holy roller type party, with sex. Moses, using his great strength, turned this idol into dust; and he mixed the dust of gold in with the water and he made all of the people drink the gold.

There is a dialogue between Moses and God where Moses goes to bat for the people. Moses uses Bible doctrine in this discussion.

Moses, instead of seeing some image of God; Moses will get advanced doctrine, because that is how we see God.

The Israelites wanted to see their God; and the Canaanites could see their god; and they had a lot of fun with their God.

There is a big sign over the front door: "We do not cater to crybabies."

Because of the golden calf incident God had threatened to destroy all Israel. Exodus 33:19 – All of my good [attributes revealed] I will cause to pass before your face, and I will proclaim the person of Jehovah before you. How is He going to do it? By letting him see some form? No, finite man cannot see infinite God. Then He adds how it is all going to be done – “and furthermore I will be gracious.” That is the way you see the glory of God. The glory of God is revealed to man through grace. But this grace is not the grace that we have understood in the past, as God giving something we do not deserve; this is that same doctrine of grace in its more complicated form, the doctrine of divine decrees. For in the divine decrees all the facts of history are entered, including every thought, every decision, and every action. And where the category of individual has believed in the Lord grace is the policy and that is the revelation from God.

The part quoted begins with the word “Furthermore I will be gracious.” In the Hebrew of Exodus 33 this is in the qal perfect, which means, “I was always gracious.” This is in the perfect tense; He was gracious in the divine decrees. He provided for Israel always knowing how Israel would turn into reversionistic rejectors of Himself. Then He adds another verb: “and I will have mercy” – the piel perfect of râcham (רָחַם) [pronounced raw-KHAHM], this is really the application of grace. He is saying not only is He gracious [the divine decrees] but He will have mercy. Râcham (רָחַם) [pronounced raw-KHAHM] in the qal stem means to love but in the piel stem is means to have compassion or to have mercy.

“on whom I will have mercy” – again we have the piel stem but the imperfect tense this time of râcham (רָחַם) [pronounced raw-KHAHM]. This is love intensified. Compassion is the intensification of then application of love. The first use of this word here is in the piel perfect; that is for the divine decrees. The second use it is the piel imperfect which is for the actual function in history, the printout. “I have been gracious to whom I will be gracious, and I have had mercy on whom I will have mercy.” In other words, in eternity past in the divine decrees God demonstrated His grace. That is His glory. But that is only part of His glory. Perfect God provides a perfect plan for imperfect persons. Until we get to heaven that is the glory of God.

Translation of Exodus 33:19: And He [God] said, all of my good [tob] I will cause to pass in front of you [doctrine of divine decrees related to history], therefore I will proclaim the name of Jehovah before you [you never learn the glory of God until you learn the person]; furthermore, I have been gracious [qal perfect of chanan; the divine decrees] to whom I will be gracious [qal imperfect of chanan], and I have had mercy [piel perfect of râcham] on whom I will have mercy [piel imperfect of râcham].

In eternity past God fed this into the computer; He has been gracious. It is going to come out of the computer: the application of grace to life – grace in action is mercy.

Verse 20 – But he said, You cannot see my face; for man [lit. son of earth. This is finite man] cannot see me and live. In other words, ‘You can see me but you can’t see me. You can’t see my form while you are a son of earth, while you have a human body.’ To see God with the eye is beyond the possibility of finite man, but to see God with the soul is what you are doing every time you learn Bible doctrine. The soul contains thought; thought is the secret to life. What you really are is what you think.

Paul quotes this verse because Paul is one of the few men of genius in history who understood the real implications of this passage. This passage was never understood from generation to generation of Jews. Why does he quote it? He is saying in effect that what was in the decrees has become history. The golden calf incident is now history but God knew in eternity past it was going to occur. Moses wanted to see His glory and he was one of the few who did. He understood the decrees -- the divine attributes and how they relate to decrees. He saw the glory of God every day with the doctrine that was in his soul. That was the glory of God for this life. So God answers the request of Moses on the basis of who and what God is and not on the basis of who and what Moses is.

Lesson #590

590 11/26/1978 Romans 9:15b; Exodus 33:18–20 Moses sees the glory of God through Bible doctrine; grace from the divine decrees to now

Romans 9:15 For He says to Moses: "I will show mercy to whom I may show mercy, and I will have compassion on whom I may have compassion."

We have the opportunity of seeing that same glory of God, but it requires learning doctrine. The secret to life is the content of the soul, not the shape of the body, the pleasantness of the personality, or the various functions of life. The secret is in the soul – what you think.

Exodus 33:18 – “And he said, I beseech thee, show me thy glory.” This is toward the end of the dialogue between our Lord and Moses after the golden calf incident, after the administration of divine discipline, and after our Lord had threatened to remove Israel entirely and leave only Moses, and to start all over again with Moses. And Moses interceded on behalf of Israel and won his point. Having done so asks the Lord to show him His glory. The qal imperfect from amar indicates Moses as the speaker. This is the result of Moses entering into the tabernacle in Exodus 33:9.

“I beseech thee” is an interjection of respectful entreaty – nâ' (נָא) [pronounced naw], translated ‘beseech’ in the KJV indicates respect for authority. A modern translation would be closer to something like “Please sir.” Then we have the hiphil imperative from the verb rā'âh (רָאָה) [pronounced raw-AWH] which means to see. In the hiphil stem it means to cause to see. The first person singular suffix refers to Moses – “cause me to see.” Next is a masculine singular noun from kâbôwd (כְּבוֹד) [pronounced kaw^b-VODE], which means “glory,” a reference to the Shekinah glory. With the noun we have the second masculine singular suffix, referring to God.

Exodus 33:18 And he [Moses] said, “Please, Sir, cause me to see Your glory.”

God answers in letting Moses see His glory in the only way the finite mind can possibly perceive, and that is through Bible doctrine. Bible doctrine for us must be transferred from the page of the Word to our souls, and for Moses from the teaching of God face to face into his soul.

In verse 19 the corrected translation of the part that was not quoted in Romans 9:15 says, Therefore He [God] replied, "I will cause all My good [the divine plan] to pass before you, and I will proclaim by the name of Jehovah to your face." This means that to understand the glory of God you must understand the plan of God. In other words, "Before you are through you will know all of my plan." And Moses did. Moses would get his doctrine face to face with God. Others in times to come would hear the voice of God, would see a vision, in some cases by angelic teaching; but no one had face to face teaching from God directly except Moses. Moses is therefore the unique prophet. So "to your face" is a compliment given to one man and never repeated to anyone else.

In the name or by the name of JHWH.

God knew all of these things from eternity past. God was gracious then, past tense; and He will continue to be gracious. I have been gracious on whom I will be gracious.

Verse 20 – "But you cannot see my face; for man cannot see my face and live." In other words, finite mankind cannot see infinite God with the empirical functions of the body. Man's empirical faculties are incapable of seeing God. Infinite God can only be seen by means of maximum doctrine resident in the soul. God permitted Moses to see His glory the same way that Paul saw His glory, through Bible doctrine resident in the soul – through understanding the omniscience of God feeding the computer of divine decrees facts only, and the printouts such as election, foreknowledge and predestination. Furthermore, we as believers in Christ also can only understand, can only see, the glory of God through perception of pertinent doctrine, the daily function of GAP. Mankind could no more see the face of God than our physical eyes could stare directly into the sun and see the sun. And just as looking directly into the sun would destroy our vision, so man in his physical body would die by looking directly into the face of God. We see Him through doctrine; we see His glory through doctrine.

Romans 9:15 – "I will have mercy on whom I will have mercy." This is the future active indicative of ἐλεέω (ἐλεέω) [pronounced ehl-eh-EH-oh] which means to have mercy, but it is used for χάναν (חָן) [pronounced khaw-NAHN] which means grace. It means to have mercy or to show mercy. The future tense is a predictive future and it is used to predict an event in future time. The imputation of divine blessing to the mature believer who has maximum doctrine in the soul.

Paul now shows us something. He is not going to go back and reteach what Moses has taught. He is going to pick up where Moses left off. Therefore he starts right out with a future tense – "I will show mercy." In other words, Moses taught the perfect tense in the divine decrees – imperfect tense, the printout in history. Moses starts out with the printout in history and shows that one act of mercy leads to another act of mercy. And of God has been gracious to the Jews in the days of Moses God will be gracious to us, royal family, in the day in which we live. The active voice: the justice of God is gracious by imputing blessing to anyone who cracks the maturity barrier. In other words, the printout of the decrees is in view here. In the computer you have the failure of the majority of the Jews in the Exodus generation, but that does not stop the justice of God from imputing blessing down the line in the days of Paul nor in the day in which we live.

Next we have the accusative singular from the relative pronoun hos (ὃς) [pronounced hohç], whose antecedent is the mature believer, and with it is a very unusual particle, an indefinite particle, án (ὅς) [pronounced ahn], which causes hos to become an indefinite relative pronoun. An indefinite pronoun is very specific; it refers to a specific category. It refers to the believer who has cracked the maturity barrier. It is translated here, “whoever.” With it is the present active subjunctive of éleeô (ἐλεέω) [pronounced ehl-eh-EH-oh] showing that Paul is picking up where Moses left off – “on whoever I show mercy.” But this time he uses the customary present tense for what habitually occurs to the mature believer. The active voice: God produces the action – the justice of God. The subjunctive mood is potential; it implies a future reference and is qualified by the element of contingency. It all depends on whether you see the glory of God. If you see the glory of God you receive blessing. How do you see it? Maximum doctrine in the soul. In the case of Moses, who saw the glory of God? The believer with maximum doctrine in the soul. So we have the future active indicative for the fact that Moses saw it in his day, Paul saw it in his day, and we can have it in our day.

Principle

1. Moses asked for all of us. When Moses said, “Cause me to see your glory” God answered Moses. Paul picked up on the answer and answers it for us. You can see the glory of God in time by cracking the maturity barrier.
2. However, this requires the use of your volition. Maturity adjustment to the justice of God is not a one-shot decision but a continual series of decisions – positive volition toward doctrine.
3. Needless to say the decisions involved are totally non-meritorious in compatibility with God’s grace policy.
4. This statement is directed toward believers from the divine decrees. It emphasizes the fact that what God does cannot be unrighteous or incompatible with His perfect divine attributes.
5. Therefore God knew billions of years ago in His omniscience who would believe and who would not, and then what believer would be positive consistently enough to reach maturity and what believer would be negative and so inconsistent that he could only fall into reversionism. Therefore these are facts which God always knew, and God fed into the computer for the believer. Election, foreknowledge and predestination will not cover the details of these facts, now we are dealing with, Do you grow up spiritually or not? The objective is fulfilled in only one way, by saying yes to doctrine every day.

The various imputations which occur to the believer during the various stages of growth, plus the a fortiori principle, indicate that God is going to parlay whatever blessings are imputed to you in time forever. The blessings that you have now confirm the fact that you have seen the glory of God, but they are nothing compared to the eternal future.

“and” – the connective kai shows that this is a continuation of the quotation with variations by Paul. Plus the future active indicative oikteírō (οἰκτείρω) [pronounced oyk-TEE-roh], which is used for Râcham (רַחַם) [pronounced raw-KHAHM] but here it means to have emotional compassion, to have sympathy, it was used for grief and lamentation, it means to be sympathetic, to have a sympathy that is ready to help. The predictive future tense anticipates the function of logistical grace after salvation adjustment to the justice of God. God will provide everything necessary; all you bring is your volition that says yes or no. The active voice: God provided logistical grace support; He produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of logistical grace. We also have, again, the accusative singular from the relative pronoun hos with the particle án (ὅν) [pronounced ahn] denoting that the action of the verb is dependent on some circumstance or some condition, which, of course, is faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, salvation adjustment to the justice of God.

Next we have the present active subjunctive oikteírō (οἰκτείρω) [pronounced oyk-TEE-roh] again – “on whomever I have compassion.” The customary present is for what habitually occurs to believers. The active voice: God produces the action. The subjunctive mood is potential implying a future reference qualified by the element of contingency, which is your volition. It is a reference to the potential of eternal salvation, salvation adjustment to the justice of God through faith in Christ.

Principle

1. Note first that compassion is an anthropopathism ascribing to God a human characteristic which God does not really possess but explains in language of accommodation divine policy in terms of human frame of reference.
2. The anthropopathism describes logistical grace after salvation. The support of the believer in [Y].
3. The blessing of [Z] is blessing in maturity.
4. Each [] possesses divine support. Laws of divine establishment, logistical grace, and imputation of divine blessing are the three support systems for each point in the believers place in the plan of God.

Romans 9:15 For He communicates to Moses [Ex. 33:19], “I will have mercy [imputation of divine blessing at maturity] on whomever I show mercy [salvation], and I will have compassion [logistical grace] on whomever I show compassion [salvation adjustment to the justice of God].”

This Means

1. The quotation answers the rhetorical question of the previous verse which does not need or require an answer. In other words, a rhetorical question is simply a debater’s technique anticipating resistance of doctrine and shows that resistance of doctrine is a disaster. So the quotation answers the rhetorical question by going back to an historical disaster, the golden calf incident, and bringing forward from that motivation, new material about the importance of seeing the glory of God through persistence in the perception of Bible doctrine.

2. This also answers and replies to the request of Moses to see the glory of God, and at the same time answers our action or desire in the same vein.
3. The glory of God is not seen visibly, empirically, but through the doctrines of grace, the doctrine of imputation, therefore momentum in the plan of God.
4. In the imputation of blessing God cannot be unrighteous. God is perfect; His attributes are perfect and uncompromisable, immutable, infinite, eternal.
5. God, however, has designed a perfect plan for imperfect persons so that imperfect persons can be blessed in time without compromising the attributes of God, and be blessed in eternity through the glory of God.
6. God through His plan has provided meaning, purpose and definition for life. God through His doctrine has provided motivation, momentum and blessing in life.
7. God has not only provided, then, the blessing but the capacity for the blessing. The capacity for blessing is doctrine, which is also the ability to see the glory of God.

Lesson #591

591 11/27/1978 Romans 9:16 Blessing not acquired by hustling, but by grace, maximum Bible doctrine and capacity; crying; sincerity

Romans 9:16 So then, it is not of the willing, nor of the running, but of God showing mercy. (BLB)

Verse 16 – we have an inferential particle combined with an inferential particle: ára (ἄρα) [pronounced AHR-ah] oun (οὖν) [pronounced oon] — they both mean “therefore.” When you combine at the beginning of a sentence two inferential particles immediately you have a very strange organization, it means a double conclusion. The reason we have a double conclusion is because of the quotation from Exodus 33:19 combined with the previous verse, Romans 9:15. The first one takes us back to Exodus 33. The conclusion from that: the omniscience of God fed into the computer of divine decrees the facts only – the actual, not the probable. So what was in the decrees actually happened. That calls for a conclusion. Then when this was quoted in Romans 9:15 we have the printout, the objective which is maturity. But to get to maturity you have to get to logistical grace, and you can’t have logistical grace until you are saved. So you have salvation, logistical grace, maturity adjustment to the justice of God, the imputation of divine blessing that brings glorification to the Lord Jesus Christ. That calls for a double conclusion and therefore we have two inferential particles combined to introduce what might be called a double conclusion. We will translate them as “So then.”

Next comes a negative, and our conclusion is a negative conclusion, ára (ἄρα) [pronounced AHR-ah], oun (οὖν) [pronounced oon] ou (οὐ) [pronounced oo]. This demands the use of the present active indicative from the verb eimi (εἶμι) [pronounced eye-ME] inserted. This is an ellipsis – “So that it is not.”

The articular present active participle of the verb thélô (θέλω) [pronounced THEH-Ioh] is found in the passage. The definite article is the ablative of source singular, used as a personal pronoun and translated “from him.” The definite article used as a personal pronoun emphasizes in a negative way the source of divine blessing.

Then we have a pictorial present tense which presents to the mind a picture of events in the process of occurrence – the millions of desires for blessing from God. The active voice: either the believer, and in some cases even unbelievers, could produce the action of the verb, but here is its specific reference to the unbeliever Esau. He is described as missing the blessing. He missed the blessing because he refused to accept Christ as saviour, therefore he could not have +R. He had to be justified, he had to follow the pattern of his grandfather, Abraham – Genesis 15:6. In Hebrews 12:16,17 we have a little picture of Esau which helps us to understand Romans 9:16. Esau would not believe in Christ but he would cry and wallow in his tears in front of God, and expect God to feel sorry for him and give him blessing anyway. [Kukis note: See the contradiction here? Esau wants God to feel sorry for him; but that is true only if he believes in God.] This is typical of so many people; they want everyone else to feel sorry for them. They feel sorry for themselves and to the extent that you feel sorry for yourself you are already a weak person. God does not fall for the cry-baby routine, the system of hustling through self-pity – “we know that afterward, when he kept desiring to inherit the blessing, he was rejected, for he did not find opportunity for change of mind, though he sought the same [blessing] with tears.” He tried to cry his way into blessing. “So that it is not from him who desires.” People sincerely desire to glorify God, they sincerely desire to do the right thing, they sincerely desire to help God, and there is no way that sincerity is ever going to be a virtue and that the desire to glorify God is ever going to be the reality of glorifying God. There is a vast difference between desire and reality. Desire is like arrogance, it takes you farther and farther away from reality. Only grace will do it, but grace calls for continual positive volition toward Bible doctrine.

Principle

1. The function of human volition in desire is not the source of blessing from God. You can wish for blessing, desire blessing, beg for blessing, and be sincere for blessing, and you are farther from blessing than when you started.
2. The source of all blessing from God is the attribute of divine justice, and justice functions only through imputation. Outside of two judicial imputations there must always be a target, and that target only come through grace.
3. Moses did not see the glory of God. He wanted to, he desired to see the glory of God, but he didn't see it. He saw the back parts of God. Because his capacity through doctrine resident in his soul was compatible with the function of the grace of God he saw what in reality on the mature believer can see – the glory of God, not face to face but through doctrine.
4. The justice of God is the source of blessing. Two adjustments to the justice of God are necessary for blessing and Esau had neither. He did not have salvation adjustment, he did not have maturity adjustment to the justice of God.
5. Esau hustled, cried, wept, was sincere, reformed, did everything but believe in Christ. Desire resident in the soul is no substitute for doctrine resident in the soul. Sincere desire only complicates the desire. God has a plan, He has revealed His plan, and you must follow God's plan which is simple because it is a grace policy. Desire resident in the soul is meaningless.

“nor of him that runneth” – a negative conjunction oude (οὐδέ) [pronounced oo-DEH], literally “and not” but it is used for joining sentences and can be translated “nor.” Then we have the articular present active participle from the verb trechō (τρέχω) [pronounced TREHK-oh] – giving to get blessing from God is what “running” means here. We have the definite article, the ablative of source singular, used as a personal pronoun to emphasize a second negative source of divine blessing. If desire represents thought running represents the action of the body. Neither the thought of the soul nor the activity of the body will bring blessing from God – “and not from him who runs.” The pictorial present tense presents to the mind a picture of events in the process of occurrence – actions and productions from the body, the burning of human energy in seeking blessing from God. The active voice: while either the believer or unbeliever can produce the action of the verb Esau is an unbeliever. The active voice also means that many believers, by application, try to work for blessing from God. “So then it is not from him who desires [blessing], and not for him who runs [after blessing].” That is the negative side brought into focus because of Esau.

“but” – the adversative conjunction allá (ἀλλά) [pronounced ahl-LAH] sets up a contrast – “but in contrast to this,” a contrast between the false source of blessing and the true source of blessing. Then we have the ablative absolute of source. Paul is trying to make a point. He is concerned for people he knows who are going to hell on the one hand or failing to accomplish the plan of God as believers on the other hand. We have the ablative of source from theos (θεός) [pronounced theh-OSS], and this is the subject which is always in the nominative. And when you have a participle in the ablative form you have an ablative absolute. So this is not only set aside from the rest of the sentence but it is emphasized – “but from God.”

Next we have an articular present active participle. The participle is in the ablative case and the verb is ēleeō (ἐλεέω) [pronounced ehl-eh-EH-oh] which means to show mercy, to demonstrate mercy, and here it means to have mercy – “who has mercy.”

There is a way to see the glory of God: maximum doctrine resident in the soul – the have the justice of God imputed divine blessing to the righteousness of God at maturity and thereafter. You not only see the glory of God but you experience the accoutrements that accompany the glory of God.

“but from God who has mercy” – the definite article in the ablative singular is used as a relative pronoun whose antecedent is theos (θεός) [pronounced theh-OSS]. The perfective present tense denotes a continuation of existing results. It refers to a fact which has come to be in the past and is emphasized as a present reality. The active voice: the justice of God produces the action of the verb at two points: salvation adjustment to the justice of God, resulting in the imputation of righteousness and eternal life; and maturity adjustment to the justice of God resulting in the imputation of blessing. God tells us that He has a plan for us by imputing life to us at the moment we were born; that is the first imputation. Plus Adam's original sin, and this second imputation is always the basis for the potential. The potential is salvation because condemnation precedes salvation. Condemnation comes from the imputation of Adam's sin and therefore the potential is set up immediately. The potential then shows how God has mercy for the potential means the provision of doctrine, the gospel, and that means the first hope which is absolute confidence that when you believe in Christ you have eternal life and the plus is salvation adjustment to the justice of God through faith in the Lord Jesus Christ; God has had mercy. God has provided a potential to go with a hopeless situation – human life imputed plus Adam's original sin, simultaneous imputations that put man in a totally hopeless situation. But the potential from the second imputation plus the doctrine [the gospel], plus the hope, is the mercy of God. So three factors form the mercy of God.

Principle

1. Neither human thought nor human action can extract blessing from God.
2. There is nothing man can do, think, devise to bring blessing from God since in eternity past God devised the system.
3. Divine blessing is an imputation from the justice of God to the righteousness of God at the point of maturity and thereafter.
4. God can only provide blessing for capacity for blessing.
5. God's imputed blessing is designed to glorify God as the tactical victory of the angelic conflict.
6. The tactical victory compliments the strategical victory of our Lord in His death, burial, resurrection, ascension and session.
7. If God does not promote you, you are not promoted.
8. If God does not bless you, then you are not blessed.
9. Capacity through maximum doctrine in the soul is the key to blessing from God.
10. Many people have wealth and misery.
11. Many people have success and misery.
12. Many people are promoted and in a perpetual state of misery.
13. Blessing requires capacity for happiness.
14. In blessing by association, accoutrements of blessing are given. But no capacity intensifies unhappiness misery.
15. The real key to blessing is capacity for that blessing. There must be capacity before the blessing is imputed.

Romans 9:16 So then it is not from who desires [blessing], and not from him who runs [after blessing], but from God who has mercy.

1977 Romans

Lesson #592

592 11/28/1978 Romans 9:17a; Exodus 9:16 How God hardened the heart of Pharaoh Amenhotep II to glorify God and evangelize the world

We start out without capacity for various blessings; and giving such things to us does not make us happy or satisfied.

Previous set of points repeated and some points are added.

Romans 9:17 For the Scripture says to Pharaoh: “For this very purpose I have raised you up, so that I might show My power in you, and that My name should be declared in all the earth.” (BLB)

Paul quotes from the Hebrew and sometimes it is exactly. Sometimes Paul quotes from the Septuagint. Sometimes he paraphrases. Sometimes he does not even paraphrase but brings in a complete change, in order to add a point which was not there before.

Verse 17 – “For” is an explanatory use of the postpositive conjunctive particle gar. The nominative singular from the noun graphê (γραφή) [pronounced graf-AY], meaning “writings,” is used here for the Old Testament scripture. With it is the generic use of the definite article setting apart the scriptures as being sacred and the Word of God, plus the present active indicative of légō (λέγω) [pronounced LEH-goh], meaning to say, to speak, to communicate. The present tense is a historical present employed when a past event is used with the vividness of a present occurrence. The active voice: the Old Testament canon, specifically Exodus 9:16, produces the action of the verb here. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the fact that this is the part of the canon of scripture that Exodus is, and that this is a part of the story of the hardening of Pharaoh’s heart which actually begins in Exodus 9:12.

The dative singular indirect object from the definite article plus the indeclinable noun Pharaô (Φαραώ) [pronounced far-ah-OH] follows. The Hebrew has the suffix “h” but there is no “h” for a suffix in the Greek. Pharaoh is the official title for the kings of Egypt.

Exodus 9:16 – the verse starts out with a waw in the Hebrew, plus an adverb ’ûwlâm (אולי) [pronounced oo-LAWM] – “But on the contrary.” Then we have a preposition, be, which should be translated “because.” The object of the preposition is ’âbûwr (רובע) [pronounced ’gaw-BOOR] which is a conjunction which means simply “this” – “because of this [purpose].” “But on the contrary, for this purpose.”

“have I raised thee up” – the hiphil perfect singular from the verb ’âmad (עמד) [pronounced ’gaw-MAHD] with the second person singular suffix referring to Amenhotep II. The principle: Jesus Christ controls history. God raised up. This means that God permitted this young man to reach maturity, to succeed his father, to fulfil a certain principle in history. ’âmad (עמד) [pronounced ’gaw-MAHD] means to stand, to establish, to appoint, to maintain, to preserve. The hiphil stem is the causative stem. In the hiphil this can be translated “I have established you, I have caused you to stand.” This means, in effect, “I have permitted to continue in history.”

Next we have a prepositional phrase, the same preposition be ’âbûwr (רובע) [pronounced ’gaw-BOOR] again, meaning “for this purpose.” God had a reason for raising up a very contrary, contradictory type of person. That means he was going to make a slash in history. You never make a slash in history by being all things to all men, by being a politician. Then we have the hiphil infinitive from râ'âh (רָאָה) [pronounced raw-AWH]. This means to cause to see. It also has a second masculine singular suffix referring to Pharaoh Amenhotep II, and it should be translated “for the purpose of showing you” or “in order that I might show you.”

Then we have the sign of the accusative case and with it a noun in the masculine singular, kôwach (כֹּחַ) [pronounced KOE-ahkh]—or kôach (כֹּחַ) [pronounced KOE-ahkh], referring to God. It means “power” the suffix means “my” – “my power.”

Exodus 9:16 But on the contrary for this purpose I have established you, in order that I might show you My power and in order that My name may be celebrated or declared throughout all the earth.

“name” – shêm (שֵׁם) [pronounced shame], which means person, fame or name. Here it is translated “reputation” or “name”-- “and in order that my reputation.” Then we have a qal active participle from çôphêr (צִיַּף) [pronounced soh-FAIR] which means to engrave, to print, to write; plus a prepositional phrase which expresses a purpose, be meaning “in,” then kôl (כֹּל) [pronounced kohl] which is “all,” and then ha'erecs (אֶרֶץ) [pronounced EH-rets] – “in all the world.”

This verse is in a context where there is a sort of a pause between the sixth plague of the boils and the seventh plague of the hail. Between these two plagues our Lord has a special message for Pharaoh Amenhotep II, a message which the genius of Paul converts into a very special message for us. Note Exodus 9:12-16. Up until this time Pharaoh had always hardened his own heart – simply negative volition. Then there was pressure from the plague and this caused him to say yes, and as soon as the pressure was off he said no. So what he has really said all the way down is 18 major no's. That is called Pharaoh hardening his heart from his own free will because this is exactly what he wanted to do. But when we get to the seventh plague we suddenly read in verse 12, “And Jehovah hardened Pharaoh's heart and he did not listen to them [Moses and Aaron].”

Verse 14 – these plagues are going to be sent to Pharaoh's right lobe. Pharaoh is personally not only going to feel the pressure but he will link up his thinking with his emotion and his volition, and he is going to have the privilege of saying no and holding the all-time record for saying no. God did not reach into Pharaoh's heart and just put him on negative. All He did was to give him greater opportunity to say no to God than anyone in history.

Verse 15 – the omniscience of God in eternity past knew all of the facts, the actual; he also knew the probable. The probable is never fed into the computer, only the actual. The probable is verse 15, “if I had destroyed you.” So the printout is this passage, Exodus 9-12. God is keeping all of them alive so that Pharaoh can do the will of God by saying no to God. God will take his no's from now on to demonstrate His power, not simply to the Egyptians but to the entire world. And in this way a whole generation of people scattered throughout the earth who have positive volition at God-consciousness are going to respond. They are going to be positive at God-consciousness and positive at gospel hearing. God could have completely wiped them out, but He is keeping the Egyptians alive and using them in order to glorify Himself. This makes it possible for Rahab the prostitute to become a believer way over in Canaan.

This verse, then, records from the omniscience of God the alternatives which did not occur and therefore was not fed into the computer.

Verse 16 – “In contrast to what I did not do, this is what I am going to do.” So this demonstration of divine power has already been mentioned in Romans 1:20 – “For since the creation of the world His invisible attributes—His eternal power and divine nature—have been clearly seen, being understood through what has been made. So that [the human race] is without excuse.”

The Hardness of Pharaoh's Heart

1. Until the 6th plague the Bible is consistent in saying Pharaoh hardened his own heart. In other words, as a free agent he utilized his own sovereign volition as the ruler of the Egyptian empire to say no. He hardened his own heart through negative volition, negative self-determination. God allows Pharaoh to take his negative volition and express it to the maximum.
2. But no one up to this time in history had ever been able to say no as many times as Pharaoh would from this time on. At this point God hardened Pharaoh's heart – which means He gives him the opportunity to carry his negative volition to the maximum. God merely kept Pharaoh alive so that he could continue to say no.
3. We understand now that we are discussing a part of the soul, invisible yet real, the hardening of Pharaoh's heart or right lobe. This man has developed remarkable scar tissue of the soul. He has been exposed to the truth, he has rejected it time and time again.
4. The hardening of Pharaoh's right lobe in BC 1441 becomes the means of evangelizing the world.
5. This is illustrated by the fact that 45 years later Rahab the prostitute was saved through the hardening of Pharaoh's heart – Joshua 2:10,11.
6. The justice of God gave Pharaoh numerous opportunities to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ as Jehovah Elohim. He rejected them all.
7. Pharaoh saw many demonstrations of divine power, designed to evangelize him personally, but he refused in the pattern of Exodus 7:13.
8. When our Lord Jesus Christ was hanging on the cross Pharaoh's sins were imputed to Christ and judged, along with everyone else's. Therefore we can say that Christ died for Pharaoh's sins.
9. Furthermore, God was not willing that Pharaoh should perish – 2Peter 3:9.
10. Pharaoh had many opportunities for positive volition, as per Exodus 7:22; 8:15, 32; 9:34,35.

11. In other words, the free will of Pharaoh was negative. Each No added scar tissue to his soul and gave him strength to say No the next time and to a greater extent than anyone who has ever lived.
12. With great scar tissue of the soul from saying no repeatedly God provided more opportunities to intensify the manifestation of His power with each opportunity.
13. This is the context in which God hardened the heart of Pharaoh, after the 6th plague.
14. Unbeliever reversionism has resulted in scar tissue of the soul, great maladjustment to the justice of God.
15. Therefore beginning in Exodus 9:12 we have it for the first time, "The Lord hardened Pharaoh's heart."
16. The justice of God gave Pharaoh maximum opportunity to express negative volition by keeping him alive and exposing him to plagues 7,8,9 and 10.
17. This is recorded under the title, "The Lord hardened Pharaoh's heart" – Exodus 9:12; 10:1, 20, 27; 11:10; 14:8.
18. God hardened Pharaoh's heart by giving Amenhotep II more opportunity to say no than are ordinarily permitted. More than anyone is generally permitted.
19. Again, God preserved Pharaoh alive in great human power, in great sovereignty to demonstrate that divine power is infinitely greater than human power and human authority. In fact, legitimate authority is an extension of divine authority, a delegation of divine authority. God continued to give Pharaoh the strength to continue to say no.
20. To keep Pharaoh alive to say no as many times God impressed upon the entire world the greatness of His power both to condemn Pharaoh and to deliver His own people.
21. Therefore the hardening of Pharaoh's heart or the extension of his negative volition, the expression of the scar tissue of his soul was the means of evangelizing the world of that day.
22. While others were being impressed with the power of God Pharaoh was being impressed with his own power, his ability to say no and live, his negative volition, his self-determination. His will to resist only increased his arrogance.
23. Little did Pharaoh realize that the expression of human arrogance and power revealed to the entire world the omnipotence of God. This became a factor in both God-consciousness as well as gospel hearing. And not only for the Egyptians but for Jews and Ethiopians as well.
24. Therefore we have the pattern of Romans 2:5 which becomes perfect description of Pharaoh – "But because of your stubbornness and your unrepentant heart, you are storing up wrath for yourselves in the day of wrath, when God's righteous judgment is revealed!"
25. Not until, then, the 6th plague did God harden Pharaoh's right lobe, which God did by removing all restraint from the expression of his negative volition. After the certain point, negative volition will destroy the person expressing negative volition.

26. After God hardened Pharaoh's heart he still had several opportunities for repentance or a change of mind about the Lord Jesus Christ – e.g. Exodus 9:27; 10:16,17.
27. The divine purpose in the hardening of Pharaoh's right lobe is stated in Exodus 7:3-5 – the prophecy of it. Therefore I will harden Pharaoh's heart that I might multiply...and the Egyptians shall know that I am the Lord when I stretch out My hand over Egypt and bring My people out.
28. A second divine purpose, Exodus 9:16, the evangelization of the world.
29. The purpose is reiterated in Paul's quotation of Exodus 9:16 in Romans 9:17.

1977 Romans

Lesson #593

593 11/29/1978 Romans 9:17b; Psalm 76:10 Thankful Vietnam vet; God's power over and use of arrogant negative volition (–V) of Pharaoh; jealousy

It was not the fault of the Vietnam vets that we lost the war in Vietnam. A person who graduated with a Bachelor's degree in psychology. He knew that he had certain freedoms and privileges as an American. He got a few more degrees based upon being a veteran. Having been overseas makes him appreciate the opportunity and lifestyle available in the United States. There are a lot of people who appreciate our heritage and our lives here in the US.

Israel had great concepts and it was a great nation. God gave them opportunities that no other nation had. Our government did not provide free enterprise; nor did labor. Those who try to claim credit for our lives here are often those trying to destroy it.

The bleeding heart do-gooders cause more problems than we can imagine, those who get into government positions.

Bob reads the corrected translation of Exodus 9:12–16. A review of the points from the previous lesson. Bob repeated this because it is clear that this rolled off their backs and needed to hear it again.

Romans 9:17 For the Scripture says to Pharaoh: "For this very purpose I have raised you up, so that I might show My power in you, and that My name should be declared in all the earth." (BLB)

"Even" – the conjunction hóti (ὅτι) [pronounced HOH-tee] is used here for quotation arks. Often this conjunction is simply used to translate a purpose clause, a final clause, a clause to denote some aim or objective. But in many case it is simply used for quotation marks, and in that case it does not have to be translated, or if it is translated you simply say, "quote." With it is a prepositional phrase – eis (εἰς) [pronounced ICE] is used here to express a short purpose clause. We have eis (εἰς) [pronounced ICE] plus the accusative neuter singular from the attributive use of the intensive pronoun autós (αὐτός) [pronounced ow-TOSS]. This is a rather rare use of autós (αὐτός) [pronounced ow-TOSS] because it is generally used as a third person personal pronoun in Greek. It is translated “same.” With that is the accusative neuter singular from the immediate demonstrative pronoun houtos (οὗτος) [pronounced HOO-tos]. “For this same purpose” or “For this very purpose.”

Next is the aorist active indicative of the verb εγεγειρω, and it means to raise up, to bring into being in Attic Greek, but in the Koine Greek it means to cause to appear in history or to call into existence. It should be correctly translated, “I have caused you to continue in history.” The Lord permitted Pharaoh to remain in history and permitted him to say no, and no, and no (plagues 7,8,9,10) – four times above the record book he said no. Each time there was a greater manifestation of divine power, and each manifestation of divine power not only triggered divine consciousness but also opened up things for gospel hearing so that when the Jews left Egypt many Ethiopians and Egyptians also left with them. They believed in the Lord Jesus Christ. We know this because Moses married an Ethiopian woman.

So far we have Romans 9:17a-b: For the scripture says to Pharaoh [Exodus 9:16], ‘I have caused you to continue in history.’

The culminative aorist tense views the historical existence of Amenhotep II in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of its existing results, namely the glorification of God through the overruling of the deceitfulness and lack of integrity in Pharaoh. He would say that the Hebrew people could live; but when the pressure was removed, he reneged on his pronouncement. We will run into such things, but we do not try to gain revenge; we will leave it in God’s hands. In the hypocrisy, someone will look to destroy you. We do not try to avenge ourselves; we do not fall apart. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb by controlling history. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of God’s preservation of Pharaoh. It was the power of God that was keeping Pharaoh in power.

People have lost the ability to be appreciative. We have many material blessings as a result of other people. Many of these large companies have made it possible for us to enjoy the prosperity of the United States. There is great criticism of these large companies because they are not giving their profits back to the people. People do not understand the viewpoint of the people who run the company. They do not know about making payroll, about balancing budgets, about developing new products, etc.

Bob mentions the suicide cult, who also had ties to communism. Taxpayer money is being spent to bring their bodies back to the US. They should be buried right there.

Our politicians try to outdo one another in giving away benefits and money.

With this we have the accusative singular direct object from the personal pronoun su – “you.” God says, “You, pharaoh, I am keeping alive and in power.” This is a reminder of Psalm 76:10 – “For the wraths [plural] of man shall praise you.” The principle should be quite obvious. God uses the tyranny of man to demonstrate His power and to evangelize the human race. Therefore, Pharaoh’s rejection of Christ and subsequent lack of integrity is used to advance the plan of God. Pharaoh thought that because he had all of that power and all of that sovereignty that by saying no he was hindering God's plan. It is an arrogant thought that many people have.

So far we have Romans 9:17a-b: For the scripture says to Pharaoh [Exodus 9:16], 'I have caused you to continue in history.'

Principle

1. Like Ishmael and Esau, Pharaoh Amenhotep II was an unbeliever who had the opportunity to be saved many times, but rejected Christ as frequently as he rejected God's demand to release Israel.
2. The justice of God was not arbitrary in blessing Moses and cursing Pharaoh. The justice of God gave Pharaoh extra time but Pharaoh used the extra time to reject God's plan.
3. Blessing was imputed to Moses at maturity adjustment to the justice of God through maximum doctrine resident in the soul.
4. But Pharaoh was an unbeliever. He used his great power and lack of integrity to perpetuate tyranny and slavery to the Jews.
5. The plan of God is never hindered by negative volition. God used the wrath of Pharaoh to praise Him. Psalm 76:10
6. Pharaoh's negative volition and his deceptive hypocrisy did not frustrate the plan or the purposes of God.
7. Pharaoh's resistance only fulfilled the plan of God by leading to world-wide evangelism.
8. We must remember that Amenhotep II was a great man from the standpoint of power and authority, an absolute monarch at the peak of his career.
9. God's power [omnipotence] is infinitely greater than the power of any tyrant or dictator, infinitely more powerful than the concentrated evil of any of our modern powers.
10. There is no evil that Satan can inspire, no power, no authority, no tyranny that man can devise, which can compete with the power of God. 1John 4:4.
11. Rejecting the allegation of supralapsarianism, God did not create evil in Pharaoh but Pharaoh by his own self-determination became what he was. God recognized it in the decrees but God did not originate it.
12. In fact, Pharaoh from his own free will rejected divine restraints as well as resisted doctrine.
13. While God did not make Pharaoh evil He used Pharaoh's self-made evil to further His own plan. Therefore the integrity of God remains the issue.
14. The righteousness of God cannot do wrong; the justice of God cannot be unfair.

We start out with capacity for life. There are commands made to the believer but these should be a natural result of study.

Pharaoh was a part of the 18th dynasty in Egypt. He was used by God to make the choice between yes or no on demands made by God. God allowed Pharaoh to live long enough to continue to say no.

Romans 9:17 For the Scripture says to Pharaoh: “For this very purpose I have raised you up, so that I might show My power in you, and that My name should be declared in all the earth.” (BLB)

“and that” – hopôs (ὅπως) [pronounced HOP-oce]. This conjunction is used to indicate a divine purpose. It is translated “that” or “in order that.” With this, forming the final purpose clause, is the aorist middle subjunctive of the verb endeiknumi (ἐνδείκνυμι) [pronounced en-DIKE-noo-mee] which means to show, to manifest, to demonstrate. The correct translation “In order that I might demonstrate.” God is invisible but there are manifestations of His great character and these manifestations all come from power – His omnipotence. The aorist tense is a culminative aorist, it views the demonstration of God’s power [the ten plagues] in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results which is evangelism both in Egypt and throughout the entire world. All ten confrontations are in view, but we look at the results of these confrontations. The middle voice is the indirect middle emphasizing the agent, God, as producing the action of the verb. This use signifies that the action is totally related to the subject in a special and a unique way. God used all of those no’s from Pharaoh as a means of allowing the world to see His power, and every time that Pharaoh said no great segments of the kingdom began to say yes – in effect, believing in the Lord Jesus Christ. The subjunctive mood implies a future reference here because it is potential, and therefore it is used with hopôs (ὅπως) [pronounced HOP-oce] to introduce the divine purpose. The subjunctive mood means a purpose clause. “In order that I might demonstrate.”

Next comes en (ἐν) [pronounced en] plus the instrumental from the personal pronoun su, and it means “by means of you.” Then comes the accusative singular direct object from the noun dúnamis (δύναμις) [pronounced DOO-nahm-iss] for “power,” and with it the possessive genitive from the personal pronoun egó (ἐγώ) [pronounced ehg-OH] – God was using His own power.

Romans 9:17 (partial) In order that I might demonstrate My power by means of you.

Principle

1. God used Pharaoh’s negative volition and his arrogant resistance to demonstrate His omnipotence.
2. The ten confrontations which are called the ten plagues (and sometimes are called the ten miracles) demonstrate divine power in an empirical way. Empiricism cannot see God but empiricism can very definitely understand the power of God in these manifestations.

3. Each miracle or plague was constructed in the deceitfulness, the vacillation, the instability, the lack of honor in Amenhotep II.
4. The break comes after the first six confrontations (plagues). When you get to plague #7 we read that God hardened Pharaoh's heart, which simply means He permitted him to continue to live and to continue to say no.
5. Many Egyptians had directly responded to the demonstration of divine power in the first 6 plagues. So when we get to Exodus 9:20, before beginning the 7th, "He that feared the word of the LORD among the servants of Pharaoh made his servants and his cattle flee into the houses." Here in Pharaoh's court one of his administrators, one of those who ruled under him, had already become a believer. The word "fear" really means respect produced from faith.

Moses built the treasure cities of Egypt. He was a famous writer, a famous musician

Thutmose II married a very unusual woman, Hapshesit; and they had on daughter. It is Hapshetsit who discovered the baby Moses in the water. The bastard son is Thutmose III and his son would be Amenhotep II. Thutmose III became the greatest ruler. Amenhotep II is the one who had the confrontation between Moses and himself.

Moses had tremendous physical strength; one of the strongest men to ever live. He killed an Egyptian taskmaster without hardly trying.

Amenhotep was an arrogant and jealous person. He departed from worshiping the Egyptian gods. He brought the worship of the Assyrian storm god and the plague of hail was a manifestation of that god.

Moses was Amenhotep's uncle. He was jealous of Moses and this had a lot to do with him continually saying no to Moses. The death of his firstborn is noted in ancient history books. Volume II part I. Amenhotep II lost his oldest son, so his second son succeeded him, Thutmose IV. This suggests that Thutmose IV was not his father's heir apparent; due to the untimely death of older brother. He was the second, not the first son. Unforeseen turn of fate is what the history book calls it. Cambridge Ancient History.

Principle

1. The demonstration of divine power became the means of releasing the Jews from slavery. This was the birth of the first priest/client nation in history. The evangelization of Egypt was another result, plus the evangelization of the entire world.
2. Any Jew, any Egyptian, Ethiopian or Canaanite who wanted salvation had a clear picture of the source of salvation from the manifest power revealed by means of the hardening of Pharaoh's heart. If God had not permitted him to live he could not have said no in those final four confrontations.
3. It was not until the 6th plague, however, that we read the phrase "God hardened Pharaoh's heart." The mechanics, again, of the hardening of Pharaoh's heart was the removal of all restraints on his negative volition plus keeping him alive.

4. Pharaoh's free will moved him, without any restraint from God, on a collision course with historical disaster.
5. Just as God turned the heathen over to their vile lusts, affections, and reprobate minds in Romans 1:24-28, so God turned Pharaoh over to his negative volition, his arrogance, his jealousy, his pettiness. And this was the means of evangelizing that generation of history around 1441-1440 B.C.
6. The impact of all of this is obvious. Paul is comparing the Jews of his day, the contemporary Jews, with Pharaoh. This was the greatest insult of all.
7. As Pharaoh hardened his heart through maximum negative volition at the time of the Exodus, so the legalistic Jews of Paul's day had hardened their hearts through maximum negative volition toward doctrine.

The Application to Contemporary History

1. To be compared to Pharaoh Amenhotep II was as insulting to the Jews as their negative volition was insulting to God.
2. The Jews of Paul's day had violated their magnificent spiritual heritage.
3. The unique origin of the race of the Jews through positive volition toward Christ, and doctrine resident in the soul on the part of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, had not alerted the Jews to their failure; a failure stated in the promise of verse 6 – "All Israel is not really Israel."
4. The unique origin of the nation with the contrast between the positive volition of Moses and the negative volition of Pharaoh, plus the fact that Israel was the first client nation to God in history, should have alerted the Jews in Paul's time to the importance of positive volition toward Christ – believing in Him for salvation.
5. The hereditary people of God had become heretical – heretical in the pattern of Ishmael, Esau and Pharaoh, three Gentiles they detested.
6. Note that the function of God does not rob man of his free will; he is still a creature of self-determination.
7. But God uses the free will of Pharaoh to advance His own plan and to liberate His people from slavery.
8. Man is not robbed of his self-determination by the omnipotence of God but actually provided with greater historical opportunity to express non-meritorious free will to enter the plan of God.
9. Paul's dialectical genius makes a grace appeal to Israel in this chapter and in chapter 10.
10. God the Holy Spirit, then, uses the dialectical genius of Paul to relate obvious historical disaster to a skilful presentation of the panacea of the Jewish problem – rejection of Jesus Christ who is the God of Israel, Jehovah Elohim, the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, the Shekinah glory.

Romans 9:17 For the Scripture says to Pharaoh: "For this very purpose I have raised you up, so that I might show My power in you, and that My name should be declared in all the earth." (BLB)

“and” is the connective use of the conjunction kai. Then there is the repetition of the conjunction hopôs (ὅπως) [pronounced HOP-ocē] plus the subjunctive to indicate the continuation of the purpose clause – “and in order that.” The subject in this final clause is the nominative singular of the noun onoma (ὄνομα, ατος, τό) [pronounced OHN-oh-ma] which means “reputation, fame, person or name.” Plus the possessive genitive singular from the personal pronoun egó (ἐγώ) [pronounced ehg-OH].

Then we have the aorist passive subjunctive of diaggellô (διαγγέλλω) [pronounced de-ang-GEHL-low] which means to proclaim everywhere, far and wide – “in order that my person might be proclaimed far and wide (everywhere).” The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. This means the evangelism of the entire world. The passive voice: the person of Christ receives the action of the verb – worldwide evangelism. The subjunctive mood is used for the formation of the purpose clause. Here is the stated purpose of worldwide evangelism which would result from the hardness of Pharaoh’s heart and use of his great power and authority to try to frustrate the plan of God.

Romans 9:17 For the scripture says to Pharaoh [Exodus 9:16], I have caused you to continue in history in order that I might demonstrate My power by means of you, and in order that My person might be proclaimed throughout the entire earth [everywhere].

Principle

1. Pharaoh in his opposition to God becomes a monument to the power of God.
2. The more he resisted God by saying no from his free will the greater became the manifestation of divine power.
3. The fact that God permitted the free will operation of the fall of Adam so that He might redeem mankind through the work of Christ on the cross is a similar principle. God permitted Adam’s sin in order that He might present to the world the redeemer of mankind in the person of Christ – His work on the cross in receiving the imputation of our sins. So also now God permits the free will of Pharaoh to operate to the maximum in a negative way so that the people of Egypt and the entire world in that generation might have the opportunity to receive Christ as saviour.
4. God permits the worst so that the best can come from it – which means the plan of God continues whether it is a negative period of history or a positive period of history.
5. There was once a theologian by the name of Forbes who said, “All good originates from God; all evil originates from the creature ... election originates in the free grace of God; reprobation originates in the free will of man. To God belongs the whole glory of salvation of the elect; to God belongs the whole responsibility of the ruin of the reprobate.”
6. The fact of the divine decrees and resultant election, foreknowledge and predestination of the believer in Christ describes all the glory of eternal salvation to the person, to the plan, to the grace of God.
7. This principle of doctrine does not detract from the fact that mankind is a free agent, responsible for his own actions and his own decisions. People never grow up who do not take the responsibility for their own actions.

8. The highest freedom of man is the utilization of the grace of God to completely triumph over evil.
9. There no divine foreordination of sin, human good and evil, although it was known by the omniscience of God in eternity past. Remember that the word “predestination” is a printout of the decrees and it applies to the believer only.
10. While sin, human good and evil are permitted they are constantly being overruled by the sovereign omnipotence and divine integrity of God. Therefore, Jesus Christ controls both history and the devil’s world. This is the overruling will of God.
11. Only believers are adopted at salvation as the adult sons and heirs of God.
12. There are several categories of such adoption depending on what dispensation you live in.
 - a. The election of the Gentile family of God composed of all believers in the dispensation of the Gentiles – from Adam to Abraham;
 - b. The election of the Jews or Israel composed of all Jewish believers in the dispensation of Israel – from Abraham to Christ and the Tribulation;
 - c. The election of the royal family of God composed of all believers of the Church Age – AD 30 to the Rapture;
 - d. The election of the Millennial population composed of all believers during the Millennial reign of Jesus Christ – 2nd advent to the Gog revolution.
13. Each one of these categories demand adoption, therefore Paul’s great burden for Israel. The Jews do not inherit from God through natural birth even though they are the legitimate sons of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. They possess the genes of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob but they do not possess the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob who is the Lord Jesus Christ.

To receive blessing from God in time, that requires God’s righteousness. The justice of God is the guardian of all God’s attributes.

The integrity of God is composed of God’s righteousness and His justice.

1977 Romans

Lesson #595

595 12/01/1978 Romans 9:18 God allows free will, used negative volition (–V) of Pharaoh to evangelize the world; principle of scar tissue of the soul and negative volition (–V) to Bible doctrine

Romans 9:18 So then, He shows mercy to whom He wants, and He hardens whom He wants. (BLB)

Verse 18 – the theological conclusion. This begins with the combination of two inferential particles, the first of which is ára (ἄρα) [pronounced AHR-ah], and the second is oun (οὖν) [pronounced oon]. These two particles give a very strong conclusion, they means we are in for a major conclusion from all that we have seen about the hardness of Pharaoh’s heart. It is translated “So then” or “Consequently therefore.”

Next comes the present active indicative of the verb ēleēō (ἐλεέω) [pronounced ehl-eh-EH-oh] which means to have mercy. We have the perfective present tense referring to a fact which has come to be in the past and is now emphasized as a present reality, and therefore it denotes the continuation of existing results. With it is the accusative singular direct object from the relative pronoun hos (ὅς) [pronounced hohç], translated “on whom.” So then he demonstrates or shows mercy on whom.” Then we have the present active indicative of the verb thélō (θέλω) [pronounced THEH-loh], which means to will or to desire, to choose, to intend, to design. This is the static present tense for doctrine which is taken for granted as a fact. The active voice: God produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of an absolute and dogmatic statement of doctrine, one which can be applied right now.

Principle

1. In this statement God is not arbitrary. He functions in compatibility of his perfect integrity plus His perfect plan of grace. A perfect plan can only come from a perfect God; and a perfect God can only develop a perfect plan.
2. Man, however, continues to be a free agent in history, responsible for his own decisions, his thoughts, his actions, his motives.
3. God in grace has found a way to take the non-meritorious modus operandi of man, known from His omniscience in eternity past and related positive volition to the function of His grace. God has found a way to deal with personal sin. People will continue to express their sin natures. God’s foreknowledge is not telling us what will happen in the future; it is what God has done to provide us with every problem that we face.
4. God desires to show mercy to those believers who appropriate grace blessing through non-meritorious perception and the accumulation of doctrine in the soul. In other words, every printout which is to your advantage is based upon the fact that you learned a long time ago that doctrine was the most important thing in your life, and therefore you persisted on a daily basis taking in this doctrine. This eventually ended up as maturity adjustment to the justice of God. Once you have attained that particular stage then God is free to start pouring blessings to you and prepares you for historical disaster which occurs in every generation. God can show mercy to anyone in [Y] but He really pours out the blessing on those in [Z].
 - a. Putting one’s hand on the plow and looking back is someone in [Y]; and he allowed himself to become distracted. He glances back at things behind him. Poorly interpreted by evangelists.
 - b. God can have mercy on whomever He chooses. This does not mean that He is arbitrarily merciful.
5. To the grace qualified there is grace blessing from the justice of God.
6. Abraham, Isaac and Jacob were qualified under grace and the printout is very simple: election, justification, foreordination, and adoption (these men all had these printouts). In this case God is showing mercy on whom He will. In other words, He knew their cases in eternity past, therefore knowing all of these things He is qualified to have mercy. But if He wants to harden someone, let them live with their own negative volition in time, in Hades, and eventually in the lake of fire.

7. Their faith in Christ and/or regeneration was fed into the decrees in eternity past by the omniscience of God, resulting in foreordination. Foreordination is really synonymous with the decree itself – it is the tape being played in eternity past. The tape is played one more time, in time as you live it out – election, justification, adoption.
8. The racial Jew has a great spiritual heritage but the great heritage has no meaning until he is justified, he is adopted as the heir and an adult son through faith in Jesus Christ, the Shekinah glory, the God of Israel.
9. To be a son of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob is nothing until a Jew becomes a son of God through faith in Christ Jesus – Galatians 3:26.
10. Israel has an eternal future but the Jew must be adopted as an adult son.
11. Abraham, Isaac and Jacob believed in Jehovah Elohim, and therefore God wills to have mercy on them.
12. Abraham, Isaac and Jacob advanced to spiritual maturity, therefore God desired to show them mercy by imputation of blessing from the justice of God.

“and” is the postpositive conjunctive particle de. Sometimes it is transition and translated “now” or “and,” sometimes it is adversative and is translated “but.” But occasionally this conjunctive particle is intensive and can be translated, then, “in fact.” We have the intensive use here.

Then follows the accusative singular from the relative pronoun hos – “In fact on whom,” followed by the present active indicative from thélō (θέλω) [pronounced THEH-loh] – “he wishes or desires.” The static present tense is for a doctrine taken for granted as a fact. That is, the omniscience of God feeding actuality of history into the computer of divine decrees simultaneously resulting in a printout of condemnation on negative volition. The active voice: the essence of God produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of doctrine. Then we have the present active indicative of the verb sklêrunō (σκληρύνω) [pronounced sklay-ROO-no] which means to harden, to calcify. The perfective present here refers to a fact which has come to be in the past and is emphasized as a present reality. God gave pharaoh the ability to continue to say no. Every time that he said no, there were thousands who believed in Jesus Christ.

When a person says no to Bible doctrine or to divine establishment thinking, they build up scar tissue. They are mixed up and confused; and they think opposite of Bible doctrine. Whenever a believer rejects any kind of doctrine, that person become blind to related doctrine. They have blindness or hardness of heart there. When it comes to that particular subject, they build up a callousness against it. You resist information which is similar to that which you have rejected. After awhile, blindness builds up and they are blind to specific things, as related to what they rejected in the first place.

There is the example of Jesus Christ, Who was rejected by many Israelites, so things related to soteriology and Christology are rejected by Israel. For this reason, they are said to be blind in part (in the part or category which they have rejected).

God allowed pharaoh to continue to reject truth. Pharaoh got to a point where most people would have been removed from life or they might remove themselves from life; but God has allowed him to continue in life. Very few people have sassed God as pharaoh did and continued to live.

Principle

1. God uses the free will of man to accomplish His will or purpose.
2. God knew billions of years ago that man was going to do certain things. He knew all about Pharaoh and his scar tissue. All scar tissue is developed from free will.
3. Remember that first of all Pharaoh hardened his own heart – Exodus 7:13,22; 8:15,32; 9:34,35. He had maximum scar tissue in his soul by the time he came to plague seven. At that time God would have normally removed him from life because he was so removed from reality that he was dangerous to the survival of his nation Egypt. In 7,8,9,10 we now read that God hardened his heart – by letting him live and exercising his free will to keep on saying no. God allowed him to develop scar tissue unlike anyone else before him.
4. Pharaoh faced the issue with full information and from his own free will he kept saying no. In fact, no one had more information to say yes than Pharaoh, but he always said no. God was not willing that Pharaoh should perish – 2Peter 3:9. The decision was Pharaoh's, not God's.
5. Furthermore, Pharaoh's sins were imputed to Christ on the cross and judged.
6. The scar tissue of the soul or the hardness of Pharaoh's heart actually originated with his own negative volition.
7. Pharaoh had said no repeatedly. Then the Lord gave him the opportunity of saying no beyond the world's record. That is called hardening Pharaoh's heart – Exodus 9:12; 10:1,20,27; 11:10; 14:8. God hardened Pharaoh's heart by giving him more opportunity to say no in the face of more facts. And God sustained his life so that he would totally divorce from reality. And when we read that "Israel in part was blinded" it must be remembered that it was nothing more than scar tissue of the soul. Scar tissue means that you still have your freedom but it is now totally disassociated from reality.
8. God hardened Pharaoh's heart by giving him more opportunity to say no in the face of more and more facts. Pharaoh became totally divorced from reality because of the buildup of scar tissue. You still have freedom, but you are totally divorced from reality.
9. God preserved Pharaoh alive with great power and authority to say no to an infinitely greater power and authority than he possessed. The continued negative volition from the scar tissue of Pharaoh's soul resulted in worldwide evangelism; it also resulted in more scar tissue than anyone else in history. Pharaoh kept saying no but that allowed others to say yes.
10. Let me add a good current example of this. People become drug addicts as a result of more and more negative volition. They come to a point where they do all kinds of insane stuff due to negative volition; stuff that they would not do at the beginning. However, young people can observe these druggies and realize that they should not do that. So the extended negative volition of druggies can result in positive volition toward sanity on the part of others.

Romans 9:18 Consequently therefore, He shows mercy on whom He desires, in fact whom He desires He hardens.

Principle

1. The understanding of history from the divine viewpoint demands understanding the attributes of God. We should understand now that God never tampers with human freedom.
 - a. The greater your negative volition, the greater your arrogance and the more that you are divorced from reality.
 - b. All psychotic people are totally arrogant and they are completely divorced from reality. They will monopolize your time, and state and restate their problems to you. A person blinded with scar tissue has no sense of time except that it all relates to them.
 - c. The pharaoh led his people in between the waters. This was insane.
2. Certain attributes are pertinent to the hardening of Pharaoh's heart and/or scar tissue of his soul. The attributes include omniscience, foreordination related to omniscience, foreknowledge.
3. Omniscience knew in eternity past that Pharaoh would not only say no six times but would persist in negative volition as the scar tissue of his soul or the blindness of his heart developed.
4. God had the good sense to know which way the free will of Pharaoh would function throughout his entire life. God did not coerce or tamper with his volition.
5. Therefore the sovereignty of God made a decision to afford maximum opportunity for Pharaoh to experience the omnipotence of God in action and to continue to refuse from his free will and arrogance. Scar tissue of the soul always means inflation, increase, expansion of human arrogance.
6. God had the eternal and infinite power to perform those miracles which would intensify and increase the stubbornness of Pharaoh.
7. Pharaoh's negative volition combined with his scar tissue persisted in refusal to free Israel so that the greater and greater manifestation of the omnipotence of God occurred. And the greater the function of omnipotence, the greater the evangelism in the land.
8. Greater manifestations of divine omnipotence resulted on both local worldwide evangelism in the generation of Moses.
9. The integrity or holiness of God includes both His perfect righteousness and absolute justice. In judging Pharaoh God was fair, completely compatible with His own righteousness and the plan of grace. God was not unfair in what He did to pharaoh. God gave pharaoh all the opportunities in the world. Some of you think that it is a sign of love to be nice and sweet to everyone. It is like showing sweetness to a rattlesnake. Bad idea. You cannot be sweet and nice to evil people.

You cannot help psychotic people. You just push them father away from reality. If a person is negative toward doctrine, then there is not a damn thing that you can do for them. We have got them all over. We have them in government; we have them in the streets. We are one massive group of people with scar tissue of the soul. A great portion of our population is completely divorced from reality. This only increases and intensifies our problem when it comes to freedom versus socialism and so on.

Lesson #596

596 12/03/1978 Romans 9:19a "Overqualified?" Debater's questions re the cause of scar tissue; G. B. Shaw: "Great Catherine"

During the depression, people with several degrees would try to get any kind of work. Bob's Greek professor made extra money during the holidays for Christmas by sacking grocery.

It is an erroneous concept that a person must go to college. If you are starving to death, you are never overqualified for any job. Survival is a basic motivation in life. Many of us having gone to Berachah makes us overqualified to attend another church. Men behind the pulpit today are under-qualified.

Over qualification has come to mean to Bob, lack of motivation. No one is overqualified for anything if their motivation is correct. We are not overqualified in the plan of God, because we cannot learn too much. We are left here to advance to maturity. We are left here to find the purpose of life. As a member of the family of God, we are strangers to cosmos diabolicus. A perfect God has a perfect plan for imperfect persons.

The omniscience of God must be understood. God's eternal knowledge of Himself, along with the other forms of knowledge. Only facts are fed into the computer. There are many probabilities which are not entered into the computer. Only facts were fed into the computer. There are many printouts for the believer. The unbeliever is never said to be elected, foreknown, or predestined. He is never said to be justified or sanctified. Those are printouts for the believer only. The printouts for the unbeliever is condemnation. God's omniscience knew about Abraham, Isaac, Ishmael, Jacob and Esau. There is the printout which is the election of Israel. The true heritage of the Jew is spiritual; and they have only emphasized their genealogy.

Pharaoh had many chances to believe in Christ, but he did not. He kept saying no and scar tissue kept building up on his soul. In all of this time, pharaoh is producing scar tissue on his soul; and usually a person would die by the point. But God kept him alive. His negative volition causes the people in Egypt to believe. By the time the 10th plague had come, this man had a completely terminal case. Paul is saying like the Jews who believe, he is saying, "You are like pharaoh." This is a very mean comparison for Paul to make of Jews.

We are moving to a new topic in v. 19.

Verses 19-29 – the premise illustrated by the essence of God.

Romans 9:19 Then you will say to me, “Why then does He still find fault? For who is resisting His purpose?” (BLB)

Verse 19 – two debater’s questions. Paul anticipates. He understands perfectly the concepts that the unbelieving Jews are now up in arms about and are antagonistic to. Now, in order to anticipate their next question Paul, as it were, beats them to the punch. Part of debaters’ technique is to anticipate reaction to a point during a debate and therefore in anticipation to ask a question before the opposition does so, and then answer the question within the framework of the context and using one’s own logical reasoning demonstrate the fallacy of even thinking such a thing. Therefore Paul uses this particular system as a debater’s technique.

It begins with the future active indicative from an obsolete verb erêô (ἐρέω) [pronounced eh-REH-oh]. This was an ancient Attic word which had become obsolete and we can simply say that this is the future active indicative of the verb légô (λέγω) [pronounced LEH-goh]. The future tense is a predictive future. Paul is predicting their thoughts and what questions they have. The future predicts an event which is to occur in future time, it is a part of debaters’ technique to anticipate a question from the opposition. That active voice: Paul attributes the question to the thinking of the opposition and therefore makes them the subject of the verb. The opposition produces the action by thinking and the words are put into their mouths. Actually, Paul is quoting their thinking and they know it, they recognize this man’s genius. Why is it recorded here? Because it is a part of our understanding of the Word of God and Bible doctrine. It is also an application to our own life. Whenever you are under pressure, as Paul was, you must be able to think. The indicative mood is potential; it indicates an expression of an impulse.

Napoleon could think under the most difficult of circumstances. At just the right moment on the day of the Battle of Austerlitz, he was able to crush a force 3x greater than his own.

Paul also had this ability. The dative of indirect object from egó (ἐγώ) [pronounced ehg-OH] – Paul is referring to himself. It is correctly translated “to me.” Next comes the inferential postpositive conjunction which denotes the question it introduces is an inference from what Paul has previously said – oun (οὐν) [pronounced oon].

Translation so far: “Therefore you will say to me.”

And now we have the first debater’s question: “Why doth he yet find fault?” This begins with the nominative neuter singular from the interrogative pronoun tís (τίς) [pronounced tihç] which is correctly translated “Why?” The adverb of time éti (ἔτι) [pronounced EH-tee] means “yet” or “still.” After the presentation of these things why is there any opposition. Opposition is almost ludicrous. The tremendous logic and ability of presentation of Paul begs the question as to why anyone would say no to these things. It is because each doctrine is resisted individually, and as scar tissue is built up, and blindness to the next thought, arrogance is increased. Every no increases their vindictiveness, their pettiness, their arrogance. Now they are totally implacable so that they are thinking exactly the content of this debater's question. Then we have the verb, the present active indicative of the verb memphomai (μέμφομαι) [pronounced MEHM-fom-ahee] which means to find fault. It is an onomatopoeic word because it indicates, from the very way in which it is described, faultfinding concepts. Tragic flaw concept; the fault-finding concept is found in this word memphomai (μέμφομαι) [pronounced MEHM-fom-ahee]. Isn't God wrong to hold pharaoh's hardened heart against him if God hardened it? God did not influence pharaoh's volition at all. God simply allowed pharaoh to live; that is how "his heart was hardened." God never touches the free will of anyone.

The debater's question is, how can God find fault with a person who's heart He has hardened?

Principle

1. It is obvious that this debater's question anticipates objection to the doctrine of divine integrity, the doctrine of divine decrees, as well as other doctrines – decrees, election, adoption, and foreordination.
2. The objection is obviously irrelevant because it is blasphemous. It blasphemously assumes that God does not know what He is doing and that, furthermore, God is unfair in what He is doing. The greater the scar tissue, the greater the arrogance. The greater the arrogance the greater the superficiality.
3. Paul anticipates the antagonism of the racial Jew against the true spiritual heritage of Israel.
4. The racial Jew emphasizes physical birth and natural descent from Abraham while the spiritual Jew emphasizes the new birth and spiritual descent from Abraham.
5. This becomes, then, a conflict of the natural and the spiritual seed of Abraham.
6. Furthermore, it proves the principle that irrelevance becomes irreverence by blasphemously maligning the character of God.
7. Scar tissue of the soul always finds fault with God and becomes critical of divine policy. When you blame God, you have scar tissue of the soul.
8. In fact, scar tissue of the soul or hardness of the heart moves and enters where angels fear to tread.
9. Self-righteousness and legalism of the Jews results in distortion of doctrine. This is tantamount to denial of the spiritual heritage of Israel.
10. This first debater's question anticipates a distortion of doctrine – distortion on the part of Jewish reversionists who follow the same pattern as Pharaoh Amenhotep II. They see the power and glory of God and they reject the same.
11. It is inevitable that the perfect character of God will find fault with imperfect and sinful mankind. Rejection of God's plan results in discipline from the justice of God.

Salvation maladjustment is the greatest of tragedies.

The more that you that you say no to God, the more you build up scar tissue on the soul. The more you say no to the truth, the more you believe that which is false.

Some people use their freedom to advance spiritually; some use their freedom to move further and further away from God.

Inequality is the healthiest thing a country can have, as it indicates that there is freedom.

When people reject the truth of God, God sends them a lie.

Having guns is our protection against violence and criminal behavior.

Bob gives some examples of hardness of heart. The greater the arrogance, the more a person is divorced from reality. The more divorced from reality, the further a person is from blessing and enjoyment of life.

1977 Romans

Lesson #597

597 12/03/1978 Romans 9:19b Essence of God vs. freewill of man; British self righteousness in India; the plan of God uses positive and negative volition

A coach who finished a winless season, said, "The only difference between me and General Custer is, he did not have to view the after game films."

"Why does he still find fault?"

Principle

1. The anticipation of omniscience, the reality of divine decrees and foreordination, the adoption of the elected ones, does not preclude or hinder or even contradict the function of the justice of God when He condemns and when He judges.
2. After all, foreordination or predestination does not hinder, coerce or abrogate the function of the free will of man. God never tampers with man's free will and neither does man tamper with God's judgements.
3. In fact, omniscience, foreordination and predestination acknowledged the free will of man and the principle of self-determination in human history.
4. On the basis of the imputation of divine righteousness to those who believe in Christ the justice of God has the right to condemn those who do not believe in Christ. Just as free will of man is freedom to reject Christ so God is free to judge those who reject Christ.
5. On the basis of the potential of the imputation of blessing in time to the target of imputed righteousness God also has the right to administer punishment and discipline to those believers who do not attain maturity, who reject doctrine, who are distracted from doctrine, and who resist doctrine. A special study to be done on such people around New Year's.
6. On the basis, then, of the perfect character of God the integrity of God has the right to find fault with sin, human good, and evil, and to punish with strict justice all three categories in the old sin nature's modus operandi.

7. The integrity of God and the entire essence of God can never be compromised by finding fault or judging or condemning or disciplining or punishing any portion or any individual in the human race. The reality of judgement always elicits the reaction of “unfair” – “How can God be fair and do this and that?” As soon as people are in a reality situation where they know they are being discipline or being judged then the old sin nature instinctively screams out “Unfair!” Therefore the profit from the administration of discipline and punishment is lost to that individual.
8. The concatenation of divine judgement or divine blessing is not subject to critical scrutiny on the part of mankind -- mankind who possesses neither the facts nor the doctrine to be critical.

You should know something that which you are critical of. The less we know about something, the more dogmatic we are about it. Bob heard a minister recent criticized for not using thee and thou when addressing God.

The Jews found fault with Paul. They had a habit of finding fault because they had resisted truth. The less you know of the truth the more critical you are of the truth. They had resisted, just like Pharaoh, and they had all of this scar tissue in their souls. Therefore the more the scar tissue the greater the arrogance. Critical people, when they are ignorant of the facts, are always arrogant. So because they had the habit of finding fault they did not want anyone else to find fault and they even criticized God for finding fault. “Why does He still find fault?”

People were resisting the truth. The more scar tissue the more arrogant a person is.

The second debater’s question: “For who hath resisted his will?” It begins with the inferential use of the postpositive conjunctive particle gar – “then” is used here in order to bring out the inferential concept. This is an inference from the previous debater’s question. Next is the nominative masculine singular from the interrogative pronoun tís (τίς) [pronounced tihç] which is correctly translated “who,” followed by the perfect active indicative of the verb anthístēmi (ἀνθίστημι) [pronounced anth-IHS-tay-mee] [anti (ἀντί) [pronounced an-TEE] = against; histēmi (ἵστημι) [pronounced HIHS-tay-mee] = to stand], which means to stand against, to oppose, to resist – “Then who has resisted.” The dramatic perfect tense emphasizes the results of the action. It is therefore the rhetorical use the intensive perfect. The action is completed in the past and the results continue. The active voice: the human race in general is regarded as producing or attempting to produce the action of the verb. The indicative mood is interrogative; it assumes that there is a definite and actual fact which can be used in answer to the question.

With this is the dative singular indirect object from the noun boúlēma (βούλημα) [pronounced BOO-lay-mah], which refers to will. It also connotes plan or project or purpose, goal or intention, and is sometimes used for tendency. Here it means purpose or intention. With it is the possessive genitive singular from the intensive pronoun autós (αὐτός) [pronounced ow-TOSS], which in the Koine Greek is used for the third person singular personal pronoun. This is a possessive genitive and it is translated, “For who has resisted his purpose [or, intention]?" His purpose or intention includes the concept of His mercy or severity, which we have seen in verse 18.

Principle

1. Paul anticipates from these two debater's questions the blasphemous attitude of the racial Jew. Their attitude: They picked up on the fact that if God had hardened Pharaoh's heart how can God blame Pharaoh or condemn Pharaoh for what Pharaoh has done?
2. Paul actually anticipates the view of supralapsarianism, a system of theology for blaming God for Pharaoh's decision, for Adam's decision. Supralapsarianism makes God the author of Adam's sin and the supralapsarianist would also make God the author of Pharaoh's erroneous decisions.
3. The blasphemy further implies that God is using Pharaoh as a patsy, that it is God who has made the mistake and not Pharaoh.
4. All of this ignores the fact of Pharaoh's free will. Pharaoh had the right of self-determination and was a free agent responsible for his own decisions.
5. God merely used Pharaoh's negative volition to evangelize Egypt and the entire world.
6. Every time Pharaoh said no from his own free will a greater function of omnipotence in the miracles or the plagues impressed Pharaoh's subjects resulting in the fact that the reality of God and the necessity for having a personal relationship with God through faith in Christ became apparent.
7. Pharaoh's continued and stubborn rejection of divine grace increased his scar tissue of the soul while sending out fresh waves of evangelism from his free will decisions. Pharaoh is allowed to say no one day in order to say no another day.
8. The more Pharaoh said no the more the people of his empire said yes. God used the "no" of Pharaoh to evangelize the world. God uses the wrath of man to praise Him.
9. God uses Pharaoh's negative volition to reveal Himself to positive volition throughout the empire, throughout the world.
10. Therefore Pharaoh must take the responsibility for his own decisions. God hardening of Pharaoh's heart had nothing whatever to do with tampering of Pharaoh's volition, He merely gave him more opportunity. The fact that God used Pharaoh's negative volition to reveal Himself to the world did not cause Pharaoh to cease to be a free agent.

We all have friends; and one day, perhaps we discovered them in their true light. They are stubborn. They love themselves so much that no one else could compete. As a result, you graciously back out of the picture.

Too many believers in one area who are negative toward doctrine; who are mixed up; God sometimes simply removes these believers. God must remove these believers for the betterment of the devil's world. They have accepted false concepts.

The Principle Behind All of this

1. The omniscience of God anticipated from eternity past that only the overruling omnipotence of God would deliver the Jews from their slavery. The Jews had been selected by God to form the first client or priest nation in history and only divine power would pry them loose. But even divine power must not be coercive, and therefore divine power had to be used in such a way that Pharaoh was always a free agent in saying no.
2. The omniscience of God plus the omnipotence of God combined to overrule the tyrannical arrogance, the great power and abuse of authority of Amenhotep II.
3. Had the matter been left to the sovereign will of Pharaoh Amenhotep II the Jews would still be slaves in the Egyptian empire. But in grace the sovereign will of God vetoes the power of Pharaoh by freeing the Jews from slavery. It was accomplished through the negative volition of Pharaoh. (Whether you say yes or no to God you are not going to stop the plan of God) no one can stop the plan of God through their negative volition.
4. In other words, the purpose or intention of God was accomplished without destroying or abrogating the free will of Pharaoh. The momentum of the plan of God continues through success and failure of human beings, through negative and positive volition in human beings.
5. Pharaoh did not lose his free will or sovereign self-determination but used it against God and God's will.
6. By hardening Pharaoh's heart God merely kept Pharaoh alive, which gave him greater opportunity to express to the maximum his free will in opposition to God.
7. The greater the opposition the greater the manifest power from God used by God to overcome the opposition without in any way tampering with Pharaoh's free will. A perfect demonstration of the coexistence of divine sovereignty and free will is found in the total confrontation between God and Pharaoh, Moses being the divine representative.
8. Throughout human history this coexistence is necessary to resolve the angelic conflict.
9. God did not tamper with Pharaoh's free will but He had the genius to utilize the opposition as well as positive volition to fulfil His perfect plan in human history. It is like letting someone take your pawn so that you can take their queen.
10. As Pharaoh's free will expression of his negative volition gathered momentum God used that momentum of opposition to accomplish His purpose and His intention.

Bob learned jujitsu to use an opponent's strength and weight against him; it is used against him.

Romans 9:19 Then you will say to me, "Why then does He still find fault? For who is resisting His purpose?" (BLB)

Romans 9:19 Therefore you will say to me, "Why does He still find fault? For who has resisted His purpose [or, intention]?"

Concept

1. It should be noted that the omniscience of God and the divine decrees were applied to the twins, Esau and Jacob, before they made any decisions or before their self-determination was crystallised in historical action.
2. On the other hand the omniscience of God and the computer of divine decrees deals with Moses and Pharaoh after their birth and the imputation of human life.
3. Moses and Pharaoh as free agents had established their pattern of life in relationship to God. Moses, by believing in Egypt, by leaving Egypt, and by spending 40 years in the desert where he grew up spiritually. On the other hand, the Pharaoh of the Exodus was not only in Egypt, had the same opportunities for salvation as Moses, but he rejected them and constantly built up scar tissue of the soul so that by the time of the confrontation he already had maximum scar tissue, maximum arrogance, maximum distortion of his power, maximum pettiness and implacability.
4. Moses demonstrated maximum positive volition while Pharaoh demonstrated maximum negative volition.
5. God used the maximum positive volition of Moses in one way and the maximum negative volition of Pharaoh in another way, but the free will of both men accomplished the will of God.
6. This is a reminder that Jesus Christ controls history.
7. This is also a reminder that the justice of God can bless or curse, depending on positive volition at salvation through faith in Christ, and after salvation positive or negative volition toward Bible doctrine.
8. This is also a reminder again that God uses the wrath of man to praise Him – Psalm 76:10.
9. No matter which way it goes in history, history is always and inevitably going to glorify God. No disaster in history ever slows the momentum of the divine plan.
10. Human failure and human success does not hinder or frustrate the plan of God.
11. Human failure and opposition to God does not abrogate the faithfulness of God, nor does it hinder the advance of the plan of God. Furthermore, human failure and opposition to the plan of God does not abrogate or destroy free will and self-determination in the human race. Mankind continues to function as a free agent under the principle of self-determination.

God may use the great power of Russian communism and Chinese communism. We are a second class power today. It is hard to believe just how weak we are. Manifest by hippies and lack of manners and poise; manifest by lack of common sense; lack of ability to think in a difficult situation. We will see these powers used to move forward the will of God.

Romans 9:19 Therefore you will say to me, “Why does He still find fault? For who has resisted His purpose [or, intention]?”

Principle

1. The two debater's questions combine to form two answers directed toward the opposition. The first answer is found in vv. 20-21, the second in vv. 22-23. Paul poses the questions and then provides the answers.
2. Inevitably the key to all answers is found in the perfect essence of God. If you understand the divine attributes you have the key to the answer for everything in life.
3. Every divine attribute is perfect, incorruptible, not subject to sin or human good or evil, not contaminated by arrogance or jealousy or pettiness, not subject to human power and human authority.
4. The integrity of God is perfect and makes no bad or unfair decisions in dealing with mankind.
5. The perfect righteousness of God is always the key to understanding. God's righteousness is maintained at all times and no one can besmirch the integrity of God.
6. The perfect righteousness of God is imputed to mankind at salvation through faith in Christ, and that imputation, even though it resides in each one of us, it is still incorruptible.
7. The possession of divine righteousness makes it possible for God to deal in grace with the believer and eventually to bless him.
8. The justice of God can impute blessing without compromising divine essence where the righteousness of God is imputed.
9. The only way for the believer to miss blessing is to try to reinvent the wheel – self-righteousness, legalism. The wheel is God's plan which operates on the perfect axle of divine righteousness imputed and when the believer attempts to use his own self-righteousness as the axle he reinvents the wheel by substituting his own plan for God's plan, hence failing to exploit the imputation of divine righteousness.

The first half of the book of Romans tells us how righteousness is imputed. The last half of the book of Romans tells us how to exploit the imputation of divine righteousness. The parenthesis or the transition becomes the motivation, the encouragement, the understanding, getting back to reality by facing the facts of doctrine.

Lesson #598

598 12/04/1978 Romans 9:20a; Isa. 45:8–12 Cults and Marxism; panic: 3 types; Paul's new words; the impudent reject authority

All news is slanted. This is about the Jones cult. We will never see an economic collapse until there is social disintegration. Serious problem with people being oriented to establishment. Also a rise in cults. Coo coo people tend to gravitate toward good weather. When people discovered the weather in CA, weirdos came from all over. As a result, there was a great rise in cults. This last thing is a sign of the times. The labor market has dried up. Everyone views himself as a ruler; everyone thinks he is worth more than he is; and labor unions are making unprecedented demands. They reject authority of all types. Most cults are anti-authority. They use all of the Scripture about loving the brother; and adherents are set up to be under great tyranny. All cults are anti-authority and anti-establishment. The less respect you have for authority, the greater your emotional trouble.

Communists have discovered this and most of the groups are pro-welfare state and they favor Marxism. The Jones organization was discovered to be Marxist. British Guiana is the most Marxist country in our hemisphere.

Apparently there were many remarks by the person who shot the SF mayor.

Ingredients for the destruction of a small group or a large group of people. It never occurs to anyone to blame themselves. They want to blame another person or another group. But how do you get rid of these people without violence? We are no longer the people of the United States, but we are 4th world people now. Our thinking comes from cults, from Marxist propaganda. Jesus Christ controls history. We are seeing a manifestation of too many sin natures out of control. When the right combination occurs, we will simply go up in smoke.

Every time that we have a disaster, we try to blame some individual. But there are so many people at fault. We are to personally live our own lives out to the Lord.

What is happening to us has many parallels in history. We have a special coming, the Dynamics for Disaster.

Bible doctrine is the stabilizer for the soul. Fear is one kind of panic. There is also hysterical panic where you try to solve a problem with violence.

Bob roomed with a guy in the bachelor's quarters where he would put his fist through walls when he was angry and frustrated. We need the ability to think in a disaster. This could be our last year of normality in the United States. Bob knows that Jesus Christ controls history. While Bob is teaching these things and they seem to be deep. The deep things are just as important as the simple things.

Two debater's question, with whom does He still find fault?

The first answer to these questions: verses 20,21.

Romans 9:20 But rather, O man, who are you, answering against God? Shall the thing formed say to the One having formed it, "Why have you made me like this?"

Bob's Greek professor said that Paul made up many of the words in the Greek language. These three particles put together is a Paulism.

Verse 20 starts out with a combined series of particles, three particles combined into one word – men oun (οὐν) [pronounced oon] ge. This gives thrust to a sentence. Put together these words are used in answer to questions to emphasize a correct and an erroneous notion. This was a debater's word used by Paul and when he used it he meant, "What I have just said is inaccurate; it is what you are thinking and what you are thinking is wrong. Now hear this. This is correct, accurate, true.” The best translation is “On the contrary.”

The reader may be thinking, that is what I have been thinking; and Paul says, “On the contrary, you are wrong.”

We have an interjection to follow it, and when an interjection follows a triple compound Pauline conjunction we know that we are in for something. It is the interject w with a circumflex accent. We would simply transliterate it by the English “O” which, of course, is inadequate. This interjection is used before a vocative as a Koine following a Semitic usage. This is not Attic Greek. So we have Paul taking Attic Greek and coining new words, and then adding an interjectory vocative before a vocative. Furthermore, the interjection is never used when addressing someone who is perfect, or who thinks he is perfect, or who is right. It is an interjection only used to address people who are wrong. In the English language we have nothing comparable. We simply say “wrong” or “no.”

Paul is getting tough with the reader. He is establishing his authority. He is taking a 2x4 to the head. “You’re wrong, stupid.”

Next is an interrogative tís (τίς) [pronounced tihç] – “who,” then the present active indicative of eimi (εἶμι) [pronounced eye-ME] – “are.” Really this is, “You are wrong stupid. Who are you?” The static present tense represents a fact, the existence of a stupid person or two in mankind. When people are stupid someone must have the courage to straighten them out – and that is Paul. People used violence against Paul because they could not answer him logically or theologically. The active voice: mankind produces the action of the verb, existing as a stupid creature, irrational, imbecilic. The indicative mood is the interrogative indicative in which reality is implied as a fact enquired about. With this is the predicate nominative from the personal pronoun su which, by the way, is in the proleptic position which means “You” or “Hey, you there.” The personal pronoun in the proleptic position is very similar to a vocative. Shock freezes erroneous ideas; and you then slip in the truth while they are knocked back on their heels. When people are shocked, they are often listening rather than talking or responded.

We all stand condemned, no matter how smart or stupid we are. We all have a sin nature; and we all express our sin natures in different ways. We all have different sins and we have different forms of human good. Adam’s original sin imputed by God is the reason why we are condemned. This helps us to understand why this question, why did you make me this way? For many of us, this is simple review. Where we fail often is after salvation when we realize that we are still helpless creatures. People run around and try to help themselves. God does not help those who help themselves; God helps the helpless.

What we have here is impudence. This is rejection of authority. It is the rejection of the source of all authority. “who art thou that repliest against God?” Paul is bringing out the fact that these people are stupid when they become impudent to God. We have the present middle participle from the compound antapokrinomai (ἀνταποκρίνομαι) [pronounced an-tap-ok-REE-nom-ahee]. The word means to be impudent, to answer back against, to contradict, and sometimes it means to make unjustifiable accusation against someone – “who answers back” or “who contradicts.” The descriptive present is for what is going on at the time that Paul writes. In arrogance people do not know what they are and therefore they do not know what God is, they do not know who and what they are, and therefore they answer God back. They contradict, are impudent, and therefore blasphemous. The indirect middle emphasizes the agent producing the action of the verb who in this case is the unbelieving Jew who is both arrogant and legalistic. He overestimates himself while at the same time underestimates God. In fact, anyone who underestimates God overestimates himself. This is a circumstantial participle plus the dative singular indirect object from theos (θεός) [pronounced theh-OSS]. The definite article is used in the generic sense for the uniqueness of God. He contradicts, he answers back, he is impudent to the eternal God.

“You on the contrary O man, who are you who answers back [contradicts] to the God.” The creature has no more right to challenge the creator than a pot has to challenge the potter. So Isaiah 45:8-12 states the case:

This was an old hobby of the Jews.

Isaiah 45:8 “Shower, O heavens, from above, and let the clouds rain down righteousness; let the earth open, that salvation and righteousness may bear fruit; let the earth cause them both to sprout; I the LORD have created it.

Verse 8 – “Cause to trickle down, you heavens above, and let the blue skies rain down righteousness” -- they were having a drought, and in this drought there was a shortage of righteousness – divine righteousness imputed; “let the earth open, and let salvation blossom” – imputed righteousness causes salvation to blossom, “and righteousness, let them sprout together; I, Jehovah, have created it.”

Isaiah 45:9 “Woe to him who strives with him who formed him, a pot among earthen pots! Does the clay say to him who forms it, ‘What are you making?’ or ‘Your work has no handles?’

Verse 9 – “Woe to the one who quarrels with his Maker!” There it is, impudence toward God – blasphemy, contradiction, arguing against God. It is inevitable that when the arrogance is too great there is no respect for authority. “A pot among the pots of earthenware.” The person who quarrels with God, the person who contradicts God, is a pot among the pots. “Will the clay say to the potter, What are you making? Or the thing you are making say, He has no hands?” Impudence to the maximum.

Isaiah 45:10 Woe to him who says to a father, ‘What are you begetting?’ or to a woman, ‘With what are you in labor?’

Verse 10 – “Woe to him who says to his father, What are you begetting? Or to his mother, To what are you giving birth?” This is ludicrous, but it is far more ludicrous to contradict God.

Isaiah 45:11 Thus says the LORD, the Holy One of Israel, and the one who formed him: "Ask me of things to come; will you command me concerning my children and the work of my hands?"

Verse 11 – "This says Jehovah, the Holy One of Israel, and his Maker: Ask me about things to come that my sons, or the work of my hands, be committed to me."

Isaiah 45:12 I made the earth and created man on it; it was my hands that stretched out the heavens, and I commanded all their host.

Verse 12 – "It is I who made the earth [I know what I am doing], and I created mankind upon it" -- When He created mankind He created mankind with a free will – "I stretched out the heavens with my hands [all of space was created by God], and I commanded all their armies [angels]."

Jeremiah 18:6 – O house of Israel, cannot I deal with you as the potter does with the clay? communicated Jehovah. Behold, like the clay in the potter's hand, so are you in my hand, O house of Israel." Jesus Christ controls history and He was warning them.

1977 Romans

Lesson #599

599 12/05/1978 Romans 9:20b; Isaiah 29:15–16 Arrogant man blasphemes and blames God for man's own negative volition, scar tissue and results

Principle

1. When God created man He placed in his soul volition, free will, self-determination, in order to resolve the angelic conflict. Along with that man has to be aware of his own existence and the meaning of his existence in relation to life in general, so he has self-consciousness. There are two frontal lobes which are the mentality of the soul. The left lobe is called gnôsis (γνώσις) [pronounced GNOH-sis]; it is simply a processing area for information. The right lobe, which in the Bible is called the heart, is actually the place where permanent knowledge resides. It is the source of all wisdom if wisdom exists in the individual. There is a frame of reference, memory centre, vocabulary and categorical storage, norms and standards which are simply called conscience, and the launching pad for application. There is also an emotion which is sometimes called "reins" or "kidneys" in the Bible, and this is a responder to what a person has in his right lobe. The volition is the basis for self-determination with its positive and negative poles. The real you, which is your soul and what you think, has privacy because every attribute of the soul, while real, is invisible. Therefore you have perfect privacy to think what you want to think, to decide what you want to decide, and in the normal soul through self-consciousness to relate this to life as well as even to emotion.
 - a. Equality destroys freedom.
 - b. Great inequalities between people.
 - c. Equality is the basis for tyranny.

2. Furthermore, God created everything in His matchless grace and provided everything necessary for man's free will to be positive toward God, both at God-consciousness and gospel hearing. So that while man has the opportunity of being negative as he so desires he also has the opportunity to be positive. There never was a person in the human race who did not have that opportunity.
 - a. We were in the trees clubbing people when the Jews had a full-blown civilization.
 - b. Those who do not believe in Jesus Christ do not fulfill God's complete plan for their lives.
3. Pharaoh did not instantly develop scar tissue of the soul. Scar tissue is not an instant development; it is like maturity which develops over a period of time. His hardness of heart originated from a long series of free will decisions, all negative, including God-consciousness, gospel hearing, and the challenge of Moses to release the Jews from slavery.
 - a. Arrogance develops in proportion to the scar tissue of the soul.
 - b. He had maximum scar tissue in the soul and maximum arrogance.
4. God could have instantly destroyed Pharaoh and had the Jews out of Egypt instantly.
5. But there were others to consider. There were some who needed to come out of Egypt with the Jews as believers, and therefore a series of disciplinary miracles were instituted to demonstrate that scar tissue of the soul is consistent and never changes. But such evil negative volition can be used by God to reveal himself to the entire Egyptian empire plus the entire world.
6. Pharaoh always hardened himself with a fortification of negative volition as soon as he recovered from the disciplinary miracles. He would give in when the plague was administered and then, when the pressure was off, he would say no.
7. Therefore God hardened his heart in the true sense of supplying more miracles in the administration of discipline so that Pharaoh could say no more than anyone in history. God simply kept him alive so that he could say no.
8. Each no intensified the administration of disciplinary miracles or plagues resulting in greater manifestation of divine power. Each plague was greater than the previous one.
9. Greater manifestation of divine power resulted in greater evangelism both in Egypt and throughout the world.
10. While Pharaoh was saying no from the scar tissue of his soul many Egyptians, Ethiopians and Jews who were under his authority were saying yes to the gospel. But at the same time Pharaoh's hardness of heart produced arrogance, and arrogance produced impudence, and impudence became rejection of divine authority.

When a person becomes so arrogant from scar tissue of the soul that he is divorced from reality, inevitably being divorced from reality means rejection of authority. Rejection of authority is the first sign of national disintegration and degeneration. This is why the Jews had the teenager law where an uncontrollable teen could be executed. A nation filled with such people will destroy itself. The rise of the homosexual comes from rejection of authority. It starts with the normal, but it goes to the abnormal.

Principle

1. If God chooses to harden Pharaoh's heart He has a just and righteous reason compatible with His own perfect integrity. He has perfect integrity and therefore from His perfect integrity He is fair; He is just; He always gives a fair shake.
2. Consequently, no one has a right to make unjust accusations against God. Impudence forces the hand of God.
3. Pharaoh used his own volition to build scar tissue of the soul which the Lord used to demonstrate His power to evangelize the world.
4. The free will of Pharaoh expressed negative volition on numerous occasions prior to the statement "God hardened his heart."
5. Pharaoh had individual freedom from his own self-determination. He was not only a free agent but as a king he was a sovereign free agent, therefore he had unlimited self-determination.
6. Paul finds himself facing similar opposition from the Jews in his own generation. In effect, Paul is comparing the Jews of his own generation to the Gentile ruler of the Egyptian empire in the 18th dynasty.
7. The physical or racial seed of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob erroneously assume that the spiritual heritage is theirs on the basis of physical birth. Their error is seen in the fact that there must be a spiritual birth to enjoy spiritual heritage.
8. Therefore it is the spiritual seed of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, those who believe in Christ, who are the recipients of the unconditional promises and the covenants to Israel.
9. To enjoy the spiritual heritage of Israel requires the imputation of divine blessing and possession of eternal life.
10. Only those Jews who believed in the Lord Jesus Christ, the God of Israel, will have the promised heritage of Israel.
11. Only the arrogance of the unregenerate Jew would answer back and contradict the perfect plan of God.
12. Therefore Paul directly challenges the Judaizers, the legalistic Jewish unbeliever, the physical seed of Abraham.

"Shall the thing formed say to him that formed it why have you made me thus?"

Isaiah 29:15–16 Woe to those who deeply hide their conspiracies from the Lord; whose deeds are done in a dark place. So they say, "Who sees us? Or, who knows us?" You turn things around [says Isaiah to the Jews of his day]. You distort, you twist, you turn things around. Shall the potter be considered equal with the clay? That a work can say to its maker, "He has not made me." [In your arrogance, do you consider yourself equal to God? There is no way a pot is equal to its maker.] Or what is formed say to what formed it, "He does not understand it."

In rejecting a truth, these people have rejected the laws of divine establishment. Every rejection builds scar tissue. As the scar tissue is built, the pressure is increased. As arrogance increases, reality disappears. People become inflexible regarding the nonessential. The more that they say no to any system of establishment, the greater the buildup of scar tissue. The greater the desire to set aside anything the denies a hangup.

Man demands equality with anything that challenges his arrogance. Some want to publicly abuse a police officer. It makes the arrogant feel better. It is compensation for his hangups and it represents scar tissue of the soul. The police officer represents authority and he makes it possible for us to have property and privacy. Today, the police officer is hamstrung by authority rejecting people. This goes on and on, heading toward a first class disaster.

Paul quotes a portion of this.

When you set aside duly appointed authority, you destroy yourself.

Romans 9:20 But rather, O man, who are you, answering against God? Shall the thing formed say to the One having formed it, "Why have you made me like this?" (BLB)

Paul in his quotation starts with the negative adverb mê (μή) [pronounced may], used in a question which expects a negative answer. The other negative is ou (οὐ) [pronounced oo]; it denies the fact. The negative adverb mê (μή) [pronounced may] denies the idea behind the fact. We have the future active indicative of légô (λέγω) [pronounced LEH-goh] plus the negative mê (μή) [pronounced may]. légô (λέγω) [pronounced LEH-goh] is a word which is used for conversation, shouting, screaming, giving orders, communicating, talking, many things. We will translated it, "shall not say." We have a deliberative future tense where a question of uncertainty is expressed occasionally by the future. The active voice: the creature produces the action of the verb. The interrogative indicative is that in which the viewpoint of reality is implied in a fact enquired about when the indicative is used for asking a question. The negative mê (μή) [pronounced may] indicates that the question is rhetorical, it is a part of Paul's debater's technique used in this passage.

Now we have a subject after the verb, the nominative singular from the noun plasma (πλάσμα) [pronounced PLAS-mah]. It means what is formed, what is molded. Plasma is commonly used for the product of the artisan, like the potter making a pot or a vessel. We translate this, "Can what is molded say."

Next we have the aorist active participle from plássō (πλάσσω) [pronounced PLAS-so], the ascriptive use of the participle. It denotes a noun as belonging to a general category, such as potters. The definite article in the dative singular is an indirect object used as a possessive pronoun, and therefore we translate it "to its molder."

"Why hast thou made me thus?" This begins with the nominative neuter singular from the interrogative pronoun tís (τίς) [pronounced tihç] – "Why." This is called the interrogative of impudence. The aorist active indicative of poieō (ποιέω) [pronounced poi-EH-oh] means to make – create sometimes – to manufacture. “Why have you made me like this?” The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: the subject by analogy refers to the arrogant and unbelieving Jew of Paul’s time as producing the action of the verb by questioning the integrity of God. The indicative mood is interrogative again, it assumes that there is an actual fact which may be used in answer to this question. The accusative singular direct object is egó (ἐγώ) [pronounced ehg-OH] which is correctly translated “me.” The adverb which in the KJV is “thus,” houtos (οὗτος) [pronounced HOO-tos]. It refers to something which precedes it and it is translated “like this.” Principle: Arrogance plus impudence equals blasphemy. Now we can add the negative mê (μή) [pronounced may] which is simply translated “no.”

Romans 9:20 On the contrary, O mankind, you, who are you who answers back to the God? Can what is molded say to its molder, “Why have you made me like this?” No, of course not.

Principle

1. The rhetorical question is a debater’s technique to emphasize the blasphemy of the Jew who relies on his own ability from natural birth, and his physical relationship to Abraham, rather than the grace blessings of spiritual birth and his eternal relationship to God.
2. The thing that made Abraham, Isaac and Jacob great was the grace of God, not the racial or physical perpetuation of the seed. Believers who reject human authority they also reject God’s authority.
3. The integrity of God is not subject to contradiction or impudence.
4. God is totally, eternally, and infinitely fair.
5. It is impossible for God to be unfair or arbitrary, or even inconsistent with His own character.
6. Therefore in perfect righteousness the justice of God provided man with a free will, so that man is a free agent in determining his own destiny. And he must take the responsibility for his own decisions. That is the basic norm for establishing maturity.
7. Therefore man cannot blame the mistakes and errors of his own decisions on perfect and incorruptible God.
8. If God chooses and reject, pardons and punishes whom He pleases, He does so on the basis of His perfect integrity which includes His righteousness and His justice.
9. Arbitrary and prejudiced mankind assumes that God is prejudiced and arbitrary. But mankind cannot superimpose his own weaknesses and unfairnesses on God.
10. Man’s objection to the inequalities of time as well as eternity is really an objection to the possession of freedom and the right of self-determination which produces these inequalities.
11. Furthermore, man objects to the printout of election, foreordination and foreknowledge. He fails to realize that his own volition determines his exclusion from election, foreknowledge and predestination. God in alpha-time knew the decision of every person from the beginning of time. The individual uses his own free will; God simply knows what way a man will jump.

12. Negative volition seeks to circumvent the condemnation from the justice of God by blaming the omniscience of God for entering only facts into the computer of divine decrees in eternity past.
13. Man's irresponsibility and depravity is never more dramatically portrayed than when he seeks to blame God for his own thoughts, his own decisions, and his own actions.
14. God is not obligated to save the unbeliever. God is not obligated to bless the reversionistic believer, that is a matter of momentum under the plan of grace.
15. God is not obligated to impute blessing to the reversionistic believer in time, nor to impute rewards to him at the judgement seat of Christ.
16. However, God's obligation is to Himself. God's obligation is to His policy – grace. God does not make an exception for the nicest person who ever live, the sweetest personality, the most sincere, the kindest, etc.
17. God's attitude toward Christ, the living Word, and after salvation, attitude toward Bible doctrine, the written Word, is the issue.
18. An attitude which comes from man's volition rather than God's sovereign desire is to blame God. It is God's will for man to believe in Him (and in His Son).
19. God must be consistent with Himself. Therefore He must punish the unbeliever and save the believer. He must bless the mature believer and discipline the reversionistic believer. Everyone has a fair shake from God.

"The kissing of the foot of the man prior to counseling is not working out."

Principle

1. No one can say to God, Why have you made me this way? because mankind has his own free will. Man is a free agent, he has self-determination. So the answers to the rhetorical question is an obvious no.
2. Mankind under the influence of Satanic thinking is always trying to conform God to his human thinking rather than accepting God in terms of divine revelation. Man is always trying to bend God to his own thinking and then saying, "This is God's will."
3. The quotation from Isaiah 29:16, which Isaiah applied to the nation, Paul applies to then individual Jew.
4. In this context Paul has combined the doctrine of God's perfect integrity with the reality of man's arrogance and his ignorance to establish the true issue of omniscience feeding facts into the computer of divine decrees.
5. It is not the elect or the foreordained who attains spiritual maturity to whom Paul directs these remarks, but in context he is speaking to the condemned Jew who has rejected Christ as saviour, who has refused the Shekinah glory and is now grasping at straws in an attempt to justify his error.
6. To blaspheme and malign the perfect wisdom and justice of God is the irrational act of a desperate person.

7. Irrational because of after having made hundreds of free will decisions, culminating in judgement, God is blamed and maligned for thus shifting the responsibility from their erroneous decisions and blaming it on the sovereignty of God. Paul uses debater's technique to refute this blasphemy and to shift the responsibility right back to human free will where negative volition has manufactured its own hardness of heart.

Lesson #600

600 12/06/1978 Romans 9:21 Ancient pottery; rhetorical use of OU and ME; Jones cult; freedom; authority of the Potter

We have to understand this from the period of time when it was written. The reader or the hearer is aware of having a pot as a container.

Romans 9:21 Or does the potter not have authority over the clay, to make out of the same lump one vessel unto honor, but one unto dishonor? (BLB)

Verse 21 begins with a disjunctive conjunction ê (ἤ) [pronounced ā]. It is used in interrogative sentences to introduce and present a rhetorical question, and while it is simply translated "or" it actually introduces an interrogative debater's finesse.

The keyword here is kerameús (κεραμεύς) [pronounced ker-am-YOOCE]. We do not even know how to match the Greek pottery, its artwork or its coloring. A potter who could produce such pottery was considered to be a great master of that craft. Everyone admired and revere a potter. Not all pots were beautiful; some were pitiful, like a freshman art class. There was good and crappy pottery. Bob warns that there are some sexual acts portrayed from time to time.

The Romans are alleged to have destroyed themselves by using the wrong kind of pottery. They used several kinds of metal which caused some of them to become cancerous. Just a theory.

It takes the principle of the previous verse and illustrates the verse from the obvious. Even the dumbest person is aware of the fact that the pot doesn't argue with the potter. The nominative singular subject is kerameús (κεραμεύς) [pronounced ker-am-YOOCE] – "potter." This was a person who in the ancient world was very important in the ancient world.

The next word is the negative adverb ouk (οὐκ) [pronounced ook], used in rhetorical questions expecting a positive answer of yes. mê (μή) [pronounced may] expects a negative answer; ou (οὐ) [pronounced oo] expects a positive answer, and in answer to this question a single word, "yes," is thrown in because of the word ou (οὐ) [pronounced oo]. You do not translate it "no," you translate it "yes." Only the Greeks would have such a system of exegesis. We have so far: "Or does not the potter."

We have a verb in the present active indicative of echô (ἔχω) [pronounced ECHKH-oh] which means to have or possess. The customary present denotes what habitually occurs or may be reasonably expected to occur. The active voice: the potter produces the action. The indicative mood is the interrogative indicative which assumes that there is an actual fact which may be stated in answer to the question, fact which has escaped the brilliant Jews who are objecting to Paul and opposing him in debater's style. So Paul is going to finesse them right out of their minds.

The next word is very important because it may be a word you understand but it is a word that demands orientation to life, and without it you've had it. The word is not "power," as translated in the KJV, it is the accusative singular direct object from exousia (ἐξουσία) [pronounced ex-oo-SEE-ah] which means "authority." "Or does not the potter possess authority." Then we have the genitive of relationship from pēlós (πηλός) [pronounced pay-LOSS] meaning "wet clay." In the analogy the potter is God; the clay is mankind. Mankind compared to God is totally, completely, utterly stupid. The rhetorical question expects a positive answer and focuses attention on the authority of God, the creator of mankind, the creation. What is not mentioned, because Paul is not going to insult their intelligence any more than he has by his finesse innuendo, is that he does give some hope in that he says "Of course, you understand that when our Lord made the pot He put inside of it volition." Everyone has a soul with freedom for self-determination.

People do not seem to be able to understand freedom or love. The African tribes are exploited. No privacy or property associated with freedom to them.

That Jim Jones talked about freedom and love, but he presented a Marxist system. In Berachah, we are free. We can leave and never come back. In cults, you do not have privacy or freedom. Your property belongs to the cult. When the news began to reveal what Jones was doing, then he moved the people to British Guiana. He made a woman who wanted to stay with her husband have public intercourse with someone she hated. People like this is crazy. Such people are exploitable.

You can look at the brain, but you cannot find a soul there. But in each pot (body) is a soul, which has self-determination; self consciousness. Bob loves tigers and wolves (which mate for life).

Respect is necessary for a woman to love a man. Marriage does not mean love.

Bob had to learn about pots and the potter. This is a beautiful piece of debater's finesse. Only a jackass would say to God, "Why did you make me this way?" Our failures originate from our old sin nature. Our free will is the source of personal failures.

Or does not the potter have the authority over the clay?

Next in the Greek sentence comes the prepositional phrase ek (ἐκ) [pronounced ehk] tou autou phuramatos, which is correctly translated "from the same lump." We start out with the preposition ek (ἐκ) [pronounced ehk] plus the ablative from the attributive use of the intensive pronoun autos (αὐτός) [pronounced ow-TOSS] – “from the same.” This is followed by the ablative singular from the noun phurama (φύραμα) [pronounced FOO-ram-ah]. It is derived from the verb Phuraō (φυράω) [pronounced foo-RAW-oh] which means to mix. What was mixed or mingled was called phurama (φύραμα) [pronounced FOO-ram-ah]. Phuraō (φυράω) [pronounced foo-RAW-oh], came first; the mixture came before what is mixed. The potter came before the pot. To mix and to mold and to manufacture takes something more than being manufactured. It takes more to make than it does to be made. With this is the aorist active infinitive of the verb poieō (ποιέω) [pronounced poi-EH-oh], which means to make or to manufacture. The constative aorist tense is for a fact or action extended over a period of time. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, therefore the entire history of the human race. The active voice: God produces the action of the verb by creating the soul of mankind where free will and self-determination reside as a free agent. The infinitive is the infinitive of intended result. When the result is indicated as fulfilling a deliberate objective in the creation of man it therefore becomes a blending of purpose and result.

Even the worst-made basket cannot say, “Why did you make me this way?”

Again, pēlíos (πηλός) [pronounced pay-LOSS] indicates what all members of the human race have in common. We all have something in common: we all came from the same lump. We all have a lump called a body which is the home for the soul. A pot is a container, and it is used because it represents the body. The body contains the soul, and the soul determines whether you are a pot of honor or a pot of dishonor. From man’s self-determination comes honor or dishonor, not from God. God puts volition into each pot, and each pot determines from his own volition whether he is a pot of honor or a pot of dishonor.

Crete, Athens, Troy, Corinth are the places where the best pottery was made. Places where classical Greek would be known.

Next we have classical Greek, ho men, ho de – “on the one hand, on the other hand.” This is composed of the nominative masculine singular from the definite article, meaning “the one,” and the second time the definite article occurs it means “the other.” It means the one vessel and then the other. With this we have the affirmative particle men used correlatively with the particle de – “on the one hand a vessel, on the other hand another vessel.” With this is the nominative singular subject of skeuos (σκεῦος) [pronounced SKYOO-oss] which means a pot, a container.

Then we have the prepositional phrase for the first category, eis (εἰς) [pronounced ICE] plus the accusative of timê (τιμῆ, ἥς, ἡ) [pronounced tih-MAY or tee-MAY] – “for honor” or “for the purpose of honor.” Eis (εἰς) [pronounced ICE] is often used to make a purpose clause. “On the one hand a vessel for the purpose, on the other hand another for the purpose of dishonor.” This time it is eis (εἰς) [pronounced ICE] plus atimia (ἀτιμία) [pronounced at-ee-MEE-ah].

Romans 9:21 Or does not the potter possess authority over the clay, from the same lump to make on the one hand a vessel for the purpose of honor, and on the other hand another for the purpose of dishonor? [of course, he does].

If God wants to make a pot of honor and another pot of dishonor from the same lump of clay? Of course he does. But does the individual pot make decisions compatible with divine authority? Paul has just finessed these Jews right out of their sweat socks.

1977 Romans

Lesson #601

601 12/07/1978 Romans 9:21 Vessels in Scripture; coexistence of human free will and the sovereignty of God re dishonor; aposiopesis

In the ancient world, there were many baskets, sacks, leather bottles, pottery, metal containers. Every home used vessels to store wine, water, clothing, sewage; essentially everything. We need to go back to the ancient world to understand this.

Romans 9:21 Or does not the potter possess authority over the clay, from the same lump to make on the one hand a vessel for the purpose of honor, and on the other hand another for the purpose of dishonor? [of course, he does].

Paul says that if God wants to make a pot of honor and a pot of dishonor from the same lump of clay, does He have the right to do so? Yes. But that is not the issue, that merely sets a way of finessing into the issue. The issue is free will, not what right God has. God has the authority but that isn't the issue. The issue is, does the individual pot recognize divine authority? make decisions compatible with divine authority? That is the issue.

Vessels

1. This is not the only passage in which vessels are used. In Acts 9:15 we have the doctrine of election related to a vessel. The word "vessel" always means a container. It is empty until it is filled and once Paul was filled with doctrine then he became the Lord's representative in a very unique way.
2. In Romans 9 vessels are used extensively. We see vessels used in connection with the plan of God.
3. In 2Corinthians 4:7 vessels were used to provide an analogy between Bible doctrine resident in the soul and capacity for life among those who are mature believers – "we have this treasure in clay vessels..." Containing something which is the greatest of all treasures is doctrine resident in the soul and from this doctrine comes great capacity for life.
4. In 2Timothy 2:20,21 vessels are used to set up a contrast between the believer who is mature and the believer who is in reversionism. Gold and silver are believers with maximum doctrine in the soul; those who are negative toward doctrine, those are the clay and wood vessels.
5. In Proverbs 25:4 God is the smith and the believer is the one mentioned as the pure silver – "Take away the dross and there comes out a vessel for the smith."

6. Vessels are related to category #2 love. 1Thessalonians 4:4 – “That each one of you know how to possess his own vessel in sanctification and honor.” The woman is an empty pot. The man is kind of dumb about women. Knowing a lot of women is not a way to There is a great field for learning how to possess a woman, how to be the ruler over a woman and to do it in a way which is honorable –
7. 1Peter 3:7. The reason for this is because the woman is said to be the weaker vessel. “Weaker vessel” has to do with the function of the soul. When a person is designed by God to be a responder it means that in being a responder you are weaker and you depend upon someone else to whom you can respond. A prerequisite for marriage is, the man needs to understand the woman he is marrying.
8. If you do not get along with your woman, your prayers do not go higher than the ceiling.
9. Then, shattered vessels are used to describe personal judgements from God. For example, when David was in reversionism (Psalm 31:12) he wrote: “I am forgotten as a dead man; I am out of mind; I am like a shattered vessel.” In other words, he felt completely and totally deserted, which is what happens when you get into intensive discipline, that stage of reversionism.
10. In Jeremiah 22:28 king Coniah was also a reversionist” “Is this man Coniah a despised, shattered vessel? or is he an undesirable vessel? Why has he and his descendants been cast out and thrown into a land they did not know?” They were taken into captivity and the reason was because they were shattered vessels. A shattered vessel holds nothing; it is no longer a container. Shattered vessel means you had every opportunity to learn doctrine, to be filled up with doctrine, to have more doctrine than you’ve ever had before. But once you are shattered it means you are on the way to the sin unto death, the final and last stage.
11. Apostate communicators of doctrine can also be reversionistic and be described that way – Jeremiah 25:34: “Wail, you shepherds, and cry; wallow in ashes” – this is an emotionally unstable person who is trying to rebound by wallowing in ashes-- “you masters of the flock; for the day of your slaughter and your dispersion has come, and you shall be shattered like a broken but choice vessel.” The shattered vessel is used for personal discipline; it usually indicates the proximity of the sin unto death, the last stage of discipline for reversionism.
12. The shattered vessel is also used for the fifth cycle of discipline. The northern kingdom – Hosea 8:8,9: “Israel is swallowed up; they are now among the nations like a vessel in which no one delights [it doesn’t hold anything]. For they have gone up to Assyria [5th cycle of discipline] like a wild ass all alone; Ephraim his hired lover [description of spiritual fornication which comes from being saturated with evil].” The southern kingdom is also described in their 5th cycle of discipline – Jeremiah 51:34. The Gentile nations in the Tribulation are also so described – Psalm 2:9.

These references merely demonstrate the fact that this is not an isolated type of analogy but is one that was easily understood since the most common type of furniture in the ancient world was the vessel, the container, the pot.

Principle

1. The lump of clay is human volition, human self-determination. The lump of clay in effect is the body containing self-determination.
2. The container hides the contents, as the body hides the soul.
3. The issue, then, becomes obvious. The justice of God imputes eternal and divine righteousness to positive volition in the lump while imputing condemnation and punishment to the negative volition in the lump. The point of reference is the justice of God. God is allowed to do this. The volition is negative, God can impute condemnation or punishment. God gives these lumps of clay life; and they are all born with volition.
4. This is because our point of reference is the justice of God.

Consider the origin of the races. For the gentiles, all of the races were formed genetically. But the Jews are formed in [Z]. Abraham was a gentile for 99 years and then he became a Jew.

The vessel of honor is a spiritual relationship to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, which occurs only with faith in Christ.

Principle

1. The descendants of Abraham, Isaac And Jacob only become true Jews by believing in Christ. All Israel is not really Israel.
2. There no way for the physical seed of Abraham to be a vessel of honor. To be a vessel of honor he must from his own free will believe in Jesus Christ who is the Shekinah glory, the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.
3. Therefore in this context a vessel of honor is the Jew who has believed in the Lord Jesus Christ, while the vessel of dishonor is the Jew who has rejected the Lord Jesus Christ and has done so from his own free will. Therefore the justice of God can only condemn the one who has rejected. The issue is not what we do; the issue is what Christ has done on the cross. Therefore believing in the Lord Jesus Christ becomes the issue.
4. The lump, again, is the free will of mankind to believe in Christ or to reject Christ. Man is free to go either way.
5. The vessel of dishonor, then, is the unbeliever; the vessel of honor is the believer in Christ who possesses at salvation imputation of divine righteousness. Receiving the righteousness of God through imputation is tantamount to honor. We are not vessels of honor based upon some good work that we have done; but we receive the righteousness of God from the justice of God.

6. Therefore the honor is possessing the righteousness of God and eternal life, while dishonor is possessing or depending on one's own self-righteousness and function in human life.
7. God is free to bless the vessel of honor possessing God's righteousness, and likewise God is free to judge the vessel of dishonor possessing human self-righteousness.

Romans 9:21 Or does not the potter possess authority over the clay, from the same lump to make on the one hand a vessel for the purpose of honor, and on the other hand another for the purpose of dishonor? [of course, he does].

Principle

1. This verse by analogy answers the question of the previous verse, "Why have you made me like this?"
2. The answer is found in that the lump of clay is human volition – free will, self-determination. All people are created with free will.
3. Man is a free agent to function under his own self-determination for better or for worse.
4. This is a part of the angelic conflict, why man was created. God permits mankind to use free will to determine the issue of whether he is going to be a vessel of honor or dishonor.
5. From the same function of human volition comes a vessel of honor and a vessel of dishonor in this context.
6. One person is a vessel of honor because of what God does for him at salvation and thereafter.
7. Another person is the vessel of dishonor because the justice of God must condemn him. This means rejection of Christ as saviour. For the believer it means rejection of doctrine which ultimately leads to reversionism. God sets up a pipeline between His justice and His righteousness which is in us. God blesses us only on the basis of what God does, not on the basis of what we do. Honor or dishonor, then, is not a behaviour pattern, not a system of morals, not a system of self-improvement; it is an attitude, first toward Christ the living Word and then toward Bible doctrine, the written Word.
8. The believer is a vessel of honor because of what God does for him while the unbeliever is a vessel of dishonor because of what he is doing for himself. The unbeliever superimposes his volition over the sovereignty of God; he substitutes his own self-righteousness for divine righteousness.
9. God is just, therefore, in molding the believer into a vessel of honor and the unbeliever into a vessel of dishonor.
10. The believer's failure in sinfulness, human good, and evil, does not detract from what God has done for him.

Principle

1. The omniscience of God knew in eternity past who would say no and who would say yes to the gospel, who would be positive toward doctrine and who would be negative.
2. Therefore when this information was fed into the computer of divine decrees it fell into many categories for the printout.
3. For the one who believes in Jesus Christ the printout includes election, foreknowledge, predestination or foreordination.
4. For the unbeliever the printout includes condemnation and judgement.
5. The emphasis on the lump of clay is always, inevitably, free will, volition, self-determination. So that the vessel of dishonor is actually molded by one's own volition.
6. The vessel of honor is the believer in the Lord Jesus Christ. The honor comes from the fact that God gives the believer 36 things at salvation, including divine righteousness and eternal life. With divine righteousness and eternal life there is a potentiality of blessing for time and eternity, but it is only a potentiality.
7. The vessel of honor is designed by grace to fulfill the royal family honor code, to advance to maturity, to glorify the Lord Jesus Christ in this tactical victory of the angelic conflict.
8. The vessel of dishonor, as the unbeliever, makes negative decisions. Negative at God-consciousness, negative at gospel hearing. This means the substitution of self-righteousness for divine righteousness and the substitution of eternal condemnation for eternal life. He chooses his own righteousness.
9. Therefore there is no conflict between the function of divine sovereignty and the function of human volition. For human volition is mankind, the lump of clay. Human volition in mankind is the factor in resolving the angelic conflict. The only conflict which exists is when God's authority is rejected by man.

Romans 9:22 And what if God, desiring to show the wrath and to make known His power, bore with much patience the vessels of wrath, having been fitted for destruction,... (BLB)

Aposiopesis, Anacoluthon

1. The second answer in the context of verses 22 and 23 is a theological profile of Pharaoh Amenhotep II and the reason why God hardened Pharaoh's heart in the face of overwhelming evidence.
2. While the first answer in the context (verses 20,21) emphasizes the coexistence of free will and divine sovereignty in history the second answer emphasizes negative volition expressed to the maximum as Pharaoh did in the confrontation with Moses. By the way, this becomes an illustration of Jewish negative volition throughout the entire history of Israel.
3. The grace of God gives every opportunity for repentance -- change of mind. Negative volition has the opportunity to become positive volition for Jesus Christ is presented in His saving work. After one believes in Christ there is the opportunity to learn doctrine, and wherever there is the demand there is always the supply.

4. Therefore to understand verses 22 and 23 the interpreter has to keep in mind Pharaoh who is being described as a vessel of dishonor.
5. Pharaoh, in contrast to Moses who as a believer in Christ advances to maturity, is a vessel of dishonor.
6. The genius of this paragraph, which includes verses 22-24, is that so brilliant and dramatic is Paul's explanation in the protasis that the apodosis is unnecessary and never stated – which is called "aposiopesis." [1] So dramatic is Paul's explanation in the protasis that you do not need an apodosis. Only a genius can give you a protasis and you can actually fill in the apodosis for yourself. Paul is going to give us this beautiful protasis and then shut up. This means the finesse of the last verse is thoroughly understood by his audience. He had a smart audience.
 - a. Bob remembers teaching at MIT; and most of them were genius types. They could concentrate for 3 hours and ask excellent questions.
 - b. "You, son of a bitch, If you don't stop that, I'm going to..." is an example of an aposiopesis
 - c. Just following his genius is worth the price of admission.
7. In effect, verses 22-24 also form an anacoluthon. [2] Vessels of honor and dishonor are fashioned in every generation, and this is the point we will learn.
 - a. An anacoluthon is someone who is so smart, he can start with a subject, digress, then go back, digress again, go back and finish a thought.
 - b. If you have a dumb audience, then you have had it.
8. Paul is concerned for contemporary Israel that instead of becoming the spiritual seed of Abraham through faith in Christ they will reject Christ as saviour and be no better than Gentiles – like Ishmael, Esau, and Pharaoh. The Jews who reject Christ as saviour are no better than an anacoluthon; they are off the main track of life, they are off the main thrust of God's plan, they have lost out completely.
 - a. Bob is indebted to the University of Arizona for learning this material.
 - b. Bob was far ahead of the classes at Dallas.
 - c. Bob took a lot of additional classes.
 - d. Bob did not get any teaching on this information at Dallas.
9. A Jewish vessel of dishonor is the unbeliever who has rejected Christ, rejected Bible doctrine, therefore a demonstration of divine wrath and a revelation of divine power whom God has endured with much patience and appointed for destruction.
10. Such a Jew is no better than a Gentile because being so close by physical relationship with Abraham and yet like Ishmael he failed. So Jews who reject Christ are just exactly like Gentiles in spite of the fact that they have such a great spiritual heritage -- which takes us back to Paul's premise in verse 6: "All Israel is not Israel."
11. Therefore the conclusion of the anacoluthon: God's purpose is that He might reveal the riches of His glory which He works on the vessels of mercy which He prepared before hand for His glory, and to which He has called us not only from among the Jews but also from among the Gentiles.
12. Paul does not want contemporary history to follow the pattern of Ishmael, Esau and Pharaoh. He wants the Jews to fulfil their heritage.

13. Anacoluthon is a popular Greek idiom. This anacoluthon contains hyperbaton,[3] an artificial misplacement of words as opposed to their natural order. The artificial misplacement is to give an emphasis that ordinarily could not be given in normal exegetical structure.
14. This hyperbaton is also known as a special type of hyperbaton; it is chiasmus in which the words are arranged according to a scheme of rhetorical reasoning/design. This is the ultimate in debater's technique. The only language it can be done is in the Classical Greek and in the next two verses we have pure Classical Greek.
15. This anacoluthon, which is an aposiopesis, is an incomplete sentence. It starts out with a protasis in the first class condition – if and it is true – but there is no apodosis.
16. The sentence in verses 22-24 have the protasis but no apodosis, and in verse 25 we go on from a protasis to a comparative analogy but no apodosis, and furthermore, it is also a chiasmus in hyperbaton. The words are arranged in a very difficult manner but they are arranged in order to make a point in the concept of debater's technique.
17. We just have to conclude, then, that verses 22-24 is a digression type debater's technique. This paragraph, then, is an aposiopesis, a form of ellipsis in which the protasis is given without the apodosis but the protasis is definitely understood, and the one who is listening says, I agree. That, in effect, becomes the apodosis.

Lesson #602

602 12/08/1978 Romans 9:22a WCC and terrorism; debater's technique: aposiopesis (1–17), anacoluthon; rights and patience of God

The Houston Tribune 7December titled United States Christians finance slaughter. There are Christian missionaries who are being persecuted and killed by Rhodesian guerrillas. Some beaten to death. A deliberate policy intended to drive whites out of Rhodesia. The guerrillas fighting and killing these people are given money from the World Council of Churches. There are now three outside parties helping guerillas in Rhodesia: the Soviet Union, Cuba and the World Council of Churches. The money mostly comes from affluent whites. Many contributions from various countries. Liberal churches also have been helping out as well. Christians in the United States are helping to kill Christians in Rhodesia. This is another manifestation of trouble coming to the United States.

Bob did not finish the doctrine from the previous lesson. He completes it in this lesson. However, all of the notes are kept together above. He completes this doctrine about 30 minutes in lesson #602.

Aposiopesis is defined as a figure of speech in which the writer stops a line of text in the middle of a sentence, breaking off into silence.

Anacoluthon is defined an incoherent statement or a deliberate rhetorical effect created by an abrupt change in syntax.

Romans 9:22 And what if God, desiring to show the wrath and to make known His power, bore with much patience the vessels of wrath, having been fitted for destruction,... (BLB)

Verse 22 – there is no “What” at the beginning of the sentence. It begins with the conditional particle ei (εἰ) [pronounced /] with the indicative. It introduces the protasis of a first class condition, a supposition from the viewpoint of reality. Next in the sentence is the postpositive conjunctive particle de, used as a transitional particle but it is translated before the word “if.” Therefore, since it is transitional we translate it correctly in aposiopesis style in order to prepare for hyperbaton – “Moreover, if.” The reality has already been stated – the hardening of Pharaoh’s heart.

Next is the subject in the nominative case, ho theos (θεός) [pronounced theh-OSS] – “the God.” You do not have to translate ho simply because the definite article is used here to make a reference to someone who is already mentioned in the passage several times and therefore well-known. To show that it is the same person it is simply a definite article. Then comes the present active participle. And by bringing in this verb at this time we are conceding with Paul that God has a right to use His volition. This is the quintessence of debater’s sarcasm. “Do you mean to tell me that you are free to run around and do what you want to do from your own volition and God doesn’t have the right to use His?” There is a reason for this. When people get crowded into a corner and they don’t like it they immediately make an irrational assumption. They assume that they are the only ones who have the right to use their own free will. Paul is being sarcastic. “Moreover if, as is the case, the God willing.”

“willing” [or wishing] – thélô (θέλω) [pronounced THEH-loh]. The present tense is a historical present for a past event viewed with the vividness of a present occurrence. The active voice: God produces the action of the verb. The participle is circumstantial expressing the attended circumstances. This is neither causal nor conceptive as so many interpreters think. (That is what happens when you do not know aposiopesis)

Next is something to support a wish, and a wish is supported by an infinitive in the Greek, so we have the aorist middle infinitive of endeiknumi (ἐνδείκνυμι) [pronounced en-DIKE-noo-mee], which means to demonstrate. Moreover if, [as is the case] God willing to demonstrate.” He is stating it in such a way as to indicate that they are saying God doesn’t have a right to do anything that makes them uncomfortable. The culminative aorist views the event in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. God demonstrates His power and the result is great evangelism in Egypt and throughout the world. The middle voice is the indirect middle emphasizing God as the agent as producing the action. It differs from the active voice in that there is a very close relationship between subject and verb. The infinitive is an infinitive of purpose.

With this we now have an object of the verb, the accusative singular direct object from orgê (ὀργή) [pronounced ohr-GAY] – “anger” or “wrath.” This is an anthropopathism and simply a way of expressing in human frame of reference to someone a policy of God, and to express it in such a way that they can understand it. So the anthropopathism is used for a divine reaction toward evil, and therefore a function of divine integrity. The righteousness of God rejects evil and the justice of God condemns evil. The anthropopathism represents judgement from the justice of God. We have also the accusative singular of the definite article used as a personal pronoun, and we translate it “his indignation.” This means, in effect, His judgement.

“and to make his power known” – a connective use of the conjunction kai, plus the aorist active infinitive of the verb gnôrizô (γνωρίζω) [pronounced gnoh-RID-zoh] which means to make known, to reveal, to declare. This is a culminative aorist viewing the event in its entirety but regarding it from the viewpoint of existing results – judgement. The active voice: God produces the action. It is an infinitive of purpose. Then we have an accusative singular direct object from dunatos (δυνατός) [pronounced doo-nat-OSS], meaning “power.”

Romans 9:22 so far: “Moreover, [as is the case] God willing to demonstrate his indignation [divine judgement] and to reveal his omnipotence [power].”

“endured” – aorist active indicative from the verb phérô (φέρω) [pronounced FEH-row] which means to carry a heavy load, to press, to push, but also to endure. This is a constative aorist, it refers to an action extended over a period of time. It actually refers to the time of the ten plagues. They are all gathered up into one entirety, says the constative aorist. This refers to Exodus 6-12. The constative aorist, then, gathers up into one entirety God’s patience and endurance with Israel during this time. The active voice: God produces the action of the verb which is this great demonstration of His grace. In other words, He kept pushing – “Let my people go.” The indicative mood is declarative for reality, the reality of God’s patience, of the fact that God did not kill Pharaoh outright and march the people out over his corpse, which He could have done. This verb is the one that goes with the conditional particle ei (εἰ) [pronounced I] to form the aposiopesis. It is the indicative of Pharaoh that sets up the protasis of the first class condition.

We have in support of this a prepositional phrase, en (ἐν) [pronounced en] plus the instrumental of manner which expresses the methods by which the function is performed, plus the adjective polus, polos (πολύς, πολλός) [pronounced poll-OOS], plus makrothumia (μακροθυμία) [pronounced mak-roth-oo-MEE-ah] – patience or forbearance. Corrected translation: “with great patience.”

Principle

1. God in His matchless and perfect policy of grace gave Pharaoh every chance.
2. God demonstrated His justice and revealed His omnipotence by enduring with great patience this negative volition of Pharaoh.
3. The omnipotence of God is all-powerful, infinitely able to do all things which are the object of His power and within the range of His perfect integrity. However, God does not use His power to make right wrong. Hence, as in the case of Pharaoh, God used His power to make wrong right.

603 12/10/1978 Romans 9:22b Vessel of wrath by own negative volition; concept of the last judgment; freedom vs. equality

Predestination is never used of the unbeliever. The unbeliever gets there on his own by means of his own free will.

A review of the translation so far.

The imputation concept is how God is able to give us the righteousness which we need; and God can do that without compromising His character. Adam's original sin was imputed to our sin nature; and life to the human soul.

All personal sins were imputed to Jesus on the cross and judged. That is the basis for our salvation. The imputation of divine righteousness at the point of salvation.

Pharaoh Aminhotep kept saying no, and by the 6th no, he should have died, overcome with scar tissue. However, God allowed him to continue saying no, which evangelized several generations of nations around there.

Paul goes from one point, where he has those disagreeing with him, agreeing. Then he takes them to the next step, which is the important step and they must agree there. They had to agree that the potter has the authority over his pot; and Paul then takes the same people to the place where they must agree that God has the authority over that which He gives life to. This is debater's finesse. There is classical Greek throughout. Koine Greek could not even handle something like this. This reminds us of Sophocles and Aesculus, and Socrates. Paul uses even superior reasoning.

Paul used Pharaoh Aminhotep as a despised man of history to prove a point.

Those who survive in a disaster is believers who can think under disaster circumstances. If you can, with 40% attention, consider the aposiopesis and anacoluthan, then you can figure out what to do during a disaster.

The British gave procedures for everything that happens in battle. You do not have to be smart to understand Paul, with the amount of time that has been given to this.

We are this far in v. 22:

Romans 9:22a Moreover, if as is the case, God willing to demonstrate his indignation, and to reveal his omnipotence, has endured with great patience...

Romans 9:22 And what if God, desiring to show the wrath and to make known His power, bore with much patience the vessels of wrath, having been fitted for destruction,... (BLB)

“vessels” – the nominative plural of the noun skeuos (σκεῦος) [pronounced SKYOO-oss], used for containers in the ancient world. The noun here is without a definite article, and the absence here of the definite article does not emphasize the qualitative aspect of the noun but the high price that God sets on all unbelievers. God paid a great price for all unbelievers. This is followed by the descriptive genitive singular from the noun orgê (ὀργή) [pronounced ohr-GAY], an anthropopathism referring to divine judgement and condemnation in terms of human language of accommodation. Divine condemnation, as per John 3:18. It is the vessel of wrath, which from his own decision makes a decision. He fits himself by his own volition for destruction. And the printout: God simply knew in eternity past that this person would reject Christ as saviour and therefore would be a vessel of wrath. “Wrath” and “destruction” merely indicate the printout from the standpoint of the unbeliever. Again, God does not prepare the vessel of wrath but the vessel of wrath prepares himself through his own free will decision. He is a free agent, he has the opportunity of saying yes or no, and in self-determination he rejects Christ as saviour.

“fitted” – perfect passive participle from the verb katartizō (καταρτίζω) [pronounced kat-ar-TID-zoh]. In the perfect tense this is a very meaningful word. Man’s free will can become the equipment for eternal blessing or eternal condemnation. It depends upon man’s self-determination, which is the basis for either blessing or cursing from God. This is a very unusual word and is used at least four ways in the scriptures. For example, it is used in a mechanical sense in Greek tragedy for tuning up the machine that always lowered the deities onto the stage, as in 1Corinthians 1:10. It also was a military term for equipping an army, as in 2Corinthians 13:11, or a naval term for supplying a fleet going into action, as in 1Thessalonians 3:10. It was used as a fishing term for mending broken nets – 1Peter 5:10. It was used in Galatians 6:1 for a medical term, mending broken bones. The translation has to emphasize the fact there that the volition of mankind determines the nature of the vessel. The lump of clay in verse 21 is human volition. God does not prepare the vessel of wrath; the free will of the unbeliever prepares the vessel for wrath. Remember that rejection of salvation is rejection of grace. Rejection of doctrine is tantamount to rejection of grace. With the perfect tense here we have a dramatic perfect and we will translate it, “having been prepared” or “having been equipped.” The dramatic perfect tense: the action of the verb is completed. That is, the negative volition at God-consciousness and negative volition at gospel hearing. This resolves the existing state. The status quo is an unbeliever, and this dramatic perfect emphasizes the results of the action, that from one’s own free will a certain person has rejected Christ and remained in that status as an unbeliever. The passive voice: the vessel of wrath (the unbeliever) receives the action of the verb through his own negative volition. He receives the equipment for destruction from his own negative volition only. It is his decision and that is what makes him prepared or equipped for destruction. The participle is circumstantial.

With this is a prepositional phrase, eis (εἰς) [pronounced ICE] plus the accusative singular of apōleia (ἀπώλεια) [pronounced ap-OH-lie-a] which means literally “for destruction.” It refers to the last judgement.

Romans 9:22 Moreover, if as is the case, God willing to demonstrate his indignation, and to reveal his omnipotence, has endured with great patience vessels of wrath [unbelievers] having been equipped for destruction [the last judgement].

The concept of the last judgment. What is this vessel equipped for destruction in the last judgment. In order to live with God, we must have His righteousness; and we must have His life, which is eternal life. Human life cannot be separated from the soul; that cannot change even in death. Eternal life cannot be separated from the believer's human spirit. Man can do not evil to separate the life from the human soul.

Two categories of human beings; and the last judgment differentiates between the two. It is always the object which has the merit when it comes to exercising faith. The subject has the merit in empiricism and in rationalism.

Freedom involves privacy, property and free will. We are free in our souls to think anything that we want. The more ostentatiousness, the more freedom. We are permitting Iranians to run around calling for freedom and equality. You can have one, but you cannot have both. Beautiful homes and material wealth acts as incentive.

No one in Berachah has ever complained about someone else not giving enough. Bob loves that.

We choose to be a vessel of honor or of dishonor.

1977 Romans

Lesson #604

604 12/10/1978 Romans 9 Pistol course; volition of man determines his eternal blessing or cursing; patience of God; arrogance cancels genius

About 10 minutes for the Communion service.

Colonel Jeff Cooper is coming out to teach a pistol course. This is to learn many principles of combat with a .45 automatic, the best handgun. One thing is to go from having your hands in the air to holding your gun, putting one in the head and two in the body in about 3 seconds.

The fun house, a large building that goes on in this building. You smash the door open and there is a man at the end of the hall with a shotgun and you know you have to get him.

Bob remembers there was a man there holding a Bible, but Bob doesn't trust men with Bibles. Many tactical applications. One day, we will get the big test; can you think under pressure. Your ability to handle any disaster situation.

Romans 9:22 Moreover, if as is the case, God willing to demonstrate his indignation, and to reveal his omnipotence, has endured with great patience vessels of wrath [unbelievers] having been equipped for destruction [the last judgement].

Principle

1. Man's free will or self-determination can be equipment for eternal blessing or eternal judgement. Free will and self-determination must be coordinated with thought. When you have coordination with thought then you have equipment for eternal blessing or eternal judgement.
 - a. You take one road and it is good; another and it is not.
2. When man expresses positive volition through faith in the Lord Jesus Christ his non-meritorious expression of free will equips him as a vessel of mercy. He is prepared for the glory of God. He has done through his own volition related to his own mentality.
3. However, when man expresses negative volition, as did Pharaoh Amenhotep II, his free will prepares him for destruction, and the destruction in this verse is the great white throne judgement.
4. Either man will adjust to the justice of God by believing in Jesus Christ or he will maladjust to the justice of God and reject Christ. The justice of God will always adjust to either situation.
5. The principle also works the other way. In antithesis, when a person rejects Jesus Christ as his personal saviour then there is maladjustment to the justice of God, and this is followed by the justice of God providing what is necessary and compatible with His own attributes for that person. That would be discipline in time and eternal judgement.

Romans 9:22 Moreover, if as is the case, God willing to demonstrate his indignation, and to reveal his omnipotence, has endured with great patience vessels of wrath [unbelievers] having been equipped for destruction [the last judgement].

Principle

1. When mankind from his own free will chooses the work of Christ on the cross for salvation he becomes a vessel of mercy. God has mercy on his soul and immediately provides 36 things. From then on, depending on his attitude toward doctrine, mercy intensifies and increases until a person can have the greatest possible happiness in this life.
2. When mankind from his own free will chooses his own works and his own self-righteousness he has become a vessel of wrath equipped and prepared for the last judgement.
3. Therefore only man's rejection of the Lord Jesus Christ can bring about his destruction in the lake of fire. God in His patience is longsuffering and in His forbearance permits the unbeliever to live, always to demonstrate His power, always to give another chance.
 - a. God allows some reversionists to live for a long time to use as a distraction. These are always nice and sweet people. They are sincere and virtuous and marvelous.
 - b. Ranger training had a group of men to act as aggressors. These were American soldiers, but they would often dress like the enemy.

c. The Brits were even more realistic. Some warriors in some region. They would have guns and lean around a rock and shoot at a soldier. Peithons I think they were. They provided good training for the Brits.

- d. God keeps alive a cadre of reversionists and they are used to test us
4. God's power was demonstrated in the plagues so that many in Egypt and throughout the world were evangelized through the negative volition of Pharaoh, the vessel of wrath.
 5. In spite of opposition to God's vessels of wrath or unbelievers, the unbelievers are kept alive by the mercy of God and used to fulfil His plan. Principle: God's plan does not depend on you or me; it only depends upon God. God's plan is going to move on with or without us. There is no authority greater than the plan of God.
 6. Ishmael, Esau and Pharaoh were all vessels of wrath. God endured with great patience these vessels so that each one revealed the power of God and the dynamics of God in moving His plan through, over and around these people. In other words, the principle: Nothing can stop the advance of the plan of God.

One more principle in connection with Exodus 9.

Arrogance always increases. If you are a genius with arrogance, you become irrational and stupid.

Principle

1. The vessels of wrath or unbelievers have been prepared for destruction through negative volition, first at God-consciousness. Then from there it branches out into many things – gospel hearing, and in the case of dialogue with God the confrontation with Moses, various ways.
2. Therefore it is the function of free will which equips or prepares a vessel of wrath for the last judgement. Pharaoh was a vessel of wrath prepared for destruction by means of his own free will – persistent, continual negative volition. Even though he had demonstrations of divine power which overwhelmed him completely he still said no.

Lesson #605

605 12/11/1978 Romans 9:23a Conservatism; aposiopesis; imputation of blessing to +R in the believer with capacity from maximum Bible doctrine

After this lesson, Bob will go into a special. Well, two lessons from now.

Bob begins to read from an article, which article distinguishes between conservatism and Democrats v. Republicans.

It is impossible to be spiritually mature and be a liberal. The 95th Congress saw liberalism routed on several points.

From Nation's Business, December 1978. No true conservative existence without recognizing that there is a higher intelligence that exists than man. "There can be no true conservative conviction without an acceptance of this sobering, humbling truth, that a higher intelligence exists beyond human intelligence, that material explanations cannot suffice for all the wonders around us. It is from this conviction that the conservatives draw their doctrines in relationship to man and the state. To the conservative, the state can never be supreme. Conservatives believe in order, loyalty, patriotism and obedience to the law but they perceive the individual man or woman as first a creation of God not the ward of the state. Individuality lies at the very heart of conservative philosophy...the one truly maverick human being should not be trampled by the masses. Regarding individuals, conservatives do not believe man to be perfectible even by the very best manipulations of the state. Is that a cynical view? No, I would call it a realistic view. Conservatism tends to see man as a mixed bag of instincts, filled with passions that must be restrained and generous characteristics that ought to be encouraged; but the instrumentalities of the state, schools, colleges, daycare centers, hospitals, museums, art institutes, regulatory agencies—none of these will induce that virtue. Conservatism says, pessimistically, that you can build public housing projects—you can build them till kingdom comes—and vandals will still knock out the windows. Conservatives believe in other doctrines which they tend to consider eternal truths. Let me set down a few of these at random. Conservatives do not believe in the equality of man—the notion that all men are created equal they regard as false, and for the best of all reasons—cause it is not so. That was John Randolph's conviction and he spoke for the ages. This is not to say that conservatives are opposed to equal justice under law or to equal opportunity in the marketplace. But conservatives doubt that the ideal of equal justice can ever be achieved and they strongly resist the efforts of latter day egalitarians who would level society by penalizing the industrious fellow in order to coddle the bum. Conservatism does not shrink from the concept of aristocracy, an aristocracy of merit. Conservatives accept as a matter of palpable fact a social structure of lower classes, middle classes, upper classes, roughly defined in terms of wealth, taste, and values—not wealth alone, but taste and values. Yes, says the conservative, there are enduring values and these are reflected in conservative attitudes towards art, architecture, literature and music, no less than attitudes toward law and government. You see, conservatives take the position that it isn't wealth that makes you an upper class person, it's good taste. It is true, as a general proposition, that conservatives look to the past and liberals look to the future. We tend to resist change, just as our liberal brothers tend to embrace it. Conservatives make good historians; liberals make good novelists. In our philosophy, a large deference is owed the wisdom of ancestors, mentors and founding fathers. We adhere to ritual, to ceremony, to tradition. Catholics who deplore the abandonment of Latin in the Mass were identified as conservative; those who opted for vernacular masses to the tune of rock guitars were styled as liberals...but respect for enduring values to not...on the contrary, it is the contemporary conservative who rights in Congress against the forces of regimentation. To the conservative, the principle of federalism is the very foundation stone of government. The tenth amendment is carved upon his heart of hearts. Thus liberals tend to support a comprehensive, uniform, compulsory system of national health insurance; conservatives would rather go a voluntary way. Liberals urge a standard federal way of automobile insurance to be imposed willy nilly upon all states; conservatives insist that the states continue to function as separate laboratories of experiment. By the same sentiment, conservatives hotly oppose the direct popular election of presidents. They see such an innovation as the death of federal compact. Underlying some of these conservative positions is the conservative suspicion of power. Experience has taught us that power is the name of the game. Our basic political concern has to do with how one gets power, holds it, uses it, loses it and restrains it. Conservatives are wary of great power in big government, big labor, big business, big media. Perhaps we are overly suspicious, but on that point we remember Patrick Henry's counsel to the Constitutional convention of 1788 when he said, Too much suspicion maybe correct; if you give too little power today, you may give more tomorrow, but the reverse of that proposition will not hold. If you give too much power today you cannot retake it tomorrow for tomorrow will never come for that purpose. There is much more, of course, to the conservative philosophy. Conservatives view property rights as the first of all human rights; they put a high value on a sense of place, roots of attachment, to Burke's little platoon that we belong to in society. The old virtues—industry, ambition, self-reliance, civility, honor—are all important aspects of today's conservatism. Because we hold firmly to the concept of a voluntary society we resent the incessant compulsions of super-state. "Leave us alone," we are forever crying. Men were not meant to be sheep nor governments shepherds. As long as an individual's conduct does not seriously encroach upon the rights of others, we urge that the individual be free to go his own, individual way. Live and let live, says the conservative. Live and let live, says his liberal brother, but live as we decree. I wish I could say with confidence that conservative doctrine and attitudes are gaining by leaps and bounds. I think that there is some gain, but gains are often masked by a vast amount of hypocrisy. No defender of the enterprise system is stouter, more eloquent, more spirited, or less impressive than the businessman who loves competition for somebody else. I have known conservative countrymen in Virginia whose ideas of personal freedom, once they got on a school board was to ban, To Kill a Mockingbird. Conservative ideals are banned all too often to expedience, self-interest and greed." This is the sort of person who is only trying to hang on to what they have but does not understand true conservatism. "The liberalism which manifests itself in big government, big spending, big deficits and pervasive regulation has probably peaked. Little by little, unless I am wholly mistaken, the gold old tide returns." Bob cannot agree with that. 23:00

There is a genius technique when it comes to the debater's question; but from there, he went to debater's finesse. He wanted to take his opposition to Z, so he gets them to agree to X and the to Y, and then leads them to agreeing on Z.

There is more to this, like hyperbaton, the chiasmus (?); aposiopeses, and .

Romans 9:23 ...that He might also make known the riches of His glory upon the vessels of mercy, which He prepared beforehand for glory,... (BLB)

Example of a dramatic aposiopeses in Gone with the Wind, where Rhett Butler walks out and says, "Quite frankly, my dear, I don't give a damn." We don't know what happens after he walks out, so, in that way, the story is not finished. But we complete this story based upon this final scene.

Verse 23 – this is the continuation of the first class condition protasis. The protasis will go for three verses and there is no apodosis. This verse begins with the connective use of the conjunction kai – “and.” It is followed by hina (ἵνα) [pronounced HEE-na], and hina (ἵνα) [pronounced HEE-na] plus the subjunctive is used for a purpose clause – “in order that.”

With it is the verb, the aorist active subjunctive of the verb gnôrizô (γνωρίζω) [pronounced gnoh-RID-zoh] which means to know, to understand. It refers to perception, inculcation. It is one of the stronger Greek words for learning something so that you have words in your soul. And the words are put together with other words to form concepts and principles. And you have all of this as the greatest value in the world -- the thoughts that you have in your soul. Doctrine is your greatest value. “And in order that he might make known [inculcate, reveal].” The aorist tense is a culminative aorist; it views the event in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. The result of understanding the purpose of God gives these people another chance to get with the purpose of God, to believe in Jesus Christ. That is the purpose of making known His purpose. The active voice: God produces the action of the verb. The subjunctive mood is a potential subjunctive, which implies a future reference and is used here to express that category of purpose clause known as a final clause in the Greek. A pure final clause expresses a distinct purpose conceived as the aim of the action of the verb or the action indicated in the principle verb.

With this, this verb has an object, the accusative singular direct object of ploutos (πλοῦτος) [pronounced PLOO-toss] – “wealth” or “riches,” plus the accusative singular direct object from the definite article, the generic use for a unique category. This means in context, true wealth. What is the most important thing in life? Doctrine resident in the soul. Next is the possessive genitive singular from doxa (δόξα) [pronounced DOHX-ah] which means the attributes of God, the riches which belong to Him, plus the possessive genitive singular from the intensive pronoun autós (αὐτοῦ) [pronounced ow-TOSS]. Autós (αὐτοῦ) [pronounced ow-TOSS] is not used as an intensive pronoun most of the time; it is used as the third person singular personal pronoun. So we translate this simply, “the riches of his glory.” This connotes the results of possessing the most important thing in life, and as a result of possessing that you are rich or wealthy. What is it that you possess here? Doctrine resident in your soul. By possessing doctrine in the soul and possessing one other factor, God’s perfect righteousness, God makes you rich. The “riches of his glory” indicates the imputation of divine blessing to the mature believer. God’s righteousness is imputed at salvation to all believers, but that is only the potential. Until there is capacity that will always remain a potential.

“on the vessels” – the preposition epí (ἐπί) [pronounced eh-PEE] plus the accusative from skeuos (σκεῦος) [pronounced SKYOO-oss]. The problem with epí (ἐπί) [pronounced eh-PEE] is that it can mean different things. Epí (ἐπί) [pronounced eh-PEE] plus the genitive always emphasizes contact; epí (ἐπί) [pronounced eh-PEE] plus the accusative always emphasizes motion or direction; epí (ἐπί) [pronounced eh-PEE] plus the locative emphasizes position. We have here epí (ἐπί) [pronounced eh-PEE] plus the genitive which means contact, which is why it is translated “on.” Then we have the descriptive genitive from eleos (ἔλεος) [pronounced EHL-eh-os], which means “mercy,” but mercy is grace in action. The justice of God imputes blessing to the righteousness of God, that is grace in action, and “mercy” here actually refers to the imputation of divine blessing to the mature believer. The anarthrous construction of the phrase indicates the high quality of the vessel. This is the mature believer and there is no definite article – no “the.”

1977 Romans

Lesson #606

606 12/15/1978 Romans 9:23b Pseudo–intellectuals cf. Ike and MacArthur; concentration; vessel of cursing or blessing by own volition

The special starts tomorrow; this closes out Romans for a couple weeks. Sunday morning dynamics for disaster. This must be Friday night.

They all agree that a potter has the authority over the pots. Paul is going to take that point of agreement and move forward on it. The potter can do anything he wants, where to put the handle, etc. The potter gives the pot free will, so it can decide for himself what sort of a pot he is going to be.

Romans 9:23 ...that He might also make known the riches of His glory upon the vessels of mercy, which He prepared beforehand for glory,... (BLB)

vv. 22–24 is aposiopesis with words out of order, making it an anacoluthon. No one tried to debate with Paul. To be a great debater, you have to be humble.

Arrogance is the origin of inflexibility. All inflexible people are arrogant.

Ike’s personality hid his brilliance and flexibility. Snide remarks about MacArthur and Eisenhower. Bob has been tempted on several occasions to slap some people around for their expressed opinions about either man.

Everyone has some area where they are afraid. You must be rational and not emotional. We need the ability to concentrate. The real test of concentration is learning something that you do not want to learn. Every need that you will ever have was supplied in eternity past.

We will study dropouts in the special. Most believers are dropouts.

“which [vessel]” -- the accusative neuter plural from the relative pronoun hos (ὃς) [pronounced hohç], plus the aorist active indicative from the compound verb proetoimázō (προετοιμάζω) [pronounced pro-et-oy-MAHJD-zo] [pro = before; hetoimazō (ἔτοιμάζω) [pronounced het-oy-MAHD-zoh] = prepare] which means to prepare beforehand. It also means to appoint beforehand, to prepare previously, prepare ahead of time. How did He previously prepare? He simply knew ahead of time every decision you would ever make and He entered that decision into the divine decrees. And then, having entered it into the decrees, He entered logistical support for your decision. The constative aorist tense gathers up into one entirety the action of the verb. Here is the momentary action of the omniscience of God feeding facts about the believer into the computer of divine decrees, resulting in the printout. The active voice: the decrees of God produce the action of the verb in eternity past when God provided your needs. The indicative mood is declarative regarding the action of the verb from the viewpoint of absolute reality.

With this is a prepositional phrase, eis (εἰς) [pronounced ICE], a preposition used to indicate a purpose, plus the accusative singular from doxa (δόξα) [pronounced DOHX-ah] – “glory.” This prepositional phrase stands out in vivid contrast to the prepositional phrase at the close of the previous verse-- “for destruction.” Now it is “for glory.”

Only vessels of mercy or believers qualified have the potential for glory. The qualified believer is the one who takes in doctrine. The riches of glory includes the imputation of blessing in time to the righteousness of God – the first imputation, blessing in time imputed to its divinely prepared home (divine righteousness) which sets up the a fortiori for blessing in eternity imputed to a resurrection body.

Romans 9:23 And in order that He might make known the riches of his glory on vessels of mercy, which He previously prepared for glory.

Principle

1. While God has provided many wonderful things for the believer as a vessel of mercy the unbeliever or vessel of wrath has created his own miserable destiny. He did it through his own negative volition.
2. This protasis without an apodosis emphasizes that being the physical seed of Abraham merely qualifies the Jew for being a vessel of wrath.
3. On the other hand the Jew who believes in Christ becomes a vessel of mercy, previously prepared for glory.
4. The contrast between destruction and glory summarizes again the burden which Paul has for the Jew. Instead of depending on Christ for salvation his contemporary Jewish friends were dependent on keeping the law, plus the fact that they were physically related to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.
5. Therefore the Jew without Christ becomes a vessel of wrath prepared for destruction by his own negative volition.
6. In eternity past God prepared the riches of glory (divine blessing) for those believers like Abraham, Moses, and Paul.
7. There is no divine blessing, only cursing, for the Jew who rejects Christ as saviour, for he, like Gentile Pharaoh, is a vessel of wrath prepared for destruction.
8. God originated the Jewish race for His glory but racial Jews had missed the divine purpose through the rejection of the Shekinah glory.

Romans 9:23 And in order that He might make known the riches of his glory on vessels of mercy, which He previously prepared for glory.

607 12/17/1978 Matthew 8:18a [DYNAMICS FOR DISASTER – lessons 607–628] U.S. recognition of Peking and mixed–up thinking; characteristics of mobs (9 pts.); separate from mobs to get Bible doctrine

Dynamics For Disaster

Matthew 8:18

Character/mobs & separation for Bible doctrine.

The difference between cowardice and courage is often the difference between being able to concentrate and to use words, thoughts, principles, doctrines in the soul, and emotional revolt of the soul. When emotion takes control there is no way that you can properly handle any situation.

The movies are terrible here. Someone walks forward with his finger stuck on the trigger. A real hero handles war the same as he handled it on the range. Those who can coldly, beautifully with a cool mental attitude do their job. They have the ability to think. Most cowardice is related to emotion and not thinking under pressure.

Benedict Arnold has been long surpassed for the betrayal of this country. The worst blunder since Carter cancelled the B1 bomber. Some sort of economic arrangement with China was arranged. If you live well, then you will die well. The most invaluable thing you have is your soul.

Story is Washington AP; diplomatic recognition of Red China and end recognition of free China. Carter says this is recognizing reality. 20 million were killed to install communism. We are saying that we should recognize international gangsters?

The men of our military are responsible for our freedom. We have today the recipe for a crisis. Douglas MacArthur could have defeated that Chinese army in Korea. The only way you gain respect is to defeat them so well that they do not want to go back to war with you.

Our air force is behind and our Navy is a farce. We are on the verge of an historic crisis. When we go down, there will be a new Dark Ages. Medieval Darkness will return.

Carter says that we will remove our 700 troops in Taiwan. This is withdrawing troops from Taiwan, a good and decent nation. We are going to lose out on chrome by allowing Rhodesia to go communist.

We do not understand freedom any more. People are calling it equality, and those two are antithetical. There is no equality even in heaven. Freedom is invented by God. The government coming around asking how many bathrooms we have; that is an attack on privacy, which is an attack on freedom. One of the great aspects of prosperity is ostentatiousness.

By contrast, you cannot get a decent pair of shoes in Russia; they do not know how to can food. We have a crisis today because Americans cannot think like Americans.

Proverbs 23:7 says: "As a man thinketh in his heart, so he is." You are what you think as an individual with capacity for thought. The possession of a soul is your first key. The real part of you is your soul with its self-consciousness, with its left and right lobes, frame of reference, memory centre, vocabulary and categorical storage, norms and standards, with your volition with positive and negative poles, with emotion designed to respond to what you have in your right lobe - designed to respond but never to rule your soul.

Today emotion rules the souls of people in this country and this is conditioning for conquest by an outside power. The right lobe of the soul, called kardia, is the male part of the soul; emotion is the female. The female must never take charge.

Since WWII, we have had a decline of thinking. This was revealed by the Zoot Suiters walking the streets. We are a second class power.

Freedom requires privacy. Property is most important and the government does not have a right to tell you what to do with your vehicle. The attacks on our police officers. Crime is out of hand; and the government is trying to take away our guns, our personal property.

We have to separate the thinking people from the mob. A democracy is a mob with a slight veneer.

Liberalism produces arrogance; arrogance assumes the prerogatives of God and destroys freedom with a ploy called equality. Equality is a destruction of our freedom. Our nation has been infected by the insanity of Marxist socialism, the welfare state, the destruction of self-determination. The crisis is here. How are we going to handle it?

Matthew 8:18 Now when Jesus saw the great multitudes about Him, He gave commandment to depart to the other side.

Jesus is the very key to the plan of God. [X] + [Y] + [Z].

Categories of blessing: spiritual blessing, temporal blessing, blessing by association, historical impact, ability to handle undeserved suffering and historical disaster; dying grace.

We start out with a principle: the imperative of distraction, Verse 18. We are going to have some casualties. We have a mob. We have thousands of people following our Lord Jesus Christ who has come to the edge of a lake called a sea. This lake, rather shallow, is about 13 or 14 miles long and 7 or 8 miles wide and is surrounded by high mountainous terrain and it has heavy storms.

There is a "mob" which is exactly what you have to call a crowd which is out of control. Our Lord has no control over thousands of people. They are there because of Him, they have seen Him perform miracles, they have heard His dynamic messages, they look to Him as the Person to help them in their personal problems and their national problems. They are all confused and they are all mixed up and when people are mixed up and confused and they see a miracle, then they follow it. They hear someone speak with confidence and they follow him. Now we have a mob and you can't do anything with a mob. So it is necessary to separate the men from the boys and to separate the people who can think from those in the mob who will never be able to think.

Verse 18 - we begin with the transitional use of the conjunctive particle de, "now" is the correct translation. This particle relates past historical situations with the present and links it even to the future so that there is an application to us. It links all that has happened in the past but it also sees the situation from the standpoint of people knowing there is trouble. They realize that the nation is on the verge of destruction. In fact forty years after this incident the nation would be destroyed under the fifth cycle of discipline. And it would go out of history completely under the principle that Jesus Christ controls history and that at certain times in history certain cancers must be removed from the population of the earth.

Next we have a subject, the nominative subject ho Iêsous (Ἰησοῦς) [pronounced ee-ay-SOOCE], the human title for our Lord Jesus Christ, the very key to the plan of God. Remember, the plan of God is X+Y+Z which is all dependant upon imputations.

"Now the Jesus," Jesus Christ who is eternal God, Jesus Christ who is the wisdom of God, Jesus Christ who provides for us eternal salvation, the unique Person of the universe, true humanity and undiminished deity in one Person forever.

Next we notice that He looks at the crowd. We have the aorist active participle of the verb horaô (ὁράω) [pronounced hoh-RAW-oh]. This is not the same as blepô (βλέπω) [pronounced BLEHP-oh] which means to glance. Blepô (βλέπω) [pronounced BLEHP-oh] means that you don't have to use your mentality, just your eyes. Like so many people who just look around but never associate with what they see. They do not see danger when it is coming, they do not see something wonderful or pleasant. It really means to be non-alert. But here we have horaô (ὁράω) [pronounced hoh-RAW-oh] which means to look with thought and to associate what you see with what you have in your mind. Jesus Christ looks at this crowd and He analyses them; He knows them for what they are. The aorist tense is a constative aorist indicating the fact that He is not only looking at the crowd but we might say He is studying the crowd. The constative aorist gathers up into one entirety the Lord Jesus Christ making a reconnaissance of the crowd, an estimate of the situation.

Before Jesus gives a command, he makes an estimate of the situation. The people there are ochlos (ὄχλος) [pronounced OKH-Ioss], but without any organization. This is a mob. A crowd is gathered for approbation. A very mixed set of reasons there. Some brought a relative to be healed; some have personal problems and others have national problems; some were interested in what Jesus did.

"multitudes" - ochlos (ὄχλος) [pronounced OKH-Ioss], which is not like a platoon or a company. A platoon or a company is organized where everyone has a slot, a place, a job. This is a crowd or a mob where no authority has been established. These people were following Jesus Christ for different reasons, different motivations. Some are following Him because they want to be liberated from the Romans. Some are following because they have sick relatives they want healed. Some are following Him because they just want a good side show and they are impressed by the way He cast out demons in the same chapter. Some like good messages and He has a lot of good messages. Everyone has a different reason. This was a mob and there has to be a separation, a culling out of those who can be prepared for a crisis and those who will never make it.

The historical circumstances: it was a time just before historical disaster to the kingdom of Judah. Already Judaea is a Roman province, the Jews are discontented, they are looking for leadership, they are looking for help. They have personal problems, they have national problems, and for this reason the crowd had come to Jesus Christ, not so much for salvation and for doctrine, but for personal help.

What Is a Crowd?

1. A crowd is made up of people who are emotional, fickle, and irrational. Emotion means no thought content, no common sense, no doctrine. There is no thinking ability, there is no vocabulary in the emotion of the soul. This is why a mob has to be impressed, it has to be controlled. Many people out of control in Iran, which means mobs. They are irrational groups. You can only impress a mob with power and strength. This must be done because mobs are irrational. Crowds are always fickle and unstable.
2. Furthermore, approbation from the masses becomes a distraction to perception of doctrine and therefore becomes the breeding ground for arrogance. Many of those disciples in the mob are teachable. They are going to be the men for the crisis, they are going to learn how to handle a crisis from doctrine. But they have to be separated so they can concentrate on what is taught. That is exactly what a church is: it is to take you out of the run of society and separate you for a short period of time to learn Bible doctrine. Individuals may have high IQs, but they cannot think in a mob.
3. Those who depend upon a crowd for approbation have no capacity for life. Bob enjoys being entertained; but he would never ask them for their opinion about anything. The lowest people of any society are entertainers. They listen to what they say and they copy them. It is fine to have talent; but their opinions are the most meaningless.
4. Approbation from the crowd, when taken seriously, destroys moral courage, distracts from doctrine, and guarantees a life of misery.
5. Since a crowd is irrational, emotional and incapable of thought it falls apart in historical disaster. As soon as there is any type of a pressure situation a mob always panics. A mob is incapable of thought, incapable of moral courage, incapable of discernment. In a pressure situation, a mob always panics.

6. A mob destroys human freedom by demanding equality, intruding into privacy. They destroy property. We lose freedom when we allow property destruction. Stealing is a destruction of freedom.
7. Therefore, a crowd or a mob becomes an evil instrument easily succumbing to rumour, propaganda, victimized by any demagogue who promises them the Millennium. (The communists have discovered that a mob is a weapon). There is always someone who can find the trigger to a mob and start them on a rampage.
8. Freedom is lost in a crowd or a mob and every person who is a part of a crowd or a mob is a slave. There is no freedom in a mob.
9. Therefore, a mob is a distraction to the perception of doctrine. There are many people in the mob or crowd who have already believed in the Lord Jesus Christ and received Him as their personal saviour but they are now being distracted because they are not in an organized situation, they are in a mob. Therefore they must be separated from the mob before they can matriculate in the course called Dynamics For Disaster.
10. The Lord Jesus Christ must separate positive volition toward doctrine from the crowd or the mob. And separation from the mob is necessary for establishing our Lord's authority for the purpose of academic discipline and the inculcation of the "dynamics for disaster."
11. All believers who advance to maturity must be separated from the mob and its evil influences. Remember, the most precious thing that you have is your thought, the ability to think, your freedom to think. Every believer must make decisions regarding doctrine.

Matthew 8:18 Now when Jesus saw the mob around Him,...

After salvation the great decision is, What do you think of doctrine? Positive volition = advance to maturity; negative volition = first of all you are in the warning discipline, then intensive discipline, and eventually dying discipline - after you have been formed up for a cadre of aggressors to distract other believers: a negative wife, a positive husband; a negative husband, a positive wife; positive children, negative parents, etc. Always the believers who are negative to doctrine are a part of the FTX [field training exercise] system, the aggressors. They are believers; they are going to distract you from doctrine.

Corrected translation: "Now when Jesus saw the mob." And this scene, remember, is an estimate of the situation; it is a personnel reconnaissance situation. He is in their presence because we have next a prepositional phrase: peri [around] plus the accusative singular of autos, an intensive pronoun in the Greek used as a personal pronoun, third person singular, translated very simply, "around him." Jesus must separate believers in that mob from the distraction. To do so He has to give a command, and by giving a command He will establish His authority. Some are going to obey that command and are going to embark in a ship. Others are going to come up with excuses. We will study, for example, the first dropout category, the pseudo intellectual. The pseudo intellectual is always a believer with scar tissue on the soul and the greater the scar tissue the more arrogance builds up. And the more arrogance builds up the more he is impressed with his own thoughts; he is unteachable. He has a "better way," he has an angle, he has something he is going to do. Therefore, arrogant people with scar tissue on the soul are unteachable; they are pseudo intellectuals. They usually have a high IQ but they do not know how to put their thoughts together; they cannot think in terms of principle; they are susceptible to false concepts. Arrogance in the soul resists truth. Therefore you can perceive an outer layer of academic substance but no inner truth. We are going to see that a pseudo intellectual can never stand up to a historical crisis. He has no concentration. He has no common sense.

What are you learning just now? The concentration that it takes for perception and convert it from gnôsis (γνώσις) [pronounced GNOH-sis] doctrine to epignôsis (ἐπίγνωσις) [pronounced ehp-IHG-noh-sis] is the same system for application. If you cannot concentrate in learning you can never apply what you have learned. This is because the system of learning is concentration. Concentration is the way you learn; concentration is the system of application. Perception and application work on the same system, only you reverse the system. In perception the system takes it in; in application the system puts it out. And if you cannot concentrate in church you cannot concentrate in a crisis. And the difference between courage and cowardice is the ability to concentrate, application of what you know.

So our Lord gives a command. Those who obey His authority will also obey His delegated authority which is Bible doctrine. You cannot learn doctrine as a part of a mob. The first key to anything is authority. Authority is the key to freedom; authority is the key to perception; authority is the key to handling crises; authority is the key to being a good lover; authority is the key to everything. And you take authority plus concentration and you have capacity for life where doctrine is involved.

Now that is exactly what we are as a local church. You live out there in the city with the mob, and you have already learned that they can't think. You know what they are going to do in a crisis, everyone running in a panic, screaming, yelling, hysteria, etc. But you have learned to step away and take in doctrine by concentrating in the separated environment of a local church. Privacy is maintained in Berachah Church.

608 12/17/1978 Matthew 8:18b–19a Separate; order; function of evangelist; Sea of Galilee; authority; pseudo–intellectual

So far we have seen the crowd gathering for matriculation in the course in Dynamics For Disaster. We have taken up the various principles related to a mob and seen the distinctions between a mob and those who are under authority in a group.

Application of this Principle

1. The local church takes the believer out of the mob and places him under the environment of authority in establishment to guarantee his privacy as well as his opportunity to learn Bible doctrine and to advance to maturity. This is the purpose of the local church [the classroom that separates you from the mob]. There is no place in the local church for any mob action, like speaking in tongues.

2. The only way to advance to maturity is by inculcation of Bible doctrine. Therefore, there can be no perception of Bible doctrine until one has separated himself from the lawlessness, emotionalism, instability and irrationality of the crowd [mob]. Everything in the mob is a distraction to the very purpose for which we remain in this life, perception of Bible doctrine: the lawlessness of the mob, its influence, everything about it. And no one ever learns doctrine on his own. He learns it in a congregation, a group of people under authority. In this way your privacy, your volition, your self-determination are protected so that you will determine whether you advance or not. No mob scenes or mob action in a church. We determine for ourselves whether to advance or not.
3. It is vitally necessary that you learn to rightly divide the Word of truth, that you learn to distinguish between a mob and a congregation (or business organization, military organization); in fact, a mob and a group of people under some form of discipline or establishment.
4. While the mob is anti-Christ the group of believers in the local church called a congregation are pro-Christ and they are under the delegated authority of the Lord Jesus Christ. The authority is delegated to the pastor-teacher; the authority is delegated to the doctrine; the authority is delegated to whatever administrative functions are necessary within any particular local church. This explains the verse which says: "Let everything be done decently and in order". Closest call is where there is a congregational meeting and everyone thinks they must stand up and say something. No debater's technique like, "It is God's will that..." Robert's Rules of Order is one of the refinements of Anglo-Saxon culture.
 - a. We have seen rabble and scum in this country rise up as mobs.
 - b. Any man in office influenced by a mob is not worthy of the office. He is stupid and a coward.
 - c. Worst actions in the United States are those who give in to mobs.
5. The gift of evangelism is different from witnessing to other people. Every believer is commanded to witness and in that way we call that personal evangelism. But the gift of evangelism is a spiritual gift designed to function outside of the church, and the gift is designed to give the believer who is the evangelist a hearing in front of a mob. The gift of evangelism, then, is designed to get a hearing in a crowd or a mob so that the individuals in that mob will concentrate on the presentation of the Gospel and through the ministry of the Spirit understand the issue.
 - a. A mob has no self-discipline; but a person with this gift can stand up in front of a mob and command their attention.
 - b. An example of Billy Graham. Billy Sunday as well. We have people like this in Berachah Church. They can stand in front of a group of high school students.
 - c. The size of the crowd is a non-issue.
 - d. In the early 50s, they filled Rice stadium. That was because there was a lot of positive volition in that era.

- e. Sometimes an evangelist is accurate and sometimes not.
 - f. The Sicarre who rivaled the Thugs as criminal mobs.
 - g. It is amazing to see an evangelist. Bob does not want anyone criticizing an evangelist. Keep your mouth shut about them.
6. For spiritual growth and glorification of Christ, however, it is necessary to separate believers from that crowd so that they can concentrate on the teaching of doctrine without distraction.
 - a. When Bob first came to Berachah Church in May of 1950. He decided to hustle up a congregation. He spoke anywhere that he was asked. Sometimes, he was asked 3x a day. He had many subjects to speak on, like communist expansion, communist brainwashing techniques. Bob spent two years going all over Houston and all over Texas to give talks. He managed to hustle up a crowd.
 - b. In these talks, Bob was superficial. He was one of the few who knew what took place in the Korean prison camps.
 - c. Being in front of a king cobra; you are fascinated, but you don't shift gears.
 7. The mob is anti-authority and unstable, while the assembly of believers in the local church is amenable to the authority of the communicator and therefore objective. Mobs are subjective. They are irrational and easily set off on a wrong direction. Often a mob turns into rabble at the drop of a word.
 - a. Solzhenitsyn speaking to a graduating class at Harvard. They hissed him. That is a mob.
 8. It becomes necessary, therefore, for our Lord Jesus Christ to make a careful estimate of the situation and to separate the believers who are positive toward doctrine from the negative believers and the unbelievers. This separation is necessary for inculcation.

Matthew 8:18 Now when Jesus saw the mob around Him,...

Jesus first saw the mob then he decided what to do next. Jesus determined what to do to separate those who were positive from those who were negative. He could not simply say, "Those who are positive take one step forward and negative one step backwards."

Bob talks about the weirdness in California Christianity. No privacy.

That is why our Lord gives an order, He "gave commandment to depart unto the other side," the aorist active indicative of the verb keleúō (κελεύω) [pronounced kel-YOO-oh], which means to give orders or give a command, and it is followed by an infinitive which indicates the action involved and to whom it is pertinent. And we are going to translate it: "Now when Jesus saw the mob around him he gave orders" .The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice, Jesus Christ produced the action. He simply said: "Move to the other side." There was a large ship there and by getting those who were positive on a ship they are isolated and under His authority and away from the mob. You must break away from the mob. He can't have Bible class in the mob.

Bob says that this is a ship; a very large boat. Not sure if that is the case. But the idea is, when they enter onto the ship, they become a group and not a mob.

Then we have an aorist active infinitive, aperchomai (ἀπέρχομαι) [pronounced ahp-AIRKH-oh-mai], which means to depart or to go. The aorist tense this time is a culminative aorist, it views the action of the departure in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. Separation from the mob is the result, to where they can matriculate in the course in disaster. There is actually a middle voice but it is active in meaning because it is deponent. And hence this deponent verb. The positive believers produce the action of the verb by separating from the mob. There will be some who will make some attempt to save face. We'll call those "dropouts."

With this we have a prepositional phrase, eis (εἰς) [pronounced ICE] plus an adverb of place, peran (πέραν) [pronounced PER-ahn]. Literally it means "shore" or "land on the other side" but it is an idiom for across the sea or across the lake. The lake refers to the Sea of Galilee.

By His command our Lord is going to separate those who are positive toward doctrine from those who are negative toward doctrine. The command to cross the Sea of Galilee causes a crisis to develop immediately, a crisis demanding decision. This forces people from their own free will, and in the privacy of their souls, to make a decision. Many believers are going to be casualties long before any disaster can occur. These are the believers who are semi-positive, they give lip service to our Lord but they are not consistent enough to separate from a mob in order that they might join a student body. Therefore our Lord's command is a test to eliminate those who cannot endure the crisis or learn from the course. Our Lord's command results again in a real test for a lot of people. We are later going to note three categories of believers who are too weak to ever advance in the Christian life and fulfil the plan of God or ever endure a real historical crisis. They will never have capacity for life or happiness or blessing. They will have no capacity for dying and these three categories represent far too many believers today.

Verses 19-20 - the case of the first distracted disciple. [He represents an entire category.]

In verse 19 you notice something immediately: dedication! sincerity! We begin with the connective use of the conjunction kai. And this conjunction is very important because it means more than "and." It separates those who are going to drop out, those who have excuses, those who are categorical failures, from those who recognize the authority of our Lord Jesus Christ, and make their decisions accordingly. There are authority structures throughout life, like the husband over wives; parents over children. Bob has called in husbands of problem women and has told them, "You get her under control, or you will both be removed from the congregation."

Next we have a nominative singular from an adjective numeral heís, mia, hen (εἷς, μία, ἓν) [pronounced hice, Mee-ah, ehn], meaning "one." But it is used here as an indefinite article, which merely describes an entire category of people. So while only one person represents the category we are talking about one reason many Christians can never live through a crisis. They never survive, never can handle historical disaster.

With this we have the nominative singular subject from the noun grammateus (γραμματεὺς) [pronounced gram-mat-YOOCE], used in the Roman world for a secretary, a clerk, or an administrator in business, but used in the Jewish world and used here for a scholar, a student, "a certain scholar."

We are going to discover that this person was a pseudo intellectual. A pseudo intellectual is a person whose arrogance of the soul is greater than his knowledge. Therefore his arrogance forms a wall around the possibility of ever getting to real truth. He is smart but he has no foundation of doctrine or truth. All of his knowledge, no matter how great the expertise, has no roots in doctrine. He may have great knowledge in one realm, but almost never where he claims intellectual authority.

Now this man has a very high IQ. He is brilliant. He is attracted to Christ because of His intellect; he is impressed with our Lord's great intellect. He is impressed with His ability to debate the Pharisees.

Note: Pseudo intellectuals are always, invariably, liberals. And beneath the veneer of intellectualism is emotional distraction. This is why the liberals are always trying to do good somewhere, why they are bleeding-heart do-gooders, and why they create a vacuum into which socialism and Marxism is sucked. This is why we have so many socialists, so many do-gooders. These people are phonies; they are pseudos. This kind of person never makes it in a crisis.

Lesson #609

609 12/18/1978 Matthew 8:19b Characteristics of pseudo-intellectuals; arrogance; emotional verbal decisions vs. reality; approbation

The great advantage in a disaster is knowing when it is coming. The president of the United States is not the only traitor to this country. Marxist socialism is a vicious satanic evil. There is conditioned thinking and conditioned reflex to accept communist thinking.

What we need is the ability to handle a disaster.

Matthew 8:18 Now when Jesus saw the mob around Him, He gave orders to depart to the other side.

That looks rather simple but we have seen what a mob is. The concept of separating positive believers from those in a mob.

"Now a certain scribe." He is a believer in Jesus Christ; and he hopes to gain something in this. He is impressed by our Lord's delivery and His genius. Above all, he is impressed with himself and with the Lord's ability to gather a crowd.

Scar tissue of the soul builds up pressure which builds up arrogance. Arrogance makes a smart person stupid. There are some very clever women who can out think and out maneuver intelligent men because they are arrogant.

We understand the principles involved with this man. He is a dropout; he represents a category of believers who never make it in the Christian life, even though they wind up in heaven. They fail because they are pseudo intellectuals. A pseudo intellectual cannot survive in an historical crisis. This man is following the Lord and is a part of this mob because he hopes to gain from the association. He hopes to establish himself in some special way. Above all he is impressed with himself, arrogance, and he is impressed with our Lord's ability to gather a crowd. The approbation of the crowd always impresses the arrogant person.

"came and said to him," the aorist active participle of the verb proserchomai (προσέρχομαι) [pronounced pros-ER-khom-ahee]. Prós (πρός) [pronounced pros] means face to face, érchomai (έρχομαι) [pronounced AIR-khoh-my] means to come, and it is perhaps best translated: "having approached." This is the bold approach; this is the arrogant approach. This is the approach of a person who is so arrogant that he thinks his personal problem is more important than anything else in life. These people have no true friends. They have no thoughtfulness of others. Arrogant people are no good unless you can whip the arrogant out of a person and replace that arrogance with discipline.

People have been trained to think that they are the greatest thing in the world. This is the development of the historic destruction of a nation.

"and said" - the aorist active indicative of epô (ἔπω) [pronounced EHP-oh], used to communicate whatever thought happens to be in the mentality of the soul. He is now going to express what is on his mind.

The subtle dative of advantage; what he has to say is important (he thinks); but it is not really that important. To Him is autos.

"Master" - the vocative singular from the noun didaskalos (διδάσκαλος) [pronounced did-AS-kal-oss], teacher. He has used a word for authority, for a teacher, a professor. So he recognizes our Lord's authority in a limited way, academically only. The Scribe is an academic persona and he is speaking as an equal. The other categories of believers who come up are going to use the word kurios (κύριος) [pronounced KOO-ree-oss], for absolute authority and even meaning deity. So he is respectful but he doesn't really accept the authority of the Lord Jesus Christ. He follows what he considers the correct protocol to speak with an equal.

Principle

1. It was convenient for the moment for the pseudo intellectual to recognize limited authority in the Lord Jesus Christ. It is a matter of convenience. Arrogance always thinks of authority in terms of convenience. It may be convenient to have a police man, a company commander, a pastor-teacher; if you have some reason for any of them. But it is not convenient to recognize their authority. Arrogance is disassociated from reality. to the extent that all authority is true establishment authority but a matter of personal convenience. You haven't lived until someone used you and your authority to get what they want.

2. So obviously this was pseudo recognition of our Lord's authority. Pseudo intellectuals are only capable of pseudo recognition. The arrogance of this hypocrite would only allow him to recognize one authority, and that is himself. In his thinking he subordinates all genuine authority to his own arrogance.
3. This person in arrogance assumes that his high IQ, his quickness with words, made him superior to the human race. And, therefore, when arrogance makes this assumption, as inevitably resident arrogance will, the individual as the arrogance increases divorces himself from reality.
4. As is too often the case with smart people, the assumption of superiority over others divorces them from the reality of life and the resultant arrogance gives them inflexibility regarding the nonessentials.
5. This smart believer is extremely self-centered. He assumes that our Lord cannot wait to hear his verbal declaration of loyalty and his dedication to Christ.
6. Arrogance has blinded this smart believer to his real value - nothing.
7. Being smart and having quick perceptive abilities this scribe attaches erroneous importance to his pseudo intellectuality. All Christians who are smart and become pseudo intellectuals inevitably follow rationalism or empiricism as their system of perception. Both systems are hopeless as far as ever learning doctrine is concerned and, therefore, in following such systems and relating them to life, one can never understand doctrine.
8. Again then, his arrogance and self-centeredness has divorced him from reality.
9. Being smart and possessing quick perceptive ability has its occupational hazards: lack of common sense, disorientation to life, arrogance, self-centeredness, a feeling of self-importance, and self-righteousness.
10. When a smart person falls into these occupational hazards he becomes emotionally unstable. It eventuates in neurosis or psychosis. This pseudo intellectual believer is not yet at this stage; he is emotionally unstable, he is arrogant, selfish, etc. and, therefore, he is a slave to how he feels.

There are followers and there are leaders. So it is okay to choose a leader and say, "I will follow you." But that is not what is happening here. What he says have no truth in it at all.

"I will follow you anywhere," the future active indicative of akoloutheō (ἀκολουθέω) [pronounced ak-ol-oo-THEH-oh]. It is a statement from emotional instability; it is not loyalty at all. The predictive future is for an event expected to occur in the immediate future. Jesus has given a command.

Being full of emotion the scribe makes a verbal dedication. Emotion expresses itself through sincerity. Sincerity is not a Christian virtue. It is directly hitched up to your emotion and therefore is no good in a crisis. Sincerity is as meaningless as the emotion which originates it. "you," su.

Principle

1. First, note that this is a dogmatic statement. Not only is this a dogmatic statement but it is an emotional statement. It is a sincere statement and an arrogant statement.
2. The dative case implies that the scribe is doing Jesus a favour by following Him: "I will follow you."
3. The scribe's emotional decision has no meaning. Neither does any other emotional decision; an emotional decision has no spiritual connotation. God the Holy Spirit is not in emotion. If emotion takes over the soul you have no capacity for life, you have no capacity for love, you have no capacity for happiness, and as far as our context is concerned you will never survive historical catastrophe. Emotion will not carry you in anything in life.
4. Verbal dedication means absolutely nothing in the Christian life, for verbal dedication [or overt dedication] merely expresses emotional reversionism or instability.
5. This verbal dedication is comparable to our 20th century dedications such as full-time Christian service, rededication, reaffirmation of faith, surrender to preach, etc.
6. Verbal dedication of all categories are no substitute for positive volition towards Bible teaching, that is the basic decision after salvation.
7. This dedication is based on the fact that Jesus had given the command to depart, and being smart the scribe concluded that Christ was bluffing. Being smart he reasoned: "He's not really going to leave a good thing like this, the thousands of people around on the hillside. They are impressed, they compliment Him, and He is going to leave a good thing like this? He's bluffing." He is impugning our Lord's motivation, he is ascribing to our Lord his own motives.

"whithersoever thou goest" in the King James, but what he really said was an idiom which is a nuance: hopou (ὅπου) [pronounced HOHP-oo] eán (ἐάν) [pronounced eh-AHN] απερχη. Hopou (ὅπου) [pronounced HOHP-oo] is an adverbial particle. It denotes a place, it is an adverb of place, but when you combine it with the next particle eán (ἐάν) [pronounced eh-AHN], then hopou (ὅπου) [pronounced HOHP-oo] plus eán (ἐάν) [pronounced eh-AHN] in the Greek means "wherever" in modern English, like "wherever you go." But the problem is that eán (ἐάν) [pronounced eh-AHN] introduces doubt. Eán (ἐάν) [pronounced eh-AHN] is a particle that introduces a third class condition: "If," maybe you will and maybe you will not. So the idiom "wherever" means "wherever" with a doubt. It should be translated "wherever if you go."

With this, απερχη is the present active subjunctive of aperchomai (ἀπέρχομαι) [pronounced ahp-AIRKH-oh-mai], middle in form, active in meaning. It is a deponent verb]. The present tense is tendencial, used for an action which is purposed but not actually taking place, and with eán (ἐάν) [pronounced eh-AHN], not likely to take place, says this very smart person. The scribe is assuming that our Lord is not going and, therefore, assuming that he has made a safe but impressive dedication, going to cost him nothing. To the scribe the departure of our Lord is a possibility but not a reality.

Now here is the point: People who are divorced from reality can never accept reality. And when reality is disaster they cannot cope. This man will be a dropout.

So the third class condition implies that the scribe has doubts about Jesus leaving the large crowd. And in this the scribe merely takes his own motivations and in arrogance and superimposes them on the Lord Jesus Christ. Instead of getting his motivations from the doctrine taught by our Lord he is superimposing his own motivations on the Lord Himself, and to do that he has to have an umbrella of arrogance.

1977 Romans

Lesson #610

610 12/19/1978 Luke 11:21 Two Fredericks and Prussia: Carthage; gun control; PISTEUOO; pseudo-intellectual vs. reality

We are at the crisis point in the United States. We have always been clear in our thinking. Our understanding of freedom and principles of doctrine, we have been able think. Great thinkers in the reformation. The greatest soldiers in the army of Frederick the Great were those who came from France as persecuted Huguenots. Frederick saw the importance of universal military service. He saw that profit was legitimate; and that the concept of profit was a good thing not to be squelched.

The Huguenots already had the concept of free enterprise.

Small government and big business was key. One of the finest manufacturing systems at the beginning of the industrial revolution. Brandenburg, Prussia was surrounded by many great powers, including Russia, the French, etc. They all put little central Europe into a squeeze. The son heads off and Frederick William put the young man into the military. He just needed that discipline of the military. And he was a genius. He became a true genius in battle and in governing. He took the whole concept and realized that with one system of thought, he could turn the world upside down. Discipline and doctrine were key. He used his own genius and innovated. People were encouraged to have a relationship with Jesus Christ and with the laws of divine establishment.

He saw a great coal mind and he decided to do something about that coal mine. He just had to keep his ear to the ground. Austria and France were dividing up Silesia. He took his troops in and said, "This belongs to Prussia." He had to fight on interior lines.

He used the oblique order of battle and put Austria back about a year. The French then moved in. Then he heard that the Russians were at their back door at Berlin. 17,000 men he defeated 55,000 Russians. He killed about 27000. This began the 7th years war, known here as the French and Indian war.

We have enough energy to last a few hundred years. One of the sure signs of idiocy is being a part of a government bureau.

The army today is used as an experiment in sociology. We are now 2nd rate all the way through. Russia has great biological weapons. We are in trouble in every possible way. We have the answer and we will see the way to turn things around.

Revolution adds wrong to wrong. We did not begin with a revolution but with a war for independence. We have had two wars for independence.

Frederick the Great departed from the scene by winning the Seven Years' War. He saw a unified Germany and he passed this along to Bismark. The great problem in Europe was balance of power. The unification of Germany

Now there is another thought abroad called communism. Marx incorporated many concepts to form communism. It is a thought that man is just an animal and there is no reality in spiritual things. This is destroying us. The only thing that stops communism in its tracks is Bible doctrine.

Pseudo Intellectual vs Reality

Gun control: We have to go back to the principle of freedom as defined in the Word of God. Freedom includes the principle of privacy. You do not have freedom unless you have privacy. There is also the principle of property and the umbrella of authority and all of these are a part of freedom.

Now, if I decide that I want to own a gun I have the right to go and purchase a gun without anyone registering it. It is a matter of privacy; I am a law-abiding citizen. And so the fact that they tell me that I must sign papers and show my driver's licence is a violation of my freedom by the Government, which becomes at this point evil government. The gun that I now possess is my property, I have a right to keep it, I have a right to do anything I like with it provided, of course, I do not violate common law.

My possession of a weapon gives me authority to protect my own property and to protect my own privacy. So owning a gun is something that everyone should have as a matter of principle. The next principle is that not only should everyone in America own guns but they should know how to use them. This is a deterrent to crime. The principle is that a disarmed citizenry is a helpless citizenry. So a gun is one of the systems for freedom.

Killing, of course, a matter of volition of the soul, like any sin. Weapons are not the system of volition, it is what you have in the soul. People kill other people because they have free will and they decide to do it. The old sin nature cannot be legislated against and you cannot stop crime and violence by passing laws against the means employed, whether they are guns, knives, ice picks or whatever. There are always those under the influence of evil who feel that the private citizen has no business with weapons.

Carthaginians versus the Romans. Through a number of things which took place, Rome got Carthaginian to give up their weapons. This was a one-time agreement. They did. There are apparently lengthy records of all the weapons given to Rome. Once that was done, Rome told them that they were going to destroy Carthage. The Romans went on a bender and the Carthaginians did everything possible to make weapons. As a result, they held off the Romans for 4 years before being beat.

Luke 11:21 When a strong man, fully armed, guards his house, his possessions are secure. (BSB)

Luke 11:21 - "When a strong man," hótan (ὅταν) [pronounced HOH-tan], "when," used for a condition which is conditional, possible, and which is repeated many times in history and which has occurred before. So it is a general situation that occurs in every generation. And then we have the nominative singular ischuros (ἰσχυρός) [pronounced is-khoo-ROSS], which does not mean a strong man with muscle. It means a strong man with his mind, a person who can concentrate and think under disaster conditions, a person who has common sense and alertness. With this we have the nominative masculine singular of the definite article used as a demonstrative pronoun to place great emphasis on the fact that certain people have the ability and certain people acquire the ability to think. So that from moral courage comes the ability to handle any disaster situation. The corrected translation: "Whenever that strong person . "

The next word is a perfect passive participle from the verb kathoplízō (καθοπλίζω) [pronounced kath-op-LIHD-zoh], to be armed, to possess weapons. A well-armed person can use his equipment in a disaster. The passive voice, the strong person with common sense, with doctrine resident in the soul, receives the action of the verb - being prepared for violence, for crime, for attack. The participle is a temporal participle meaning after he has been completely armed. But this word "completely armed" means he not only has a weapon but he knows how to use it. Having a weapon and not knowing how to use it is not having a weapon at all. That is the principle here.

Then it goes on to say "keepeth," the present active subjunctive of the word phulassō (φυλάσσω) [pronounced foo-LAHS-soh], to guard and to defend "his own home."

Luke 11:21 Whenever that strong person has been completely armed he guards his own home. Therefore his possessions and his loved ones remain undisturbed.

The Word of God itself demands that you have two things that must be co-ordinated for a crisis. First of all you must have doctrine resident in the soul and, secondly, weaponry of some sort to face the crisis. And you combine these and you have effectiveness.

Matthew 8:18 Now when Jesus saw the mob around Him, He gave orders to depart to the other side.

Matthew 8:18 - When Jesus saw the mob around Him He knew that He had to separate. There is always the principle of separating for learning.

Bob was tested for going behind enemy lines and had to say some Greek sentences, but he mispronounced pistuô. All of those who went on this mission were caught and executed.

Verse 19, the pseudo intellectual. He wants to exploit this very large crowd. A man there assumes that Jesus wants this approbation just as he does.

Principle

1. By use of the third class condition "if you go" the scribe not only doubts the departure of Jesus but he impugns His motivation.
2. Being arrogant and self-righteous the scribe, who is a scholar, thinks of success in terms of a large crowd. To him it is always numbers, numbers, numbers. He desires the approbation of the crowd.
3. If the situation were reversed and the scribe had the large crowd following him he would remain in his place of approbation and comfort.
4. Therefore, he would never cross the lake to a set of uncertain and unknown circumstances. The scribe, then, is the type of believer who looks at life from the human viewpoint because he has no interest in doctrine and his driving motivation is to push himself. He wants approbation and recognition.
5. The scribe will follow Jesus as far as the ship. But when he discovers that Jesus has no hotel reservations, no estate on the other side, no invitation from some affluent person, he is going to decline. In other words, he is a believer in Jesus Christ who will be in heaven, but in the meantime he is a failure for any catastrophe, personal or historical crisis. He follows the Lord as long as it does not interfere with his personal comfort.

Without doctrine the scribe has neither integrity nor moral courage to venture out into the unknown circumstances of a ship on dangerous seas and in uncertain conditions.

Pseudo intellectuals are always sincere, always emotional, and they are always impulsive. "I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest" was an impulsive statement. Emotion produces impulsive action and we must get away from impulsive action into rational action, meaningful action, action based upon the application of doctrine to experience. So emotion and arrogance in the soul produce sincere dedication and emotion produces impulsiveness. [There is nothing wrong with emotion but we must use our emotion properly. It must be subordinated to our right lobe]

Conclusion

1. This disciple was precipitant instead of perceptive.
2. He was emotional, sincere, overtly dedicated, enthusiastic, impulsive, and a total failure.
3. This category of believer cannot even face historical disaster. As our Lord's answer in the next verse reveals, the pseudo intellectual is totally divorced from reality and he cannot even face the most superficial type of testing which is uncertainty. If you cannot face uncertainty you cannot face disaster.

4. So this believer has substituted emotion, enthusiasm, sincerity, dedication, and impulsiveness for true motivation from doctrine resident in the soul.

There is no substitute, then, for doctrine resident in the soul. Every day is a day of preparation for disaster and suffering. Every day is a God-given opportunity to learn more doctrine which alone carries us in disaster. This believer is too shallow, too smart, too arrogant to get into the boat. His superficialities will insulate him against the rigours of the journey. So the scribe perfectly represents smart, shallow, sincere, superficial believers. They always fade in normal circumstances. Therefore they never face the abnormal circumstances of life.

Now the answer in verse 20 is a very simple answer and yet it is a very complex answer.

1977 Romans

Lesson #611

611 12/20/1978 Job 5:19–27 Napoleon and Austerlitz; plan of God; types of disaster; Bible doctrine in Prussia; dying grace; counseling

A citation for a Captain Arlo Olsen from South Dakota. Pretty amazing. It is only because of the military that there is any freedom.

The military is persona non grata among our politicians.

Napoleon vs. the Russians. Napoleon pretended to be afraid and Russia moved against him. Napoleon had a small army on interior lines, and he just had to wait in attack at the right time.

There was a problem with his brother, who got himself into a jam. His brother died in all of this. They sealed his brother in a barrel of rum and sent him back to Paris. I think that this was Moreland, the general involved. It was about 20 years later when keg broke open at a medical school. His handlebar mustache had grown down to his waist. His body was actually kept in a library of someone.

In Berachah, it is a tradition for someone on leave to wear his uniform on his first day back. This is the true symbol of our freedom.

If you can establish the fact that you are a member of the human race, then God has a plan for your life. It is imperative to know that you can choose. No one should be under any compulsion with regards to Berachah Church. It is frowned upon to pretend to fall asleep and fall into the lap of an attractive female next to you.

No one is too liberal, no one is too conservative, etc.; God has a plan for your life. Only actuality is fed into the divine decrees.

[X] + [Y] + [Z] = the plan of God

If you are a member of the human race God has a plan for your life. It is imperative that you understand that you do not have to accept God's plan. We are dealing with a pseudo intellectual. He has made a decision and he has believed in the Lord Jesus Christ. He will be in heaven no matter how he fails, how he succeeds or anything else. The justice of God imputes to man certain things which set him up for the plan of God but leave it open to his volition. Human life is imputed at birth to the soul; Adam's original sin is imputed at birth to its target, the old sin nature. Man is born physically alive and spiritually dead. This sets up condemnation which immediately sets up a potential - salvation. God does not condemn without giving you an opportunity to use your volition apart from human merit in order to break out of the problem. We call that simply X radical, human life imputed at birth plus Adam's original sin equals the first potential. This potential is based upon the second imputation, the fact that we are condemned by the imputation of Adam's sin is indicative of the fact that we have the potentiality of salvation, potential plus information which we call doctrine. The doctrine in this case is the Gospel. This equals the first hope, absolute confidence that when we believe in the Lord Jesus Christ we have eternal life. The hope is replaced by reality when we believe in Christ. We call that salvation adjustment to the justice of God through faith in Jesus Christ.

Now there is some momentum in the plan of God. We have advanced to the point of believing in Christ. The moment we believe in Christ there are two imputations which are included in the plan of God. One of these is our second imputation in Y radical, judicial imputation number one, all personal sins are imputed to Christ on the cross and judged - the saving work of Christ. Judicial imputation number two, the imputation of divine righteousness to the believer at the moment of salvation. And this second imputation leads to a second potential, the imputation of blessing in time which glorifies God, the tactical victory of the angelic conflict, plus the pertinent doctrine which reads us into the picture, equals the second hope, absolute confidence that when we advance to maturity through the perception of doctrine we will receive from the justice of God divine blessing, plus maturity adjustment to the justice of God through maximum doctrine resident in the soul.

That brings us to Z radical which is the place where we have the mature believer. Z radical, the imputation of eternal life at salvation plus the imputation of blessing in time equals the third potential, the potential for great blessing and reward in eternity. Plus pertinent doctrine equals the third hope, absolute confidence that when we attain maturity and receive the six categories of blessing in time, these are merely a prelude, a guarantee of greater rewards and blessings in eternity. This equals the plan of God.

God has a plan for each one and some people peel off, they never get out of X radical. Some peel off at Y radical and some people never get out of Z radical. The objective is to take in doctrine and reach Z radical. Z radical has the solution to every disaster and catastrophe of life. There is no solution in X radical. In Y radical the challenge is doctrine, in Z radical the challenge is life itself; you have capacity for life, capacity for blessing, capacity for anything that life has to offer and you have achieved the point of tactical victory.

Now before we get rid of the first dropout let's see what could have happened had he persisted and got into the ship, had he embarked across the sea, had he been a plugger. It isn't the smart people, it isn't the talented people who make it in life. It is the people who plug, and when I say plug I mean self-discipline today, tomorrow, the next day no matter what distractions may come your way. To understand the objective and to move toward the objective is what counts.

Many smart people flunk out in college for a variety of reasons. Those who kept plugging, not being distracted, those were the ones who made it.

Job 5:19-27

God has a plan for your life and God's plan includes the ability to handle any form of disaster. See Job 5:19 - Here is a man who has reached Z radical. What kind of a life does a believer have who attains maturity?

Verse 19 - "In six troubles he will deliver you," the hiphil imperfect of the verb nâtsal (נָצַל) [pronounced naw-TSAHL]. This does not mean deliverance such as delivering a nation from attack but it means to rescue under a short term pressure situation. And the rescue is caused by thinking, concentration under pressure. The hiphil stem says that you simply pull out the doctrine that you have and utilize it. "Six troubles," there are six categories of blessing and there are six categories of trouble.

"Furthermore, in seven," now we are intensifying the problem, "evil will not touch you," the qal imperfect of the verb nâga (נָגַע) [pronounced naw-GAHG]. Now we have something which can reach into your soul. It isn't the person who can destroy your body it is the person who can influence your soul. And so the word "touch" is used because unless you are insulated with Bible doctrine something is going to get to your soul - some form of satanic activity. Kosmos diabolicus offers many enticing ideas that are completely and totally off-base and an attack on freedom.

The believer who goes all the way with doctrine is going to wind up facing not only troubles but disaster. That is number seven, evil.

The word for evil is ra (רָע) [pronounced rahg] in the Hebrew. Evil includes four great disasters. Economic is the first, military is the second, social is the third and dying is the fourth. This is the proper rational sequence. In order to live there must be some form of economic function whereby one can get a job, whereby one can achieve, whereby one can become wealthy and prosperous without government interference and without intrusion. Next comes the military. Once you have a little prosperity you need to protect it; someone else wants it. So it is the military that protects it. This protection ensures social life. And then comes dying and we are all going to die! If you live by doctrine you will die by doctrine and the dying will be the icing on the cake, it will be greater than anything you ever had in life. Disaster is God's opportunity to demonstrate His grace.

Verse 20 - "In famine," economic disaster, "he will preserve you from death," the qal perfect of pādâh (פָּדָה) [pronounced paw-DAWH], the action was completed in eternity past. Pādâh (פָּדָה) [pronounced paw-DAWH] in the perfect tense means that billions and billions of years ago in eternity past God knew every problem you would ever have and at that time He provided the solution. So that when you get into a disaster the mature believer is preserved; "in war from the power of the sword." This is a reference to military disaster.

Verse 21 - Social disaster. What is social disaster? The worst of all sins. "You will be hidden from the scourge of the tongue." That is social disaster. The worst thing that can happen in any group in society is gossip, maligning, judging. Live and let live is the principle of doctrine, it is a part of freedom. Everyone has a right to their privacy. Therefore, gossip is one of the greatest of all evils, it is a sin parlayed into evil. So when social disaster is mentioned the worst thing that can happen is to be a victim of gossip, maligning, judging, etc.; "you will be hidden" is the Niphal imperfect from châbâ' (חָבַא) [pronounced khaw^b-VAW]. Passive voice, you receive protection from the scourge and the biting of the tongue.

"Neither will you be afraid." The qal imperfect of yâê' (אָרַי) [pronounced yaw-RAY] does not mean to have a nervous system tensed up getting ready for something. Fear is something entirely different, it is failure to orient to a situation with principles, failure to think under pressure, failure to fulfil some system of protocol whether physical or mental under pressure. Courage is always the ability to think, the ability to react, the ability to do something rather than freezing; "of destruction" is shôd (שׁוֹד or שָׁד) [pronounced shohd], violent death, terrible death, painful death, something that hurts, something you have to do all by yourself. [Death is a summary of your life. There is marvelous peace and strength to those who have doctrine resident in the soul]

Verse 22 - Therefore when it comes "you will laugh," the qal imperfect of sâchaq (שָׁחַק) [pronounced saw-KHAK]. This isn't hysteria or snickering. This is a relaxed laugh, a sense of humour, application of doctrine; "from wild animals of the earth." In Job's time wild animals were a common cause of death. In the 20th century wild animals might be cars, planes, nuclear weapons, mixed up people, bugs, or whatever. In all of these things you have nothing to fear, maximum adjustment to the justice of God removes fear regarding many of the instruments of death. The Romans could fire these stones 200 yards and hit their target.

Verse 23 - "For your covenant will be with the stones of the field." This is a reference to weapons of destruction. Stones were used as ancient artillery. "the beasts of the field," the wild animals, the instrument of death; "will be at piece with you." We have that wall of fire until the Lord decides to take us home. No instrument of death can remove the mature believer from this life. Only the integrity of God can transfer him from earth to heaven. Once the Lord calls a believer home all the power and ability of this world cannot retain him in this life. The believer, however, cannot die until the Lord is ready to take him home. This knocks out having no capacity for life. Death is off the table until God has determined that it will happen.

Verse 24 - "Therefore you will know." That is what it is all about. This is something that is completed before you hit death. You already have the information, you already have the capacity for dying well; "your tent," that is, your human body. Not "in peace." The word shâlôwm (שְׁלוֹמ) [pronounced shaw-LOHM] here means a state of prosperity. This is the believer in Z radical who has all of the prosperities of life - dying grace; "you will visit your home" - heaven. The word for "visit" is pâqad (פָּקַד) [pronounced paw-KAHD] and it means a visit that you anticipate with great pleasure.

Verse 25 - If you crack the maturity barrier you leave behind a great heritage for those who love you. All of your loved ones are beneficiaries by your death. "And you will know that your seed will be many and your offspring like the shoots of the field." This is not quite correct because it means here blessing and prosperity by association. The only prosperity, the only promotion, the only success some people are ever going to have is going to come from the fact that they were associated with a mature believer. The mature believer dies and his wife or her husband, the parents, the children, the loved ones the friends, the family, are blessed by association.

Verse 26 - "You will come in a full age," the qal imperfect of bôw' (בֹּא) [pronounced boh] "like a shock of corn comes in its season," the farmer is the expert. Corn does not all ripen at the same time and therefore they didn't pick it all at the same time but waited until it ripened. So there is a right time and a wrong time to pick corn which the expert must determine. God is the expert. He must decide when it is time to depart from this life and by what manner we should die. This means the "full age" isn't a long life; full age is the believer who reaches maturity. The full age is the believer in Z radical.

Verse 27 - "Behold this doctrine, we have researched it," the qal perfect from châqar (חָקַר) [pronounced khaw-KAHR] which means not only to have the principle but to have also gathered the experience; "this is the gist of it, Hear it," a command. Get the information into your soul, concentrate, understand what is being said. Then you decide what you are going to do with it; "know it for yourself," that is what makes you spiritually self-sustaining. That means that every time you get into a jamb you don't run to someone. You reach into your soul and pull out the doctrinal resources of your own soul and use them. "KNOW IT FOR YOURSELF."

Lesson #612

612 12/21/1978 Matthew 8:20a Solzhenitsyn; freedom vs. equality; doctrine of the fox distraction; human security vs. doctrine

We are getting close to a national disaster. Solzhenitsyn spoke about courage going down. He was banished from his homeland for speaking out against communism. The next war, which does not have to be an atomic one, may bury western european civilization forever. He said that Americans have been paralyzed by materialism and they are unwilling to die for their country. His speech drew hisses and scattered boos. He said the US has lost its nerve in fighting communism. Members of the antiwar movement wound up being involved in the betrayal of the United States. Suffering imposed upon 30 million people. Do they not hear the moans coming from there? The intelligentsia has lost its nerve, how can the west stand firm against China or Russia? Systematic massacre of Cambodia and a third of the world is enslaved to communism. To defend oneself, one must be ready to die. Solzhenitsyn castigated nearly every democratic institution. The lack of courage is perhaps the greatest phenomenon.

Carter is a believer and a reversionist. We are studying vv. 18–27. Those who cannot handle the disaster. Jesus is on the edge of the sea of Tiberius. 7 miles wide and 14 miles in length and subject to some horrendous storms. Even in modern times, there have been force 12 storms there.

Mobs are fickle, incapable of thought, and always vulnerable to evil. Approbation from a crowd destroys a person's character. The crowd destroys human freedom by intruding into privacy, disrespecting authority. Any person who is a part of a mob is subject to the worst behavior. It is time to get the believers out of the crowd.

Jesus looked over the people and gives a command. There must be a separation from the irrationality of the mob. The people in Berachah are not a mob but separated from the mob.

The scribe is a scholar who never advances in the spiritual life. They are a basic system designed to separate us from Bible doctrine. They might be family or friends and they are kept alive to test you. The scribe is the pseudo intellectual of the 20th century. He was attracted to Christ because of his great mentality. The scribe saw this.

The pseudo-intellectual today is always a liberal. When frustrated in any way, like losing an election, they become quite frustrated. The scribe sees how people were attracted to the Lord. He addresses the Lord as professor. He uses professor rather than lord. This man is himself a professor; and by this, he calls himself equal to the Lord. The liberal is very self righteous.

Matthew 8:19 And a certain scribe came up and said to Him, "Professor, I will follow You wherever if You go."

Arrogance and emotion are the source of his sincerity and instability. Verbal dedication means nothing in the Christian life. This reveals emotional reversionism.

Reaffirmation of faith is blasphemy and idiocy. One shot dedication to the teaching ministry is blasphemous. No one tells a pastor what to do. He is the top dog according to the Scripture.

The pseudo intellectual is a casualty before the battle begins.

Matthew 8:20 And Jesus said to him, "Foxes have holes, and birds of the air have nests, but the Son of Man has nowhere to lay His head." (ESV; capitalized)

Freedom is live and let live. It is self-determination. This is exemption from arbitrary control. It is also related and integrated with privacy. Privacy is the environment for freedom. Property is a part of freedom. Owning things is a sign of freedom.

Jesus has infinite authority over this man. This man is a pseudo-intellectual who thinks that he is equal to the Lord.

Bob was at Berachah for another hour or so; and someone stole his hubcaps. There is the umbrella of authority. Freedom and equality cannot coexist.

Freedom

1. Freedom is no guarantee of equality. In fact, freedom produces inequality. With freedom, you have self-determination. You can progress or retrogress.
2. Some use freedom to advance and some use it to retrogress.
3. Freedom is the reality; equality is a myth.
4. Freedom does not guarantee equality. The function of freedom guarantee inequality.
5. Equality is the device of the arrogant, the disoriented, the sociopath.
6. Forced equality is tyranny. This is the policy of tyrants. Socialism; the welfare state, gun legislation. Anti-military, anti-freedom.
7. Freedom in the human race is designed to resolve the angelic conflict.
8. Freedom is flexible with the nonessentials of life. It does not persecute a person for their erroneous opinions. People have a right to their opinions. Freedom is inflexible with the essentials of life. Socialism is the destruction of freedom. Fabianism, Marxism are enemies of freedom.
9. Therefore freedom is common sense and orientation to reality. That means the privacy of believers in church. Respect for privacy and property. Property is inviolate.
10. Freedom must have content of thought, and that content is Bible doctrine. This scribe will not matriculate in the course. They think they have all the answers when they in fact have none.

There are a lot of weak sisters running about. This man will always be a superficial intellectual. He was a casualty. Too many believers like this scribe.

And the Jesus said...

This pseudo-intellectual will come right up to truth and reject it. When Jesus answers this intellectual, He will talk about foxes and birds.

The fox from the viewpoint of horse is a beautiful sight. The fox has something that every pseudo-intellectual needs. A customary present. The fox never builds his own house. He always steals someone else's house. The pseudo-intellectual does not build his own system; he uses someone else's system to advance himself. College professors enjoy the freedom that our forefathers planned and has been preserved by the military; but they use this freedom is used to steal. The fox is crafty. Only one smarter canine; the coyote. The fox steals another's hole. The fox has a phôleos (φωλεός) [pronounced foe-leh-OSS]. Gophers and prairie dogs have holes; but foxes don't have holes. It does mean a den or a lair. It also means a burrow. We have built a great system and everyone wants it. They think by taking something from is, that they will inherit our great wealth. But that is not where the prosperity comes from. It comes from freedom.

The Fox Has its Burrow

1. In our Lord's day, the fox differs from most canine types. The fox like the badger's home. The badger can force a fox out. The fox is a thief.
2. The fox is regarded here as insignificant. Jesus is comparing this scribe to a fox. This man will never accept truth unless he realizes his own insignificance; but he won't because he is arrogant. Even the fox has a shelter. He steals it but he has it. This man is an intellectual and he has a home. He is a con artist in the field of ideas. They distract from freedom.
3. Even though the fox is small; he has a shelter that he has gained by being smarter than other animals. He has someone else build the burrow and then he steals it. We have an immoral government today that is stealing from free enterprise. The goose is dying and no more golden eggs.
4. The scribe would like to be pious; would like to be regarded as spiritual. He clings to human security. Jesus is comparing Himself to nothing as He has no den, no lair. He did not steal one from someone else.
5. When there is a conflict between human security and freedom, he switches from intellectualism to emotion.
6. He is negative toward doctrine and distracted from the plan of God.
7. Emotion gives no strength for the crisis. If Jesus cannot offer more security than a fox, than the scribe becomes distracted. The scribe has a low opinion of the fox. Because survival and security are related, the scribes becomes emotionally unstable.

The Doctrine of the Fox Distraction

1. Emotional fervor is not equivalent to following Jesus Christ. This man loses his motivation.
2. This born again believer though a scholar a student and a professor, has failed to distinguish between security and the plan of God and human security. True security is freedom to learn doctrine.
3. Emotion destroys moral courage. Emotional revolt destroys moral courage. This man makes the wrong decision. He will not get on the ship.

4. Emotion puts blessing before doctrine; the plan of God places doctrine before blessing.
5. Furthermore the believer's emotions are never functioning properly until doctrine comes first.
6. The analogy between our Lord and the fox will turn away the scribe. The analogy is between the scribe and the fox. Jesus compares the scribe to the fox in terms of the weakness. Our Lord's strength is in His freedom; and the scribes strength is in stealing ideas and approbation. The scribe is the fox as a stealer of lairs or dens. The Lord is free and has none of the accoutrements of society's security. The scribe has the bad characteristics of the fox. The scribe's emotional state will keep him from passing the security test. You will never make it in an historical crisis.

This Doctrine was already recorded and organized, so that is placed below:

Doctrine of the Fox Distraction

- A. This doctrine is taken from Matthew 8:18-20. "Now when Jesus saw a crowd around Him, He gave orders to depart to the other side. And a certain scribe came and said to Him, 'Teacher, I will follow You wherever You go.' And Jesus said to him, 'The foxes have holes [dens], and the birds of the air have nests; but the Son of Man has nowhere to lay His head.'" (NASV)
 1. Our Lord's first command to depart is tantamount to the acceptance of doctrine.
 2. This believer, though a student, has failed to distinguish between the security of the plan of God and human security. True security is freedom to learn doctrine.
- B. The analogy between our Lord and the fox will turn away the scribe, whose emotional zeal is meaningless in facing the small distraction called the security test. The analogy is really between the scribe and the fox.
 1. The Lord compares the scribe to the fox in terms of weakness.
 2. He compares the fox and Himself in terms of strength. Our Lord's strength is in His freedom.
 3. The pseudo intellectual's strength is in his ability to steal.
 4. Our Lord is not as good as a fox because He is free and has none of the accouterments of society's human security. So He shows the scribe he has the bad characteristics of the fox.
 5. By making Himself lower than the fox, our Lord is in fact greater than the fox. Because, no matter how low you are, if you have freedom, you're great.
- C. Emotional fervor and good intention is not equivalent to following Christ or advancing in the plan of God.
 1. Emotion destroys moral courage. Therefore, this believer will make the wrong decision.
 2. Emotion puts blessing before doctrine. The plan of God puts doctrine before blessing.

3. A believer's emotions are never functioning properly until doctrine comes first.

D. Security consciousness and spurious emotion hinder learning and believing the Word of God.

1. The scribe chooses security rather than freedom.

2. When you choose freedom, you are positive to doctrine. Freedom motivates you to fight and die for your country.

3. Security motivates a person to demonstrate against the war to save himself. Security motivates cowardice. All pseudo intellectuals are cowards. The scribe has no concept of freedom.

4. Freedom keeps your motivation pure. Spurious emotion divorces you from reality.

5. Abnormal times take away your freedom.

E. So the fox distraction refers to negative volition based on living by your emotion and being distracted by human security.

A person who wants to preserve only what he has is not a true conservative.

Matthew 8:20a And Jesus replied to him, "Foxes have burrows [lairs, dens],...

Lesson #613

613 12/22/1978 Matthew 8:20b Human security vs. Bible doctrine; concentration and motivation; principle of the bird distraction

Some of these notes were out of order under Dynamics for Disaster. Right now, it appears to be 3 or 4 pages (which are placed in order in the notes below).

Just around the corner is a good old fashioned disaster. The stands up under disaster and what fails under pressure.

The pseudo-intellectual always goes into different kinds of information, but he has no root in the truth. He goes from rational to emotional.

Matthew 8:18 Now when Jesus saw the mob around Him, He gave orders to depart to the other side.

Matthew 8:19 Now a certain scribe approached and said to Him, "Professor, I will follow You wherever You go."

Matthew 8:20 And Jesus replied to him, "Foxes have burrows [lairs, dens], and birds of the air have roosting places, but the Son of Man has no place where He may recline His head.

A view of the fox distraction. When he gets into the ship to follow Jesus, that will be moving toward ἐπίγνωσις. We must cultivate self-discipline.

The noun kataskênôsis (κατασκήνωσις) [pronounced kaht-as-KAY-noh-sis], which means, a tent, a roost, a dwelling place, a nest. Birds stay in a variety of places. Jesus is drawing a comparison between the scribe and the animals. The fox is smart; and the scribe is smart. But he cannot deal with a catastrophe unless he has doctrine. Unbelievers can deal with catastrophes if they have some understanding of divine establishment thinking.

Bob has heard some people saying that they are giving up on patriotism because of things which have happened. These are people with no roots in doctrine. The fox has a lair or den which some other creature built. He does not have a place if there is a stronger or craftier animal around. The most insecure people are those who depend upon human security. Take away a person's human security and they are shot down. People are running around trying to be secure. Our best preparation for disaster are the inner resources for Bible doctrine. When you are distracted by the season and for your concentration is gone. It is concentration on doctrine that makes preservation possible. You need some concentration.

Doug Johnson called Bob and thanked those responsible for getting Colonel Cooper down to Berachah. Learning what to do is great; but if there is pressure, you can sometimes lose those steps. Colonel Cooper is far ahead of anyone in his realm.

The believer in condition white is like a smart unbeliever. Such a person is a casualty before it starts.

Captain Sijohn. They named a hall for him and he has been posthumously been awarded the medal of honor. Fear is a lack of concentration. Every person with imagination can create conditions where he has fear. A reaction of the nervous system is not fear; not being able to concentrate is fear. Courage is a soldier who knows how to use his weapon, no matter what is taking place around him.

We have studied this pseudo-intellectual and his arrogance. His arrogance produces the instability and disaster which is about him.

We went into a no-win war and were influenced by the pseudo-intellectual hippies

The justice of God gives us additional security by condemning us from birth. That is security. It means if we die before reaching accountability, that we are saved. Or if you are unable to get to the point of accountability.

Human security vs Bible Doctrine; Concentration; Principle/the bird distraction

"and the birds of the air have nests." We have again the connective use of the conjunction kai indicating that one part of the animal kingdom is not enough to describe the failure of this particular person. We have the nominative plural subject from peteinon (πετεινόν)

[pronounced peht-i-NON], a bird which is not as powerful or not as strong, or cannot contend on the ground with animals, but who by virtue of having wings is in a position of security from those who move along the ground, like the fox. He is therefore called under the descriptive genitive of ouranos (οὐρανός) [pronounced oo-ran-OSS], the birds of the heavens or the skies. We have the accusative plural direct object from the noun kataskênôsis (κατασκήνωσις) [pronounced kaht-as-KAY-noh-sis], a tent, a roost, a dwelling place.

It appears that Jesus is now making an analogy between the emotional and impulsive scribe and the two animals involved here. The fox is clever, so is the scribe. The fox is a smart animal and so is the scribe. But being smart and having no contact with truth makes you unstable smart, emotional smart; and the smart person is never able to cope with the reality of a catastrophe unless he has roots in doctrine, roots in truth. Unbelievers can cope with disaster provided they know some establishment truth. That gives them patriotism. The fox has a lair, a den, or a burrow which he has stolen. He doesn't build his own. He is so smart that he can acquire it from others; so is the scribe. The fox in the lair has what he calls security but security is never security as long as some more powerful creature or craftier is around. Human security, then, is challenged daily and human security proves insecurity. Those who depend on human security are always insecure and they are inflexible regarding the nonessential. Human security is a nonessential. If you are a believer in Jesus Christ human security is totally nonessential. A disaster always removes human security. The best preparation for disaster are the inner resources of Bible doctrine in your soul. That is what counts. But you are not going to learn doctrine this holiday because you are too busy doing your bit; too excited about your social life and things you are doing. And when you are distracted by the season and from concentrating on doctrine you are not prepared for anything. Your security as a human being comes from what you have in the soul, not what you have in the bank, not what you possess in any situation. By the way, courage is concentration on inner resources. Human security is a distraction from gutting-it-out from doctrine, plugging, concentrating on the intake. The same concentrator is also used on the output - application. The only real security for you and for me is in the plan of God - X+Y+Z. That is all the security you need. The secret to security is the secret to life, what you have in your soul.

"and the birds of the air have roosting places"

The Principle of the Bird Distraction

1. While the fox is analogous to the cleverness of the scribe the bird illustrates his prominence, wealth and success. The scribe is smart, he is a pseudo intellectual, he has a high IQ, he is brilliant. So the fox illustrates that side of the scribe. The bird illustrates his human security; his prominence, his wealth, his position. The scribe is a wealthy man, a successful man.
2. The Bible must be interpreted in the time in which it is written. This is a basic principle of hermeneutics. This was written before the invention of the shotgun, which has destroyed bird security!

3. The bird in the atmosphere was much safer than the fox on the ground and the nest of the bird offered more security than the den or the lair of the fox. The original owner might return and defeat the fox.
4. The bird, then, represents the wealth, the success, the fame, the approbation; in summary, the human security which belonged to the scribe.
5. The scribe is famous, wealthy, secure in his success, and he was not inclined to leave his place of for the unknown circumstances and discomfort across the sea. He was a dropout, he did not matriculate in the course on disaster dynamics.
6. Although the scribe is clever like the fox and secure like the bird in the air, he still is depending upon straws. He has no foundation of rock, it is all sand. And he represents to us in this study the believer in the Lord Jesus Christ who will not depart from conventional comforts of society for the unseen benefits of growth in grace through the perception of doctrine. It is too inconvenient to come to Bible class with any consistency. It is difficult every day to be wide awake and alert. There is one thing that you have to learn sooner or later: the secret to success in learning Bible doctrine is consistency. Like body-building, do it every day.
7. A believer who clings tenaciously to the visible, conventional pleasures of life and security and refuses doctrine which provides the very meaning and purpose of blessing and happiness, never passes the crisis test.
8. The believer who clings to the conventional accoutrements of success and happiness is never prepared for historical crisis and disaster. Such a believer discovers too late that everything he has associated from happiness is taken from him; everything he associates with security. That is a part of the disaster. Therefore, with everything gone he collapses, he moves into panic palace, he is in hysteria and he usually dies horribly and miserably without ever finding out the true meaning of life - X+Y+Z. That is the bird distraction.

"but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head." we have had a series of kais, now all of a sudden we go to de, "but." The post positive conjunctive particle de is used to connect two clauses in contrast; the contrast between our Lord and the scribe. The scribe: all human security; the Lord Jesus Christ: all security based upon thought, doctrine in the soul. And the true issue is not having a place to lay your head but having something in your head when you lay your head down. It isn't where the head is located, on a pillow or on a stone, it is what is in the head. But the scribe will never understand that so our Lord must deal with the scribe in terms of his own thought - security, a hotel reservation.

It is not where your head is but what is in your head.

"the Son of man," title of His humanity because, you see, Jesus Christ as God doesn't lay His head anywhere. As God He is eternal and also omnipresent.

Question: Where does omnipresence lay His head?

"hath not where to lay his head." Principle: Occupation with human security plus the uncertainty of the future causes negative volition toward doctrine which destroys the believer before historical crisis occurs. If you are destroyed and neutralized before you cannot endure in.

Occupation with human security causes negative volition toward doctrine; which destroys a person's ability to survive in a disaster.

Now you and I in talking to the scribe might have said we have no place to put the body. And we would have used the word soma referring to our body. But our Lord uses kephalê (κεφαλή) [pronounced kehf-ahl-AY] referring to His head. In normal times, there is uncertainty. And in doing so He places importance on the portion of the anatomy that contains the soul and where the thought is located.

Matthew 8:20 And Jesus replied to him, "Foxes have burrows [lairs, dens], and birds of the air have roosting places, but the Son of Man has no place where He may recline His head.

Principle

1. Too many believers are defeated by the uncertainty of normal times. Normal times have a lot of normal uncertainty and believers who are defeated by the uncertainty of normal times simply collapse and are destroyed by historical disaster.
2. The scribe with his superficial scholarship and his pseudo intellectualism, his dominating spurious emotion, his security orientation, his lack of a faith-rest function. all of these things have combined in his life to distract him from doctrine, he is the distracted disciple.
3. As the distracted disciple he will never make it. He will never have happiness or blessing as an imputation from God, he is simply not going to make it.
4. This believer will never advance to live out his life as one that glorifies the Lord but he will continue his life in discipline, misery, failure, and he will die the sin unto death.
5. His only use at this time, then, is to act as a test point for his friends who are positive toward doctrine and he will form a cadre of aggressors for the FTXs [field training exercises] of life. See, there will be a lot of positive believers after salvation and as babies they will have at least one distraction test from a "sweet, charming, lovely, wonderful believer," someone they admire in their babyhood, and that person is a reversionist who will be used to try to distract them. And when they pass that test they will move into adolescence and once again they will have the same test. God keeps these people alive to form a cadre to test other believers. Sometimes it is a father, a mother, children, someone you love, someone with whom you have had a lifetime association perhaps, but someone who is kept alive determine if he is more important to you than Bible doctrine.

Principle

1. The scribe is a type of believer who because of his arrogance and cleverness is impressed with the superficialities of life, such as approbation from large crowds, approbation from powerful speaking. Teaching and popularity of our Lord Jesus Christ have attracted him; he has even believed in Christ, but pseudo intellectuals, no matter how smart they are, have no roots in truth and they have no orientation to reality.

2. The importance of doctrine eluded him in his pursuit of the superficial, the emotional, and the pseudo intellectual.
3. This motivation was totally erroneous and he never caught the importance of doctrine from the ministry of our Lord Jesus Christ.
4. Without doctrine he was not even qualified to face personal adversity or historical disaster.
5. The impulsive, emotional believer does not have either the motivation or the momentum to persist in his concentration on doctrine. (He can do it once in awhile; he can do it when he is in a jamb but he cannot do it consistently.) The principle of the plan of God becomes, therefore, abstruse.
6. Transient emotion and temporary impulse distract from the true purpose of the plan of God - the advance to maturity and the imputation of divine blessing from the justice of God.
7. Dedication without doctrine, enthusiasm without doctrine destroys momentum in the Christian way of life.
8. The scribe was not rejected by our Lord but permitted to use his own volition, make his own decision, and his decision was quite obvious, he is not going. Emotion and enthusiasm has no carrying power in the Christian way of life.

Emotion and enthusiasm has no carrying power in the Christian way of life.

Simple Summary

1. The fox was clever, the bird was secure, Jesus takes the analogy to Himself and in reality construes it as an analogy to the scribe.
2. The fox was clever like the scribe and the bird was secure like the scribe. But his cleverness was shallow, based on impulse and emotion. He was definitely security-conscious.
3. His security was shallow, based on human standards and human function.
4. Neither would provide the scribe with what he wanted in life and both would be his delusion of grandeur - neither security nor power.
5. His cleverness produced arrogance while his human security produced complacency. Both destroyed his capacity for life, his capacity for happiness, his capacity for love, and his capacity for adversity.

So we have to conclude that his emotion was like a tumbleweed which blows away in the dust and wind of the storm. It has no ruler, no authority, no help, no strength, no power from Bible doctrine.

614 12/24/1978 Matthew 8:21 Believer distracted by protocol; details of life (non essentials) vs. Bible doctrine (essentials); public opinion

There is both disaster and happiness throughout the nation. "Here, in Texas, where we take football seriously, as well as marriage and a few other things,...a Texan team loses to Baylor. This is like the Green Berets losing to the Women's Christian Temperance society. Losing to a bunch of Baptists. This meant the axing of the coach."

Equality is the enemy of freedom. We are free to advance under doctrine; and we are free to be negative toward doctrine and to enter into reversionism. Equality is a myth; freedom is a reality invented by God.

Bob predicts next year for the national crisis; although experts are predicting 1980.

The fox is a loner; and the birds tend to be in groups.

The second distracted disciple, verses 21-22

These are dropouts, these are people who will never matriculate in the course of divine dynamics for disaster. Many believers will fail before the disaster occurs.

Verse 21 - This is the protocol disciple. We begin with the post positive particle de used as a transitional particle here. De is a transitional particle and it indicates that this is a new category of believer who does not handle the catastrophes and disasters of life. Next we have the nominative singular from the adjective héteros (ἕτερος) [pronounced HEH-ter-os], another of a different kind. He is a different category. He is a believer just like the previous one but he represents an entirely different category. "Now another disciple."

We have the subject now, mathêtês (μαθητής) [pronounced math-ay-TAYÇ], disciple. The math part is a prefix and it denotes a man who directs his mind to something, and it indicates a student in reality, someone who is under the authority and under the teaching of someone else. The noun does not connote completeness or deficiency of education but it denotes rather the process of learning. Furthermore, the learning always follows a very set pattern of perception and conduct which proceeds deliberately according to a specific plan. In other words, every disciple is a student without portfolio. He has no rights, his privacy must be protected, he is under the authority of teaching and he is definitely persona non grata as far as any outside influence is concerned. In a technical sense this word for disciple, mathêtês (μαθητής) [pronounced math-ay-TAYÇ], implies the direct dependence of a student on the authority of the teacher. To be a mathêtês (μαθητής) [pronounced math-ay-TAYÇ] then is to be a student. It does not mean a follower in the sense of imitation, it means a student learning doctrine, a student learning a subject. We are not following in the footsteps of Jesus, we are learning His message.

"said" - the aorist active indicative of the verb epô (ἔπω) [pronounced EHP-oh]. Each time someone comes up to Jesus with an excuse and this is the verb to make the excuse. And the dative singular indirect object from the intensive pronoun autos (αὐτός) [pronounced ow-TOSS] indicates that as a believer he recognizes the authority of Jesus Christ . Correctly translated: "Now another of his students said to him." He recognizes that our Lord has given a command and he recognizes the value of that command and its importance.

"suffer me first to go and bury my father." The vocative singular from kurios (κύριος) [pronounced KOO-ree-oss] indicates that this believer has much more doctrine than the pseudo intellectual. The pseudo intellectual professor called our Lord "Master" while this believer calls Him "Lord" kurios (κύριος) [pronounced KOO-ree-oss], recognizing a principle: the one who calls Him "Master" (professor) is arrogant. In the first dropout he could never learn enough doctrine to be any more than a spiritual baby because arrogance resists the authority of a teacher.

All pseudo intellectuals are eclectic, they choose what they like and they set themselves as the absolute authority in any field of intellectual endeavour. This man is not going to fall into that trap. But believers who have had teaching but not enough teaching are always in trouble. To know a little and to assume that a little is a lot is to destroy yourself. You see, you must persist and keep plugging, keep plugging. Knowing a little has the same problem as knowing nothing, it creates arrogance in the soul, because the person who stops learning knows a little and assumes that he knows a lot.

Our whole system of thinking today is liberalism and this is pseudo-intellectualism. The liberal always sets up himself as God and he portrays his liberal hobbies as the solution to everything. He is more and more emotional and irrational. Our treaty with the Chicom is a great disaster. We are saying that communism is a good thing. We are condoning violence. We are a nation of liberal confused by the principles of human good related to evil. To know a little; and to know a little as a lot; it is the same problem as arrogance. It is the assumption that a small amount of knowledge is a lot.

This believer, however, is very concerned about what people think of him. This is going to be his problem. He might be classified, then, as the protocol or the conventional type. It never occurs to him that he does not have to conform socially. Society says that you have to do certain things certain ways and therefore because you are afraid of what people will think you won't do it.

Conformity to the regulations of society is more important to this man than persistence in the perception of doctrine. And we have an excellent illustration: a funeral. The attitude toward a funeral then is the same as the attitude toward a funeral today. If you miss your father's funeral you are low on the totem pole of society. What a terrible thing to do! No one will ever speak to you again.

Where the protocol of society is concerned this disciple is inflexible. Protocol of society demands flexibility, not inflexibility because society is essentially a nonessential. Protocol is not all that important and therefore flexibility is important. Traditional observance of a funeral takes precedence over the intake of doctrine with this man. Conformity to the customs of society is more important than obedience to the command. Here is a person who puts his family before the Lord and yet our Lord made it very perspicuous that doctrine must be first. There is nothing wrong with loving your family, in fact it is recommended. Families are wonderful things but we have already studied the principle of what is called essential and nonessential. And when the essential is Bible doctrine for the believer, the only basis for spiritual growth - daily persistent perception of doctrine - then family becomes a nonessential, along with many other things in life that are regarded as important.

This conventional believer is calling our Lord "Lord" because he knows it is correct to address Jesus as Lord. He is a conventional type, he is a protocol believer. He calls Him Lord, not in recognition of His authority but, because it is the correct thing to say. He is influenced more by what people think than what doctrine says. Public opinion is more important than personal opinion based on doctrine. This kind of a person can never survive a disaster.

You learn to tolerate your family and their opinions. You do not need to jump in and tell them how it really is. You can become obnoxious, inflexible and a thoroughgoing bore.

In Matthew 10:34-39 - "Do not think that I have come to send peace on the earth: I came not to send peace, but a sword." In other words, I have come to divide. I have come to cause antagonism and to challenge your scale of values. Am I more important than all of these things? And people say: Yes, you are Lord.

He says: I am only on earth for the next three years but I am leaving my mind, my thinking behind in the guise of the Word of God. The Bible is the mind of Christ, says 1 Corinthians 2:16, and if you really mean that it will be Bible doctrine before anything else in your life.

The first advent of Christ is an invasion. It is an invasion into Satan's kingdom; it is the invasion of Christ to be the divider of people and this includes the close ties of family relationship. The cross and doctrine will always divide people, and you have to choose between doctrine and what other people think. Even in the most loving and intimate relationships of life, such as expressed in verse 35, so that family schisms come in variations in attitudes toward doctrine as well as the content of doctrine in the soul, or lack of the same. Doctrine resident in the soul also causes strong love for members of one's family and greater capacity for love.

And Jesus said in verse 36: "And a man's enemies are the members of his own family"

Verse 37 - "The one loving father or mother more than me is not worthy of me; the one loving son or daughter more than me is not worthy of me."

The issue here is very simple: Is Bible doctrine more important than the most intimate ties of life? The greatest issue is always doctrine versus the details of life, whether it is family, friends, loved ones, money, success, pleasure, social life, sex, status symbols, or whatever you consider you to be important. And any distraction to the perception of doctrine, then, is a detail of life about which one must exercise great flexibility, while about doctrine he must be indefatigable as well as persistent in perception. Doctrine is both motivation and momentum then for the fulfilment of the plan of God and this second disciple is distracted by family responsibilities and the protocol of society.

In verse 38 - "And he who does not pick up his cross and continue following after me, is not worthy of me." This means carrying the cross, severing family ties or intimate relationships to put doctrine first. Bearing the cross is overcoming distraction in the perception of doctrine. Carrying the cross was a disgrace and a condemnation in the Roman world; it expressed public opinion to the maximum. The disciple who is not willing to pick up his cross and follow the Lord demonstrates that he is distracted, family comes first. This disciple must attend the funeral of his father so as not to offend public opinion. It isn't going to help his father; his father is either in heaven or hell, and he can remember him with great love and tenderness right where he is. Even the finest protocol of life cannot replace perception of doctrine.

Verse 39 - "The one having discovered his soul [the daily function of GAP] shall destroy it [false standards of the soul are put before doctrine]; and the one having voided his soul [through consistent perception of doctrine] for my sake shall discover it." In other words, there is your capacity for life, your capacity for love, your capacity for happiness, and above all, your ability to handle historical disaster.

Matthew 8:21 - "suffer me first to go bury my father." We have the aorist active imperative of the verb epitrepō (ἐπιτρέπω) [pronounced ep-ee-TREP-oh] which means to permit, to allow, to order, to give permission. This disciple had enough doctrine to know that he must get leave, he must get permission, he recognizes our Lord's authority to that point. He was very sure that the Lord would give him permission. After all, this is a good excuse. It is a legitimate excuse. It just so happens that at this point it conflicts with a higher cause. (This does not mean that you have failed the Lord if you attend someone's funeral) The issue here is a conflict between the protocol of society and the perception of Bible doctrine.

"permit me," give me permission. The dative singular indirect object from the personal pronoun egō (ἐγώ) [pronounced ehg-OH]. He is saying, "Give me permission" - good manners. A gnomic aorist is used here for the fact that the second disciple regarded the permission as already granted, and to him it was a mere formality. He was so sure the Lord would grant him leave that he put it in a gnomic aorist tense. He knows that permission will be granted! With this there is an adverb which means that this is his priority, prōton (πρώτον) [pronounced PRO-ton], "first," the adverb of priority. The priority is given conventionality under the aorist active infinitive of aperchomai (ἀπέρχομαι) [pronounced ahp-AIRKH-oh-mai]. [The Lord says go across the sea and he wants to go to a funeral.] Again we have an aorist tense but this is a culminative aorist viewing the departure in its entirety but regarding it from the viewpoint of the father's funeral. The gnomic and culminative aorists actually form up in a very similar way and it indicates that this man is so sure the Lord will say Yes that he is only going through the formality. He doesn't want to leave the Lord with the Lord thinking ill of him.

This also shows something else: he is very arrogant. All arrogant people are very sensitive to public opinion; they are very concerned as to what people think. He must get to that funeral because of what people will think, but he must not leave our Lord thinking ill of him. [You need not go through life falling apart because someone dislikes you. You have to live your life as unto the Lord, you can't live your life as unto people] This man will never advance, he will fail in the crisis, he is not going to have any happiness or understand the Christian way of life at any point, simply because he is constantly concerned about that people think. The guideline for his life is do nothing to offend anyone, and if someone is offended lean over backwards to change your lifestyle if necessary just so they will appreciate you! You cannot spend your life being sensitive to public opinion. In your spiritual life you will eventually become sensitive to the Lord and Bible doctrine, and what His desire is. And that must be paramount; that is your number one priority.

The adverb proton (πρῶτον) [pronounced PRO-ton] indicates the wrong priority. He doesn't have enough doctrine to have his priorities straight; he does have enough doctrine to be a sophomore. To this disciple something more important than following the Lord is obedience to the command to follow the protocol of society. And he now states it: "and bury my father."

There is nothing he can do for his father now. He loves his father who is now dead. He can love his father right where he is; in fact, his love and appreciation for his father will increase if he learns doctrine, if he crosses the lake. But it was not to be that way with him.

Principles

1. This disciple became entangled with and distracted by public opinion and the protocol of society.
2. If he failed to attend his father's funeral society would ostracise him; society would not understand. What society does not understand society ostracises. Ignorance is the basis for the function of society.
3. This believer is thinking more of approbation of people than he does of approbation of the Lord Jesus Christ. That is because he is arrogant. He is a sweet person, a nice person. He has his own brand of raging arrogance.
4. As long as there is no conflict it was convenient to follow the Lord, but now that a conflict exists it becomes inconvenient. The protocol believer is always destroyed by the inconvenience of learning doctrine. Remember that this believer has learned some doctrine but never enough to advance to maturity. He does not understand the importance of perseverance in perception of doctrine.
5. He lives out his life under the discipline of reversionism. He lives and dies the sin unto death in [Y]

Matthew 8:21 And another of His students said, "Permit me, Lord, to go bury my father."

In life, we make our decisions regarding eternity. After death, there is no way to appeal one's decision. If the father he believed in Christ, he is in heaven. If he did not, then there is nothing more that can be done.

In life we make our decisions regarding eternity by our attitude toward Christ, not after death. His father was a believer. At this point he was absent from the body and face to face with the Lord.

Are you a distracted believer?

Bob began returning to a jock reunion. They of course want to know what we are doing. These are gentlemen and they know what to say without being insulting. Bob is delighted to be in the ministry. It is the gold and silver of Bible doctrine.

This could be our last year to get doctrine.

1977 Romans

Lesson #615

615 12/24/1978 Luke 9:60 Answer of Jesus Christ to protocol; funerals, customs of society, pleasures and human good vs. GAP

Captain Lance P. Sijohn. His left leg was fractured in a jump, and he evaded capture for 45 days. He was captured, escaped, recaptured. He resisted to the end, dying in the Hanoi prison. He carried on to the end, despite receiving some of the worst treatment of any prisoner. He never gave up, in the soul. He is one of the many reasons that we have freedom, which makes it possible for us to learn Bible doctrine.

Matthew 8:21 Now, another of his students (disciples) said to Him, "Lord, permit me first to go and bury my father."

The answer is found in Matthew 8:22, at least the first half of the answer is given. The last half is found in Luke 9:60. We will put these together for a complete answer.

Luke 9:60. Funerals, customs/society; Pleasures/human good vs GAP

Matthew 8:22, the first half of our Lord's answer to the second dropout. The second half of the answer is found in Luke 9:60.

Matthew 8:22, "But Jesus said to him, Follow me; and leave the dead to bury their dead."
Luke 9:60 - "but go and proclaim everywhere the kingdom of God."

In Matthew 8:22 we have a post positive conjunctive particle de which emphasizes the contrast between the request of the disciple and the answer of our Lord Jesus Christ. Next, the nominative singular subject lêsous (Ἰησοῦς) [pronounced ee-ay-SOOCE], Jesus. "But Jesus." We are going to have a contrast here because the man has one idea; our Lord's command demands something else. The Lord's commands take precedence over any concept, any idea, any correct function in which we are involved. The present active indicative of légô (λέγω) [pronounced LEH-goh] is used for a verb for answering here, a communication verb. And the present tense is called an aoristic present for punctiliar action in present time. The answer was short, to the point, and covered the situation so that this man knew that by leaving for his father's funeral he was rejecting Bible doctrine, resisting the authority of our Lord, and would not be prepared for the disaster to come. The active voice, Jesus Christ produces the action by answering him. The declarative indicative is for the historical reality of the situation, followed by the dative singular indirect object from autos (αὐτός) [pronounced ow-TOSS], an intensive pronoun used as a personal pronoun, third person singular. "Jesus said to him, Follow me." The present tense is the progressive present for action in a state of persistence. The active voice, the second distracted disciple is commanded to produce the action of the verb. He will not but he is given the opportunity. This is the imperative mood of command. The verb and command is fulfilled literally by entering the ship, embarking across the sea, entering and matriculating in the course, Disaster Dynamics. The principle is: We can only follow the Lord through persistence in the perception of doctrine, never by procrastination. In other words we must keep plugging daily. This is what is meant by "Follow me."

"and leave the dead to bury their own dead," first of all we have a connective conjunction kai plus a second active aorist imperative, aphíēmi (ἀφίημι) [pronounced af-EE-ay-mee], which means to dismiss, to let go, to send away, to leave, to permit or to tolerate. It has a variation of nuances. Here is a second command to a distracted disciple, telling him the cure for distraction. There is no possible way to avoid distraction unless your priorities are straight and unless the priority of doctrine precedes the protocol of life. Many of the meanings which fit this particular command, such as tolerate the dead to bury their own dead or permit the dead to bury their own dead, are admissible but it actually means "leave the dead" .In other words, leave in your mind.

When doctrine is an issue nothing else is important. The connotation here is separation in the mind rather than permission or toleration. And this distracted disciple is not to even attend the funeral. The point is that if this man goes to his father's funeral which is legitimate, moral, correct, and even honourable, but this man has a problem. All of his life he has catered to what society thinks. He has been a protocol personality. He lives his life under the dictates of society. If society says, Do this, Do that, then this is his top priority. Now, the Lord puts the issue before him where whichever way he goes he is doing a good thing, he is doing a right thing. This man faces a much more subtle problem than the pseudo intellectual. He faces good versus good. Which of the two good things should have priority? He cannot do them both simultaneously; he must choose one or the other and it is a test that actually causes many believers to peel off and leave doctrine forever, entering into a life of reversionism, warning discipline, intensive discipline, and eventually dying; in the meantime kept alive by the Lord just to distract or to be used as a test where other believers are concerned.

Bob's father left him an ashtray, which is the only thing that he left him. Cartoon, large window raining outside and a man is up to his elbow in moneybags. "What should I do now, Dad?" (This is based on the saying, "Save your money for a rainy day.")

Leave the dead is our Lord's command. And, of course, it means leave the dead in your thinking. There is time to concentrate on doctrine and that time is now. This may seem to be very cruel and very harsh as it comes from the Greek but you must remember that in the pressure of crisis when it is your turn to face personal disaster and when it is the turn of our nation to face the greatest disaster of all of our national life, your loved ones cannot help you. They cannot carry you no matter how close they are and no matter how wonderful the relationship. This disciple loves his father and he wants to go to his funeral. That is normal. But what he is about to learn will make or break him for life - the importance of depending upon the inner resources of Bible doctrine. The greatest thing that parents can do for their children is not give them Christmas presents, although certainly that is admirable, but to make sure that they have doctrine. That is what counts. There are men who want to leave a better world for their children but you can't do it. All you can do is leave them the best of this world and the best of this world is Bible doctrine. There is no substitute for Bible doctrine resident in the soul.

Bob wanted to do the best for his son. And that was not presents, but to leave him Bible doctrine. We cannot leave a better world, but we can leave them with Bible doctrine.

"leave the dead to bury their own dead." This disciple loves his father but he must not allow the memories of his father to distract him from the present course which he needs and which is laying his own ministry on the line. The culminative aorist tense views the separation from family in its entirety but it emphasizes the existing results of boycotting his father's funeral in the interest of a higher priority. The active voice, the distracted disciple is commanded to produce the action though he will not. The imperative mood is a command. This is a command to allow society to continue their normal function, such as a funeral, without criticizing, without maligning. But do not let the normal function of society interfere with learning doctrine, that is the point.

The children need Bible doctrine every day on their level.

Principle

1. The legitimate function of society must never distract the believer from learning doctrine. Society has a right to its legitimate function and the teaching of doctrine in a free society is permissible. They are two noble things. The question is: Which do you choose when you have a protocol responsibility and a responsibility to the Lord? That is the issue.
2. It might be pointed out that society frowns upon those who do not attend the funeral of their friends and loved ones. Immediately by omitting to attend the funeral you are under the disapprobation of society. And often the issue can be placed in a negative way: Which do you prefer, the disapprobation of God or the disapprobation of society?
3. Remember, while attendance at a funeral, or a party, a dance, a football game, a concert, is legitimate function of society, it is not sinful, evil or dishonourable. These normal pleasures of society can often conflict with the teaching of doctrine and therefore be a distraction to learning doctrine. The result is loss of momentum.
4. In a time of great personal problems, natural disasters, historical crises, all of the good times do not carry you. There is nothing wrong with having a good time but having a good time is merely a demonstration of your capacity for life, your capacity for happiness. It will not carry you in disaster. This will though: the source of your good times, the source of your capacity for life, the source of your ability to be a great lover, the source of your ability to enjoy yourself socially is doctrine. And that same doctrine becomes the source of courage and integrity and honourable function in disaster. So it is the doctrine that must never be neglected.

5. Therefore, there is no substitute for Bible doctrine in the soul. It will carry you in normal times; it will make you a crisis personality in abnormal times.
6. Legitimate and inspirational pleasures simply do not sustain the believer in the crisis. It is fun while it lasts but fun never carries you through a crisis.
7. Pleasures are a legitimate manifestation of capacity for life. But it is the doctrine that sustains in adversity, not the pleasures. Pleasure in life is legitimate, as is levity, fun, or having a pleasant life.
8. Therefore, the pleasure and entertainment of life is not forbidden but if it conflicts with the teaching of doctrine then no matter how harmless the pleasure it will drag you down in time of historical disaster.
9. The conflict then is obvious. Society says to this man that he has a duty to his dead father to attend the funeral but the Lord says to this same man, Follow me, and this supersedes the demands and the protocol of society.

"let the dead go" - the word "dead" by the way is nekros (νεκρός) [pronounced nehk-ROSS] which means the body has collapsed. The soul and the spirit have entered into the presence of the Lord, so only the body is dead. The real person is in the presence of the Lord.

We are all spiritually dead from physical birth.

The grief of the unbeliever has no restraint because it has no hope.

Matthew 8:22 But Jesus said to Him, "Follow Me and let the (spiritually) dead bury (physically) dead."

Luke 9:60a But Jesus said to Him, "Follow Me and let the (spiritually) dead bury (physically) dead."

Now to Luke 9:60: Now that is only half of the answer. The other half is found in Luke 9:60, "but as for you go and proclaim elsewhere the kingdom of God." We start out with the proleptic use of the second singular pronoun su, meaning you and only you. You have a message to preach, move on. "Go," the aorist active participle of aperchomai (ἀπέρχομαι) [pronounced ahp-AIRKH-oh-mai]. We have the constative aorist for an action or a fact extended over a period of time. He is to learn more doctrine as he is now and then preach doctrine. This funeral would be a distraction, a break, it would keep him from matriculating in the great course on the Dynamics for Disaster. The active voice: the distracted disciple has a spiritual gift which demands that he communicate doctrine. This is the imperative use of the participle which is characteristic of the Koine Greek. "But you and only you, go." The main verb is a command to communicate doctrine, diaggellô (διαγγέλλω) [pronounced de- ang-GEHL-low], to teach or proclaim everywhere, and keep proclaiming everywhere. The progressive present denotes linear aktionsart: stop what you are doing, study and teach. "The kingdom of God," a reference to the plan of God as it existed just prior to the Church Age. He must persist in the function of learning doctrine and teaching. Motivation for persistence comes from the doctrine resident in the soul but he is distracted by social protocol and refuses to go any farther.

Luke 9:60 But Jesus said to Him, "Follow Me and let the (spiritually) dead bury (physically) dead. But, you (and you only) go and proclaim everywhere the Kingdom of God."

Principle

1. This man has a spiritual gift and enough doctrine to function as a communicator. He is either an evangelist or a Bible teacher but he probably is both at this time.
2. Notice: He does not have to wait until he is mature to start communicating doctrine. Though he was a great teacher he would fail the historical crisis because he did not keep plugging, keep going, keep learning. He did not persist in the perception of doctrine.
3. This disciple had a choice between human good and divine good, and he chose human good. And by choosing good he destroyed his ministry and eliminated himself for any historical disaster. This man fails even before the course is begun.
4. He chose human good attending his father's funeral rather than divine good, communication of doctrine.
5. Where there is a conflict between good and good the believer must choose divine good over human good, and this requires sophomore discernment.
6. While you may procrastinate in learning doctrine the historical crisis will not delay and wait for you to learn. In other words, God will always give you an opportunity to learn the doctrine necessary to face the crisis. If you procrastinate during the time of opportunity there will be no procrastination of the crisis. The crisis will occur. No believer ever faces historical disaster without having the opportunity to have resident doctrine with which to cope and failure of believers in disaster means failure in the period allotted by God for learning the necessary doctrine.

Notice a contrast

The first distracted disciple made a decision which he did not keep because he was a pseudo intellectual, therefore arrogant and under pressure became emotional. All intellectuals become emotional under pressure.

The second distracted disciple made the wrong decision. He decided for human good rather than divine good. Failure to decide for divine good results in the modus operandi of human good which eventuates in the function of evil. We now have another casualty.

These few principles prepare us for the 3rd distracted disciple.

Principles

1. Because many believers make the same decision as this distracted disciple they have become involved in social action, promoting social welfare, etc. They have even become Marxists, anti-police, pro-criminal.
2. Others follow this pattern by allowing pleasure, social life, entertainment to distract them from learning doctrine on a consistent basis. For some, when there is some pleasure versus Bible class, they always choose pleasure.
3. As a result they are not prepared for either personal or historical disaster.
4. Personal disaster might include dying, and death for which the believer minus doctrine is not prepared. Death is the one thing in which you participate alone, like pain.
5. People can sympathize and be very compassionate but you do the hurting and you do the dying.
6. For this disaster you need doctrine as for any disaster.
7. While this distracted disciple was distracted by the protocol of society the next one, our third, found in Luke 9:61-62 has a love problem. He is distracted because he is in love. He is the kind of a person who is unstable because he puts love and love of human beings above everything else. He is so busy loving people that he is distracted from Bible doctrine.

We have not yet started the course; we have only covered those offering up their excuses.

1977 Romans

Lesson #616

616 12/25/1978 Luke 9:61 Procrastination; GAP and duty priorities over loved ones; remember the Source by Bible doctrine (Xmas Day)

The case of the third distracted disciple, Luke 9:61-62: "And another also said, I will follow thee, Lord; but let me first bid farewell to them that are at home at my house."

We are studying those who are in [Y] and do not advance from there. In [X] we are sustained by laws of divine establishment; and in [Y] we are sustained by logistical grace.

We begin with the transitional use of the post positive conjunctive particle de. These particles are always very important; they link one factor with another and indicate that even though this is in Luke it is sequential with what was studied in Matthew chapter eight. It is a part of the sequence, even though it is found in another book. We translate that de "now," indicating the sequence is continued but a new category is introduced. Next we have the adjunctive use of the conjunction kai, meaning "also." "Now also." Next is the nominative singular subject from the adjective héteros (ἕτερος) [pronounced HEH-ter-os]. This means that while he is a believer he is a different category of believer, another of a different category. Next we have the verb of communication, the aorist active indicative from the verb légō (λέγω) [pronounced LEH-goh], to say, to speak, to communicate.

Translation: "Now another disciple also said." He addresses our Lord in exactly the same way as the second dropout, the protocol disciple. He uses the vocative singular kurios (κύριος) [pronounced KOO-ree-oss], "Lord." He recognizes our Lord's authority as does the second category who also uses the vocative kurios (κύριος) [pronounced KOO-ree-oss] but he rejects it by rejecting Bible doctrine. This disciple is sincere but sincerity is not a virtue in the Christian life. Sincerity is considered a virtue by the emotional but while we all have emotion and while there is a definite place for emotion it is not the criterion for the spiritual life. He is emotional but emotion is only bona fide as a responder to the doctrinal content of his soul. This believer has a love priority problem which is going to become a distraction to him. Because of a love problem he is about to lose out with doctrine, become distracted, and therefore will never take the course in divine dynamics.

"And another disciple also said, Lord." And first of all he states his dedication. The people who constantly have to state their dedication usually are operating on something that is too weak to sustain that dedication, and the too weak to sustain that dedication is emotional revolt of the soul. So we have the future active indicative of the verb akoloutheō (ἀκολουθέω) [pronounced ak-ol-oo-THEH-oh], to follow. "I will follow." The predictive future is for an event which is expected to occur in future time and the predictive future indicates he will not follow or execute this command immediately but eventually he intends to do so. Good intentions without immediate execution cancel motivation. The disciple intends to produce the action of the verb after an elapse of the distraction. He intends to procrastinate and then he thinks he will get back with it but when there is impending disaster procrastination is tantamount to negative volition toward doctrine. He knows that he is obligated to learn doctrine and prepare for the crisis and matriculate in this course but he is going to procrastinate. With this we have the dative singular indirect object from the personal pronoun su, you.

Principle

1. I will follow you, is the expression of good intention and motivation. It also indicates clarity of the issue in the mind of the disciple. He understands the issue because of the three categories he is the most advanced in doctrine.
2. The third category of disciple understood the issue and what decision he should make. But he is distracted from good intention by a love priority problem. There is no love of a person in this life that should exceed the love of doctrine.
3. Good intentions are no guarantee of proper execution, proper function, in the Christian life. Good intention without follow-up action is no intention.
4. The expression of good intention does not mean the execution of the Christian way of life.
5. Expressing good intention is no substitute for the perception of doctrine which is the true momentum of the Christian life. For those who live a life of convenience, they cannot make the transition into the inconvenience of human disaster.
6. This believer recognizes the importance of doctrine, for as the next verse clearly reveals, he has already put his hand to the plough. Putting your hand to the plough is the daily perception of Bible doctrine. This verse has nothing to do with salvation.

7. This believer made the right decision to learn doctrine on a daily basis but he is distracted by love for the visible as over against love for the invisible. In this case human love priority sets aside Bible doctrine. So this believer made a right decision but he didn't have the guts to keep going with it. He didn't have the persistence, the perseverance, the constant priority in view - doctrine first because doctrine is the mind of Christ, and you do not love Christ, you are not occupied with Christ, without doctrine in the soul.
8. This was a family man. In contrast to the previous believer the family was all alive and well. Not only that but they want son, Daddy, or whoever, to come home! This believer wants to visit those whom he loves.

A smart woman can fall in love with a writer based upon how he writes. They fall in love based upon the expression of one's soul. However, generally in the human race, love carries with it a visual image.

"but" - the adversative use of that same post positive particle de. Always watch the conjunctions in life. So and so is a fine preacher, BUT. So and so is a nice man, BUT. Next we have an adverb, proton meaning "first." This is the adverb of priority. There is always something that you must do FIRST. And just like the protocol disciple this man is a gentleman. He uses the same verb, the aorist active imperative epitrépō (ἐπιτρέπω) [pronounced ep-ee-TREP-oh], give me permission, allow me. The gnomic aorist tense indicates that the third disciple regarded the permission as granted, just as the second. He assumes that this is a mere formality which he goes through and permission will be granted.

So far we have had personal pronouns in the dative case in order to indicate that everything that is being requested can destroy you or make you, simply because these requests indicate and reveal the motivation of the soul. (How are you motivated?) And therefore there are no accusative cases in these requests, always the dative case. Why? The dative case not only reveals what you are thinking, how you are motivated, but it also indicates that by making such a request (in this case) you have wrong priorities. And having wrong priorities means having wrong motivation. And having wrong motivation means loss of momentum and loss of momentum means failure in times of disaster, as well as in normal times.

Then he states his request in the aorist middle infinitive from the verb apotassomai (ἀποτάσσομαι) [pronounced ahp-ot-AHS-sohm-ah-ee], to say farewell. It is an interesting word because apo means that eventually you must tear yourself from them and tassomai means that to do so your mind must be organized for tassō (τάσσω) [pronounced TAS-soh] in the Greek always has the connotation of self-discipline, respect for authority, recognition of greater and more important things in life which means there comes a time in the life of every person when responsibility, duty, honour, must take precedence over one's personal love of someone else. And always in life there will be a test of your sense of duty, your sense of responsibility, your understanding of historical circumstances more important than those who are dearest to you and who you love the most.

And this also demands reciprocity because in noble and honourable and virtuous love the one who is being left always understands. And if her love (usually it is the woman who is left) is so great that she is willing to permit sacrifice, then this is a magnificent thing. Apotassomai (ἀποτάσσομαι) [pronounced ahp-ot-AHS-sohm-ahēē], to say goodbye where true love exists so that in the parting those who must sacrifice and see the loved one go will be understanding rather than complaining and whining. And the one who leaves, leaves with the encouragement of knowing that he is loved and that he will be missed and that they will be waiting when he gets back.

The constative aorist is of course for an action that will take place over a period of time. He wants to spend time with his family before "the big push." He wants to delay the ship for a week before it crosses the Sea of Tiberius while he has "Christmas" with his family. This man is very selfish in his love for his family. There is nothing wrong with loving your family, in fact it is required. But you can have the kind of love which is selfish and if you have a selfish love (which includes jealousy and pettiness, and other types of reaction) you destroy with a selfish love your true capacity for love. For true love must have a sense of sacrifice and it must be sensitive to the object of love.

The love which is possessive is no love at all. Did you ever see a horse with a tough mouth? He is not sensitive to the light rein at all. When you become possessive and jealous inevitably you destroy the very wonderful thing that you have. And love, like everything else in life, does not stand still. It is moving at all times, forward or backward. Being possessive strangles love, smothers love. If you smother something you destroy it.

"to those" and then we have a prepositional phrase, eis (εἰς) [pronounced ICE] plus the accusative singular of oikos (οἶκος) [pronounced OY-koss], "house," but refers here to a family, "in my house."

Luke 9:61 Now another disciple also said, Lord, I will follow you; but first give me permission to say goodbye to those in my family.

Note:

1. First we note that there are many similarities between the second and the third distracted disciples. There are also great differences. This believer is not distracted by the protocol of society as was the second. He is distracted because of his intense love for his wife, his children and his family. At this point he must not allow love to deter the Lord's plan for his life.
2. It is doctrine which has provided for this believer the capacity for love which he has for his wife and his children. And this is normal and virtuous and wonderful in life.
3. Therefore, this disciple demonstrates that even honourable and virtuous functions in life can sometimes (not always) be a distraction to the most important thing in life which is Bible doctrine, the written Word, resulting in love for the living Word, the Lord Jesus Christ.
4. This is a normal request made to our Lord but it is an abnormal time in which to make it - the approach of disaster.

5. This believer will fail in a crisis because he cannot distinguish between normal and abnormal circumstances of history and, further, because his priorities are wrong. He learned enough doctrine to almost reach maturity; he had capacity for love, but he did not know how to handle his capacity. Something was lost in gaining the capacity and what was lost was number one priority, Bible doctrine.
6. The emphasis here is placed on following the Lord into the unknown where natural and historical disaster will occur, forming a course in disaster dynamics.
7. This distracted disciple has placed category two and three love above category one love.
8. His family, whom he loves dearly, have now become a distraction to him, not because they are seeking to distract him from doctrine but because from his own free will and his own scale of values he has distracted himself.
9. Just as the previous disciple was a believer who had been exercising his spiritual gift in communication of doctrine, so this disciple has almost advanced to maturity but will fail before reaching maturity. He will fail because he has wrong priorities and because he lacks something that every one of us must have in life, appreciation of the Source. When you start to develop capacity for love it is never consolidated until in your soul you are a grateful individual. We must never lose track of the origin of blessing. The origin of blessing is God Himself.

You lose something in love when you forget the origin because in remembering the origin you always have humility. When you forget the origin you become arrogant. When people succeed in life and forget the origin of their success, they fail, even though they have the accoutrements of promotion and success. Don't ever forget the origin. We are what we are because of origin. We don't have anything that the Lord could not take away from us in a New York minute.

Many People Fail the Disaster Test for a Number of Reasons

1. Wrong priorities. Nothing must come before perception and inculcation of doctrine, for doctrine is how the Lord makes love to us. And we forget the Source when we forget doctrine.
2. Being confused about the subject of love. Occupation with Christ is the key to both personal and impersonal love.
3. Failure to properly interpret contemporary history results in not being prepared for disaster when it comes. The only preparation for disaster is to go back to the Source. And how do we remember the Source? Perception of doctrine. This requires plugging, learning doctrine every day.

The answer to the third dropout is found in verse 62, the last verse of Luke chapter 9, "And Jesus said unto him, No man, having put his hand to the plough, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God."

617 12/26/1978 Luke 9:62 Answer of Jesus Christ to love priority vs. GAP; distractions from GAP cause loss of capacity

Sgt. Truman Olsen 24 hours of continuous battle; and men cut down around him. Mortally wounded after 30 minutes of fire. He continued to fight an hour and a half after receiving his fatal shot.

No politician provides any freedom.

This verse has nothing to do with evangelism at all; it is a challenge to the believer who has already started learning doctrine and yet does not continue in this vain.

The evangelists have a regular system. They give the gospel or some approximation of it. Then they will say, "Raise your hands." Then they will say, you who have raised your hand, keep on going and come to the front. They quote the plough passage.

The exegesis: we have first of all the transitional use of the post positive conjunctive particle de, which is correctly translated "now." Next we have the nominative singular subject from the proper noun lêsous (Ἰησοῦς) [pronounced ee-ay-SOOCE], Jesus.

With this we have the aorist active indicative from the verb légô (λέγω) [pronounced LEH-goh] which refers to communication. And it can be translated "said" or anything that indicates our Lord is using words to explain to this man the real issue and why he is wrong. The constative aorist gathers up into one entirety what our Lord says about the plough. This man will fail and our Lord explains to all of us why he failed.

Reversionists are kept alive in order to act as those who test the believers who are growing.

Then we have prós (πρός) [pronounced pros] plus the accusative singular from autos (αὐτός) [pronounced ow-TOSS], "face to face with him." This prepositional phrase instead of the dative indirect object indicates that this was the last time this disciple ever faced our Lord. He came very close to reaching maturity but he failed at this point and this is the last time he ever saw the Lord, until he died. Apparently he was dissatisfied with our Lord's answer and he departed.

Luke 9:62s Now Jesus replied face to face with him.

Now the reply: the nominative singular from the adjective oudeís (οὐδείς) [pronounced oo-DICE], "no one." And this is a dogmatic statement which is the end of the line for a man who almost cracked the maturity barrier and then slid into reversionism. Jesus answers him with a principle rather than a personal admonition and therefore He says, No one. This man has had enough doctrine so that he can pick up on the principle without Him saying, You. This man almost made it but not quite, like so many who start out on doctrine and then peel off.

Then our Lord explains what the man has been doing, the aorist active participle of epiballô (ἐπιβάλλω) [pronounced ep-ee-BALL-low]. Bállô (βάλλω) [pronounced BAWL-low] means to throw, epí (ἐπί) [pronounced eh-PEE] means on, throw upon, to cast upon. Here where a plough is used it merely means to grip the plough and start ploughing. It means from the word bállô (βάλλω) [pronounced BAWL-low] that the plough is already in operation, that he has his team and that he has his hand on the plough and he is ploughing the ground and has been for some time. In fact he ploughed all of the way, almost, to maturity. But he didn't quite make it. The last test he failed.

With this we have the accusative singular direct object from the noun cheir (χείρ, χειρός, ἡ) [pronounced khīr]. At the time that this was written a plough had two handles and one held it by the handles in order to guide it as it was pulled through the ground, forming the furrows. "after having put his hand" is the way we will translate this aorist active participle. Now the constative aorist gathers into one entirety momentum in the plan of God - X+Y+Z. Here was a man who had not only gone all of the way through X radical and believed in Christ but in Y radical he was almost at the point of reaching maturity. He had been ploughing for several years - taking in doctrine, taking in doctrine - and was almost there when he failed.

You can be positive day in and day out but as you are positive you develop certain things: a capacity for life, capacity for love, capacity for happiness. It is the capacity for love that will always get you. You finally have this capacity because doctrine has given you, the Lord has given you, a wonderful family, persons you love, and you forget the Source. All of a sudden the object of love, what God has provided, now becomes number one priority. The Source is completely buried and forgotten.

The word for "plough" is árotron (ἄροτρον) [pronounced AR-ot-ron]. And we have epí (ἐπί) [pronounced eh-PEE] plus the accusative - motion, the plough is moving. Ploughing is learning doctrine, it is the daily function of GAP, it is advancing in the plan of God through perception of doctrine, the only way to advance. This believer has been positive for a long time but through his own volitional function he has permitted a distraction from continuing into maturity. This is his last test and from this test it would be an easy roll into eternity but he does not pass the test. In fact he fails and never again does he return, he never recovers.

Family love has taken precedence over love of Christ, love of the Word of God, so that this believer became negative and fell into reversionism. And his fall into reversionism is now described by the phrase, "and looking back." This is his distraction. We have the connective kai and the present active participle blepô (βλέπω) [pronounced BLEHP-oh], glance. This is in contrast to horaô (ὁράω) [pronounced hoh-RAW-oh], to look and observe with thinking. Blepô (βλέπω) [pronounced BLEHP-oh] is the distraction verb. This man is already glancing back, he has his eyes on someone he loves. And notice: this man is going to lose the very thing he loves by putting it first, by giving it number one priority over doctrine. Because whenever a person goes into reversionism he loses his capacity for life and the person he loved yesterday he hates tomorrow. We have nothing without doctrine and sooner or later we are going to have to learn that.

"looking back" - the family are called, in effect, "things behind," the preposition eis (εἰς) [pronounced ICE] plus the accusative neuter plural from the definite article plus the adverb of place opisō (ὀπίσω) [pronounced ohp-ISS-oh], "the things behind." The things behind not only refer to this man but to the other two categories. In effect this applies to all three categories: first of all dropout number one, the pseudo intellectual believer; dropout number two, the protocol believer; dropout number three, the love priority believer. None of these people can handle disaster. They will fall apart in normal times, therefore they are total casualties in times of great disaster.

So this believer, like the second distracted disciple, has been positive toward doctrine but he has permitted through his own volitional function a distraction to occur. From his own freewill he has distracted himself from the Source of love by giving love a priority over the Source.

Luke 9:62a Now Jesus replied face to face with him, "No one, after having put his hand on the plough, and looking toward the things behind..."

Principle

1. Looking toward the things behind: the "things behind" can include many things. There are many distractions beside love and love priorities. These things are not wrong, immoral or sinful, they are distractions. The more you grow spiritually the more subtle become the distractions.
2. For this believer it is obviously love of his wife. Love of his wife is not wrong but it is not number one priority. You can't put the cart before the horse. Capacity for love has to precede love, that is why a lot of people get married too soon.
3. Ordinarily, these objects of love synchronise and there is no conflict, no conflict between Christianity and loving your family. But there is a historical crisis approaching and priorities in the category of loved ones must be clarified. And at the same time a lesson must be taught: as you learn doctrine your love and thoughtfulness and sensitivity should be greater, to your children it should be greater.
4. The Lord Jesus Christ must receive number one priority and this is not accomplished by saying, "The Lord is number one." It is accomplished by taking in doctrine every day. The daily reception of doctrine is far more important than anything else in your life, including love and intimacy of family relationship, which is a wonderful thing but it is not on the same level as doctrine, nothing is. The very ability to love these people is based on doctrine, and always when you separate doctrine from your love life you destroy your capacity to love. There is no way in this life that you can divorce yourself from the Source of all things wonderful and come out ahead.
5. This man is not prepared for the crisis and like the other two disciples will become an historical casualty.
6. This disciple in his arrogance will fail to understand the analogy answer and will become disenchanted and disillusioned with our Lord. He will become disenchanted with our Lord for not appreciating love in human relationships - that will be his excuse.

- a. He will actually resist our Lord because he thought: "Well now, He talks about loving everyone (which He did)." But he never talked about loving people from their own ability. He talks about loving people with the ability of God, and that means Bible doctrine. Where did you get the idea that you have the ability to love? Put it together with the total depravity of man and you have the right answer. None of us have the ability to love and the ones who are smart in observing people realize that. Love is never maintained at a certain level by anyone. Even as we do not have the ability to save ourselves we do not have the ability to be consistent in love and even increase love on a daily basis. Because, you see, it is the Source that counts, the mind of Christ, Bible doctrine.
7. This disciple in his arrogance will fail to understand the answer and again he will be disenchanted, disillusioned, and this led to distraction.
8. To this disciple there seems to be some inconsistency between our Lord's answer and His message on the Sermon on the Mount.
9. Furthermore, prior to this command to cross the sea our Lord had honoured a devoted father, a Roman centurion, who came to Capernaum on behalf of his sick son. Jesus commended the centurion for his faith, not his love. The centurion loved his son but he came all of the way to this spot where the crowd is to have the Lord heal his son. He was commended for his faith, not his love.

Bob and this guy taking a photograph of T&P. He is on private property and he's a Yankee; and he rebuked Bob. There was no respect for authority or private property. He was all upset over the Christian love aspect. To him, love was listening to all that he had to say, to hear his suggestions and implement them immediately. We are begging as a client nation to be destroyed. He worked for the Guggenheim Museum. He proceeded to tell Bob how to act like a Christian.

Bob has fifteen people who are paid to keep him away from the general public.

Children do not understand that being punished is a sign of love.

Things we love in this life, human relationships, can become a distraction from doctrine so that we become spiritual casualties. Principle: A casualty before the crisis never survives the crisis.

Many believers are eliminated from facing the historical disaster because they have failed the perceptive test. This believer had enough doctrine for discernment, he made a good start with his positive volition toward doctrine, but he became distracted and disillusioned. And actually, he distracted himself and disillusioned himself.

"is fit for the kingdom of God" is not a correct translation, except for "is," the present active indicative of esti (ἐστί) [pronounced ehs-TEE]. This is a retroactive progressive present denoting what has begun in the past with distraction and negative volition toward doctrine, and continues into the present. The active voice, the third distracted disciple produces the action and the indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality. With this we have a predicate nominative singular from a compound noun euthetos (εὐθετος) [pronounced YOO-theht-oss], eu means well or rightly, thêtos comes from tithêmi (τίθημι) [pronounced TIHTH-ā-mee], to place. And it means to be well arranged, to be adapted, useful. So we will translate it "well adjusted." This emphasizes the second adjustment to the justice of God which is the imputation of divine blessing at maturity. And the corrected translation: "Now Jesus replied face to face with him, No one, after putting his hand on the plough, and looking toward the things behind, is well-adjusted." And then we have finally, to what: the dative singular direct object from basileia (βασιλεία) [pronounced bas-il-ī-ah], kingdom, and with that the possessive genitive singular from the noun Theos, God, "the kingdom of God."

Luke 9:62 Now Jesus replied face to face with him, "No one, after putting his hand on the plough, and looking toward the things behind, is well-adjusted to the Kingdom of God."

What is the kingdom of God? It is the plan of God - X+Y+Z.

Principle

1. There is a graduation of spiritual advance in these three distracted disciples.
2. The first disciple who is distracted is shallow, emotional, superficial, and easily distracted.
3. For the first category of disciple is a pseudo intellectual whose arrogance and self-centeredness is completely divorced from reality. And as you are divorced from reality distraction is easy. Those who daydream are divorced from reality. The day-dreamer is obviously a shallow person because he is easily distracted.
4. His emotional instability makes him a prior casualty to the historical crisis.
5. The second distracted disciple has advanced in doctrine so that he is already using his communication gift to preach.
6. The kingdom of God is the plan of God, the spiritual kingdom of the regenerate, and he is preaching the kingdom of God. But like so many who are preaching the kingdom of God he is a stick-in-the-mud for protocol and impressed by public opinion so that the opinion of society rules his life.
7. Conflict between his father's funeral and following the Lord results in distraction from doctrine so that he too becomes a prior casualty, a reversionist under discipline.
8. The third distracted disciple has the shaky priorities. He is confused about love and cannot interpret history in the light of the Word of God. He is described in Luke 9:61-62 which reads as follows: "Now another disciple also said, Lord, I will follow you; but first give me permission to say goodbye to those in my family. Now, Jesus replied face to face with him, No one, after having put his hand on the plough, and looking toward the things behind, is well-adjusted to the kingdom of God."

618 12/27/1978 Matthew 8:23–24a Crisis personality; noble things can distract; continuity; Bible doctrine in the soul for the crisis

Two medal of honor recipients.

Matthew 8:23, Those who were qualified, those who matriculated for the course: "And when he was entered into a ship, his disciples followed him".

We begin with the connective use of the conjunction kai which emphasizes a noteworthy fact, and is translated "nevertheless." This is an unusual use of the conjunction kai and it indicates that while many categories of believers fail in normal times there are those who take the course in normal times so they are prepared for abnormal times. They are prepared for disaster. The same course is now open to us. In spite of the fact that many believers are dropouts and do not matriculate for the course there are those who advance and are always ready in times of crisis. This is the crisis personality, a mature believer who is on the verge of reaching maturity and will continue with positive volition. The believer who is positive toward doctrine and has his momentum up and is approaching maturity or is already a spiritually mature believer, is always oriented to reality, whether it is reality in normal times or reality in abnormal times. He is oriented to reality because his happiness does not depend upon the circumstances of life.

Now this, of course, is the issue: the ability to orient to your circumstances. This is what is really important in life. Orientation to reality always uses the maximum indwelling Bible doctrine. The crisis personality is a mature or a strong believer who is always inflexible regarding the essentials but very flexible regarding nonessentials. And it is often that last part that is so important in disaster, flexibility regarding nonessentials, and is often the difference between surviving and not surviving in a disaster situation. Add to that all the doctrine that you have in your soul all comes through concentration. You concentrate and concentrate and take it into the left lobe as gnôsis (γνώσις) [pronounced GNOH-sis] and transfer it into the right lobe as epignôsis (ἐπίγνωσις) [pronounced ehp-IHG-noh-sis]. And that concentration is not a one-way system. The same system of concentration causes you to apply doctrine to the situation. You cannot survive historical disaster unless you have the ability to think in historical disaster, and not only to think but to come up with the right principle and the right application. So the very system by which you learn is the same system by which you apply what you have learned. It is concentration in times of disaster.

These people who board the ship have put doctrine first; they have remembered the Source; they are occupied with the person of Jesus Christ. Therefore, the crisis personality combines inflexibility regarding the essentials with flexibility regarding nonessentials. Add to that concentration and the ability to think. The crisis personality therefore can cope with any disaster in life, whether it is a personal one or historical. He does not follow any set pattern or is he moulded to some overt system which he must follow and from which he cannot depart. The crisis personality can do the right thing because he is flexible, he is concentrating, he is thinking. The disaster is not freezing his thought content, it is stimulating his thinking. He concentrates in disaster on what is important, the essentials, the inner residence of Bible doctrine. So the historical or crisis personality gives the strong or mature believer the opportunity to apply doctrine to reality and to therefore demonstrate the power of doctrine in life. The imputation of divine blessing to the mature blessing to the mature believer always includes undeserved suffering which is, in effect, a course, a preparation for historical disaster.

We have the word "nevertheless." Nevertheless there were those who matriculated for the course, they registered for the course in disaster dynamics. This is followed by the aorist active participle of the verb embainō (ἐμβαίνω) [pronounced em-BAhee-no], to embark. The aorist tense is a constative aorist and it refers to the fact that each person made a decision, and then his decision led to action, and he now finds himself in the course. All of that is gathered up into one entirety by the constative aorist. Jesus produces the action of the verb first and, of course, the positive disciples will follow. With this we have a prepositional phrase eis (εἰς) [pronounced ICE] plus the accusative singular of plōion (πλοῖον) [pronounced PLOY-on], a ship, not a boat.

"his disciples" - the nominative plural subject mathētēs (μαθητῆς) [pronounced math-ay-TAYÇ], and this time mathētēs (μαθητῆς) [pronounced math-ay-TAYÇ] refers to those who are positive believers. With this we have the genitive of relationship from the intensive pronoun autos (αὐτός) [pronounced ow-TOSS], and is used for the personal pronoun, third person, "his students," "his disciples."

Persistent Believers

1. These disciples or students represent believers who are persistent, who keep plugging and therefore are stable in the perception of doctrine. Nothing distracts them. [Note that the disciples we have studied are all distracted by legitimate things, not sinful things. Sin is not the issue in this passage]. There are distractions in life unrelated to sin.
2. They are therefore unremitting in their perseverance where doctrine is concerned. Nothing will replace doctrine and therefore they never lose the continuity of our Lord's teaching, which is analogous today to the continuity of Bible teaching. Continuity is everything.
3. These who board the ship are motivated to exploit the opportunity to learn doctrine and they are grateful to the Lord for the opportunity afforded by logistical grace. They are persistent and will go anywhere without being distracted; they will follow the Lord to learn doctrine.
4. Therefore, these who board the ship must be described as mentally indefatigable. They are persistent no matter what the subject happens to be.
5. These disciples follow our Lord into the ship, not knowing where they are going. As a matter of fact it doesn't make any difference. They are not looking at their future or thinking of their future in terms of advancement, they are looking at their immediate situation one day at a time, and that is to stay up with the Lord; where He goes, they go. In that sense they demonstrate persistence in positive volition.

6. Even systems of human security (which are legitimate) have been set aside in the priority battle of life. There is always something that is more important in life TO YOU PERSONALLY, and that is the issue in the priority battle. It is that something that either makes or breaks you as a believer. For if that something is doctrine then it is inevitable that you would have left the crowd and embarked on the ship with our Lord. But if there is something more important in life than doctrine it is also inevitable that the virtuous, the good, the wonderful, the pure, the honourable, can be just as distracting as anything sinful or anything evil.
7. The ship itself represents Bible doctrine inculcated. [Perception is not enough. Perception means some concentration and some perspicacity. But inculcation means authority, transferring it from the left lobe to the right lobe.]
8. In the ship with Christ is the only safe place to be in life. For us, since Christ is not on the earth, maximum doctrine resident in the soul is the only safety in life. It creates that great ring of fire (or wall of fire) that surrounds us and protects us from both unseen as well as visible danger. In the ship with Christ is the only place to face the storms of life, whether they are personal or historical.

Bad people are generally obvious; although some can be surreptitious. But it is often the good who distract others from Bible doctrine.

Jesus boards the ship and the disciples follow.

Next comes our verb, the aorist active indicative of akoloutheō (ἀκολουθέω) [pronounced ak-ol-oo-THEH-oh], to follow. Now, two categories of disciples who failed said: "I will follow you." Dedication! sincerity! emotion! The ones who spoke their good intentions did not carry out their good intentions, which goes to prove a point: giving these public dedications is absolutely useless and meaningless.

The people who followed Jesus on to the ship did what the dropouts said they would do but never did. The dropouts were all talk! But those who had Bible doctrine, those who were pluggers, those who persevered in the intake of doctrine, they were really the doers, not the ones who talked about it.

If you do anything in the Christian life the important thing is to do it from your own freewill, motivated by doctrine in your soul, not motivated by someone else inspiring you. If someone else has to inspire you, you are a weak sister, you are using a crutch. People must be motivated in the soul to succeed in disaster when the pressure is on.

The constative aorist gathers into one entirety the action of the positive believer. The active voice, the positive believers produce the action of the verb and the indicative mood is declarative, it represents the action from the viewpoint of reality.

We have one more word in this particular verse: the dative singular, indirect object from that intensive pronoun autos (αὐτός) [pronounced ow-TOSS], used again as a third person singular personal pronoun, "him."

Matthew 8:23 Nevertheless when He boarded the ship his disciples followed him.

Principle

1. Before the believer can face the storms of life he must enter the ship. Before you can matriculate in the course for disaster dynamics you must have doctrine - and you must be persistent and consistent in the intake of doctrine.
2. No storm or testing becomes a blessing until the believer enters the ship [follows the Lord]. Following the Lord is perception of doctrine; entering the ship is perception of doctrine.
3. The ship, therefore, is analogous to Bible teaching. And there are several ways in which this follows: first of all the ship was isolated. All Bible teaching is accomplished in isolation from the mob and from the normal functions of life. That is why we have a church; that is why the early church met in homes or away from the mob in catacombs or caves. Those who are learning doctrine must be separated to learn. The ship is on the water and is therefore isolated from the normal functions of life.
4. When the believer enters the classroom of the local church he is isolated from life's modus operandi.
5. Therefore, a classroom eliminates distraction so that concentration of doctrine will result in the perception of doctrine. And the same concentration will reverse it self for application of doctrine.
6. Once the believer gains that momentum from the consistent perception of doctrine [the hand on the plough analogy] he can face any storm or any disaster of life. But no storm, no disaster, becomes a test until the believer from his own freewill boards the ship and takes in doctrine. Adversity is never a test until you have some doctrine in your soul; adversity is never a blessing without doctrine in your soul. This is a slight advance on the faith-rest technique.

The second paragraph of Matthew chapter eight: the curriculum for disaster dynamics - verses 24 - 27. Class has begun, the ship has embarked from Capernaum, it is crossing the Sea of Tiberius.

"And there arose a great tempest in the sea, insomuch that the ship was covered with waves: but He was asleep."

We begin again with the connective use of the conjunction kai - this time it introduces a result which comes from what precedes. They have embarked, they have matriculated for the course. We translate it "And so," Next we have a demonstrative particle, idou (ἰδοῦ) [pronounced ih-DOO],. That particular form is the aorist middle imperative from horaō (ὁράω) [pronounced hoh-RAW-oh], except that it is accented as a particle rather than an aorist middle imperative. And so we will translate it, "And so, look what happened." That is exactly what it means.

Next comes the nominative singular subject, seismós (σεισμός) [pronounced sice-MOSS], the Greek word for shaking, but actually it meant a storm of any kind, not an earthquake.

Furthermore, we have an adjective with us, megas (μέγας, μεγάλη, μέγα) [pronounced MEH-gas] which indicates a force twelve storm. Then the aorist middle indicative from ginomai which, this time, means originated, "a great storm originated." Now, ginomai means that first of all the sea was so calm that it was like glass, and almost instantaneously the storm hit. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, used here for an action extended over a period of time. "And so look what happened, a great storm originated."

The place, of course, en (ἐν) [pronounced en] plus the locative singular of qalassa, a sea or a lake. This storm is the course. This is a deliberately produced terrible storm. The storm was the crisis, the course. Those who were positive and came aboard were those who had enough doctrine to persist in perception of doctrine. Now comes the test. Can you use it? You concentrated in learning. Can you reverse concentrate under great disaster conditions and use it?

The preparation for this course is quite obvious, perception in doctrinal teaching. The storm is designated by God to teach the futility of human resources of any kind in disaster. No energy of the flesh function, no talent, no ability, no power and no authority will provide safety or security. Furthermore, in a time of great crisis and disaster no nation is safe, no island is safe, no place of isolation, no powerful nation, is actually secure or safe in time of disaster. Therefore, the obvious part of the curriculum is that the only thing that is safe is the inner resources of Bible doctrine. Only the disciples who were positive to doctrine faced the storm. Because the negative believers had already been eliminated for various reasons and various excuses, all legitimate, they had refused to embark. In the storm positive believers learned who and what Christ is, they learned the importance of doctrine, and therefore the storms of life are designed to teach a higher form of security than anything we have ever known before, a security which is related to the manifest person of the Godhead, the Lord Jesus Christ. The sea, of course, is like the circumstances of life, it is variable. One moment it is very calm and very beautiful, representing the pleasant circumstances of life, usually associated with happiness, the next moment the sea becomes stormy and awesome in its fury. It represents therefore the disasters and the crises of life.

The ship itself represents maximum doctrine resident in the soul, or enough doctrinal resources to take the course, which doesn't always mean a mature believer but it does mean a believer who has long ago passed the point of ignorance of doctrine. With maximum doctrine resident in the soul the believer is above the circumstances of life; that is, he is not a slave to them. A storm doesn't frighten him, it doesn't take away his happiness, it doesn't take away his occupation with the Person of Jesus Christ. Circumstances are never the basis for blessing or happiness in life, only doctrine resident in the soul. And this is the major point which is taught in the crisis of the storm.

Principle

1. The adverse circumstances of life are like the stormy sea; they provide uncertainty and lack of human control. In effect, a disaster is a circumstance which is beyond your ability to control.

2. The ship is the only place of safety in the storm, just as Bible doctrine resident in the soul is the only security for the storms of life.
3. Bible doctrine resident in the soul is the basis for capacity for happiness and blessing. That same doctrine resident in the soul is the basis for blessing and confidence in adversity.
4. Many believers never get into the ship because they are distracted from doctrine by legitimate things. But those who do face the storm, face it not as a discipline but as a blessing in this course.
5. The only place of safety and security in the storm is the ship of Bible doctrine, God's Word resident in the soul through many sessions of Bible teaching.
6. No matter how intense the storm, no matter how great the crisis or the disaster, the ship is stabilized and safe for the ship is doctrine in the soul which cannot be destroyed.
7. Suffering for blessing is one of the categories of imputed blessing from the justice of God. And it is, of course, designed for the mature believer, though there is always one test prior to maturity.
8. This means that suffering is intimately linked to blessing in the divine imputation from the justice of God to the righteousness of God.
9. You cannot have blessing from suffering unless the disaster is real.

Lesson #619

619 12/28/1978 Matthew 8:24b–25a Deliverance; calm before the storm; sleep of Jesus Christ and security; panic; pseudo–prayer

Lieutenant Jack C. Montgomery 22February 1944. 11 enemy dead and 32 taken prisoner by Montgomery alone.

Verse 24b, ". insomuch that the ship was covered with the waves." A force 12 storm is the key.

Vicars Boyer who built a home, primarily for a place to drink beer and play pool. He began to realize that his neighbors were looking at him. They asked why did he not do this at home. He recognized that there would be a mutiny. He began to keep food there and weapons. When the mutiny hit, he had one of the finest bunkers around.

The pirates began to march on a place about 15 miles away. This guy persuaded 13 men to join him to defend this. The first day of the assault, they took tremendous losses and started then shooting from 300 yards. The 16 or so held off a few thousand. There was a lot of tunnel building back and forth. They played tunnel games. This took place in India where the British were the power there. In 60 days of the siege, they lost two people and killed about 1500 of the enemy. They had a great ball while most of India was having all kinds of problems. This was one of the greatest crisis of history and he had the greatest times in his life.

Principle

1. God does not deliver believers by cancelling the crisis. He delivers through the intensification of the crisis. The storm intensified. It started out as a great storm but now waves are going over the bridge.
2. The blessing comes not from stopping the storm instantly but from riding out the storm.
3. The mature believer who has the inner resources of Bible doctrine is delivered in the storm, not from the storm.
4. The real blessing is in the storm so that storm reality must be intensified with the result that all of those in the ship have a full and a total realisation of disaster circumstances.

The conjunction which begins with "insomuch" is actually the Greek particle hōste (ὥστε) [pronounced HOH-steh]. It introduces a result dependant clause following the indicative and should be translated, "so that," "with the result that." Next comes the nominative singular subject plōion (πλοῖον) [pronounced PLOY-on] with the definite article used to denote a previous reference, it is the same ship on which they embarked, "so that the ship." This is followed by a present passive infinitive from the verb kaluptō (καλύπτω) [pronounced kal-OOP-toe], to hide, to obscure, to cover, to conceal, "so that the ship was covered." Next comes our prepositional phrase hupó (ὑπό) [pronounced hoop-OH] plus the ablative of kuma (κύμα) [pronounced KOO-mah], waves.

Matthew 8:24a And so, look what happened, a great storm originated on the sea, so that the ship was covered by waves.

Principle

1. When the disciples embarked with our Lord the sea was calm. It gave no indication of the storm to come. And in this way it is analogous to the fact that today we have enough prosperity that to most people in this country the "sea" is calm. (There is enough assurance from politicians and dreamers that everything is going to be all right.)
2. So it is, of course, with crisis and disaster - you always have a calm before the storm. This is because people are stupid; politicians are worse than stupid. (I do not mean dumb or low IQ, but rather, stupid in the sense of arrogance). Arrogance is divorced from reality and therefore always looking on the bright side when the roof is about to fall in!
3. During the calm before the storm the only preparation which exists is in the soul - the thought pattern of the individual -, where there is something of value that you can have in this life and take with you into eternity - that is, the thought content of the soul. The doctrine you learn is more valuable than all the gold, money, power, authority, or anything the world has ever known. Bible doctrine in your soul is the most valuable commodity in life.

4. Therefore, preparation for disaster (and it is coming in our lifetime) demands doctrine resident in the soul. This is the dynamics for disaster. The storm is real, the danger is real.
5. Just as the storm came suddenly without warning, so great disaster comes suddenly without warning. Only a seaman would know that when things are so calm on the sea something is wrong. And some of you through doctrine have your "barometer" attuned to history and you are aware of how desperate and terrible things are in our country. The disaster is going to come.
6. The warning would have been useless once they had embarked. This illustrates the fact that we do not need warning for disaster, only doctrine, more doctrine, and more doctrine. What the disciples needed was to ride out the storm with the use of doctrine resident in the soul. It should have been fun!

This storm should have been a great ride for the disciples, but they were frightened out of their minds.

There are many preparations for disaster and many plans which are destroyed in a crisis. People often prepare for disaster but their preparations are swept away. They prepare by accumulating something that is wealth for a time of disaster; they prepare by isolating themselves from society in a place they have secured with provisions to ride out the storm. These, too, are swept away. The only real help in times of a storm is what you have in your soul. That is what counts. And God uses prepared people, this is what the disciples will learn from this storm. Prepared people are inculcated with doctrine. No human preparation can avoid catastrophe in time of disaster; it is divine faithfulness and divine deliverance that counts.

The next phrase: "but he was asleep." The post positive conjunctive particle de emphasizes a contrast between the disciples who are wide awake and becoming disturbed, and from being disturbed they will be frightened, and from being frightened they will become desperate. So the little word "but" indicates the contrast between the growing concern, the desperation, the panic of the disciples, and our Lord's obvious relaxed condition.

The nominative singular subject is the intensive pronoun autos (αὐτός) [pronounced ow-TOSS], used many times as a personal pronoun, third person. There is no third person personal pronoun in the Greek. There is egó (ἐγώ) [pronounced ehg-OH] for the first person, there is su for the second person, and autos (αὐτός) [pronounced ow-TOSS], the intensive pronoun, is used for the personal pronoun. And it is correctly translated, "h."

Then we have the imperfect active indicative from the verb katheudō (καθεύδω) [pronounced kath-YOO-doh], to be asleep. But He continued sleeping, the storm did not awaken Him. The imperfect tense is linear aktionsart in past time, which means that the fury of the storm, the roll of the ship, the pitch, etc. did not awaken the Lord. The active voice, Jesus Christ produced the action of the verb which was a perfect demonstration of a relaxed mental attitude. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the fact that our Lord did not awaken in the storm.

Principle

1. While the storm raged on the sea the Lord Jesus Christ is sound asleep on the ship.
2. Actually, only His humanity is sleeping, the deity of Christ never sleeps. Christ as God cannot sleep, does not sleep.
3. The question arises, of course: Why didn't the humanity of Christ awaken and utter assurances to the disciples?
4. They had all they needed by way of assurance in this great storm. They had doctrine resident in the soul, they did not need the Lord to stand up and tell them everything would be all right. They did not need personal attention in time of crisis. The Lord had taught them in a group Bible doctrine; they did not need the Lord to now tell each one personally it was all right. All they needed for Him to do was to sleep because His work was over, He had done His job. He had taught them doctrine.
 - a. No one else can think for you in a crisis, you have to think for yourself. You have to think doctrine, you have to concentrate.
 - b. Jesus does not have to wake up; He has done His job. He has communicated all the necessary doctrine to them.
 - c. Notice that the Lord Jesus Christ was not going to be their crutch. You are a weak sister when you have to run to someone else and constantly get help. They had doctrine resident in the soul, they did not need personal attention.
5. Whether awake or asleep the status quo depends, not on our Lord's being awake or asleep, but on the doctrine each disciple has in his soul. He must possess it himself.
6. The disciples all understood the doctrine of the hypostatic union. Therefore, the deity of Christ was totally cognizant of the situation, not only at that moment currently, but billions of years ago the omniscience of the Lord Jesus Christ had known as actuality that storm on the sea and had fed into the computer of divine decrees the proper information, so that the printout was a course in disaster dynamics. He knew in eternity past (alpha time) that this would occur and had already provided everything necessary. The disciples knew that, so it was a matter of application.
7. It is doctrine you learn, doctrine you understand, that makes you spiritually self-sustaining so that you depend on the inner resources of doctrine in catastrophe rather than encouragement, attention, or counselling from someone else.
8. Therefore, part of the course is the fact that our Lord is sleeping. Our Lord sleeps so that the disciples will not become spiritual cripples. They do not need the Lord for a crutch. What they need is Bible doctrine He has previously taught them.
 - a. In other words, when you get into a major disaster that isn't the time to learn the whole realm of doctrine. You can't play tapes all day when you get into a disaster!
 - b. Playing tapes at double time is a rejection of Bob's authority.
9. No matter how strong the wind, no matter how high or how heavy the seas, no matter how the ship rolls, with Jesus Christ aboard they are perfectly safe.

10. The application to us should be obvious assurance. Jesus Christ controls history.
11. By sleeping in the storm our Lord teaches the importance of inner resources of doctrine. He is actually doing them a favour by remaining asleep.
12. Even in basics they would learn faith-rest, and they've had their basics. In the same context the Roman officer came all of the way from his post to Capernaum and there had the faith-rest technique so indoctrinated that when he asked to have his son healed, and the Lord said, I will go with you," he said, "No, I am a man under authority and I understand your authority. I know that you can stand right here and demand my son be healed and he will be healed." And our Lord said: "I have not found so great a faith in all of Israel." The centurion's son was healed that same hour. "As thou hast believed, so be it unto thee" .So the disciples already had the basics in faith-rest.
13. The disciples followed Christ into the ship but they did not follow Him in the ship by relaxing in time of storm.

Principle

1. With the Lord Jesus Christ aboard it is impossible for the ship to sink. No ship has a stabilizer like this.
2. No storm of life is greater than the power of the Lord Jesus Christ.
3. We have to conclude that when the sailors are scared it is an awesome storm. Four of the disciples were professional seamen. When a sailor is frightened, it is a serious storm.
4. The failure or panic occurs in the next verse because the disciples had their eyes on the storm rather than their eyes on the Lord. One of the simplest of all principles for disaster: if you have your eyes on the disaster you will fail; if you are occupied with Christ you will make it. But occupation with Christ demands prior Bible indoctrination - day in and day out.
5. Testing through catastrophe and disaster always brings out what a person really is and what he has. If what he has is doctrine he really is a hero in time of catastrophe.
6. No one becomes strong in the storm, he becomes strong before the storm. The storm merely brings out your strength, your courage. You have these things before the storm; the storm merely brings out what you have.
7. The disciples had doctrine but they didn't use it. Reason: the doctrine they had down was not nailed down through concentration. It was picked up through interest perspicacity - i.e. you listen carefully when the subject interests you but if the subject seems dull and about things you don't care about, then you don't listen. So the result is that when you put it together in your soul you only have things that interest you, not things you need. Therefore, you are not prepared. Without concentration regarding all subjects of doctrine you do not have concentration for application of any subjects of doctrine in catastrophe.
8. However, they will learn because this is a course for dynamics in disaster. They will learn from this pressure test of the storm that doctrine must be applied in disaster, just as doctrine is applied in normal circumstances of life - that regardless of circumstances you must always be applying doctrine.

9. Courage and strength are not developed in disaster, they are developed before disaster. Courage and strength are something you carry with you into the storm. There is no way that you can muster instant courage. Emotion will not carry in a real disaster.

Matthew 8:24 And so, look what happened, a great storm originated on the sea, so that the ship was covered by waves; but He [the Lord Jesus Christ] kept right on sleeping.

Verse 25 - How to fail the course, or panic under pressure! First of all we have a connective kai introducing a result from what precedes, translated "consequently." Then we have the subject, hoi mathêtai autou which, however, is not found in the original. The correct translation is simply, "Consequently they approached" or "they came," the aorist active participle of proserchomai (προσέρχομαι) [pronounced pros-ER-khom-ahēe], to come to or to approach. The constative aorist was for instantaneous action. They panicked and all ran to Him. [All panic comes from emotion. They are not thinking because they are emotional.]

Then we have the aorist active indicative of egeirō (ἐγείρω) [pronounced ehg-Ī-row], a verb used in two ways: for resurrection and for waking someone up. "they wakened him."

Matthew 8:25a Consequently having approached they roused him.

Principle

1. Human panic always assumes that the Lord is sleeping or not paying attention to YOU in disaster. People are so arrogant and so full of self-pity and so emotional that they fail to come up with the simplest application of doctrine. Not only is the Lord paying attention to you but the Lord knew about your personal problems, the catastrophes of history which you encounter, billions of years ago. But just as soon as some disaster hits the Lord has forgotten us! Therefore, we must wake Him up! We must do something so that God will stop this terrible thing! That is how idiotic people are.
2. Human panic is also the source of pseudo prayer - praying when you shouldn't be, praying a false prayer - fear, worry, anxiety, and perhaps even guilt complex.
3. People seem to attribute their helplessness in a catastrophe to their past failures or sins, and because they are arrogant they immediately assume that God is punishing them for something that happened in the past. They forget that God keeps short accounts; they forget that the disciples that God punished didn't even get aboard the ship. This is not divine discipline.
4. You cannot receive the blessing of undeserved suffering while harbouring a guilt complex.
5. Rebound is designed to remove the guilt complex, which is not only a sin but an emotional aberration.

6. Obviously the disciples are not waiting on the Lord, or waiting for His will, or enjoying the storm, or beginning to note the obvious - the ship is going to ride out the storm.
7. Like most believers they are running far ahead or else lagging far behind. In this case emotion moves them way ahead, they see themselves drowning in the sea.
8. It never occurred to the disciples to ride out the storm and see what the Lord had for them.
9. Remember again that the humanity of Christ was sleeping, not His deity. They were perfectly safe; the Lord knew billions of years ago in eternity past their circumstances at this moment and had already made provision for them to ride out the storm. They had forgotten the most basic principle in life: God has a purpose for your life and as long as that purpose continues you will ride out every storm. And only when He sees fit to take you home does His purpose for your life cease. Until then He still has a purpose for your life.
10. It was totally unnecessary to wake up the Lord. They could have claimed very simply, Deuteronomy 33:27 - "The eternal God [Jesus Christ] is our refuge and underneath are the everlasting arms."
11. Or this was the time to apply doctrine. The application did not call for panic and it did not call for waking up the Lord. With the Lord Jesus Christ in the ship the vessel is stabilized in the storm though it continues to roll and corkscrew in the giant waves.

"they woke him up, saying," - the present active participle (is strong linear aktionsart) of légō (λέγω) [pronounced LEH-goh]. They said it again and again and again. And they used the vocative, kurios (κύριος) [pronounced KOO-ree-oss], "Lord," and they used the very word they didn't seem to understand. It means deity. They are saying "God," deity, and yet they are not applying the deity of Christ to the situation. Which all goes to prove that a believer who flunks a disaster test is the most mixed-up person who could possibly live.

So the vocative is used for the deity of Christ and the believer who fails to apply doctrine to experience or fails to use the faith-rest technique in time of disaster is always inconsistent, irrational, incapable of clear thinking. They called Jesus Lord but they are afraid. Jesus as Lord is God; as God He has delivered them in eternity past and they should be enjoying the storm. This vocative is a reminder that the believer must concentrate, he must think doctrine in time, think rationally under pressure, in order to be great in time of disaster.

"Save" - the aorist active imperative of sōzō (σώζω) [pronounced SOHD-zoh] and it means here rescue us. We might ask, from what? You are still alive, still aboard ship.

1977 Romans

Lesson #620

620 12/29/1978 Matthew 8:25b Infantry; panic and promises; disaster has divine purpose; thinking under pressure

Three categories of dropouts; one category of growing believers.

Bob quotes the poem, I am the infantry.

Too many believers today are too easily distracted.

Matthew 8:25 Consequently having approached [that is, having gone to Him] they woke Him up screaming, "Save us, Lord, we are being wrecked."

Verse 25 - They used the vocative kurios (κύριος) [pronounced KOO-ree-oss], "Lord," in which they understood that Jesus Christ is God, and since they could observe Him sleeping they obviously understood the hypostatic union. Only His humanity was sleeping, deity never sleeps, the omniscience of His deity knew billions of years ago that this situation would exist. They knew doctrine but they could not apply it; they had ability to take it one way but not put it back through the same concentration. For the real secret is always the same, it is the principle of concentration. You never learn doctrine by sitting in church, you learn doctrine by concentrating in church. And the concentrator takes the doctrine in and converts it from gnosis to epignôsis (ἐπίγνωσις) [pronounced ehp-IHG-noh-sis] so that in time of pressure that same concentrator applies it out.

"Save us" - the aorist active imperative of sôzô (σώζω) [pronounced SOHD-zoh], to deliver. The disciples recognized their own helplessness in the storm and begged the Lord to produce the action of the verb instead of waiting for the Lord to produce the action of the verb. But what they do not understand is that they have been prepared for one year for this storm for resident in their souls is the preparation; they have learned the necessary doctrine. This storm would never have occurred were it not for the fact that they were already prepared for it. You never prepare for disaster in disaster, you always prepare for disaster long before the disaster occurs. Normal times are designed for such preparation so that in abnormal times you can have the same happiness, the same blessing, the same stability, the same principle of being spiritually self-sustaining. It is doctrine resident in the soul which this time is reversed and the concentration in disaster is moving in the direction of the disaster so that you can apply whatever is necessary at the right time.

And by virtue of the fact that they were saying, "Lord, save us," indicates that they had one half a lesson. One half that they understood was their helplessness but the other half of the lesson is from doctrine resident in their soul. They do not need to wake up the Lord. The very fact that the Lord is sleeping tells them the whole story. They do not need His counsel, they do not need words of encouragement, they have all of the resources as inner resources of Bible doctrine. They do not need anything from the Lord at this time; He doesn't have to counsel them, that would make them weak and would mean that they were using the Lord for a crutch instead of their source of doctrine.

The imperative of entreaty, then, indicates the fear and the panic of the disciples, for a half lesson is no lesson. To recognize your own helplessness also means that you must flip over the coin and recognize the strength of the Lord, the ability of the Lord, the greatness of the Lord, and the whole principle of the plan of God that as long as you are alive God has a purpose for your life and all of the storms in the world cannot possibly destroy or remove you from this life. There was a purpose, this was the lesson; the storm was the lesson; the storm was designed to teach them the importance of using the most valuable thing in the world - Bible doctrine resident in the soul. Jesus Christ asleep or awake on board that ship is the stabilizer and no storm and no disaster can destroy the ship. Security plus capacity for life means that the disciples in the ship should have been enjoying the storm.

Then they added something that was not true, the present passive indicative of the verb apollumi (ἀπόλλυμι) [pronounced ap-OL-loo-mee], which means to be destroyed, to be lost, to be ruined, to be perishing, to be dying. They are not dying. No ship was ever safer than the one in which our Lord was sleeping. They are able to scream loudly and to enunciate, so they were safe as can be. No matter how great the storm the One who is sleeping in that ship is greater than all the storms of history. By lack of the faith-rest technique the disciples are being destroyed spiritually by the waves but not physically. Spiritually they are full of fear and when you are frightened you cannot concentrate, when you are full of anxiety you cannot concentrate, when you are distracted by other people you cannot concentrate.

“You cannot know the disgust and the vocabulary that I have for you if you are in class, but you are thinking of something else.”

The verse then says: Consequently, having gone to him, they woke Him up screaming, “Save us, Lord; we are being wrecked.”

Matthew 8:25 Consequently having approached [that is, having gone to Him] they woke Him up screaming, “Save us, Lord, we are being wrecked.”

Principle

1. The course in disaster dynamics requires the inculcation and application of Bible doctrine to a real catastrophe. The catastrophe has to be real, it has to be dangerous. Therefore, a force 12 storm. But they are safe, perfectly safe. The unusual motion should have been fun for them.
2. The requirement is the modus operandi of the faith-rest technique. For mature believers not verses but doctrines must be applied. For the immature, Grab a verse!
3. For those, then, who lack doctrine certain promises would be pertinent. They would all know Isaiah 41:10 Do not fear, for I am with you; do not be afraid, for I am your God. I will strengthen you; I will surely help you; I will uphold you with My right hand of righteousness. There are passages that the disciples could have claimed: Deuteronomy 31:6, 8 Isaiah 6:3–4 (Note: A change of circumstance in your life is never designed to make you miserable. Any change in your life for the worse is not designed for your misery, it is designed for your blessing, it is designed for your happiness. It is designed to demonstrate to all those around you how Bible doctrine is the stabilizer in life). Psalm 55:22 1Samuel 17:37 Exodus 14:13–14

The disciples were miserable because they thought they were going to die. They were miserable because they were occupied with the circumstances of life rather than the One who had provided the circumstances, the Lord Jesus Christ.

Matthew 8:25 Consequently having approached [that is, having gone to Him] they woke Him up screaming, "Save us, Lord, we are being wrecked."

Principle

1. Disaster always has a divine purpose. There never was a time when disaster did not have a purpose.
2. The purpose may be discipline or it may be blessing but even if it is discipline it is blessing. (Let's get this spanking over with and get to something else! But that was behind me.) At least you know that when the Lord is disciplining you He is keeping track of you; He loves you. And, of course, if you have rebounded then the cursing is turned into blessing, right in the middle of the disaster. You will never have suffering in your life for which God does not have some purpose. And if you have kept up your doctrine on a daily basis then you will understand that purpose, find profit from the purpose, and find happiness in disaster. For the positive believer the divine design in disaster is blessing and that is why the Lord was sound asleep. What is disaster to us is nothing to the Lord. And if it is nothing to Him that means that He controls the disaster whether He is awake or asleep.
3. The fact that Christ was sleeping was an invitation to the disciples to relax and enjoy the storm.
4. The incorrect procedure, which caused them all to flunk, is to awaken the Lord to beg for help. It meant they were not using the doctrine residing in their souls; they were not concentrating in the disaster; they were not thinking under pressure. If you cannot think under pressure you cannot handle disaster.
5. The disciples had all the help they needed resident in their souls.
6. They should have awakened in their souls and applied doctrine but instead they awakened the Lord, using Him as a crutch to apply doctrine for them. They were cowards.
7. The Lord was asleep so that they would have to use their own inner resources of doctrine - they would have to apply what they had learned.
8. This would have given them strength and practice for the next disaster and prepare them for blessing in adversity.
9. Being fishermen and sailors they had the opportunity of living through one of the greatest storms in history and surviving without any water in their lungs. In fact the storm was not designed to make them corpses but to give them the feel of disaster and how important it is to think.
10. The believer with doctrine in his soul may be helpless in disaster but never hopeless.
11. Confidence and security from doctrine resident in the soul is capacity for life, happiness in time of disaster.

12. They should have applied doctrine and claimed promises so that when the storm was over they could wake up the Lord and thank Him for the doctrine they had learned, and how they had finally discovered something; doctrine in the soul can be applied, you can think in a storm instead of panic in a storm. However, the disciples all flunked because they woke Him up before the storm was over.

1977 Romans

Lesson #621

621 12/31/1978 Matthew 8:26a Jesus Christ's reprimand of the disciples; cowards; concentration in training produces thinking in the crisis

Proverbs 23:7 tells us that the real "you" is what you think. You are what you think as an individual with capacity for thought as well as the possession of a soul.

We have already noted that fear is lack of concentration in a crisis. The disciples panicked in the storm while our Lord kept on sleeping. We have seen the significance of His action; only His humanity was sleeping, His deity had known of this problem billions of years ago and had made provision for it. Actually the disciples were perfectly safe; this was their opportunity to use the system of concentration by which they had come to perception of doctrine. They failed to do this; they wanted to lean upon our Lord, demonstrating their own weakness. They already had the mind of Christ in the form of Bible doctrine and had enough information to apply to the catastrophe; yet they failed to concentrate and to think in the time of disaster.

We cannot blame our politicians because they represent us. All freedom comes through military victory. There is no freedom in China, Russia, Cuba, etc.

Liberalism produces arrogance. Equality is the great enemy of freedom. Freedom demands that no government have absolute power; just delegated power. Our government has been infected by Marxist socialism.

The rise of the Marxist cults. There is no way that a mob is helpful to anyone. Verse 26 - the post-mortem, a double reprimand.

"And he saith unto them, Why are ye fearful, O ye of little faith?" This is first of all a reprimand to the disciples. It will be followed by a reprimand to the sea.

Our first word in the Greek is the connective use of the conjunction kai which introduces a result. And we translate a result from what precedes as "And so." Next we have the communication of our Lord, "and he said." The historical present tense views the present tense with the vividness of a present occurrence. Just as our Lord spoke to the disciples some two thousand years ago he speaks to us today. The active voice, the awakened Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb. He should have continued sleeping for they needed not to depend on someone else, they needed to get away from counselling, they needed to use their own inner resources of doctrine.

With this we have the dative plural, indirect object from the intensive pronoun autoj, correctly translated "to them." "And he said to them," the lesson is for those aboard ship. Those who have failed are not even going to learn the lesson. [Here the lesson is to be learned, not by passing the course but, by failing the course] Their failure is the basis for teaching them the great lessons of dynamics in disaster.

With this we have a nominative neuter singular from the interrogative pronoun tij which introduces the question from which they are to learn. Then we have the present active indicative from the verb e)imi, the verb to be; "Why are you?" The progressive present signifies action in a state of persistence, in this case erroneous action. They have done the wrong thing and they are going to learn from their failure. The active voice: the disciples in the ship, apparently to a man, produce the action of the verb. The interrogative indicative is used for the viewpoint of reality implied; "fearful," cowards. The predicate nominative plural from the word deiloj. And it is not the fact that these men were physical cowards. That is not really the point at all. For cowardice is not an issue with regard to things that you normally would not fear. Many people have an area of strength and many people have an area of weakness. There is something that everyone fears in life and there are many things in life which cause no fear at all. But that is not the meaning here. A coward is defined as a person who cannot think in time of disaster. "Consequently he said to them, Why are you cowards?" This is the question which begins the course in disaster dynamics.

Principle

1. You will note that the Lord reprimands the disciples in the ship, not the disciples who failed and did not board the ship. Many of the disciples had failed and were dropouts but this is a course for those who are positive toward doctrine and those who had learned enough doctrine to pass the test. The failure will be the basis for teaching the lesson. You will also notice that the disciples were reprimanded before the sea was rebuked. The sea is calm after the course is over and not before.
2. By doing this the Lord establishes the priorities of this situation. What is more important, calming the sea or clarifying the issue to believers? Obviously clarifying the issue to believers. The soul of the believer and the lesson to be learned is far more important than removing the historical disaster.
3. The order of events, then: first the disciples are censured and then Christ expunges the storm.
4. There is an analogy in the fact that the disciples are out of hand, matching the fury of the storm - which is also out of hand.
5. It will take a long time to bring the disciples into control because their recovery demands daily positive volition over a long period of time, the concentration in learning the doctrine so that the next time applying it under pressure will be there.
6. But the storm, on the other hand, will be instantly controlled because the storm is a part of the material universe and it responds instantly to the Lord Jesus Christ who is the creator.
7. For the Lord, dealing with the storm is simple. But with the disciples it will require a day by day recognition of our Lord's authority and responding to it by the perception of Bible doctrine.

8. In other words, the disciples must learn and relearn doctrine so that the application in the future will be instantaneous - the instant reflex of the right lobe filled with Bible doctrine.
9. Cowardice and fear destroys the power of thinking and reasoning in a crisis. It is absolutely essential that the believers think in the crisis for thinking is the only means of applying doctrine. Applying doctrine means thinking doctrine.

"Consequently he said to them, Why are you cowards?"

Principle

1. First of all we should note that cowards never enjoy anything. All cowards are arrogant. Arrogance is a part of cowardice, an overestimation of one's own value in any situation. Therefore, arrogant people always have hang-ups, they always have to prove something.
2. Rarely does a man have the opportunity of enjoying a force twelve storm. The disciples were fishermen and should have been exhilarated by the storm. They should have been looking at the sleeping Christ and know that they were perfectly safe. The fact that He was asleep should have reminded them of the hypostatic union and its application.
3. Whether awake or asleep Jesus Christ was aboard and that meant perfect safety.
4. A storm at sea is an awesome spectacle. It should have been one of the great moments of the disciples' life, provided of course that they understood that they were perfectly safe, and provided they applied doctrine. But you must always remember the principle: fear always wipes out capacity for life. Circumstances should not change one's attitude where doctrine is applied. Remember, it is the persistence in the perception of doctrine, it is daily concentration, that gives you reverse concentration in adversity. In other words, when you have to concentrate every day on the teaching of the Word it is the habit of concentration in normal times that leads to the concentration in abnormal times.
5. The disciples had the perfect opportunity to enjoy a force 12 storm.
6. Fear wipes out your capacity for life.
7. Circumstances does not change the doctrine in your soul.

We need one good national disaster in order to clean up our country.

Thinking doctrine is our solution. You learn how do deal with abnormal times by preparing in normal times.

Principle

1. Fear in the storm is not lack of doctrine; fear in the storm is failure to apply doctrine.
2. Some people have doctrine but have not learned to apply that doctrine. So God provides storms in life, storms to teach the believer to apply doctrine in the same way that he learned doctrine [concentration, thinking, thinking].

3. The crises of life prepare for the disasters of life. But facing a personal crisis is no good unless you have doctrine with which to face it. So the secret to disaster is consistent academic concentration on those subjects which are applicable to disaster. God provides the charge of the mosquito to prepare you for the charge of the elephant. But you do not face the charge of the mosquito until you understand some doctrine.
4. Undeserved suffering is simply practice for historical catastrophe.
5. We must learn to shoot on the range before we enter combat to shoot at the enemy.
6. We must learn from the crisis to apply doctrine before we apply doctrine to the disaster.
7. Cowardice or fear automatically shuts down any application of doctrine resident in the soul. Cowardice or fear is switching to emotion instead of thought.
8. The believer cannot think when he is frightened. Therefore, he cannot apply doctrine when in a state of shock or fear.
9. With many of these disciples the cowardice or fear was temporary. They would learn the great lesson from their failure. In other words, once a coward always a coward is not true. Cowardice is lack of thinking in the crisis. One must cultivate the art of thinking in the crisis and having done so cowardice has gone.

Lesson #622

622 12/31/1978 Matthew 8:26b Distracting self from Bible doctrine; "short time trusters" fail in concentration and application of Bible doctrine

Jesus, when surrounded by a mob, evaluated the situation to determine what to do. Approbation from a crowd is worthless. A mob destroys human freedom; it rejects authority, it destroys private property, it easily succumbs to rumor and propaganda. Freedom is lost in the crowd or the mob; people are subject to irrational whims.

Jesus must separate from this mob with a command. For learning, the first issue is authority. There must be authority and there must be response to authority. There must be separation in order to learn. That is what a church is. The pseudo-intellectual is the first dropout. He believed that he was speaking to an equal. He did not submit to the Lord's authority. He was arrogant and he would accept no authority but his own. He thought that his high IQ and quickness with words, that he is superior to all others. This divorces him from reality in life. He is arrogant with regards to the nonessentials.

No believer in his spiritual life stands still. He goes forward or backward. It is all in your attitude toward the teaching of the Word of God.

Joe Paterno (a college football coach) wanted a team of guys who are students first. Practice can make you worse or practice can make you better. Everyday, you are worse or you are better; and this is based upon Bible doctrine. Pseudo-intellectuals need simple concepts and simple explanation.

The fox is clever like the scribe; the fox has a den and so has the scribe. To the fox, that is its security. Any system of human security can be destroyed. There no money, no authority, no system in life, which can provide security. Security is the monopoly of God. The bird is said to be in the atmosphere, which makes it safe (at that time). This was a place of prominence. This person refuses Bible doctrine and clings to other things as security in life.

Vv. 21–22 the protocol disciple. He recognizes the Lord's authority. He asks to bury his father. The legitimate aspects of society should not distract the believer. There are legitimate functions in life; but they can distract you from Bible doctrine. The conflict is, society says to attend the funeral. Jesus told him to follow Him instead.

The third disciple is found in Luke 9:61–62. The very source of his very own happiness is Bible doctrine. He will fail the Lord and he would fail his family. He did not matriculate for this family.

Jesus gives him the plow parable. No one putting his hand on the plow and looking back is well-adjusted to the plan of God.

We begin the port-mortem study of v. 26. Some points previously given are repeated with some additional material added.

The disciples did right by entering into the ship, but they had not learned to provide it. They were frightened and they could not apply doctrine. Anyone can remove himself from cowardice by concentrating on doctrine.

Matthew 8:26 "You of little faith," Jesus replied, "why are you so afraid?" Then He got up and rebuked the winds and the sea, and it was perfectly calm. (BSB)

In verse 26 we have a vocative in the King James version: "O ye of little faith?" Actually it is only one word in the Greek, oligópiſtos (ὀλιγόπιſτος) [pronounced ohl-ihg-OHP-is-toss]. That form is a vocative plural. It is a compound word: oligos (ὀλίγος) [pronounced ol-EE-goss], small, little, short; pistis (πίστις) [pronounced PIHS-tihs] not only means faith but also means doctrine. It does not mean short of doctrine here though because these disciples have enough doctrine to pass the course. So they are not short on doctrine, but they are short on something.

Notice here that our Lord did not call them faithless, apistía (ἀπιſτία) [pronounced ap-is-TEE-ah], unfaithful. These are positive believers and are the ones who boarded the ship. He also could have called them ápiſtos (ἄπιſτος) [pronounced AH-pis-tos] which would have meant, in effect, that they had missed Bible class now and again. But they haven't. But He did call them oligópiſtos (ὀλιγόπιſτος) [pronounced ohl-ihg-OHP-is-toss]. What does this mean? The adjective oligos (ὀλίγος) [pronounced ol-EE-goss] connotes qualitative concepts and could be translated "few." It also has a quantitative connotation whereby it means "small," "little" or "short." This adjective also has the connotation of duration, short duration, short time. And that is exactly the way we should translate it "short time trusters."

Matthew 8:26a "Consequently," He said to them, "Why are you cowards, you short time trusters."

What does it mean to be a short time truster?

Remember that these were believers with a lot of doctrine; these were believers who were brought out to take the test. Which means that they had the doctrine to pass the test, which they didn't .Why? They were short time trusters.

What Is a Short Time Truster?

1. As long as things are pleasant and relatively quiet certain believers are experts at applying doctrine.
2. But as soon as there is a crisis or a disaster they simply cannot apply what they have learned. Why? Because they have picked up doctrine by being quick but not by concentrating. And they listen when they feel like it instead of concentrating perpetually, persistently. This is the great issue. You have to persist in Bible doctrine and they won't do it. [If you concentrate in learning you will also concentrate in pressure]
3. Again you have to learn like the soldier who shoots well on the range but he doesn't do well under combat conditions. Once you have pressure on him he doesn't do well. Why? Under pressure he cannot concentrate. The believer is like the soldier who forgets his training in combat.

"Why are you cowards, you short time trusters?"

Principle

1. The vocative answers the question. The reprimand explains their status quo. They are cowards because they are short time trusters.
2. In other words, they are failures in the field of concentration, for faith-rest is a form of concentration. Trusting the Lord is a form of concentration, it is thinking, thinking, thinking, not emoting.
3. As long as there is no challenge they are content to enjoy our Lord's messages and miracles.
4. But when the crisis approaches and disaster comes they go into shock and they cannot concentrate, there is no doctrinal thinking. Doctrinal thinking is frozen.

1977 Romans

Lesson #623

623 12/31/1978 Matthew 8:26c–27 Counseling; instant obedience of nature; Beaufort Scale; posture in teaching cf. in command

The disciples had doctrine but they hadn't used it and they have failed in the principle of 2Corinthians 5:7, "For we walk by faith and not by sight." This means that any believer who seeks help or counsel, or uses someone else as a crutch, other than doctrine resident in his own soul, to that extent he is weak and is going backward. You will never have a test for which you have not had opportunity first to learn the pertinent doctrine. [There is no concentration in counselling; nor is there any academic discipline.] The believer who constantly seeks help and counsel from others in time of disaster never develops the ability to apply doctrine in time of pressure. Therefore, he fails in the historical crisis. So a principle emerges: doctrine is taught so that doctrine can be applied. Doctrine resident in the soul is not only the means of spiritual advance, it is designed for application to life. The believer must become spiritually self-sustaining in the storm and that requires doctrine.

"Then he arose." All of this time He was sitting down or even lying down. Now He stands up.

We begin with the correlative adverb of time, tote, which means at that time or then. After He had reprimanded the disciples from the reclining position He comes to attention to stop the storm. This adverb of time indicates a sequence of events in the order of importance. It is far more important to admonish the disciples than to rebuke the storm. Furthermore, the storm must continue while the disciples are being reprimanded. The order emphasizes the soul as the battleground of the angelic conflict. The storm is not the centre of the angelic conflict, it is the soul of every believer involved. And the issue inevitably deals with the thought content of the soul - doctrine versus human viewpoint, thought under pressure versus emotion under pressure. All human dynamics are related to thought, never to emotion. Therefore the importance of the doctrinal mental attitude.

Principle

1. The storm has no soul, it is just wind, water and temperature.
2. This was no ordinary storm, it was a real typhoon type storm.

"Then when he arose and rebuked the winds and the sea." We have an aorist passive participle of the verb egeirō (ἐγείρω) [pronounced ehg-Ī-row], to raise up, to awaken, to get up, to stand up. Next, another verb, the aorist active indicative of the verb epitimaō (ἐπιτιμάω) [pronounced ehp-ee-tee-MAH-oh], to reprimand, to reprove, to censor. "Then when he arose he reprimanded." Again, we have the culminative aorist in which He simply gave a very short and terse command. The aorist in its culminative form can be instantaneous but it always emphasizes a result. And the result, of course, is a calm sea.

We note that He reprimanded the disciples from a sitting or a reclining position. When He was awakened He did not stand up, He was either still reclining or He moved to a sitting position. But when He reprimands the sea our Lord is standing at attention. This brings up the issue of posture. The question is now: Why the change in posture?

The disciples were in a classroom. Therefore, in a teaching situation the posture of the teacher is not important. It is no issue in a teaching situation, it is the content that is important. What is being taught is the issue. However, Jesus Christ is the Lord of nature and the posture where nature is concerned is very important. Now He is the "commanding officer" and when He gives a command; instant obedience from nature.

People you teach have souls and must perceive. There must be the communication from the teacher to the individual and it must get into his soul. Posture is not issue. But He commands nature. Nature has no soul. In one case He is the "commanding officer." In the other case He is the teacher. In both cases He has authority but the difference is that people have souls with volition and must respond from the volition. Whereas a storm has no soul at all. It is just an order to the storm.

The disciples were in a classroom where the posture of the teacher was not an issue. The storm was "on parade" where the posture of the "commanding officer" must be compatible with the situation. Therefore, He stood up to stop the storm. This means that there is a protocol for every situation. And our Lord observed not only the priorities of reprimand but the posture that relates to each category. The basic issue in teaching is not posture but the information communicated. The basic issue in stopping the storm is the authority of command.

First of all the wind must be put under control. So we have a dative plural indirect object from the noun anemos (άνεμος) [pronounced AN-em-oss]. The wind must be controlled first. As long as there is a wind the sea is going to be up. Then we have a conjunction kai and then a second dative singular indirect object from thálassa (θάλασσα) [pronounced THAHL-ahs-sah], the sea. Even the order is important.

Notice: The verb implies voice usage. He use His voice, He taught (reprimanded) the disciples. He used His voice, He stopped the lesson, the pressure. The voice of our Lord Jesus Christ could be heard in the storm and the disciples heard every word. Then the storm heard His voice as He gave an order first to the wind and then to the sea. And, of course, when the Word of the Lord penetrates there is instant obedience, instant calm, no matter how great the prior turmoil And the Lord is also using this to demonstrate a lesson, not only to the disciples, but to us. Penetration of the mind of Christ in your soul replaces the turmoil of your soul with calm. No matter what the situation you can have absolute calm in your soul.

"and there was a great calm" - this is the connective use of kai to show that all of it is related to the sea and the command to the sea. Actually we have an aorist active indicative of ginomai and it should be translated "and it became."

Principle

1. The Lord of the sea gave one command and there was instant calm.
2. This means the storm subsided immediately.
3. What appears to be a miracle was merely the Lord controlling His own creation.
4. The material universe or nature does not possess a soul with a freewill and self-determination, it is under instant obedience to the Lord Jesus Christ.

5. Nature recognizes the authority of our Lord immediately. The force twelve storm was instantly over. The disciples needed the calm to learn the lesson. They could not learn the lesson while the gale was going full force. They needed a calm sea on which to think. They had just demonstrated they couldn't think under pressure. Our Lord removes the pressure so they can learn the lesson.

In calming the storm our Lord also presented His credentials to the disciples so that they could learn to know that the Lord of the storm is to them the Lord in the storm. Psalm 34:19 Many are the afflictions of the righteous, but the Lord delivers him out of all of them.

Matthew 8:26 "Consequently," He said to them, "Why are you cowards, you short time trusters." And then when He got up, He reprimanded the winds and the seas and it became perfectly calm.

Peter remembers this incident twice in his epistles.

1Peter 1:7-8 That the proof of your faith, being much more precious than gold which perishes even though tested by fire, may be found to result in praise and glory and honour at the revealing of Jesus Christ; And though you have not seen Him you love Him: and though you do not see Him now, but believe in Him, you greatly rejoice with joy inexpressible and full of glory.

The superficiality of failure.

Matthew 8:27 But the men marveled, saying, What manner of man is this, that even the winds and the sea obey Him?

Here is the reason that the disciples failed. They were impressed with the wrong things. They were impressed with His power. They called it a miracle although it was just a simple use of His authority. He performed this simple use of authority in such a way that they were impressed with the fact that a force twelve storm suddenly dropped to zero. No believer can be impressed with the Lord, however, until he is impressed with His doctrine. And here is their superficiality: they were impressed with His power but not with His message. They ought to be impressed with His message and then they will understand His power. It is easy for the Lord to perform a miracle but it is difficult to reach the souls of a lot of knuckle-heads. The Lord could stop the storm, that is no problem. It is all of that vacillating, mixed up human race that is the problem. Doctrine must become a reality in the soul before the unique Person of Christ can become real to the individual believer. The disciples were impressed with the reality of the storm but not with the reality of our Lord sleeping in the storm and yet that was the key to everything. To know the Lord Jesus Christ is to love the Lord Jesus Christ but you cannot know or love the Lord Jesus Christ until doctrine can be thought, doctrine can be real in the storm. When doctrine is real in the storm the Lord is real in the storm.

So we have a post positive conjunctive particle de used here as a transitional conjunction, translated "Now." "Now the men," the nominative plural subject of anthrōpos (ἄνθρωπος)

[pronounced ANTH-row-poss], i.e. the disciples aboard the ship, those who were taking the course. Because they had flunked the course in the dynamics for disaster they were now called men instead of students. They would be students again but not for now, anthrōpos (ἄνθρωπος) [pronounced ANTH-row-poss] is used here instead of mathētēs (μαθητής) [pronounced math-ay-TAYÇ] for disciples because the believers in the ship had demonstrated lack of concentration. This is how they flunked; they were now called men instead of being called students or disciples. Instead of using doctrine in the crisis they were ordinary cowardly, stupid men. They had no concentration, no thought pattern under pressure. Therefore, the Bible calls them men instead of disciples which, for them, designates failure. Only the inculcation of doctrine resident in the soul will bring them back around.

We have now the aorist active indicative to show their immediate reaction, the aorist active indicative of the verb thaumázō (θαυμάζω) [pronounced thau-MAUd-zoh], which means they were utterly astonished, they were amazed. They were so superficial that they were amazed at the calming of the storm, instead of getting the lesson they were spending all of their time admiring our Lord's power. They were not hearing His doctrine. It is the doctrine of our Lord, not His power, that is going to carry you through because the Lord isn't going to run around and fulfil little miracles here and there to accommodate you. He gives you doctrine resident in the soul to handle the storm.

"saying" - the present active participle of légō (λέγω) [pronounced LEH-goh], they kept on saying. It was all they could talk about. They had their eyes on the Teacher and not on the message. They flunked! Therefore they had failed completely. It is the message that counts.

"that" - the conjunction hóti (ὅτι) [pronounced HOH-tee] used after verbs that denote an emotion. The disciples were speaking from their emotion rather than from doctrine. Not only could they not think in the storm but now they can't even think in calm. They are so impressed with something that they are distracted from what it is all about.

Our life on earth is what we think. Doctrine gives us thought and while an assumed miracle only stimulates the emotion you cannot live on your emotions. If emotion masters your life then you will never make it for the crisis.

Matthew 8:27 Now the men were amazed and they kept on saying, "What kind of a person is this the winds and the sea obey Him?"

1977 Romans

Lesson #624

624 01/01/1979 Matthew 8:27b; 2Peter 2:12–15 The arrogant reject repetition; overreaction and renunciation cf. priority of Bible doctrine

Matthew 8:27 The men were amazed and asked, "What kind of man is this? Even the winds and the sea obey Him!" (BSB)

Verse 27 - the word for "obey" is the present active indicative of the verb hupakouō (ὑπακούω) [pronounced hoop-ak-OO-oh]. What is so strange about this is that since the disciples flunked the test they had forgotten that they themselves had obeyed Him in boarding ship when the weather was calm. And yet they were very superficial because they were more impressed with the miracle than with His teaching. And now they are suddenly impressed with His person because of what they think is a miracle. Actually it was not really a miracle at all, it was merely the fact that, as we have seen, the creature without a soul instantly obeys the creator. There is no volitional issue. But it is impressive to the disciples and it demonstrates that not only had they failed the test but they had lost their perspective of life completely. Also, another lesson which is extremely important: when you have a soul the greatest issue in your life is what you think. What you are in the future in disaster, which inevitably is going to come, is going to depend on what you think.

Now suddenly our Lord takes off the pressure. They had failed under the pressure of the storm. He removes the storm and, notice the result: no believer is ever the same when the sun goes down. Either you are better or worse but no believer ever stands still. Your momentum depends entirely upon Bible doctrine and nothing else. Your ability to concentrate on Bible doctrine and then to reverse the process in application. That is what counts. They no longer had the ability to see that issue.

The fact that we cannot see our Lord emphasizes the fact that the only legacy we have for life in the devil's world is the Word of God, Bible doctrine. And it is a reverse process because they saw through empiricism what they thought was a miracle. He is now at the right hand of the Father and the only way we can be impressed is through His thinking which He has left behind in the form of doctrine.

Now the present tense of hupakouō (ὑπακούω) [pronounced hoop-ak-OO-oh] is not linear aktionsart, it is an aoristic present, punctiliar action. The winds and the sea instantly obeyed. The active voice, the winds and the sea produce the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative, representing the verbal action in the viewpoint of absolute reality. The point is very simple. Now that they have ignored doctrine in the storm and failed to concentrate on it they still can't concentrate on it even though it is calm. They did not apply doctrine to the storm in their situation and they do not apply doctrine now. They are minus in both cases.

Matthew 8:27 Now the men were amazed and they kept on saying, "What kind of a person is this the winds and the sea obey Him?"

Note: When you fail some personal test in your life your ability to handle normal situations is gone, at least temporarily until you recover. The disciples are now impressed with a person but they are never going to recover until they are impressed with His message.

Concentration is often the issue and women have more difficulty dealing with repetition. Women as responders tend to be more arrogant, and they will think or say "I know that; I've heard that."

The disciples were so occupied with what they could see that they forgot the lesson of what they could not see, the importance of doctrine. But there was one exception to that - at least one on record -, the Apostle Peter. Peter learned the lesson - eventually. Peter finally put it altogether and gives us the perfect answer to the situation. When doctrine becomes important the superficialities of life always take their proper place. They are not discarded or resented or overreacted to, but they are simply superficialities. The priorities of the inner residency of doctrine supersede all other considerations in life.

2% of Berachah are screwballs as Bob has ever seen. He has seen overreaction over and over again. When you get saved or a little doctrine, that you do not have to cut yourself off from everything else (like family). If your parents distract you from doctrine, it is not their fault; it is that you are a weak sister.

Overreaction is arrogance.

In v.12 of 2Peter 1, we have Peter making a statement at the end of his life about stability. Stability is doctrine resident in the soul, says Peter.

2Peter 1:12 Wherefore I will not be negligent to put you always in remembrance of these things, though you know them and be established in the present truth.

The word "wherefore" is an inferential compound conjunction dió (διό) [pronounced DEE-oh], better translated "therefore." It is a conclusion. This is the strongest of all of the inferential conjunctions and it indicates the fact that Peter understands completely and thoroughly the lesson that so many missed when they boarded ship and moved from calm to storm and back to calm.

When Peter says there "I will not be negligent" there is no negative here. We actually have a future active indicative of mellô (μέλλω) [pronounced MEHL-low], to be about to be. And with it there is an adverb a)ei, an adverb of perpetuation which means "always." So we translate: "I will always be ready." When Peter learned something he was always ready to teach it, to repeat it again and again. The progressive future of mellô (μέλλω) [pronounced MEHL-low] denotes the idea of progress in future time. As long as Peter has breath in his body he will never stop teaching this message, it is so important. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the fact that he knows his subject well.

Next is an infinitive, the present active infinitive of the verb hupomimnêskô (ὑπομιμνήσκω) [pronounced hoop-om-im-NACE-koh], memory, to remind someone of something important. Peter says: "I will always be ready to keep reminding you," a lesson that you never hear often enough. When Peter finally wrote this he had taught this lesson many, many times.

"though you know them" - he uses the conjunction kaiper (καίπερ) [pronounced KAH-ee-per], "although." And then he adds the perfect active participle from oida (οἶδα) [pronounced OY-da], "although you have known them." You already know it but that isn't enough. You must keep on knowing it and, furthermore, you must concentrate on it. This is the only way that you will ever avoid what the disciples on the ship did by way of failure, how they flunked.

Then he adds one more thing, the perfect passive participle of stêrizô (στηρίζω) [pronounced stay-RIHD-zoh], to be stabilized. When you stop overreacting you stabilize. The only way to be stabilized is to have doctrine resident in your soul. "by means of," en (ἐν) [pronounced en] plus the instrumental which means "by" or by means of." Then we have a present active participle from pareimi (πάρειμι) [pronounced PAR-i-mee], but pareimi (πάρειμι) [pronounced PAR-i-mee] is used as an adjective. It means in this particular case "resident." Then we have the instrumental singular of the noun alêtheia (ἀλήθεια, ας, ῆ) [pronounced ahl-Ā-thi-ah], doctrine.

2Peter 1:12 Therefore I will always be ready to keep reminding all of you concerning these things, although you have known, and have become stabilized by means of resident doctrine.

That is the issue, not simply resident doctrine but stability in resident doctrine, that is what counts. If the disciples had been stabilized they would have relaxed in the storm and they would have kept their eye on the sleeping Christ knowing everything was perfectly all right. They would have thought in the storm instead of emoting in the storm.

Verse 13 gives us the most important function in life. First of all we have that post positive conjunctive particle de used as a transitional conjunction. It means here "moreover." Then we have the present active indicative of the verb hêgeomai (ἡγέομαι) [pronounced hayg-EH-ohm-ah-ee], which means to lead, to guide, to consider, to regard, to think. To think in terms of concentration; to think therefore in terms of application. It comes to mean "guide" because of you have thought in your soul you are guided by that thought in your soul if you can concentrate and apply that thought in your soul; that information in your soul, whatever it happens to be.

Translation: "moreover, I think" in the terms of "I consider." This is thought, application. The word "meet" is the accusative singular of dikaios (δίκαιος) [pronounced DIH-kai-oss], righteous. However, when you have the noun in the neuter gender it sometimes can be an idiom for something else and that is exactly what it is here. It doesn't simply mean righteous but "I think it my duty," "my responsibility." "Moreover, I consider it my duty."

"as long as I am in this tabernacle," skênôma (σκηνώμα) [pronounced SKAY-noh-mah] his body. Peter is still alive. He use the word tabernacle because he recognizes that his body is a tent, that it is wearing out, that his soul and his spirit which are inside of his body are going to leave his body very shortly. He will be absent from the body and face to face with the Lord but as long as he is alive and an apostle he is going to communicate the lesson he learned from the ship.

Why is he going to repeat this message? To stir them up it says. The present active infinitive of diegeirô (διεγείρω) [pronounced dee-ehg-Ī-roh], the same word used to wake up the Lord. Egeirô (ἐγείρω) [pronounced ehg-Ī-row] is the word used to arouse the Lord on the ship. Peter simply adds dia to it. He said, in effect, I knew a bunch of numskulls who woke up the Lord, I am going to wake you up! But I am going to intensify awakening you. They did it foolishly; you are going to learn wisdom from it; "to wake you up" is what it means. It is an iterative present, it describes what recurs at successive intervals, it is the present tense of repeated action. Wherever Peter teaches he reminds those who will listen of this message that he learned from the ship.

He adds one more thing: "by putting you in remembrance", which is wrong. It is merely another prepositional phrase, en (ἐν) [pronounced en] plus the instrumental of hupomnêsis (ὑπόμνησις) [pronounced hoop-OHM-nay-sis], to remember. Lit. "by means of a reminder."

2Peter 1:13 Moreover I consider it my duty as long as I am in this tabernacle [human body] to wake you up by means of a reminder.

We all have to be reminded constantly of the importance of Bible doctrine. Not only the importance of doctrine but concentrating on doctrine so that the means by which we assimilate doctrine is the means by which we apply doctrine - concentration.

Now Peter says in verse 14 that the reason he is writing this down is that he is about to die. And this is the greatest lesson he has ever learned, a lesson again, he learned from the ship. Therefore, it requires knowing something and he starts it out that way. He is very much aware of his own circumstances. He says: "Knowing that the laying aside of my human body is imminent." And again we have perfect passive participle of oida (οἶδα) [pronounced OY-da]. This is the second time. Here is a man who can face the reality of dying and not be concerned, at least not about dying, about getting the message through; "just as our Lord Jesus Christ has made it clear to me" - the Lord Jesus Christ made it clear to Peter how he would die and Peter was simply making note of this fact.

2Peter 1:14 Knowing that the laying aside of my human body is imminent, just as our Lord Jesus Christ has made it clear to me.

Verse 15 - Peter notes in passing that death does not destroy Bible doctrine and that, in effect, there is something in this life that you can acquire and take with you, doctrine resident in the soul. For those who have learned no doctrine they have nothing to take with them.

"Moreover" is again the post positive enclitic use of the particle de which emphasizes Peter's approaching death in which he will be removed from this life and enter into the presence of the Lord. Therefore his diligence, the momentum of his diligence. "I will endeavour" is the future active indicative of the verb spoudazô (σπουδάζω) [pronounced spoo-DAWD-zoh]. It means to be diligent, to be eager, zealous. He is motivated even in the dying part of his life to put this package together for you so that you will be reminded and never forget it. Translation: "Indeed I will be diligent."

The word "that" is not correct as it is translated in the King James. It is the emphatic use of kai and it should be translated "in fact."

Next in the Greek text comes an adverb, hekastote (ἐκάστοτε) [pronounced hek-AS-tot-eh], which means "at any time" or "always." It is an adverb of time. It refers to the availability of doctrine in time only. The issue is to learn doctrine NOW. You are left here to use your freewill, no matter what distraction comes your way, to make doctrine your number one priority and to learn doctrine.

"that you may be able" - the present active infinitive of echō (ἔχω) [pronounced EHKH-oh] plus su. "that at any time you may have" (the doctrine - it is available). Doctrine is available now, it is available in time. It is what you do with doctrine in time that really counts. And if doctrine is the reason why we all continue to live then obviously doctrine must have the number one priority.

"after my decease" - the word "decease" here, meta plus the accusative of exodos (ἐξοδος) [pronounced EX-ohd-oss], after my departure.

"to call these things to remembrance" - we have the present middle infinitive of poieō (ποιέω) [pronounced poi-EH-oh] which means to do, to make. But it means more than that here because you have a noun with it in the accusative as the direct object, which is mnēmē (μνήμη) [pronounced MNAY-may], which with poieō (ποιέω) [pronounced poi-EH-oh] means to do a memory. It is an idiom which means to recall these things. Why is it important to remember? because there comes a time when under pressure, memory is concentration, and concentration is thinking, and thinking in disaster is what the lesson is all about.

2Peter 1:15 Indeed I will be diligent in fact, at any time you may have the doctrine after my death, to call to remembrance these things.

Principle

1. Doctrine continues in spite of the death or removal of any great teacher, such as Peter.
2. Peter is about to die but doctrine goes on forever. Communicators come and communicators go but doctrine goes on forever. You need a communicator in order to receive it so that when you die you can take it with you.

Apparently, there are no pre-existing notes on these next 4–7 lessons.

Lesson #625

625 01/02/1979 2Peter 1:16a U.S. disaster defined; Marxist Jones cult; Second Advent; Bible doctrine preparation for disaster

There will be revolution and counter-revolution and we will see just how terrible things can happen under anarchy. We will suffer things horrible beyond imagination.

To change that is believers getting with doctrine. Society turned toward Biblical norms.

Our schools are designed to teach people socialism. After a revolution, we will be turned into a socialist state. Money will not stop this. What you think won't stop it. What is going to take place is beyond what we could imagine. We have had a few riots. You won't be able to dial the telephone and get the police. We have no way of even beginning to associate what it is like to live under mob violence.

The Russian revolution and French revolution. A mob is uncontrollable and it can only be controlled by a greater organized violence.

We as mature believers can not only survive but God will have something wonderful for us to do during a time like that. We live in a society created by evil government. We have lost our frame of reference to what made us a great and wonderful nation. We are held together only by the grace of God. We are blind, we are apathetic. It is beyond the place where stirring up our Senator will change anything.

When police officers do their job in Houston get sued by criminals for doing their job. The police officer is our last bit of sanity. The police officer patrolling the street is the last thing standing between us and chaos.

3000 people in the building for New Year's eve. Jesus Christ is our only hope. The pendulum is swung off the clock. It is not swinging back to the right. The pendulum is gone.

There is nothing wrong with parties, nothing wrong with fun; but these are non-essentials.

Bob spent two weeks developing the principle; and the solution was begun last night. This solution is all that we have left. The veneer of life can crack in so many places now. We're in for it and here is our answer.

The illative use of the conjunctive particle gar. Doctrine must be real to you now in your soul so that it will be real in disaster. Next the aorist active participle of exakoloutheô (ἐξακολουθέω) [pronounced ex-ak-ol-oo-THEH-oh], which means, intensive following, following as an authority. With the negative ouk. For we have not followed as our authority...

Then the perfect passive participle of sophizô (σοφίζω) [pronounced sof-IHD-zoh], which means cleverly devise, silly inventive, cleverly concocted. Then the masculine plural of muthos (μῦθος) [pronounced MOO-thoss], which means myths.

A cleverly concocted myth is socialism or the welfare state. Of the 4th estate. We are victims of the news media. They have concocted myths. It is time for us to learn what the truth is.

Aorist active indicative of gnôrizô (γνωρίζω) [pronounced gnoh-RID-zoh]. It means, to make known, to teach. This is the teaching of Bible doctrine. This is the only thing of value in the times of historical disaster. Peter is teaching from lessons that he learned as an Apostle.

In order to illustrate a point, Peter will have the believers fix their eyes on the future. Christians often thought of the eternal future and the rapture. If there is anything that is impossible to see, it is the doctrine of the rapture. This is only seen in your mind. The words here could apply to the rapture and to the second advent. The word used here could refer to either: parousía (παρουσία) [pronounced par-oo-SEE-ah]. The second advent is the time that Jesus Christ will personally come to the earth and personally straighten everything out.

The Millennium will be perfect environment in every sense of the world; and this is an important doctrine to those who are in the world at that time, where life is very hard.

You do not know how important Bible doctrine is until there is national disaster.

Many of our problems can be solved with money. There are many difficulties that we face that money will solve are simple problems.

Right now, medicine is at an all time peak. Many problems today can be fixed by going to the doctor.

There are many other problems that can be solved by calling the police, or a counselor, or a psychiatrist. Sometimes, just finding a friend who will listen to you. Someone that you can unload on.

Since WWII, most of our problems have been individual ones. We are not in group problems, and socialists do not care of this, because they cannot answer your problems as a government.

1Peter 1:16a For we have not followed cleverly concocted myths, when we made known to all of you the power and the coming of the Lord Jesus Christ...

1977 Romans

Lesson #626

626 01/03/1979 2Peter 1:16b; Matthew 16:27–17:8 Second Advent dry run; selfish wish of Peter to perpetuate his happiness

1Peter 1:16a For we have not followed cleverly concocted myths, when we made known to all of you the power and the coming of the Lord Jesus Christ...

This is the second advent, but the word used can be used in for the rapture or even for the advent of the antichrist. The second advent of Christ will rectify many things in life. It will not eradicate the sin nature; but Jesus will give us perfect environment. Satan will be imprisoned for 1000 years. During that rule, there will be that perfect environment, which so many human viewpoint philosophies believe is the solution to everything. At the end, there will be a revolution against perfect environment.

Why did people select this doctrine? (1) Because of its environment impact and (2) because this was something that Peter learned through empiricism.

The strong adversative particle: allá (ἀλλά) [pronounced ahl-LAH].

1Peter 1:16a For we have not followed cleverly concocted myths, when communicated to all of you the power and the coming of the Lord Jesus Christ but we have become spectators of His majestic magnificence...

This takes us to Matthew 16:27

Matthew 16:27 For the Son of Man is destined to come in the glory His Father, with His angels, and then (at that time) He will reward to every man according to his works

The Son of Man always emphasizes what can be seen. Present active indicative of mello is something which is schedule to occur. Christ, Who controls history, will actually be on earth to rule over Israel. Everything will be perfect insofar as environment is concerned. Everything that has ever been said will be a reality under the personal reign of Jesus Christ. Man's imperfect character will ruin it.

Glory tells us that this is the 2nd advent. The angels will remove the demons and incarcerate Satan and his demons. The OT saints will be judged after the 2nd advent. We are judged after the rapture.

Matthew 16:28 Truly I communicate to you, there are some of those standing here who shall certainly not taste of death until they have seen the Son of Man coming in His kingdom."

This is a dry run for the 2nd advent. This will occur very shortly.

Aseverative particle amên, an affirmative aseverative particle. This is a confirmation of doctrine livening a prophecy about the same doctrine. This doctrine is going to be pertinent to you in the future, but I will set up a present relationship.

Perfect tense emphasizes future events. Active voice will be three people who will see this doctrine before they die.

Anapoetic word with a double negative. Sounds like tasting. Tasting death is real death.

This is an attention getter.

Chapter 17 is a fulfillment of this promise.

V. 1: present active indicative of paralambanô. These means to seize.

This will be specific encouragement to all three men and for different reasons.

The Lord appears to have helped them going up this mountain. This is possibly a particular high mountain, Mount Tabor (?), in the Mount Herman range.

Matthew 17:1 And after six days, Jesus takes with Him Peter, and James, and John his brother, and led [or, hauled] them up into a high mountain by themselves.

V. 2: the aorist passive indicative of metamorphôō (μεταμορφώω) [pronounced met-am-or-FOE-oh], it means an outward, visible transformation. This fulfills the prophecy in Matthew 16:28. Jesus will look exactly as He will look at the 2nd advent. They were standing right in front of Him.

Then we have the adverb emprosthen (ἔμπροσθεν) [pronounced EM-pross-thehn], which means face to face. It is an improper preposition. 3rd person personal pronoun. In front of them. Then a slight change to add the word prósôpon (πρόσωπον, ου, τό) [pronounced PROS-oh-pon], which means his face. His face shown like the sun.

He is recognized as the same Person, but they are enamored of His features, white as light. This was a magnificent sight.

Matthew 17:2 And He was transfigured before them, and His face shone like the sun, and His clothes became white as the light.

V. 3: They disciples are seeing two of the greatest Old Testament heroes. Moses and Elijah are the two witnesses who return to Jerusalem and begin teaching. Many people respond; but many will not respond. Both men were great public speakers. This become an authentic 2nd advent scene.

John the Baptizer was the herald of the 1st advent; and he had the same spirit and power of Elijah. They are heralds of the 2nd advent and evangelists during the Tribulation.

This is a perfect 2nd advent scene. This is an eschatological doctrine which has not yet occurred.

Matthew 17:3 And behold, Moses and Elijah appeared to them, conversing with Him.

V. 4: there is always someone to ruin perfect environment. Peter uses the word kalos (καλός) [pronounced kal-OSS], which means, good (literally or morally), that is, valuable or virtuous (for appearance or use, and thus distinguished from G18, which is properly intrinsic); beautiful. This is not agathos, the word describing the plan of God. We will have personal problems and this is the dry run for a disaster in the future. The dry run is the preparation for the real thing. Peter does not distinguish between these. Peter wants to perpetuate this thing. For him, this is a moment of great happiness. Peter was apparently happily married. He does not mention his wife but he does mention his mother-in-law, which indicates some happiness with marriage.

People who are happy tend to be quite selfish. It takes a lot of gall for Peter to suggest what he suggests. Arrogance destroys capacity for love. People is in a very happy moment. We could call it prosperity. You should be able to think in prosperity.

Peter is very happy and he has stopped thinking doctrine. He is interested in a set of good works.

Matthew 17:4 And Peter spoke up and said to Jesus, "Lord, it is advantageous for us to be here. If You wish, I will make here three tabernacles: one for You, and one for Moses, and one for Elijah."

Peter has a lot of things to say, but God interrupts him. God, "It is time for you to stop speaking and start listening."

Matthew 17:5 While yet he was speaking, behold, a bright cloud overshadowed them; and behold, a voice out of the cloud saying, "This is My Son, the Beloved, in Whom I am well pleased. You keep listening to Him!"

Matthew 17:6 When the disciples having heard it, fell flat on their faces and were greatly terrified.

Matthew 17:7 And Jesus having come to them and having touched them, said, "Get up, and do not be afraid [which means, start thinking doctrine]."

Matthew 17:8 And having lifting up their eyes, they saw no one except Jesus Himself alone.

Matthew 17:9 And as they were coming down the mountain, Jesus instructed them, saying, "Tell to no one the vision, until the Son of Man is risen out from the dead."

They were compelled to secrecy. They were pledged to silence about this. Peter breaks the silence and explains all of this in 2Peter 1:17.

1977 Romans

Lesson #627

627 01/04/1979 2Peter 1:17–19 Poise; empirical experience vs. Bible doctrine; embarrassment; experience; concentration 2Peter 1:12–16 translation is reviewed. Peter was probably one of the ones who woke the Lord up, out of his mind with worry.

Explanatory particle gar. Aorist active participle of lambanô. For when He received... Peter saw the Lord Jesus Christ transformed, he heard God the Father speaking, and he saw Moses and Elijah. timê (τιμή, ἡς, ἡ) [pronounced tih-MAY or tee-MAY], which means price, value; honor, reverence, respect; the respect and honor one enjoys. Also doxa.

Peter was interrupted by God the Father while he was talking. Phonê for voice. Genitive absolute is a classical Greek form. Attic Greek demonstrative pronoun toiósde (τοιόσδε)[pronounced toy-OSS-deh], which means, such as this. Not a Koine Greek word; this is classical Greek. Peter may have taken this word from Paul.

When Bob went to the University of Arizona where they taught many types of Greek.

Bob would try to teach poise as much as the sport that he coached. Poise is the secret to handling disaster. It means to think under pressure. Peter was shut down by the voice from heaven; but when he looks back, he does not blush, he is not embarrassed. By using this classical Greek word, Peter is saying, "I have learned to think under pressure."

Without ever changing your personality, you can change your person. You may have been courageous under pressure before, you can lose this if you lose the ability to think under pressure.

If you are in a disaster and you start to remember your past sins, you are a spiritual coward and an imbecile. Rebound covers any sin which you have committed. Peter could be embarrassed by his failure on the Mount of Transfiguration, but he has learned to think Bible doctrine. Such a unique voice having been carried to him...

It is to Peter's advantage that the Lord stop him.

2Peter 1:17 For when he received from God the Father honor and glory, such a unique voice having been carried to Him by His majestic glory, "This One Christ is My Son, My Beloved, with reference to I have been well-pleased."

Peter would never forget the voice of God the Father and the transformation of Jesus.

Past failure is not a problem to anyone who uses rebound. Peter, James and John heard this same voice.

Experience is not the basis for doctrinal lessons. You learn lessons from Bible doctrine from the perfection and faith in the doctrine. Peter learned doctrine through the system of gap. Then Peter heard and saw the doctrine, which is empiricism. Most people think that reality is empiricism, but it is in Bible doctrine. Experience is no substitute for doctrine. Experience can confirm and illustrate a doctrine, but it cannot take the place of Bible doctrine. The most important aspect of a person is motivation as opposed to experience.

In the Korean War they picked people with experience; but their battalion was wiped out. The man in charge was a coward who could not think under pressure. Two other officers had combat experience, but they were cowards.

Do you marry the woman with the most experience? Usually with marriage, you look for someone who has no experience.

2Peter 1:18 And this same voice having been carried from the heavens, we heard when we were with Him on that holy mountain.

Peter teaches the greater reality is not what you see, taste or touch, but what you know from Bible teaching.

The present active indicative of echô. The information goes into mind and it is transferred by faith into the heart. The adverb kalôs means honorably. This is the royal family honor code. Present active participle of prosechô.

Once you have that doctrine in your soul, you concentrate under pressure and under prosperity. You never stop thinking. Capacity for happiness and capacity for life is to take all the doctrine in the right lobe and reverse the concentration. You have to be able to think to enjoy the pleasures in life.

The secret to life is thinking. You have the doctrine; then you just need to concentrate. Especially when it is a subject that has no present bearing on what you are doing. The ability to think under prosperity is the ability to think in abnormal times.

The most important time for a military operation is in peace time; in normal conditions. You learn to take orders, give order, immediately. Ranger training sets up many small unit situations. You learn under normal conditions. You learn how to do the exact right thing when under abnormal conditions.

The army is used as a study in sociology, and sociological experiments are done. How will this help our country if the company commander knows five points in a sociological concept; or how to handle a crying woman.

Christ will be seen by the entire world. There are three illustrations. The first illustrates positive volition toward the authority and teaching of one's right pastor.

2Peter 1:19 We keep on having a more reliable prophetic doctrine [more reliable than empiricism] with reference to which doctrine you perform honorably when you habitually concentrate (as a lamp shining in a dark place until a day dawns [the illustration of the beginning of the Millennium] and a morning star has come up [believers with doctrine in the soul understand it]) in your right lobes.

1977 Romans

Lesson #628

628 01/05/1979 2Peter 1:19–21 "Doomsday for America"; Second Advent; inspiration of Scripture; rejection of the priest nation

What you do in normal times is what you can do under pressure. The long range is what carries you in a disaster.

2Peter 1:19 We keep on having a more reliable prophetic doctrine [more reliable than empiricism] with reference to which (doctrine) you perform honorably by habitually concentrating (as a lamp shining in a dark place until a day dawns [the illustration of the beginning of the Millennium] and a morning star has come up [believers with doctrine in the soul understand it]) in your right lobes.

More reliable than any human system of perception. The present active participle is what the believer does when concentrating. Three illustrations given and they are illustrations of the 2nd advent. A lamp shining in a dark place. The earth will be covered in darkness when Jesus returns as the light of the world, which everyone will see. The morning star coming up is the perfect environment of the Millennium. The day dawning is the understanding of this doctrine and it is resident in your soul. The morning star coming up is the momentum is doctrine in the soul.

We are anticipating national disaster in the future. It is coming one way or the other. Bible doctrine must be more real than what you see, taste or hear.

V. 20 is the negative source of doctrine and v. 21 is the positive source of doctrine. In any generation a person can get it through a pastor-teacher. This way, the doctrine ends up resident in the soul.

Present active participle of ginôskô. Retroactive progressive present; the positive believer produces the action of knowing it. Houtos refers to something near at hand. It is not what is in the Bible but what is in your soul. The adverb first (in time or merit). Prophecy is used because we are using the 2nd advent as an illustration. When Athens was a democracy, everyone was a member of the legislative body. When they had a meeting, everyone would go. But some person would not want to go; and he was called an idios. He regarded his privacy as more important than meeting with the legislature. It started meaning a private person. Then it came to mean, one's own.

Feminine singular noun epílusis (ἐπίλυσις) [pronounced ep-IHL-oo-sis]. Everyone has a short term gimmick to handle the upcoming crisis. There is no short term explanation. You can have many things like a hideout, etc. and it won't be enough.

2Peter 1:20 Knowing this first, that all prophecy of Scripture [eschatological doctrines] does not originate from one's own explanation,...

Bible doctrine is the positive source. There are special men, prepared men, at certain times of history.

God the Holy Spirit has a message for every generation. For some generations, the message is provided, but God the Holy Spirit uses the historical situation, the language of the day, the academic background, that person's thought pattern to express in writing the doctrines which are necessary. This refers to the original languages of Scripture.

The holy language of Scripture is not euphemistic. In writing the Scriptures, these individuals did not waive their personal feelings or vocabulary or experience.

2Peter 1:21 ...for you see, prophecy was not produced by the volition, the purpose, the design of man but, men from God communicated.

Now a review of these verses:

2Peter 1:19 And we keep on having a more reliable prophetic doctrine [more reliable than empiricism] with reference to which (doctrine) you perform honorably by habitually concentrating (as a lamp shining in a dark place until a day dawns [the illustration of the beginning of the Millennium] and a morning star has come up [believers with doctrine in the soul understand it]) in your right lobes.

The concentrators puts this doctrine into your right lobes.

2Peter 1:20 Knowing this first, that all prophecy of Scripture [eschatological doctrines] does not originate from one's own personal explanation,...

2Peter 1:21 ...for you see, prophecy was not produced by the volition, the purpose, the design of man but, men from God communicated from God being carried along by the Holy Spirit.

Hosea is going to talk about disaster. His wife runs off with the prince of Israel. When she was offered as a slave at a slave market. She was being offered for the price of a female being gored by a bull. He brought her back and restored her to his home.

Just as Gomer ran off from Hosea, so Israel was unfaithful to Me.

Hosea 4:1 Hear the word of the LORD, you citizens of the northern kingdom, for the LORD has a case (a lawsuit) against the inhabitants of the land: There is no truth, no loving devotion, and no knowledge of God in the land!

The first problem when a nation is going down is no doctrine bring taught.

Hosea 4:2 Cursing and lying, murder and stealing, and adultery are rampant; one act of bloodshed follows another.

Instead of these things is lying. There is nothing that changes a people more than lying and deceiving. This changes the whole face of a nation. Impossible to enjoy freedom when it exists where there is such dishonesty.

Then there is murdering and stealing. The criminals will go further. There is always an increase in crime. Breaking in to commit adultery is rape. They lose their perspective when it comes to law. A lack of respect for womanhood; and living by violence.

Hosea 4:3 Therefore the land mourns, and all who dwell in it will waste away with the beasts of the field and the birds of the air; even the fish of the sea disappear.

A decline in the nation's blessing. The people will lose strength. The people will go down as well the animals of the field. The mule and the plow represent industry. The birds of the sky are the destroyers of industry. A man plows and sows, but before he can harvest, the birds will come in to destroy the crops.

The birds of today are OSHA. The birds of the sky is big government destroying the gross national product.

The fish in the lake are the source of food.

Hosea 4:4 But let no man contend; let no man offer reproof; for your people are like those who contend with a priest.

Authority is also destroyed. Authority in teaching doctrine is destroyed. The prophet and the priest are rejected.

Your people speaks of the people of Israel.

Hosea 4:5 You will stumble (entering into reversionism) by day, and the prophet will stumble with you by night. So I will destroy your mother—

The nation will stumble and the prophet will. The prophet goes along with everything.

Hosea 4:6 My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge. Because you have rejected knowledge, I will also reject you as My priests. Since you have forgotten the law of your God, I will also forget your children.

V. 6 explains why all of this destruction. This is how a nation goes down.

Hosea 4:9 And it shall be like people, like priest. I will punish both of them for their ways and repay them for their deeds.

Bob is going on to David for a month or so; then he will return to Romans.

1977 Romans

Lesson #629

629 02/06/1979 Romans 9:19–20 God's right to judge; reason for persecution of the Jews: blot out of First Advent cf. Pharaoh

Returning to Romans after a special and after a month in David. Romans 9:23 was the last completed verse. Vv. 19–23 is a difficult passage and a good place to review.

Vv. 19–29 is all about all Israel is not Israel.

God hardened Pharaoh's heart under the conditions of providing him more time to live. Pharaoh has the world's record for hardening his own heart. He broke records, and God gave him borrowed time. God kept Pharaoh alive and allowed him to continue to express negative volition.

Romans 9:19 Therefore you will say to me, "Why does He still find fault? For who has resisted His purpose [or, His intention]?"

This is a debater's question. Someone reading this might be thinking, "This is the question that I have."

Scar tissue of the soul continually questions God. The greater the scar tissue and greater arrogance involved. They find fault with God; they are critical of God's policy.

Rejecting any part of God's plan results in discipline.

The omniscience of God knows every thought of every creature who has ever lived. It is fed into the computer as reality. What the alternative decisions that were not made. The integrity of God cannot be compromised by finding fault with God. The person complaining does not know the facts or the doctrine who finds fault with God.

First question is about God's right to judge. The second question is, who has resisted His purpose (or will)? This will build up to something in Romans 10, for the disaster which comes upon the Jews.

From the time of Moses, Deuteronomy 30 to Romans 10, the Jews ignored the 1st advent of Christ and they focused on the 2nd advent. They wanted the crown without the cross. There is a big build-up to Romans 10.

There are two verses in Romans 10 which cannot be understood without the full background.

The Jews have blotted out of their minds. They began doing this with the new generation under Joshua. They went through the ritual of animal sacrifices, but they rejected the blood sacrifices. God will take upon Himself human form and go to the cross.

The Jews who blot this out are the nice million. Those wiped out in WWII, these were charming, lovely people who were the recipients of the action of the justice of God. This allowed for the generation after this where a great many Jews believed in Jesus Christ.

Nation Israel could be blotted out today due to negative volition.

The Jews were the great middle class of Spain; but God permitted them to be destroyed because of the great blot out in Romans 10. But we have to build up to this. Romans 9 goes with Romans 10. This is the only explanation in the world for why there are great numbers of Jews who are killed from time to time.

We have the opportunity of being saved because we live in the United States. There are great evangelists using their spiritual gift throughout the United States. There are all kinds of ministries in the United States by which people can hear the gospel.

The Jew today has blotted out the 1st advent out of their souls. We are not ever told to handle this discipline. We can do nothing but offer a haven for the Jews. We must be prepared for the fact that a shocking event will take place. This is done so that other Jews can be saved. This is what happened when the Nazis destroyed the Jews; when the Torquemada was developed to harm the Jews. The cancer of the great blot out occurs where Jews accumulate. Moses wrote about this and Paul spoke of in Romans 10. Gentiles are destroyed for other reasons.

Romans 9:19–23 is genius. God continued to allow Pharaoh to live; he lived past the time that he should have been removed. God knew that Pharaoh would continue to say no. God did not reach into his heart and change his volition. The world was evangelized because of Pharaoh. God gave Pharaoh time that he did not have coming. God did not reach in to change Pharaoh's volition.

Hezekiah is an example of borrowed time. But during that borrowed time, he had Manasseh, one of the worst people in history.

Points on Pharaoh's Negative Volition

1. The omniscience of God anticipated from eternity past that only the overruling omnipotence of God would deliver the Jews from slavery. By extending Pharaoh's time, this evangelized
2. Omniscience + all powerful combined to deliver the Jews.
3. Had the matter been left to the will of Pharaoh, the Jews would still be slaves in Egypt. The Jews were let go without destroying the free will of Pharaoh.
4. Pharaoh did not lose his free will. God used some jujitsu on him.
5. By hardening Pharaoh's heart giving him more time to live, God kept him alive to express his free will in maximum opposition to God.
6. The greater the opposition the great God's response. An example of the coexistence of free will and God's sovereignty.
7. This coexistence furthers the plan of God.
8. God can utilize opposition and positive volition to fulfill His perfect plan in human history.
9. God used the momentum of opposition to accomplish His purpose and opposition. God uses another's strength against him.

Moses and Pharaoh developed their free will and habits; and God used both to deliver the Jews. Some of us cannot keep God secure on his throne in their own minds. Some ill rumor or some occurrence and you lose your mind over it. You get panicked.

God can bless or curse. God uses the wrath of man to praise Him. No matter which way it goes, history will glorify God. Communism thinks they will bury us; but they will end up glorifying God.

The first answer is in vv. 20–21 and the second answer is in v. 23.

Romans 9:20 On the contrary, O mankind, you, who are you who answers back to the God? Can what is molded say to its molder [or the pot say to the potter], "Why have you made me like this?" No, of course not.

On the contrary simply means that Paul will disagree. It is always humility that orients to grace. They are impudent; they are answering back to the God. The creature has no more right to answer back to God than that pot does to the potter.

Thutmose and Amenhotep could have chosen to believe in the Revealed God. Pharaoh always hardened himself. He would see a miracle, accept what God required, and then reject God. There were Greeks, Hamitic, Semitic peoples etc. who left with the Jews.

God was more than fair to Pharaoh. Pharaoh used his extra time to say no to God more. Pharaoh continued on borrowed time.

God is saying through Paul that there is no different from a Jew on negative volition and Pharaoh of the Exodus. As arrogance builds up, the Jew goes back an an eclectic, choosing what he wants to believe and follow.

The illustration, "Can the thing molded say to the one molding, 'Why have you made me like this?'" The grace of God made Jacob who he is.

The 1st advent was provided first. There is no regeneration without the 1st advent.

Blindness in part has happened to Israel. That blindness is using negative volition in the face of overwhelming Biblical evidence to wipe out the 1st advent.

Lesson #630

630 02/07/1979 Romans 9:21 USSR forces in East Germany; illustration of debater's finesse; volition determines honor or dishonor

There is something that Bob wanted to share with us, but it has been recently declassified. Several tank armies and other types. 7000 tanks, 900 combat aircraft in East Germany. Sounds like a pretty massive army right there in East Germany. This is taught in many places, and sometimes when this is taught, several officers will resign their commission. 17 divisions who are the initial attack force.

Jacquelin someone who is a woman strategist. We have 3 divisions to oppose them.

Soviets like having our men and equipment all placed together. Important targets.

They can release viruses to incubate for two weeks, so that it will suddenly take hold and they will attack when the virus becomes effective. The 3CI function. Command, control, communications and intelligence functions. This is the critical element in battle. They have jamming capabilities and they can wipe out half of NATO's communications. This will jam everything so that we have no idea where the enemies are until we actually see them.

Our ace in the hole is Jesus Christ.

The EMP, electro magnetic pulse, which would jam all communications. We are cutting are Navy down to nothing; and most of it is going to be tied up in the Mediterranean.

Our military has been hamstrung. Most of those in high command are puppets who know what to say to their political superiors. This is about a quarter of the article.

There was an evil man in charge of our military, now called the DoD. He completely decimated our military. We are in trouble like you cannot believe; and we have divorced ourselves from reality to the maximum. Only the Lord Jesus Christ can save us.

The doctrine that we are studying now is the muscle of Bible doctrine. "Last night, it was as if you have never heard any of these doctrines. Get up to date. You are the last hope for this country."

Abraham, Isaac and Jacob were great because of the grace of God; not their physical seed. Jesus Christ is the God of Israel and He is the only Savior. The enlargement of the pivot and the teaching of Isaiah is what saved Hezekiah.

Negative volition seeks to circumvent the justice of God. God's obligation is to Himself. He has the perfect policy, grace.

Romans 9:21 Or does not the potter possess authority over the clay, from the same lump to make on the one hand a vessel for the purpose of honor, and on the other hand another for the purpose of dishonor? [of course, he does].

Christians are mixed up because we lack authority-orientation. You cannot have freedom without authority. Authority without freedom is tyranny; freedom without authority is anarchy. Our free will is free; God does not tamper with the volition of the vessel. The same lump of clay is humanity. The is a vessel for the purpose of honor and for the purpose of dishonor.

To depend upon a physical relationship to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob makes a person a vessel of dishonor. To believe in Jesus Christ makes the vessel one of honor.

God does not place us into the places arbitrarily; God allows us to choose whether we want to be the vessel of honor or dishonor. Honor is possessing God's righteousness; and dishonor is the person who possesses work righteousness.

Why have you made me like this? We choose this. The honor is God's righteousness imputed; and dishonor is all about our own righteousness. We are not born with dishonor; this is something that we cultivate.

God's omniscience knew in eternity past who would fall into which category.

Lesson #631

631 02/08/1979 Romans 9:22–24 Midland, TX vs. Feds; aposiopesis logic shows the unbeliever wrong; causes of historical disaster of the Jews

This appears to be the final review lesson. V. 24 would be new.

Midland Texas Fights Back (or Getting Even with the Feds)

A parking place is being asked for by HUD. Submit an environmental impact statement, etc. Excellent letter from Midland, Texas. A request for a massive number of documents are required. Excellent letter.

The great genius is found in aposiopesis. The apodosis is left out, but when the other person inserts the apodosis, they recognize that they are wrong. They have blotted out of their minds the 1st advent of Christ. The Jew who has rejected Jesus Christ is compared to Pharaoh Amenhotep II. Paul does not want Israel to follow the examples of Esau, Ishmael or Pharaoh. The anakaluthan is a failure to complete the sentence.

Romans 9:22 Moreover, if as is the case, the God, willing to demonstrate His indignation, and to reveal His omnipotence, has endured with great patience vessels of wrath [unbelievers] having been equipped [or, prepared] for destruction [the last judgement],...

Every person in that lump of clay has volition. With positive volition, he is prepared for glory; and with negative volition, he is prepared for condemnation. The believer is the vessel of honor; the unbeliever is the vessel of dishonor.

God kept giving pharaoh the ability to continue saying no. Because he did this, thousands of non-Jews were saved and exited with the Jews at the exodus.

People who are negative toward the gospel are often negative toward the laws of divine establishment. They become a cancer in their nation. There comes a generation where one people are nothing like those who came before. The key is what goes on in the soul. The rejection of truth in one form, is rejection of truth in every form.

Why were the Jews destroyed during WWII. These were magnificent people. Bob has spoken at many synagogues, and these Jewish people wrestle with this question. They was also the Catholic priest in Spain, who set up the Inquisition designed to persecute the Jews. Why are nice people are destroyed and persecuted. Nice people blot out the 1st advent, which is Jesus Christ becoming true humanity.

The Nazi barbarians took the Jews out and destroyed them, because this lovely civilized people had blotted out the 1st advent from their minds. Despite them being nice people, they were wiped out. If our gospel hearing was based upon these people, we would never hear the gospel. Bob's Hebrew professor believed in Jesus Christ, and his family blotted him out of their family, and carried on as if he never existed.

Forty years after the cross, the Jews were wiped out en masse. The reason for this is found in Romans 10. It is because these lovely people wipe out the 1st advent of Jesus Christ. When they are in a large group, they can become vessels of dishonor; vessels of destruction. This does not excuse the Nazis, or the three Roman legions coming into Jerusalem, or the Selucids or Torquemada.

We think of evil and mean people when it comes to keeping us and others from the gospel message, but this can be done by very nice groups of people. Sometimes these groups are removed from history in order for the gospel to break through. Where the 1st advent is blotted out; such groups might be removed from history. This is the great principle or the great doctrine. To Bob, this is the only reason that can be given for the terrible things which have happened to the Jews throughout history. These disruptions in history continue. Romans 10 explains all of these persecutions. God always sees to it that the 1st advent is perpetuated into every generation.

Paul continued with his love and burden for the Jews, despite the difficulties they had subjected them to. With the proper volition and with sufficient intelligence, the Jew can blot certain things from their mind—particularly the 1st advent.

The protasis begins in v. 22 and terminates in v. 24. When we fill in the apodosis, we defeat ourselves in the argument.

The omniscient of God knew in eternity past what would take place that is spoken of in v. 23. The unbeliever makes his own future, as a vessel of dishonor.

Romans 9:23 ...and in order that He might make known the riches of His glory on vessels of mercy, which He previously prepared for glory.

There is an application to Jews and to gentiles.

Verse 24 – the identification of the vessels of mercy. It begins with the masculine accusative plural from the relative pronoun hos whose antecedent is “vessel” -- “Even us whom,” the ascensive use of kai which is “even,” then the accusative plural of first person personal pronoun egó (ἐγώ) [pronounced ehg-OH] – “even us.” This is a reference to all believers who in the previous verse are classified as vessels of mercy in contrast to the unbeliever who is a vessel of dishonor and prepared for destruction. The plural is for all believers of the Church Age, the dispensation of the royal family of God. This includes, therefore, Jew and Gentile.

Next is the aorist active indicative of the verb kaleō (καλέω) [pronounced kal-EH-oh], one of the verbs for the doctrine of election; it also is related to the doctrine of decrees. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, it means the formation of believers under the principle of the divine decree, and the printout of election. “Even us whom He has elected” is a better translation. The active voice: God produces the action of the verb in eternity past when His omniscience knew everyone who would believe in the Lord Jesus Christ. The indicative mood is declarative for the dogmatic statement of doctrine. Both decrees and election are a part of it.

Principle

1. The printout of believers includes election -- all free agents in the human race who would exercise non-meritorious volition at God-consciousness and gospel hearing. This is so that there is a predictable sequence. The 1st advent of Jesus Christ is the advent of evangelism; and the 2nd advent is the advent of perfect environment.
2. Omniscience knew which ones who would believe in Christ, therefore these were fed into the computer of divine decrees as foreordained as well as elect.
3. The printout of believers therefore reads “election.”

We have the objective negative ou (οὐ) [pronounced oo] plus the neuter monon (μόνον) [pronounced MOHN-on] as a limiting adverb, translated “not only.” Then the preposition ek (ἐκ) [pronounced ehk] plus the ablative plural from Ioudaίος (Ἰουδαίος) [pronounced ee-ou-DYE-os] which is translated “not only from among the Jews,” plus the adversative conjunction that indicates that this principle is not limited to any particular race, it includes the entire human race, “but,” allá (ἀλλά) [pronounced ahl-LAH], in contrast to the Jews; then “also” which is the adjunctive use of the conjunction kai, and then ek (ἐκ) [pronounced ehk] plus the ablative plural of ethnos (ἔθνος, οὐς, τό) [pronounced EHTH-noss], referring to the Gentiles.

Romans 9:24 Even us, whom He has elected, not only from among Jews, but also from among Gentiles.

Lesson #632

632 02/09/1979 Romans 9:24 CMH: H. Erwin; Paul concerned for the Jews though he is apostle to the Gentiles; missionary burden and will of God

No unnecessary movement, including chewing gum.

Medal of Honor recipient. Throwing a bomb off a plane. More to this story. Book called Sergeants tells more about this story.

Controlled fear; the ability to meet your fear, the ability to think and concentrate.

Some of you are going to have to grow up and learn these doctrines. Bob goes over the differences of ou and mē and the various rules.

Romans 9:24 ...even us, whom He has called not only out from the Jews, but also out from the Gentiles? (BLB)

Romans 9:24 Even us, whom He has elected, not only from among Jews, but also from among Gentiles.

Moses, Isaiah and Paul all observed that the Jews were blotting out the 1st advent (Moses and Isaiah did this prophetically). This is illustrated by the Jewish family who holds a funeral for a family member who believes in Jesus. The Jew fails to see that salvation is closer to him than the Law.

Principle

1. Vessels of mercy or believers include both Jews and Gentiles who are born again through faith in the Lord Jesus Christ.
2. The context deals with a principle. Only those Jews who believe in Christ will be the recipients of the promises of God for Israel.
3. The promises apply only to the spiritual seed of Abraham, those who receive at salvation the imputed righteousness of God as well as eternal life.
4. In the dispensation of Israel not only many Jews but also many Gentiles executed salvation adjustment of the justice of God, the actually believed in Christ. But many more went through the great blot-out in which you can actually blank out of the mind the implications of the first advent.
5. The aposiopesis terminates at the end these three verses – 22,23,24. The protasis of the first class condition is presented but there is no apodosis. The apodosis can only mean one thing. If a Jew, after that protasis of three verses, fills in the apodosis in his mind then he cannot do anything but believe in Christ. But of he refuses to finish the sentence then he is a victim of the great blot-out, the blotting out of the first advent of the Lord Jesus Christ.
6. This ellipsis also indicates Paul's emotional involvement with the Jews. Paul had a great burden for the Jews. The Jews can see Paul's great feeling for them due to the logical system which is used here. Paul is logical and burdened at the same time. When you do hyperbaton and add to it chiasmus, that shows love on Paul's part.
7. Instead of the apodosis Paul immediately starts quoting from Old Testament scripture to document the point. In other words, he uses the protasis of a first class condition (aposiopesis) and then skips altogether the apodosis because if you are following the protasis the Jewish unbeliever has to make his own decision. If he believes he will finish the apodosis; if he does not believe, if he rejects Christ as saviour, he never will. But he goes right on, then, to Old Testament documentation to take the scriptures which they themselves regard as sacred and demonstrate his point.

8. Along with the elect remnant of Israel God's purpose was to call out also and elect body of Gentiles as people for His name. So this is not wasted on the Gentiles. A Gentile can also follow the reasoning here and fill in the blank, or refuse to. To fill in the blank as a Gentile you believe in Jesus Christ, but if as a Gentile you reject Jesus Christ then you do not complete the sentence. So this is for the Jew and the Gentile, he says, at the end of the protasis.
9. One of the responsibilities of Israel in the past as a priest and client nation was to function as a missionary nation to the Gentiles. In every generation of the dispensation of Israel Gentiles were saved. They were saved by seeing the Jewish animal sacrifices, the function of the Jewish Levitical priesthood, the observation of the holy days. All of these things made sense to them and they believed. So Gentiles were saved by using Jewish symbols as the means of understanding and therefore Gentiles can understand something far greater, this great protasis which is aposiopesis in the first class condition.
10. Paul as an apostle to the Gentiles continues this function in the dispensation of the Church, indicating once again that this is for the Jew and for the Gentile. Paul would be going to the Celtic people, the Barbarians, and others.
11. In fact, shortly after Paul's death the Jewish nation of Judea was no longer to serve as a client nation to God but would be punished with the fifth cycle of discipline which introduces the times of the Gentiles. The first Gentile nation will be the Roman empire. Paul himself, therefore, is the transitional person.
12. In the times of the Gentiles only Gentile nations can qualify as a client nation to God. No Jewish nation will serve as such until the second advent of Christ.
13. Paul is the last and greatest of all the Jewish missionaries. He became a missionary to the Gentiles as preparation for the times of the Gentiles.

Sweden, Prussia, a United Germany were all client nations at various times. We know this by going to missionary history. Where are the missionaries coming from? That tells us that the nations which they come from. Ireland, Scotland, and Britain have all been client nations. You must be a missionary to whom the Lord sends you. Only God can win souls and He knows where the positive volition is. You may want to go to one nation, and God may want you to go elsewhere.

You do not go necessarily where your burden tells you to. Many people were burdened for China, but when the Chaicoms moved in, you could not go there. Therefore, you go elsewhere. If God closes the door, then you look for wherever God opened the door elsewhere.

Paul was burdened for the Jews, but God wanted him to go to the gentiles. If there is anyone who needs to be flexible, it is a missionary. Flexibility is one of the great things to have and is compatible with the royal family honor code.

Paul is the last great Jewish missionary to the gentiles.

Translation reviewed.

The Old Testament is just as much Bible as the New Testament. There are many glorious doctrines which are not revealed in the New Testament.

Each reference is going to bring out something that every gentile and every Jew should know.

There will be a quote from Hosea that is important. There will be another passage where it is paraphrased. There is the adding and the change. When a passage is quoted from the Hebrew to the Greek.

When there is an addition or a change in a quoted passage, there is always a reason for it. Paul will add to Isaiah's message. Peter will also add to Isaiah's message. Both added something to the passage that they quote.

1977 Romans

Lesson #633

633 02/11/1979 Romans 9:25; Hosea 2:23 Why the persecution of fine Jews; great blot out; no Jewish client nation in the times of the Gentiles

Human viewpoint and divine viewpoint are in opposition to one another. Laws of divine establishment are designed to protect the freedom of the individual in a national entity. But there are no systems to provide this outside of the national entity.

We have certainly seen movies where we sympathize with the gangster. We have been brainwashed into thinking contrary to divine viewpoint. This whole system of propaganda is turned around in the courtroom from time to time.

In the time of Sodom and Gomorrah, we might have been very sympathetic to them, had the current news media been around then.

The things we hear about the holocaust and we have great sympathies for the Jewish people.

Negative volition toward the truth results in demon-influence or demon-possession.

Many people ask why these things happened. Romans 9–10 give us a fuller explanation for such things. Some of the best doctors, businessmen, horticulturalists in history come from the Jews.

The principle is he great blot out.

In verses 25-29 there is a series of documentary systems from the Old Testament. Each reference brings out something that every Gentile should know as well as every Jew. This is Old Testament documentation regarding vessels of mercy. In this we see the vessels of wrath prepared for destruction. The first reference is in verse 25 and it begins with a quotation from Hosea 2:23.

Romans 9:25 As He also says in Hosea: "I will call that which is not My people, My people; and her not having been loved, having been loved,"... (BLB)

Verse 25 quotes from Hosea 2:23, "And I will sow her unto me in the earth; and I will have mercy upon her that had not obtained mercy; and I will say to them which were not my people, Thou art my people; and they shall say, Thou art my God." In verse 25 the word "Osee" is simply the Greek way of presenting Hosea. There is no "h" in the Greek, just a rough breathing, so we have a transliteration leaving out the rough breathing. The recorded message of Hosea deals with Israel as an unfaithful wife running away from God.

The Greek begins with a comparative particle hos (ὅς) [pronounced hohç], which indicates the manner in which something precedes. It is correctly translated "as." Then the adjunctive use of the conjunction kai, translated "also," followed by the present active indicative of the verb légō (λέγω) [pronounced LEH-goh] which means to communicate, to say. "As he has also communicated." The present tense of duration denotes what was begun in the past and continues into the present time. The active voice: God [verse 22] produces the action of the verb through Hosea. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the written canon of scripture, Old Testament. Then we have the prepositional phrase which identifies the portion of the Old Testament scripture, en (ἐν) [pronounced en] plus the indeclinable proper noun W (she – "Hosea." It refers to Hosea 2:23 but only part of that verse is quoted by Paul in beginning the subject of the great dropout. "And I will say to those who are not my people [the Gentiles], you are my people..." In other words, it is a prophetic passage dealing with the fact that the time will come in history when the Jews will no longer be a client nation to God, when they will no longer have the privilege and the opportunity of presenting the gospel, of enjoying the freedom which comes from Codex #3, of teaching doctrine to believers, of fulfilling missionary function. The time is coming when this will be turned over to the Gentiles. "... and they will say, You are my God." This is the part that Paul quotes from Hosea 2:23, but there is a phrase before and a phrase after which he did not quote. The first part: "Therefore I sow her for myself in the land." This is a Millennial reference which is why he did not quote it. It is dealing with the Jews in the land after the Second Advent, the restoration of Israel at the Second Advent when the Jews will again have the privilege of being a client nation to God during the Millennium and forever. The sentence indicates, "I have to restore you [first phrase] because of the great blot-out. You are going to come to the place where I am going to have to cancel you as a client nation" – fifth cycle of discipline which would come after the first advent. But they would again be restored, the times of the Gentiles terminates with the Second Advent. The second left-out phrase is found at the end of the verse: "I will love tenderly the one not being loved [literally from the Hebrew]." This is a reference to the restoration of Israel at the Second Advent. So on each side of what Paul quoted we have a Second Advent reference. No Jewish nation at the present time can be a client nation to God. There will be a Jewish client nation to God in the future, for out of the Tribulation will come believing Jews who will form a nation. But they will recognize in the Second Advent that this is He who came in the first advent, there are four chapters in Zechariah on this very thing. They will look on Him whom they have pierced. Who are they? These are Jews who believe during the Tribulation and they are going into the Millennium as the client nation to God.

Hosea 2:23 is one of those rare prophecies that includes both Jew and Gentile together, and therefore it is Paul's first documentation of salvation for both Gentile. And more than that, that the Gentiles are going to be a client nation to God.

In the Greek of Romans 9 it says, "I will call them my people, which are not my people." In the Greek we have the future active indicative of kaleō (καλέω) [pronounced kal-EH-oh] which as we have already seen is used to connote election. It means "I will elect." It is used here to indicate we are now past the first advent, the first advent is historical.

Then we have ton ou (οὐ) [pronounced oo] laon mou laon mou, which is literally, "the not my people, my people. However, the accusative singular definite article ton is used here as a demonstrative pronoun. Being used as a demonstrative pronoun it combines with the relative pronoun to refer to Gentiles and we translate it, therefore, "those who are not my people." That is, Gentiles. The possessive genitive singular from the personal pronoun egó (ἐγώ) [pronounced ehg-OH] refers to God, "my." God possesses us as of the moment we believe in Jesus Christ. We have also the accusative singular direct object laos (λαός) [pronounced lah-OSS]. Referring to the Gentiles the Jews called them in the Hebrew goi. In the Greek they used ethnos (ἔθνος, οὐς, τό) [pronounced EHTH-noss] [from ethnos (ἔθνος, οὐς, τό) [pronounced EHTH-noss]], the word usually used for Gentiles. Why call them laos (λαός) [pronounced lah-OSS]? Because they are also going to act as client nations as well as individuals.

Then dealing with the Jews, "[I will call] he beloved, which was not beloved." This becomes a double accusative in which we have a direct and predicate object of the verb. The accusative singular with the definite article, this time tên in the feminine form of the accusative because the words being used are in the feminine, and therefore it is still translated as a demonstrative pronoun whose antecedent is the Jews scattered throughout the fifth cycle of discipline.

Then we have a negative ou (οὐ) [pronounced oo] plus the perfect passive participle of agapaō (ἀγαπάω) [pronounced ahg-ahp-AH-oh] – "those who have not been loved." The perfect tense is the intensive perfect, it finds the action completed and the results emphasized. The completed action is the administration of the fifth cycle of discipline to Israel in 70 AD because of an accumulation of the great blot-out and forty years to change their mind. But during those forty years, even though they had intensified evangelism, they rejected. The existing results include the times of the Gentiles with no Jewish nation as a client nation to God. The passive voice: the Jewish nation receives the action of the verb which is negative during the times of the Gentiles. The participle is circumstantial designed to express the attendant circumstances of the times of the Gentiles and to reveal the subject of the great blot-out. Again the perfect passive participle from the verb agapaō (ἀγαπάω) [pronounced ahg-ahp-AH-oh]. This time it is repeated, only in the passive voice as having been loved. The dramatic perfect is used this time, which is the rhetorical use of the intensive perfect, emphasizing the results of the second advent and the restoration of Israel in the Millennium. The passive voice: restored Israel in the Millennium receives the action of the verb. The participle is called a modal participle, signifying the manner in which the action is accomplished, and it is translated by a comparative particle hos indicating the manner in which something proceeds.

Romans 9:25 As he has also communicated in Hosea [Hos. 2:23], I will call those who are not my people [Gentiles], my people [Gentiles become the client nations]; and those who have not been loved [Jewish nations in the times of the Gentiles] as those who have been loved [they will be restored at the second advent].

The reverse in the order of Hosea 2:23 by Paul becomes apparent when one realizes that Paul gives the historical order while Hosea gives the order of importance. Furthermore “those who have not been loved” refers to racial but not to regenerate Jews. Those Jews who have believed in Jesus Christ are totally excluded from the concept of the great blot-out. Those who have not been loved are racial Jews. Guilty of the great blot-out they have not actually received Christ as saviour. Those who have not been loved are the physical seed of Abraham; those who have been loved are the spiritual seed. The difference between them is attitude toward the first advent of Christ.

Lesson #634

634 02/11/1979 Romans 9:26; Hosea 1:9–10 Anne Frank; human failure no hindrance to the plan of God; Jewish believers in each generation

God has to limit your number of close friends, so that you are not in a state of heartache all of the time. In Berachah, it is better to get the doctrine first and then develop friendships.

Now, when news occurs, we know about it maybe 30 minutes later, even from the other side of the world. We see more tragedies in a week than people saw in a lifetimes 75 years ago.

We can understand when a great number of evil people are killed, we can understand and appreciate that. But when nice people die, it is more difficult. There is Anne Frank, who wrote in his diary that Christians needed Jesus but she and other Jews did not. She was transferred to other prison camps, and soon after, her previous prison camp was liberated.

We have been studying the great blot out. Bob gets the citation for Hosea and Romans wrong.

Hosea 2:23 Therefore, I sow her Israel for herself in the land [referring to the 2nd advent and the Millennium] and I will love her tenderly [Israel in the Millennium], the one not being loved [Israel under the 5th cycle of discipline]. Furthermore, I will say to those who are not my people [the gentiles], 'You are My people;' and they [the gentiles] shall say, 'You are my God.'

Romans 9:24 Even us, whom He has elected, not only from among Jews, but also from among Gentiles.

Romans 9:25 As he has also communicated in Hosea [Hos. 2:23], I will call those who are not my people [Gentiles], My people [Gentiles become the client nations]; and those who have not been loved [Jewish nations in the times of the Gentiles] as those who having been loved [the restoration of the Jews at the second advent].

We are operating under the concepts of freedom. We have the most unusual privileges ever enjoyed before.

Principle

1. Paul uses the Old Testament quotation to verify the fact of salvation of the Gentiles -- the fact that they would be saved, the fact that there would come a time in history in a different dispensation when only Gentile nations would be client nations to God.
2. Even though the Jews are the centre of God's plan they are set aside in divine discipline. But the plan of God moves right on -- God's plan moves along through Gentiles.
3. Jewish apostasy and reversionism neither hinders the plan of God nor does it hinder the faithfulness of God to Israel. The great failure of the Jews is the complete rejection of the first advent of Christ -- the great blot-out, literally blotting it out of the mind. Or perhaps a more subtle and sophisticated form of blot-out -- recognition without qualification.
4. God's promises to Israel are not abrogated and God's plan for Israel is not hindered by the great blot-out or by any form of Jewish reversionism or Jewish apostasy or by any form of divine punishment to the Jew.
5. In every generation there will be a Jewish remnant. This is illustrated by Paul's quotation from Isaiah in verse 27 where he quotes Isaiah 10:27.
6. No one's failure can hinder the plan of God and no one's sinfulness or apostasy can destroy the faithfulness of God. God's character is incorruptible; God's integrity is immutable; and God's wisdom is beyond genius.
7. The Jewish nation of Israel has been set aside as the client nation to God but the plan of God moves on with Gentile client nations.
8. Individual believers fail but the faithfulness of God never fails. The integrity of God overcomes human failure.

Romans 9:26 ...and, "It will happen that in the place where it was said to them, 'You are not My people,' there they will be called 'sons of the living God.'" (BLB)

Hosea 1:10 Yet the number of the children of Israel shall be like the sand of the sea, which cannot be measured or numbered. And in the place where it was said to them, "You are not my people," it shall be said to them, "Children of the living God." (ESV)

Verse 26 – this time we have a quotation from the first chapter of Hosea, verse 10. A literal translation from the Hebrew of verses 9,10: And the Lord said, name him Lo-ammi [Lo = not; am = people; mi = first person singular suffix referring to God, but with the negative: 'not my people'] ..." This was to be the illustration of how Israel would be set aside because for 400 years in every generation, with increasing tempo, they practiced the great blot-out. They practiced it eschatologically; today the Jews practice it historically. "... for you are not My people, and I am not your God.

In every nation that the Nazis went into would ferret out the Jews and gather them and send them to death camps. Lovely people, civilized people. The distraction of culture causing them to practice the great blot-out. This is discipline from God that is difficult to understand.

This is a prophecy anticipating the day when the Jews would be set aside. "Yet the number of the sons of Israel will be like the sand of the sea, which cannot be measured ..." No matter how many times God eliminates the cancer in Israel which is the blot-out of the first advent there is no lack of Jews on the earth. They are still here because of God's faithfulness. Not only will there be a remnant but there is a repopulation. Satan has never been able to eradicate the Jews. Anti-Semitism is Satan's program to remove the Jew from the earth, and even though Satan has tried with all of his power and genius we have Jews everywhere today. This is God's faithfulness.

Hosea 1:10 Yet the number of the children of Israel shall be like the sand of the sea, which cannot be measured or numbered. And it will come to pass in the place where it was said to them, "You are not my people," it shall be said to them, "You are the sons of the living God."

In other words, God may say to certain Jews as the cancer is blotted out, "You are not my people." But there are always those who believe in the Lord Jesus Christ and recognize Him as the only saviour, the God of Israel. They will multiply and exist in every generation and when the second advent occurs He will say to them, "You are my people."

Even though God speaks of the Jew as having negative volition like Aminhotep II, who was given extra time in order for him to express his negative volition. The Jews recognize that this pharaoh was a very evil man. The Jew can potentially build up negative volition and scar tissue. They can build up the same amount of scar tissue. It is the hardness of their heart that they build up, even though they hear the gospel in many ways from the Old Testament in their worship services.

Lo-ammi refers by interpretation to the northern kingdom to whom Hosea ministered. But, of course, it refers to Israel in general as the apostle Paul quotes it, for the principle applies to all of Israel just as it applied in Hosea to a specific part of Israel. Though the ten tribes of the northern kingdom were to be removed as a client nation to God the promise of God to true Israel – anyone who would believe – would be fulfilled. Even though some of it could not be fulfilled until the Second Advent God keeps His word. The elapse of time does not hinder God keeping His word to true Israel. These are promises which are mentioned in Genesis 15:5; 22:17; 26:4; Jeremiah 33:22; Hosea 1:10. The divine discipline of the ten tribes of the northern kingdom does not abolish or abrogate any of God's promises or evangelism to the Jews.

So we have the phrase, “in the place where” they were destroyed in the northern kingdom, in that same place they will find blessing. It refers to the land which was overrun by the Assyrians in the administration of the 5th cycle of discipline in 721 B.C.. In that same place at the second advent of Christ those who believe in Him, those not guilty of this intensified negative volition – the great blot-out, will be called the sons of the living God. So just as the quotation in Hosea 2:23 documents the salvation of Gentiles in the Old Testament this second quotation from Hosea 1:10 documents the salvation of Jews in the Old Testament. The Jews were not all destroyed in Spain (during Torquemada) or in Europe (during WWII). The Jews are not behind communism. This is the function of the old sin nature and the genius of Satan.

Now for the Greek exegesis of verse 26. It begins with the connective use of the conjunction kai plus the future active indicative of eimi (εἶμι) [pronounced eye-ME]. The future tense is predictive for the second advent of Christ and the restoration of Israel. The active voice: the second advent of Christ produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the fulfilment of the prophecy of the Second Advent.

“in the place” – en (ἐν) [pronounced en] plus the locative of topos (τόπος) [pronounced TOP-oss]. “And it shall be, in the place.” Then we have the adverb of place, ο(υ), which means “where.” It is a specific reference to the land of Israel.

“it was said to them” – ‘it was said’ is the aorist passive indicative from rhēō (ῥέω) [pronounced HREH-oh], a word which originally means to flow, and from flowing it means to speak because some people speak that way. The flow of words is the idea. The flow of words is merely a way of saying this is a quotation. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, the last half of Hosea 1:10. The passive voice: the ten tribes of the northern kingdom receive the action of the verb by interpretation, but obviously it is a message to any group of Jews in any period of time who are guilty of the great blot-out. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of divine renunciation of those Jews who reject Jesus Christ as saviour and therefore form the great blot-out. Then there is the dative plural indirect object from the intensive pronoun autós (αὐτοῖς) [pronounced ow-TOSS] used as a third person singular personal pronoun. It is correctly translated “to them.” So, “And it shall be in the place where it was said to them.” And where was it said to them, the Jews? Hosea 1:10.

Next is the nominative plural subject from the personal pronoun su, which is here proleptic – “you” specific people, the Jews. Hosea was talking to the 10 tribes in the northern kingdom but Paul in this quotation from Hosea flows another thought. Now it includes Jews everywhere who are guilty of the great blot-out. In Paul's day it was Jews everywhere. Then we have to insert the present active indicative of the verb eimi (εἶμι) [pronounced eye-ME] because next we have the predicate nominative of laos (λαός) [pronounced lah-OSS]. With it is the negative ou (οὐ) [pronounced oo], the possessive genitive of egó (ἐγώ) [pronounced ehg-OH] – “you are not my people.”

People can be very nice and courteous; but when you give them gospel, they respond with great negative volition. The Jews are just like the Pharaoh of the Exodus by rejecting their Savior, Jesus Christ.

“there” is the adverb ekei (ἐκεῖ) [pronounced ehk-Ī], referring to what is now called the ‘holy land.’ In that very same place where there once existed the great blot-out so that they had to be completely destroyed by the Assyrians there will be Jews that God will be able to call “My people.”

“they shall be called” – the future is referring to the second advent. The passive voice: true Israel will receive the action of the verb, as per Hosea 1:10 which documents the fact that this is expanded to include all Jewish believers. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of Bible doctrine.

Then we have the nominative of appellation from huios (υἱός, οὐ, ὁ) [pronounced hwee-OSS] with the possessive genitive of theos (θεός) [pronounced theh-OSS] – “sons of the living God.” The descriptive genitive singular, present active participle of zaô (ζάω) [pronounced DZAH-oh] – “living.” God lives; God is eternal; Jesus Christ is God.

Romans 9:26 And it shall be in the place [Israel] where it was said [Hosea 1:10], You are not my people; in that same place [Israel] they shall be called the sons of the living God.

The Jews are mentioned in one passage (Hosea 1:10) and the gentiles in Hosea 2:23. No matter what the historic circumstances, there are those who discover that the secret of life is faith in Jesus Christ. Earlier, the Jews of the northern kingdom were destroyed by the Assyrians, who overran them. God's plan moves on through disaster and through prosperity; and we move with it or not.

1977 Romans

Lesson #635

635 02/12/1979 Romans 9:27a; Isaiah 10:21–23 Gov. Clements re defense; nice Jews' negative volition to Jesus Christ hinders the evangelization of others

A letter from Governor Clements. Talking about the military budget. We have a clear ten year lead in most technologies, which is based in our free enterprise system. Our cruise missiles are a whole new set of problems for Russia. The stealth nuclear submarine. Right now, soviet military expenditures are more than ours. Way more. 150% overall of ours. We are outnumbered in tanks, combatant, missiles, etc. A new weapon system takes 8 to 10 years to develop. Our intelligence community is in disarray. It has been compromised by intelligence procedures as porous as Swiss cheese.

One legislative solution is suing the government. Bob likes that solution.

The Jews are the most amazing people in the world Ann Frank, Elizabeth Taylor, and a few others. Most of the good entertainment has come from the Jewish sources. Bob loves MASH on television, even though it is anti-war. You would enjoy spending an evening with Alan Alda. Arrogant people from any group are a pain to the neck; but we would have an easy time spending time with Jews in entertainment. We may live to see an instance of a large-scale antisemitic attack against the Jews.

However, despite these people being wonderful, their unbelief can be a cancer and the justice of God sometimes steps in. But what about all the gentile cancers? None can come even close to Jewish unbelief. There is no gentile genius that could close to the strength of negative volition which can take place among the Jews. When too many Jews blot out the 1st advent, they become a danger to evangelism.

Romans 9:27 And Isaiah cries out concerning Israel: "Though the number of the sons of Israel shall be as the sand of the sea, only the remnant will be saved. (BLB)

Verses 27 & 28 is the third documentation, a quotation from Isaiah 10:22,23. The context in the Hebrew is a prophecy regarding the restoration of Israel at the Second Advent. Paul does not quote Isaiah 10:21 which says, "A remnant will return, a remnant of Jacob, to the mighty God." This is the group of people who believed in the Lord Jesus Christ and were not guilty of the great blot-out which occurred when the Assyrians took the northern kingdom, was repeated when the Chaldeans under Nebuchadnezzar took the southern kingdom, was repeated periodically in the fourth cycle of discipline, and finally concluded with the 5th cycle of discipline administered by the Romans in AD 70. In each case there was a tremendous build-up of this spiritual cancer, the great blot-out which is a concentration of people who have maximum hardness of heart. This blot-out is a complete ignoring of the first advent as the expression of maximum negative volition. Even in the Tribulation there will be a great blot-out but there will also be those who believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, beginning with the 144,000 Jews scattered throughout the entire earth from twelve of the thirteen tribes. Only the tribe of Dan will be excluded. From the tribe of Dan will come the Jewish antichrist. They in turn will have a great evangelistic push so that when Christ returns to the earth there will be those who are there to greet Him, who recognize Him as saviour. They were not guilty of the great blot-out, they believed in Him, and they will be the remnant of Jacob who will be there to welcome the Lord Jesus Christ as the Mighty God of Israel.

Isaiah 10:22 – "For though your people, Israel, shall be like the sand of the sea, only a remnant within them will return ..." The great population explosion which historically has occurred where Israel is concerned, their people are like the sand of the sea, but only a remnant are actually going to be there because of the big blot-out. "... a destruction is decreed bringing in justice like a flood." Here is one passage that lays it very clearly on the line. Why were 5-million Jews destroyed by the Nazis? “A destruction is decreed bringing in justice like a flood.”

Verse 23 – “For a complete annihilation, one that is decreed, my Lord Jehovah of the armies will execute in the midst of the entire land.” This is referring specifically to a judgement which occurred in the land. The 5th cycle of discipline occurs three times historically; the 4th cycle of discipline many, many times historically. All of this was because of the big blot-out which is today, right up to this moment, the greatest problem and the greatest failure of the Jewish people – their maximum negative volition expressing itself in a total rejection of the first advent, a total rejection of Jesus Christ as the Messiah, a total rejection of the salvation first portrayed in the blood offerings which the Jews practiced, beginning with the Exodus generation. These Levitical offerings were given to Moses by the Lord Jesus Christ on Mount Sinai, and yet these very same blood offerings were rejected and ignored. They went through the ritual; they rejected the reality. The great failure of Israel is always ritual without reality.

These two verses are quoted in Romans chapter nine, verses 27 & 28. Both of these quotations are made from the Septuagint, rather than from the Hebrew. Verse 22 is quoted in Romans 9:27; Isaiah 10:23 is quoted in Romans 9:28. The quotation distinguishes between the innumerable physical seed of Abraham and the remnant of true Jews or those who did not make the fatal error of ignoring the first advent.

Romans 9:27 – “Esaias” is a transliteration of the Greek. Hêsaïas (Ἡσαΐας) [pronounced hay-sah-EE-as], plus the postpositive conjunction de; the ascensive use of gar should be translated “in fact.”

“crieth” – the present active indicative of krazô (κράζω) [pronounced KRAD-zoh] means to cry, among other things. It covers the whole gamut of both intensive and urgent speaking. It is translated here, therefore, “speaking [preaching] in an emergency.” This is when Sennacherib invaded. This was the great crisis which came to Israel because of a large blot-out of the first advent. This is why Isaiah overcame it with all of his great messages about the first advent of Christ. The present tense is a pictorial present which presents to the mind a picture of Isaiah’s message in the process of occurrence. The Assyrians under Sennacherib were knocking at the gates of Jerusalem. The active voice: Isaiah gave the message, producing the action of the verb in a dramatic speech in a time of national crisis. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality.

The emergency is found in the prepositional phrase, the preposition hupér (ὑπέρ) [pronounced hoop-AIR] plus the genitive of reference from the definite article plus the indeclinable proper noun Israêl (Ἰσραήλ) [pronounced is-rah-ALE]. “In fact, Isaiah speaking in an emergency with reference to Israel.” Quote: Isaiah 10:22,23.

Romans 9:27a In fact, Isaiah speaking in an emergency with reference to Israel...

636 02/13/1979 Romans 9:27b Shah of Iran; blot outs big and little; basis of prosperity and fall of nations; only Jews are permanent

The notes for this may be missing and have to be filled in. Most of the exegesis for v. 27 is missing; and there is nothing on Isaiah 10:23.

Bob has always been curious about Iran. As Persia, it was one of the centers of ancient power.

The Shah of Iran was apparently a good ruler, who took the nation from dirt roads to paved roads and modernized Iran. He instituted establishment principles which resulted in great modernization. At this time, there were a great many Christians in Iran. There was a middle class developed in Iran. Many people were sent from Iran to the US for an education. But this people became very anti-establishment. Iran is suffering from its own type of blot-out. Establishment principles were developing a great nation. No Muslim nation provides any freedom for its citizens. The Iranians will suffer the results of their own blot-out. The Shah was the only hope for establishment.

Bob is beginning to look at history in the terms of blot out. Our heritage is freedom and establishment. It is amazing to Bob how many times a people blot out the very source of their freedom and blessing. The great attacks come from communism and religion. Both attack, but from a different point of view. Many disasters which occur in history can find a people doing well, prospering, even great, and then the blot out the very source of their blessing.

The warnings occur in the Old Testament in Job, Psalms, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, etc. All of the minor prophets has an entire chapter on the great blot out. Any generation who rejected the 1st advent would suffer.

God's perfect righteousness only comes with the 1st advent.

Jews in general can be wonderful, charming, great people. The people in Rhodesia were taking the last stand in Anglo-Saxon history.

Isaiah 10:22–23 are quoted in Romans 9:27–28. The great blot out is the subject of the Isaiah passage.

The great ten plagues, once they got to about six of them, it was time to remove Pharaoh from this life. But instead, God gave him the strength to go on instead of removing him. In the final plagues, God is said to strengthen Pharaoh's heart. The Jews understood this and Pharaoh is one of the arch-villains to Jews for centuries.

Prophets and priests in every generation warned of what was to happen. When we get to Romans 10, we will have time to evaluate this. This explains why wonderful Jewish people are subject to great judgment.

Romans 9:27 And Isaiah cries out concerning Israel: "Though the number of the sons of Israel shall be as the sand of the sea, only the remnant will be saved. (BLB)

The protasis of the 3rd class condition of ean. This is ean + the subjunctive mood, which gives us a 3rd class condition. This is a more probable future condition whereas the 4th class condition is known as a less probable future condition. In the future, there will be many Jews, millions of Jews, even though they will suffer many, many disasters. There will always be Jews and there will always be man Jews. There are not many Assyrians, Accadians, many have been annihilated or intermarried out of existence.

The Greek people today do not resemble the Greek people from David's time or before David's time. They were tall, blue-eyed, blonde. Much different from Greeks today. Today the Greeks are dark and of a medium height. Many people have fought in Turkey and in Greece; many have invaded, have stayed and have intermarried. The person who calls himself is not at all related to any of the various Greeks like the Macedonians or the Dorians, etc. This is true throughout the world. Who are the French and who are the English. So many Saxon groups and Celtic groups and Scandinavian groups who had gone through England. Out of all the confusion of peoples in modern history. The Germans are made up of everything in the world. Russia is even a great mess. Always invaded. Name any race and they have been in Russia. Mongolians, Chinese, etc. There is one pure race or close to a pure race, the Jews. Many Jewish tribes are half gentiles. Joseph married an Egyptian. The Jew is still the smarted, talented, most unusual of the world. They still have the world's greatest heritage; but every few generations, they suffer great harm, because they have cut their heritage out. They can all say, "I am related to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob."

The subject is arithmós (ἀριθμός) [pronounced ar-ith-MOSS]. This comprehends the Jews the purest of all races who can trace themselves back thousands of years. Gentiles might go back a few hundred years and in some rare cases, a thousand years.

The one thing that holds us together more than anything else is the Jewish population in the United States. This is one of the most wonderful things about our country. This is a great function of a client nation to God. If the number of the sons of Israel be....

Paul projects forward in time, to the end of the church age, through the Tribulation and into the Millennium. From Paul's time to the end of time, there will be Jews. Paul projects this line saying that there will always be Jews in human history. Satan's major project from the beginning of Abraham has been to destroy Israel. Not only has he failed, but there are more Jews today than going back thousands of years.

Satan believed the 1st advent and he tried to keep it from happening. The major issue in history is the Jew, the only important race in history. There are Jews in Texas and all over the world and they are identifiable as Jews.

Socialism has contributed to the blot out of England's heritage. Everywhere, there are these blot-outs taking place. People are constantly disappearing from history. Nations disappear from history. People inevitably destroy themselves. Every culture which destroys themselves begs for it. Only one people have survived the blot-out, and that is the Jewish people. Population existence, identification and .

England may disappear and become a golf course for commissars. But there will always be Jews. The greatest people in the world are the Jews. The super-race was not the Germans but the Jews. The promises to multiply the Jews to Abraham, Isaac and to Jacob. The Jews will be scattered all over the earth.

Dr. Davidjohn has all the Rabbis searching out the meaning of Israel. Genesis 32:12 was Jacob worried that his brother would smash him into the dust. Here, I am about to be destroyed by my brother.

άμμος (ἄμμος) [pronounced AM-moss], which means, sand. With this is θάλασσα (θάλασσα) [pronounced THAHL-ahs-sah]. That is sea.

Romans 9:27 In fact, Isaiah speaking in an emergency, with reference to Israel, “If the number of the sons of Israel be as the sand of the sea...”

This is a conditional clause because there is a reason for it. It must be put in the 3rd class condition, which is a supposition. “Some of you are staring at me like someone from outer space.” Those of your staring off into space and you are the ones who complain, “I don’t see where he got that!” The fulfillment of which... Why the 3rd class condition? Satan himself cannot wipe them out. Yet, in every generation, we see the faithfulness of God. This is the one indestructible bulwark against evil. The 3rd class condition means there will always be Jews but they won’t always be happy Jews. The God of Israel is Adonai Elohim, Whom we call the Lord Jesus Christ.

The heritage of Israel is a big blot-out. The Lord Jesus Christ who spoke to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob; and Who appeared to Joseph and to Moses. He always was the One to deliver Israel. When there is a reverse pivot. The great blot-out during the time of the Judges. David and Solomon were mature believers. After Solomon, then we have the disasters and the great blot-out picked up again.

Hiram was led to the Lord by David, and the Philistines began with sea power.

The apodosis, a remnant shall be saved. Always in a blot-out, there is a pivot of mature believers who come forward after that. There is always a pivot that survives. Every race, every group of people somehow lose their identity. This happens many times in history.

Who are the Serbians. They were Bosnian and others. Now they are Czechoslovakians and _____. The Galatians are Celts living in Asia Minor. People disappear from history and then they emerge in a new place sometimes with a new name.

But all of this time, there are the Jews, the greatest people who have ever lived. No gentile can come close to Paul or Moses for being great geniuses of history. The Jews do not understand themselves. In the next two weeks, we will come to understand the Jews as a people and the great blot-out.

The word for remnant is katáleimma (κατάλειμμα) [pronounced kat-AHL-ime-mah]; but in the text, it reads υπολειμμα); which makes no sense. This word occurs here only.

Zechariah tells us that ten people will come to the holy man and they will strive to touch the foot of one Jew.

If you take the Jew out of history, there is no understandable history. The true Israel will always be there. Isaiah 10 says that they will be there to welcome Him. There will never be a day on this earth when there are no Jews on the earth. No matter what, there will always be a remnant. The remnant is the born again Jew. There will always be Jews living in [X] or [Y] or [Z].

The greatest holocaust will occur at the 2nd advent, when they are judged (along with all other unbelievers).

Romans 9:27 In fact, Isaiah speaking in an emergency, with reference to Israel, “If the number of the sons of Israel be as the sand of the sea the remnant shall be delivered.”

There will always be a remnant of Jews in every generation.

1977 Romans

Lesson #637

637 02/14/1979 Romans 9:28 Divine decrees and Jesus Christ's Alpha and Omega glory; negative volition result is the sting of death; Jews rejection of the First Advent cf. the remnant

In the 1920s and 1930s, there were many presbyterian missions in Iran. When some groups went on a rampage, people would come to the American flag for refuge. We have kicked our friends in the teeth, Rhodesia, South Africa, Taiwan. The result is, communism is coming close to controlling everything in the world. “All liberals are stupid” R. B. Thieme, Jr., 1979.

The big blot-out means little missionary endeavor.

The same year that Columbus was sent out from Spain, Spain began to persecute Jews.

There is a connection between a country's foreign policy and missionary activity. England is undergoing terrible disaster now because they have accepted socialism.

It appears that the United States is headed toward national destruction just like Israel.

Romans 9:28 For the Lord will perform the sentence He is concluding and bringing swiftly upon the earth.” (BLB)

Isaiah 10:23 is covered in verse 28 – it begins with the explanatory use of the postpositive conjunctive particle gar. The subject in the nominative singular is the noun kurios (κύριος) [pronounced KOO-ree-oss], referring to the Lord Jesus Christ, not only here but also throughout the rest of this chapter and the next – the Greek word for deity, for God. It indicates the Lord Jesus Christ with emphasis on His first advent. The anarthrous construction emphasizes the uniqueness of the person of Christ at the Second Advent, the uniqueness which came as a result of the first advent. The big blot-out with regard to the first advent has devastated not only the Jews but countless Gentile nations and empires who have been and formed the function of client nations only to be destroyed by the big blot-out.

Next comes a verb, the future active indicative of poieō (ποιέω) [pronounced poi-EH-oh] – to do, make, manufacture, accomplish, execute. Here it means to execute, not to finish anything. The predictive future refers to the second advent of Jesus Christ when the Lord Jesus Christ will terminate any possibility of the big blot-out. The active voice: the Lord Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb in the delivering of true Israel, regenerate Jews scattered throughout the world. There will be a big blot-out but it will be removed, it will be the judgement of the Jews mentioned in Ezekiel chapter 20. But in spite of the big blot-out -- we have noted in every generation there is some blot-out, sometimes so big that it calls for special divine discipline and great historical disaster -- there will always be a remnant of Jews who are believers in the Lord Jesus Christ and they will be there to welcome the Lord Jesus Christ back to the earth, and they are the ones to whom the Lord Jesus Christ will fulfil the Abrahamic, Palestinian, Davidic and New covenants to Israel. The indicative mood is declarative for a future reality. It also acts as the main verb for two participles. “For the Lord will execute.”

And where is He going to execute His word? – epí (ἐπί) [pronounced eh-PEE] plus the genitive of gh, “on the earth.” This is the second advent of Christ, termination of Jewish troubles from the big blot-out. Israel will be restored as the client nation of God and never again will it be plagued by the big blot-out. “For the Lord will execute his word on the earth” is the correct translation, and it refers to the Second Advent.

Then there are two participles. First of all, a complementary participle and secondly a modal participle. The present active participle of sunteleō (συντελέω) [pronounced soon-tel-EH-oh] is the complementary participle. The word means to complete, to bring about, to finish, to consummate. Here we will translate it “completing.” The static present tense is for a fact of doctrine being taken for granted as a fact – the Second Advent with the restoration of Israel as a client nation and the total termination of any possibility of any more great blot-outs. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb at the Second Advent. The complementary participle is one in which the participle complements the idea of the action expressed in the main verb. The main verb: “he will execute his word.” Then the second participle which is present active, and the verb is suntémnō (συντέμνω) [pronounced soon-TEHM-no] – it means to cut short, to execute speedily, but these are not even close to what it actually means here. What it really means it to decree. This is a historical present viewing the divine decrees in eternity past with the vividness of a present occurrence. The active voice: God did the decreeing in eternity past when the omniscience of God separated fact from fiction and entered the actual into the computer. He decreed for Israel certain things. Of course, the big blot-out was there and the printout was holocaust, judgement. But the printout involved here is the fulfilment of Israel as a permanent client nation under the unconditional covenants, beginning at the second advent, continuing throughout the Millennium and then in to eternity forever. The modal participle signifies the manner in which the action of the main verb is accomplished. And this is why with a complimentary and a modal participle this is the way you must translate this verse, no other translation will do: “For the Lord will execute his word on the earth, completing what he also decreed.”

Principle

1. The adjunctive use of the conjunction kai indicates the fact that the decrees existed in eternity past. Long before space, time or creatures existed the decrees existed. That is why we have the word “also,” the adjunctive use of kai. It goes with the modal participle, not the complementary participle.
2. Christ is often called Alpha and Omega, which, of course, is the first and last letters of the Greek alphabet.
 - a. The Jews recognize Alpha glory, but not Omega glory.
 - b. The unregenerate Jew has taken away the record of negative volition set by the pharaoh of the exodus.
 - c. Ann Frank signifies in her own writing the great blot-out. She could understand the comfort Christians received from Jesus, but it was not for her.
3. As Alpha God’s omniscience fed into the computer of divine decrees the actual. Jesus Christ was there in eternity past. He knew as Alpha, existing in eternity past, every thought of every person who would ever live plus every decision of every person who would ever live; and, furthermore, every action of every person who would ever live. God possessed perfect glory in eternity past when He decreed, and when He possessed the same glory in Omega in eternal future. The glory He had when He programmed the computer is the same glory He will have when the believing Jews welcome Him back at the Second Advent. When He comes back He not only has that perfect essence which He has always had, but true humanity – true Jewish humanity, line of David forever. That is His Omega glory.
 - a. What makes His Omega glory? The first advent makes His Omega glory. There is no Omega glory without a virgin giving birth to a son and His name is called Emmanuel – God with us. The Omega glory of the Lord Jesus Christ is the fact that He came into the world through virgin birth, minus the imputation of Adam’s sin, minus the old sin nature. He lived a life of perfection even though He was tempted far beyond anything we will ever know or understand. The Omega glory is related to the first advent, and every Jew that has blotted out the first advent in his soul with his negative volition rejects the Omega glory and removes them from this life. You can’t have Alpha glory without Omega glory.
 - b. So this verse refers to a moment in history, the Second Advent, when Omega glory is revealed to Israel.

4. At the Second Advent Christ will execute His word to the Jews through deliverance of the Armageddon campaign, restoration of the believing Jews to form the new client nation, and fulfilment of the unconditional covenants to Israel.
5. In this way God will have completed what He decreed regarding the future of the true Jew, the regenerate remnant of Israel, both in time [Millennium] and eternity – forever.
6. There will be a remnant of true Jews, those who did not blot out the first advent; believers in Christ scattered throughout the world during the Tribulation. They will be regathered as the last and eternal client nation. These born-again Jews will be delivered at the Second Advent.

The principle behind all of this is what God decrees, God executes; what God promises, God fulfils. He keeps His word. Sodom and Gomorrah is a perfect illustration of a Gentile big blot-out, and this is coming up in the next verse.

Romans 9:28 For the Lord will execute his word on the earth, completing what he also decreed.

He decreed it as Alpha; He completes it as Omega.

Principle

1. The omniscience of Jesus Christ Who is God fed reality into the computer of divine decrees.
2. This reality includes every human thought, decision, and action in history.
3. On a personal basis the programming of the computer in eternity past includes every person in history from Adam and the woman down to the last person of the last day of the Millennium.
4. God will complete what He has decreed.
5. God the Son will bring about and finish human history so that every thought, every decision, every action known by His omniscience in eternity past will actually occur.
 - a. Every Jew who has ever been involved in the big blot-out is a world record holder, making Amenhotep II look like a little boy. They all break his record. Therefore, when they blot the first advent out of their minds through their own free will then God blots them out of human history. In that way He eliminates the cancer so that others can be evangelized.
 - b. God gave pharaoh more time to say no. God allowed his free will to go farther than any other free will in history. He is an arch villain to the Jews.
 - c. God presented the 1st advent to Israel in a way that is more lucid than anyone else. This was taught to their prophets. They would develop scar tissue every time that they said no.
 - d. When you blot-out the first advent, God blots you out.
 - e. The unbeliever when he moves toward death, he begins to worry about death and they might even change their life pattern because they are afraid to die. This happens to people who blot out the 1st advent, there is a sting in death.

6. To all the free will decisions and free agent functions God will be glorified whether man's decisions are compatible with divine policy or antagonistic to divine policy. Blotting out the 1st advent is the greatest blasphemy of life.
7. The plan of God moves on with or without you. This is true of Israel, of the church of Jew and of gentile.
8. Furthermore, the plan of God does not depend on man; actually, man depends on the plan of God.
9. In spite of all Satanic antagonisms and human negative volition the plan of God with its stated objectives moves on to completion, unhindered by any form of opposition, human or angelic. And the greatest form of opposition in the inner circle of the plan of God is Israel's big blot-out.
10. Jesus Christ controls history. Jesus Christ has provided from His Word solutions to every disaster of life but all solutions are bound up in the implications of the first advent – common grace, efficacious grace and, after salvation, persistence in the perception of the Word. For the believer who persists in the perception of doctrine there is no problem or difficulty for which there is not a perfect solution in the doctrinal content of the Word as it is transferred to the individual soul.

Salvation is the 1st advent. There is no hope for anyone who blots this out. If that is true for us, how much more this is intensified for the Jew. Dying belongs to life, not to eternity. For the person who is a believer and does not stay with doctrine, he has a semi-blot out. He calls on the Lord only when he is in a jam. His soul has a bubble on it.

1977 Romans

Lesson #638

638 02/15/1979 Romans 9:29a; Isaiah 29:9–14; Isaiah 1:7–9 Definition of the big blot out; shock over the Holocaust from the counter-pivot

Isaiah 29:9 – Hithpael imperfect of māhahh (מָהַחַ) [pronounced maw-HAH]. This is reflexive, you yourself be shocked. It is the terrible things which have happened to the Jews throughout history. Followed by the Qal imperative of tāmahh (תָּמַחַ) [pronounced taw-MAH]. “Be shocked, and amazed...” A perfect way to introduce the subject of the big blot-out from the standpoint of the Jews because of the terrible things that have happened to the Jews throughout history that have shocked us perhaps the most. The big blot-out is a shocking thing when it comes to the resultant judgments which occur periodically throughout history. There are several ways to become aware of the big blot-out and one of them is to see the shocking results in history.

The next two imperatives in this verse actually describe in one short phrase the big blot-out. “... blind yourselves, and be blind ...” This is a short definition of the big blot-out, the complete ignoring of the first advent of Christ; blotting it completely out of the mind through the maximum use of negative volition, a negative volition which every time it is expressed in the big blot-out is a world record, formerly held by the Pharaoh of the Exodus.

“... they stagger, but not from strong drink ...” They are not drunk, they are staggering from something far greater than inebriation, they are staggering from judgment. God judges the big blot-out.

Isaiah 29:9 Be shocked, and amazed blind yourselves, and be blind they stagger, but not from strong drink

Verse 10 – “...” If you want a description of the Jews today and in every generation when the big blot-out exists, here it is. They actually have in their spiritual heritage a detailed account of the first advent. “... ..” They were completely blind to the first advent. “...

Isaiah 29:10 For the Lord has poured over you a spirit of deep sleep he has shut your eyes, O prophets he has covered your heads, O seers.

Verse 11 – “Therefore the entire vision [first advent] shall be to you like the words of a sealed book...” absolutely obscured by their negative volition “which, when they give it to one who is literate, saying, Please read this, he will reply, I cannot read.” He can’t read it because it is sealed.

Isaiah 29:11 Therefore the entire vision [first advent] shall be to you like the words of a sealed book absolutely obscured by their negative volition which, when they give it to one who is literate, saying, Please read this, he will reply, I cannot read (because it is sealed).

Verse 12 – “When the book is given to one who is literate, saying, Please read this, he will reply, I cannot read.” The literate can’t read it because it is sealed – the big blot-out; the illiterate cannot read it because he cannot read. These areas of the big blot-out, of the classifications of negative volition involved: those who understood it thoroughly and rejected it – the literate; those who came up to it and didn’t want to understand it--analogous to the illiterate.

Isaiah 29:12 When the book is given to one who is literate, saying, Please read this, he will reply, I cannot read (because it is sealed).

Verse 13 – “Then the Lord said, Because this people draw near with their mouth, and honor me with their lips” – taking Codex #2 which reveals Christ, first advent, in the greatest of detail, and honor with their lips, and yet at the very same time reject the things that they were saying in their souls. “... but they remove their right lobes [hearts] from me [first advent], and their respect for me [Jesus Christ, first advent], and [instead of believing in me] their respect is the commandments [Codex #1 & #3, rather than #2], learned by memorising.” They keep the commandments, producing a self-righteousness, and they go through the ritual of Codex #2 without the reality, which is believing in the Lord Jesus Christ.

Isaiah 29:13 Then the Lord said, Because this people draw near with their mouth, and honor me with their lips in the greatest of detail, and honor with their lips, and yet at the very same time reject the things that they were saying in their souls.

Verse 14 – “Therefore, behold, I will once again deal wonderfully with this people” – there is always a pivot; there is always a remnant of believers in every generation. God’s faithfulness to Israel never ceases. Even though they fail in certain generations with the big blot-out He is still faithful to them and provides for them eternal salvation – “doing wonderfully a wonderful thing” – the restoration of Israel in spite of the big blot-out in any generation: in spite of the judgment which destroys so many of them, they are still like the dust of the earth and the sand of the sea, and the stars of the heavens – “therefore the wisdom of their wise men will perish” – the Jews are very smart, but no matter how brilliant they are they are blind toward the first advent, which completely neutralizes their great intelligence-- “and the intelligence of their intelligence shall vanish” – any time there is a holocaust as a result of the big blot-out. This anticipates Romans 11:8-10.

Isaiah 29:14 Therefore, behold, I will once again deal wonderfully with this people doing wonderfully a wonderful thing therefore the wisdom of their wise men will perish and the intelligence of their intelligence shall vanish.

Romans 9:29 – a quotation from Isaiah 1:9. The purpose of this analogy can only really be explained in detail by the Alpha and Omega passages of Romans as they relate to the big drop-out. It begins with the connected use of kai to introduce the result which comes from what precedes – “And so.” Then we have the comparative particle kathōs (καθώς) [pronounced kahth-OCE] which is translated “just as.” This is followed by the nominative singular subject of the proper noun Hêsaias (Ἡσαΐας) [pronounced hay-sah-EE-as] – Isaiah, and the verb, the perfect active indicative of proerēō (προερέω) [pronounced pro-er-EH-oh], a synonym for prophesying – “And so, just as Isaiah has prophesied.” The intensive perfect tense indicates a completed action with continuous results. When special attention is directed to the results of the action emphasis on the existing act is always intensified. Isaiah’s prophecy is written with the result that it stands written forever in the Old Testament canon; it is all there; it is all written by one man. The active voice: Isaiah under the ministry of God the Holy Spirit is that one man who produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of Isaiah’s eschatological ministry.

Isaiah wrote in prose and poetry. Unbelieving commentators say two people wrote these words, but they are simply different styles of the same person.

Romans 9:29 And so, just as Isaiah has prophesied...

Then Paul quotes Isaiah 1:9. In the original context this is a reference to the administration of the 4th cycle of discipline to the southern kingdom – 701 B.C., the Sennacherib invasion of the southern kingdom. The immediate context includes Isaiah chapter one, verses 7 & 8, which describes the devastation, the holocaust that came as a result of the big blot-out. Isaiah 1:9 – “Unless the Lord of the armies [Jesus Christ] had caused to remain to us a remnant of a few” – that was the pivot that made it possible for Israel to only go as far as the 4th cycle of discipline and not to be destroyed under the 5th cycle of discipline in the days of Sennacherib – “like Sodom, we should have resembled Gomorrah.” We have a comforting verse about the remnant or the pivot of mature believers in history. Under the principle that Jesus Christ controls history it is the pivot of mature believers who deliver the nation in time of historical disaster by their very presence in that client kingdom. This is why the Jews continued as a client kingdom in the time of Isaiah, in the time of Hezekiah – believers responded in positive volition to the teaching of the Word. This is in the context of Isaiah 1:7–8, which is all related to the big blot out. Hezekiah went down to Egypt for help just as we have gone down to China for help.

Isaiah 1:7–9 Your country lies desolate; your cities are burned with fire; in your very presence foreigners devour your land; it is desolate, as overthrown by foreigners. And the daughter of Zion is left like a booth in a vineyard, like a lodge in a cucumber field, like a besieged city. If the LORD of hosts had not left us a few survivors, we should have been like Sodom, and become like Gomorrah.

Harvesting was a very big deal. They built temporary shelters out in the fields. The bad weather comes in. The people are gone, and Israel is left like a temporary shelter in a harvested field. That is what Israel is going to look like. Even the most hardened soldier was shocked by the devastation in Israel; the horrendous sight.

The hammock is for the overseer, the boss, the one in charge, the one who owns the field. Those who are capitalists, those who are rich, those who are successful, they are also included in the holocaust. Extreme suffering is what is taking place. Desolation, isolation, disastrous upheaval.

The Lord delivered Israel from Sennacherib from a pivot of mature believers.

In our nation, there is a pivot; and there is also a counter pivot. God considers the pivot and the counter pivot. Paul quotes from the Hebrew Isaiah 1:9.

Isaiah 9:29 Unless the Lord of the armies [Jesus Christ] had caused to remain to us a remnant of a few, we would have been like Sodom, we would have resembled Gomorrah.

Believers responds in positive volition to Isaiah's teaching.

There will be a pivot even during the 2nd advent. There will always be a pivot. This pivot is the preservative.

1977 Romans

Lesson #639

639 02/16/1979 Romans 9:29b JEWS: passive, persecution of in Russia, etc., #1 in I.Q. and permanence of; prejudice and propaganda

For the most part, the Jews were passive. They submitted to this. Hundreds led to the gas chambers by only a few guards. Whenever Jews have undergone this kind of treatment, there are two responses: fighting to the death as over against passively going along with it. Both groups involve unbelievers. But a definite difference in their response.

Satan's objective is to wipe the Jews out so that there are no Jews to deliver. God would be a liar because there are no Jews remaining. We must understand our position as believers. We should not do anything in anyway to harm the Jew. We should provide safety and security if needed. Believers should not take part in antisemitism.

1881 near Kiev and Russian Christians were drinking and they were talking about the wealthy Jews in this town. They were upset because the Jews were superior to them. One of them made it up that Jews made their passover bread from the blood of Jesus. They went to the Jewish section of the city. They raped the women and killed them men and children. These were Greek Orthodox. The Protestants provided some protection. The Romanov family and those who ruled Russia and there was a great holocaust. May laws made it legal to legal to persecute Jews. Romania also had laws that made persecution of the Jews legal. Millions of Jews died in Russia. Russia suffered in many ways for this, including the destruction of the Romanov dynasty. Bob thinks they were the stupidest, dumbest people he has ever heard of. Communism succeeded because Jews were constantly persecuted. To avoid persecution, some Jews joined the communist party.

People often say why. The Jew is unique and special; and his own heritage comes to haunt him. Jesus Christ is the God of Israel and the Protector of Israel; and Jesus is the Savior of all Jews.

The holocaust will reach a peak in the Tribulation. There are fewer Japanese and Jewish criminals than any other group. There is a genetic known. The Jews and Japs are the two smartest groups in the 20th century. They are so smart, they keep their dummies out of sight.

We are getting additional documentation. Isaiah is the most difficult of the Hebrew.

Romans 9:29 And as Isaiah predicted, "If the Lord of hosts had not left us offspring, we would have been like Sodom and become like Gomorrah." (ESV)

We have the protasis of a second class condition introduced by the conditional particle ei (εἰ) [pronounced ī], plus the negative mê (μή) [pronounced may] which denies the idea. It is translated literally, "If not." It should be translated in the sense of its idiom, "Except that" or "Except." Then we have the subject in the nominative, kurios (κύριος) [pronounced KOO-ree-oss], used here for the Lord Jesus Christ under His Omega power. Omega refers to Christ in hypostatic union, beginning with the virgin birth, continuing with the incarnation, impeccability, His ministry, His work on the cross, after which His physical death, resurrection, ascension, session, return. Part of the big blot-out is the fact that the Jew who is on negative volition always recognizes the God of Israel under the title of Adonai Elohim, the Alpha glory of Jesus Christ, but he blots out completely the first advent and its implications, and therefore rejects the Omega glory of the Lord Jesus Christ. The word that follows is sabaôth (σαβαώθ) [pronounced sab-ah-OWTH], which is a transliteration of the Hebrew word Sa-ba-oth. It means "armies," large groups of people. "Except the Lord of the armies," and it refers to the Lord Jesus Christ, the Shekinah glory of Israel, the one who controls history.

Then the verb, the aorist active indicative egkataleipō (ἐγκαταλείπω) [pronounced eng-kat-al-ĭ-po]. It means to leave in a place or situation, to leave behind, to forsake, to abandon. To leave as a remnant or a pivot for the preservation of a client nation is what is meant here – “had allowed to remain.” In other words, this Greek word tells us that even in the great holocaust it is always the Jew who is negative and a part of the big blot-out who is removed. And even believers of all states, from babyhood to maturity, are permitted to continue. They are left on the earth during one of these great divine judgements so that no believer is involved in a holocaust. The culminative aorist tense views the action of the Lord in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, which is, at certain periods of judgment in history very few people in the Jewish race are preserved except those who are believers. The active voice: Jesus Christ as Jehovah of the armies, the God of Israel, produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative for historical reality and the perpetuation of the seed of Abraham throughout history.

Next we have a dative plural indirect object from the personal pronoun egó (ἐγώ) [pronounced ehg-OH] – “to us.” The dative of indirect object indicates the ones in whose interest the act is performed. It is in the interest of the Jews to be perpetuated and it is in the interest of the Gentiles to exist on the earth because there are Jews. No Jews; no Gentiles! It all depends on the survival of the Jew. Satan exploits jealousy of the Jew. He exploits human fallacy. The accusative singular direct object from the noun sperma (σπέρμα) [pronounced SPEHR-mah] is used for the spiritual seed of Abraham here, the racial Jew who believes in the Lord Jesus Christ – “a seed.”

Now to the apodosis. We have the particle án (ὄν) [pronounced ahn] which signifies the apodosis of a second class condition. The second class condition contains the supposition based on information in the protasis, and therefore the apodosis is determined as unfulfilled. There never will be a generation when there are not Jews who believe in Christ.

The people of Sodom and Gomorrah have completely disappeared from history; the Jew continues in history. In every generation of history certain Jews believe in Christ, forming the basis for a remnant, a pivot, a spiritual seed of Abraham.

Lesson #640

640 02/18/1979 Revelation 1:7; Deut. 6:4 Summary of the persecution of negative volition Jews; Alpha and Omega glories of Jesus Christ (which will be covered in the Revelation series); lip service; Jews and the Second Advent of Jesus Christ

No previously existing notes for the next two lessons.

Bob is often asked, what about the Jews in Germany when Hitler came in representing the socialist party.

“[Hitler] came into power under the national socialist party. There party that he represented was socialistic, just as socialistic at the Russian communists, even though he is called a fascist, there is no difference between the fascism of Hitler and the communism of Russia and China...it's all the same thing. Different names is merely debater's technique." R. B. Thieme, Jr. 1979.

Hitler began a great wave of antisemitism, and between five and seven million individual Jews were killed. They were the top in their profession. They were the great people of Europe. They were very kind people, very sweet people. It was a shock to the people what Hitler had done. This occurs periodically in history. The innocent, the pleasant the ones who contributed the most to civilization. This happened in 1881 in Czarist Russia. They went into the Jewish quarter and they raped, and killed and slaughters. One and a half million people were destroyed in that thing. This led to the fall of czarist Russia. The persecution of the Jews in Russia continued to 1917 and the communists themselves continued that persecution. The question is, how can such a wonderful people suffer such attacks when they are often the ones bringing a civilization forward. He think only of the ovens; but there were millions who were raped, tortured and killed. This is insanity; it is a madness. How was it that Torquemada managed to get to King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella and got to set up the inquisition to destroy the Jews of Spain. Why did so many evil people destroy the Jews in the middle ages. Or the various invasions of Israel in past millennia. This is a recognized pattern of history.

The simplest explanation that Satan is the ruler of this world and he wants to destroy all Jews so that there are no Jews remaining for the 2nd advent. Destroy the Jews and this keeps God from fulfilling His promises to the Jews. Nevertheless, there will always be Jews. The simplest explanation is what we are studying. Paul explains this in Romans 9. Bob chose the book of Revelation to explain this. He will give two services over to this.

Jesus is called the Alpha and the Omega thrice in Revelation. The Greek alphabet came from the Phœnicians. The Phœnicians invented the alphabet and the Greeks took this for themselves.

No complete explanation for Alpha and Omega. These are names which possibly refer to the God in the beginning; and Omega for His 2nd advent and the time of eternity. This is an incomplete explanation. The uniqueness of His title makes Jesus different from God the Father.

Jews rejected the 1st advent of Jesus Christ, long before the incarnation. It is because of the big blot out that nation Israel was overrun by the Assyrians and Chaldeans.

Jesus is Alpha God and Omega God.

Jesus is the stumbling stone; and the Jew comes up to it and he falls over it.

Revelation 1:7 Behold, he is coming with the clouds, and every eye will see him, even those who pierced him, and all tribes of the earth will wail on account of him. Even so. Amen.

The demonstrative participle idou (ἰδοῦ) [pronounced ih-DOO]. Then the present indicative of érchomai (ἔρχομαι) [pronounced AIR-khoh-my]. Meta then followed by nephelê (νεφέλη) [pronounced nehf-EHL-ay]. The cloud includes all of those who have been resurrected and they come with the Lord. All of these Jews are the ones who are coming. Isaiah 60:8 Jeremiah 4:8 Hebrews 12:1 are examples of the clouds referring to a large number of people. There are Jews who will be resurrected and come in glory with the Lord. But Jews who participated in the big blot out will also be raised up. There will be Jews all over the world will see Him.

Pas = every. ophthalmos (ὄφθαλμός) [pronounced opf-thahl-MOSS] means eye. The entire earth will be covered with a supernatural darkness. This will make it possible for every eye to see Him. optanomai (ὀπτάνομαι) [pronounced op-TAHN-oh-my]. This darkness is in Amos, Matthew, Revelation, and other places where there will be this great darkness. Those who will see Him will be those Jews who participated in the big blot out.

All of the people who are watching and one category are the unbelieving Jews of the Tribulation. They have completely rejected Him.

This is despite the Jews saying Deuteronomy 6:4.

verb: ekkentéō (ἐκκεντέω) [pronounced ek-ken-TEH-oh], which means, to pierce. Strong's #1574. There will be those who strike their chest being upset with what they have done. Extreme lamentation.

Revelation 1:6 Behold, He is coming with the clouds [many born again Jews will be with Him] and every eye shall see Him and all those who pierced Him [those who have rejected Him; not those at the crucifixion; those guilty of the big blot out] and those all the tribes with reference of the land will mourn over Him. Yes, I believe it!

This was written about A.D. 96 and since that time, there have been many holocausts which would take place.

Therefore we go to v. 8. We will start this tonite.

1977 Romans

Lesson #641

641 02/18/1979 Revelation 1:8; 21:1–8; 22:12–15; Deut. 6:4–6 Jews re the Alpha and Omega glory of Jesus Christ; future for negative volition and positive volition Jews

No existing notes for this lesson (my notes are generally inferior to the existing notes which I build upon). The Big Blot Out is our study.

Revelation 1:8 "I am the Alpha and the Omega," says the Lord God, "Who is and Who was and Who is to come, the Almighty." (ESV; capitalized)

Ego eimi + neuter singular definite article tō. The title alpha ἄλφα (pronounced AL-fah); which is the first letter of the Greek alphabet. The last letter is Ω, which is not written out. The first advent is blotted out; and Jesus returns a second time. By blotting out the first advent, the Jews reject the cross but they accept the crown.

Points

1. The Jewish race was founded on the first advent of Christ. On the Lord's Omega glory.
 - a. Abraham actually had eight children; but only one of them is the child of promise. Isaac recognized the 1st advent and its implications.
 - b. Isaac had twins.
 - c. The title of Alpha and Omega is the subject of Deuteronomy 6:4. With the mouth they give lip service to the Lord, but their heart is far from God.
2. Abraham, Isaac and Jacob were all born again and they recognized the Lord as their God and their Savior. The Jews recognized the God of Israel, but they rejected Jesus as Savior. They are deists, but without being born again.
3. Because of the big blot out, not all of those from Israel are really Israel.
4. The big blot out is the Jewish rejection of Jesus Christ. They reject the 1st advent and the salvation implications. With all of the Jews common sense and talent, he completely blanks out when it comes to the Person of Jesus Christ. They accept the alpha glory but not the omega glory.
5. They reject the Lord Who is the focal point of their heritage.
6. The Jews of the Old Testament were beneficiaries about the 1st advent of Christ. It is found in codex #2, the rituals, and the messages of the prophets.
7. Negative volition and resultant scar tissue of the soul is compared to the hardness of pharaoh's heart in Romans 9.

In Alpha glory, Jesus created it all, Colossians 1:16 John 1:1–3 Jesus is the God Who blessed them and protected them. In Omega, Jesus became Immanuel, which means God with us. Jesus is the beginning of all history and the end of all history.

To many Jews, they cannot and will not understand the great holocaust. They are very disturbed by it, but they cannot understand it. They accept the alpha glory of God, but they have rejected His omega glory. The Jews accept the Alpha glory of God, the Creator God; but they reject the Omega glory.

YHWH generally refers to only One Person of the Godhead.

Jesus is unique in the moment that He is born; unique in His death on the cross. Isaiah speaks of this in Isaiah 53. You cannot have Alpha without Omega. The Jews have accepted Alpha but they reject Omega. They accept the ritual, but they reject the reality.

Isaiah 29:13–14 And the Lord said: "Because this people draw near with their mouth and honor me with their lips, while their hearts are far from me, and their fear of me is a commandment taught by men, therefore, behold, I will again do wonderful things with this people, with wonder upon wonder; and the wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the discernment of their discerning men shall be hidden.”

Matthew 15:7–9 You hypocrites! Well did Isaiah prophesy of you, when he said: “ ‘This people honors Me with their lips, but their heart is far from Me; in vain do they worship Me, teaching as doctrines the commandments of men.’ ” (Isaiah 29:13) (ESV; capitalized)

The big blot out is the reason for many of their difficulties.

Deuteronomy 6:4–5 “Hear, O Israel, Adonai our Elohim is unique. You will love Adonai your Elohim with all your right lobe, with all your soul and with all your ability.

Deuteronomy 6:6–7a And these word (these doctrines) which I am commanding you today,” says Moses, “shall be in your right lobe and you will teach them diligently these things to your children.” While you have it in your heart, if you only have half of it, then have rejected Jesus.

Revelation 1:8 “I am the Alpha [the Eternal God] and the Omega [Christ in Hypostatic union],” says the Lord our God [= Adonai Elohanu]; He Who is and Who was and He Who is coming [as] the Omnipotent One.”

There is more than just a beginning; there is also an ending. This is the exact equivalent to Deuteronomy 6:4. This dramatizes the big blot out. They constantly repeat this phrase with the mouth, but this is not what is happening in the heart. They use the words to talk about the Savior, but they reject Him.

We have the 1st and 2nd advent in Revelation 1:8. The 1st advent Both He Who was. That is the historical reality. The Jews think of God existing in eternity past. But it always stops with His 1st advent.

Jesus was Alpha before He came in the flesh; but He came in the flesh, He is the Omega. Now, Jesus is always the Alpha and the Omega.

The Jew can look back and see God as Alpha. He picks up the Omega in His 1st advent. The Jews could not come into the Holy of Holies; so they could not go to see His alpha glory. But they have rejected His Omega glory, which is the glory of Jesus Christ in His ascension and session.

Then we have the pantokrátōr (παντοκράτωρ) [pronounced pan-tok-RAT-ore] with the definite article.

The Jew who has rejected Christ will be assembled at the last and there will be weeping and great gnashing of teeth.

Points

1. As the Alpha God, Christ always existed.
2. He fed the reality into the computer of divine decrees.
3. Jesus knew every thought and every action of history.
4. He possessed perfect glory in eternity past when He decreed history.
5. To His alpha glory was added His omega glory.
6. Billions of years ago, Jesus as God had alpha glory. Now He has omega glory.
7. Included in His omega glory is His true Jewish humanity.
8. It is the omega glory of the Lord Jesus Christ which is the stumbling block to the Jew with negative volition at God consciousness.
9. The Jew recognizes the alpha glory of Messiah when he says Deuteronomy 6:4. Jehovah is One. The alpha and omega glory is in One Person.
10. The Jew only recognizes Deity but not the Lord's humanity. His omega glory is the 1st advent, along with His death, resurrection, ascension and session.
11. Romans 9:32–33 Jesus is the stumbling block; stumbling stone. You walk right up to it and look at it and fall over it. Isaiah 8:14 1Peter 2:8 one of the most important subjects in the Word of God.

More Points

1. It is the Lord's omega glory that is the 1st advent.
2. The first advent is His omega glory.
3. There is no omega glory without the virgin birth, the death on the cross.
4. The omega glory is related to the 1st advent, which the Jewish unbeliever has blotted out.
5. Therefore, the big blot out is ritual without reality.
6. It is the genius of Moses Deuteronomy 30:11–14 who prophesied the big blot out.
7. Isaiah dramatizes this in Isaiah 53:1.
8. Isaiah said this because you cannot have alpha glory without omega glory.
9. The Jews in the blot out reject omega glory. They were passive and lined up to go into the ovens. They have been blotted out. When the Jews form a reverse pivot and this becomes a cancer to the Jewish community. They are nice people, talented people, cultured people, successful people.
10. In spite of these judgments of God, there are Jews in every generation all over the world. They are scattered all over the world. Greatest power of God among His creatures. Satan cannot remove one Jew from this world apart from God's permission.
11. There will always be Jews in the world.

Principle

1. Through negative volition, Israel is given in to the reverse pivot.
2. They believe in alpha glory but they reject omega glory. They utter the words of Deuteronomy 6:4, but they reject Him in their hearts.

3. They have rejected the reality behind all of their rituals and celebrations.
4. The big blot out is defined as a recognition of alpha glory but a rejection of omega glory.
5. At the 2nd advent, Jesus will return to deliver His people.
6.
7. There will be a number of believing Jews at the end of the Tribulation. What God decreed as alpha, He will execute as omega. God will complete what He will also decree.

Bob is teaching this so that he is not speaking to Himself.

Now Revelation 21:1–8; 22:12–15

Revelation 21:1 Now I saw a new heaven and a new earth, for the first heaven and the first earth will pass away. There is no longer any sea.

There will be a new earth without any seas.

Revelation 21:2 And I saw the holy city, the new Jerusalem, coming down out of heaven from God.

Revelation 21:3–8 22:12–15 and I heard a loud voice from heaven saying, “Behold the Tabernacle of God is among men and He shall tabernacle among them; and God himself will be among them and He shall wipe away every tear from His eyes. There will be no more crying or pain. And He Who sits on the throne will say, “Behold...and He said to Me, “I am the Alpha and the Omega.” I will give to those who thirst from the springs of living water. I will be His God and He will be My Son. But the cowardly, even the unbelieving, the cowardly, having been censored including murderers, sorcerers, and they will be placed into the second death. Behold I am coming quickly. I am the alpha and the omega, the first and the last, the beginning and the last. Happinesses for those who wash their robes who may enter into the gates of the city. Outside the gates are the dogs.

Lesson #642

642 02/19/1979 Romans 9:29–30a Classism and racism; reverse pivot and spinoff of the reversionist; permanence of the Jews; concept of the pivot and survival of the Priest Nation; negative volition of Jews cf. positive volition of the Gentiles

Romans 9:29 And, as Isaiah foretold: “If the Lord of Hosts had not left us descendants, we would have become like Sodom, and we would have been made like Gomorrah.” (BLB)

Romans 9:29 And so, just as Isaiah had prophesied [Isaiah 1:9], Except the Lord of the armies [the Lord Jesus Christ] had left to us a seed [a spiritual seed, a pivot of mature believers], we would have become like Sodom, we would have been made like unto Gomorrah.

Aristocracy was always based upon success, merit, ability. After the third generation, they may become something else. Equality is the enemy of freedom. Equality is the communist system of conquest.

We have an aorist passive indicative of the verb gínomai (γίνομαι) [pronounced GIN-oh-my] which means to be or to become, plus the particle án (άν) [pronounced ahn] to denote unreality. Furthermore, án (άν) [pronounced ahn] denotes that the action of the verb is dependent upon some circumstance – the existence of a pivot, a remnant of born-again Jews, the spiritual seed of Abraham. This should be “we would have become [but we won’t].” The án (άν) [pronounced ahn] means it was a potential but it will never become a reality. The culminative aorist tense of gínomai (γίνομαι) [pronounced GIN-oh-my] views the preservation of Israel as a race in its entirety but it regards it from the viewpoint of existing results – a pivot of Jews will always exist, right down to the second advent of Christ where the pivot there will greet the Lord Jesus Christ when His feet shall stand on that day on the mount of Olives. The passive voice: while Paul writes as a regenerate Jew, racial Jews also receive the action of the verb. You have to be a racial Jew before you are a regenerate Jew. The indicative mood is the potential indicative of condition.

“as” – comparative particle hôs (ώς) [pronounced hohç], “like,” plus the nominative of appellation Sodoma (Σόδομα) [pronounced SOD-oh-ah].

“and” – kai begins the phrase “and be made like unto Gomorrah.” We have the aorist passive indicative of homoioô (ὁμοιόω) [pronounced hom-oy-OH-oh] and it means to be made like something, to resemble, to be compared to, or even under some conditions to assimilate. The culminative aorist tense views the unreality in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. The passive voice: the racial Jew receives the action of the verb. The indicative mood is potential; it has a contingent element. It all depends on whether people who are believers turn around and start to respond to the teaching of doctrine, and whether or not there is any form of evangelism in that particular country. Then the comparative particle hos (ὅς) [pronounced hohç], meaning “like,” with the nominative of appellation which is Gomorrah. No one survived the destruction of Gomorrah; there were only three survivors from Sodom. This is what happens in a nation whenever the 5th cycle of discipline is administered.

Principle

1. Just as a pivot of mature believers delivers a client nation to God from the administration of the 5th cycle of discipline [annihilation], so a regenerate remnant of Jews, the spiritual seed of Abraham, perpetuates the Jewish race in every generation in the times of the Gentiles. This emphasizes the fact that there will never be a time when there are no Jews on the earth. This is a monument to the faithfulness of God.
2. Between the 5th cycle of discipline in AD 70 and the second advent of Christ – this includes the Church Age and the Tribulation – there will always be Jews in every generation, and there never will be a time when Satan can destroy them.

3. The racial Jew will never become extinct like the Canaanites of Sodom and Gomorrah.
4. Every generation will have a spiritual seed of Abraham which is composed of racial Jews who believe in the Lord Jesus Christ.
5. Consequently, when Christ returns to the earth at the Second Advent there will be a remnant of regenerate Jews to deliver, to regather, to restore to the client nation status quo.
6. There will always be in resurrection body that remnant of regenerate Jews from every generation in history – sperma (σπέρμα) [pronounced SPEHR-mah], the born-again seed of Abraham.
7. We depend upon a pivot of mature believers.

Pivot

1. Definition: It is a remnant of mature believers who live in a client nation during a time of historical catastrophe. There is also defined a spin-off: believers who have entered into reversionism through negative volition toward Bible doctrine.
2. When divine judgement falls on a nation the pivot of mature believers is secure; they are always preserved. They may have subsequent difficulties, as illustrated by the pivot in the days of Jeremiah but they are preserved from historical catastrophe. It is the reversionistic believers and the unbelievers who are annihilated.
3. This pivot, if large enough, is the means of delivering a nation under discipline. The nation is under discipline through five cycles and if the pivot is large enough it will be the means of delivering that nation.
4. While the pivot or the remnant of mature believers is secure the spin-off of believers in reversionism are always destroyed by historical catastrophe. This is the means of administering the sin unto death to reversionistic believers.
5. Negative volition toward doctrine and resultant reversionism produces the spin-off.
6. Historical disaster separates the remnant or the pivot from the spin-off of reversionists.
7. Historical disaster destroys the spin-off while preserving the pivot.

A Nation Destroyed or Delivered

- A. When the nation is destroyed
 1. If the pivot is too small and the spin-off of reversionism is too large the nation is destroyed under the 5th cycle of discipline.
 2. However, when the nation is destroyed under the 5th cycle of discipline the pivot of mature believers is preserved.
 3. Like Jeremiah and the mature remnant in the fall of Jerusalem in 586 B.C.
 4. Under the 5th cycle of discipline the Lord destroys the great spin-off and therefore protects future generations of history from evil, reversionism, apostasy and tyranny. When the cancer grows and becomes too great the Lord always removes it.

- B. When a nation is delivered
1. If the pivot is large enough the nation is delivered either from or through historical disaster. Sometimes it is from; generally it is through historical disaster.
 2. For example, Judah in BC 701 during the crisis of the Sennacherib invasion.
 3. Consistent ministry of Isaiah turned the tide, and that is always the last resort in historical catastrophe. When all divine establishment means have failed Bible teaching is the last resort.
 4. However, the spin-off of reversionism and evil is destroyed so that the nation will have breathing room and freedom for future generations.
- C. Conclusion
1. Historical crisis and disaster becomes the means of cleansing of the nation. It cleanses the nation from the great spin-off of evil.
 2. The great spin-off is composed of a maximum number of believers who are negative toward doctrine and in some phase of reversionism.
 3. The great spin-off will destroy a nation unless God intervenes with historical disaster to eliminate that cancer.
 4. In other words, either the great spin-off must go or the nation must go.
 5. The divine destruction of the great spin-off through historical disaster is therefore comparable to national rebound. With the infection of reversionism destroyed the nation takes on new life and continues.

This brings us to the 5th and last paragraph in Romans 9, verses 30-33. The premise is illustrated by the salvation of the Gentiles. One of the most confusing things to the Jews in Paul's day was the phenomenal evangelism and salvation among the Gentiles.

Israel's Unbelief

Romans 9:30 What then will we say? That Gentiles, not pursuing righteousness, have attained righteousness, and righteousness that is by faith;... (BLB)

Verse 30 – the Gentiles as vessels of mercy. It begins with the nominative neuter singular from the interrogative pronoun τίς (τις) [pronounced tihç], translated literally, “What.” It is followed by the future active indicative from the verb λέγω (λέγω) [pronounced LEH-goh] which means here to “say.” It forms a rhetorical question as a part of debater’s technique. Paul uses it seven times in Romans. The future tense of the verb λέγω (λέγω) [pronounced LEH-goh] is a deliberative future used for a rhetorical question taking the place of a deliberate assertion. Instead of making a dogmatic statement which would irritate the opposition he makes a humble question.

Next is the inferential postpositive conjunctive particle οὖν (οὖν) [pronounced oon]– “therefore.” The literal translation is: “Therefore, what shall we say?” But that is not the correct translation at all. This is a debater’s idiom and it does not mean what it says literally. The correct translation is, “Therefore to what conclusion are we forced?” or “What is the conclusion we are forced to make from all of this?”

Principle

1. The conclusion is forced by the content of Romans 9:24-26 in which Gentiles are included in the remnant.
2. The salvation of Gentiles means that Gentiles are classified in the category of “vessels of mercy.”
3. Paul uses the debater’s idiom to avoid any false conclusion and to deduce the historical results of these prophecies, especially Hosea 2:23 & 1:10.
4. The omniscience God fed into the computer of divine decrees the rejection of the greater part of Israel in contrast to the salvation of the Gentiles.
5. In every case human volition was involved, and in every case the printout falls into one of several categories.
6. The Gentiles who believe in Jesus Christ: their printout is election. The Jews who rejected Jesus Christ as saviour: their printout is condemnation.
7. God can bless the regenerate Gentiles because they received the imputation of divine righteousness at salvation. God can only condemn the unsaved Jews because they have in salvation approach rejected Christ, rejected His righteousness, and accepted their own in keeping the law.
8. The Jews guilty of the big blot-out do not possess the imputed righteousness of God because from their own free will, from self-determination, they have rejected Christ and have built up the scar tissue of the soul that results from that big blot-out.
9. On the other hand, Gentiles from their own self-determination have believed in the Lord Jesus Christ, they have received the imputation of divine righteousness. Therefore the potential for blessing in time is parlayed into potential for blessing in eternity.

1977 Romans

Lesson #643

643 02/20/1979 Romans 9:30b Governor of Texas: separation of church and state; self righteous –V racial Jew of the #1 spiritual heritage causes own condemnation.

Iran is going to be another French revolution. There is no Iranian army or air force right now. The officer corps is apparently going to be purged. They were going to be executed, so they have all left their positions.

Right here in Texas, one of the most despicable things a clergyman did. The governor spoke about separation between church and state, and a despicable presbyterian minister stood up and said it was the churches job to make sure the government helped the poor. He should be defrocked as an idiot.

There is illustrative matter which is about government. The church has no right to suggest revolution. Money is collected by the National Council of Churches in order to support violence and revolution in countries all over, like Rhodesia and South Africa.

Divine establishment is necessary for Bible teaching and evangelism.

For three weeks, we have been studying the big blot out. This is the only explanation for the destruction of the Jews in various antisemitic actions. For Romans 9–11 we should understand the term.

In every generation, starting with Moses, there will always be Jews who can utter the words, "Listen, O Israel, Adonai Elohanu is our God; Jehovah is unique." This is Jesus Christ as God. This is what the Jews utter every Saturday. The orthodox Jews use this constantly and say these words, but their hearts are far from God.

The Jews gives lip service with the mouth to the God of Israel, but they blot out the 1st advent of Jesus Christ. They did this eschatologically in the Old Testament; and in retrospect in the New.

Anticipation Principles

1. God's rejection of the physical Jew is not arbitrary or unfair.
2. The racial Jew is a free agent, a creature of his own self-determination.
3. The racial Jew was the beneficiary of Bible doctrine taught by the prophets and contained in the existing canon. It was always the 1st advent that was emphasized. The Passover, the First Fruits, Pentecost; all of the animal sacrifices. The encapsulate their negative volition in scar tissue. They utter the words with their mouth and reject Him in their hearts.
4. The racial Jews rejects Christ, and they accept instead self-righteousness by keeping the Law. They blot out the 1st advent and reject the imputation of God's righteousness. The develop a system of self-righteousness from portions of Codex #1+ #3.
5. Faith is the function of free will.
6. Keeping the Law is meritorious. Some of the lumps of clay use faith; and the potter can mold them into a vessel of honor. Those who reject Christ as Savior, they can use their own volition, their own function to establish their own righteousness. They become a vessel of dishonor by doing this. The big blot out is a guarantee of dishonor.
7. This emphasizes volition.
8. Man is a free agent. He must choose between his own self-righteousness and God's righteousness. You must choose your righteousness or God's.
9. The issue is arrogance versus grace. The person who chooses his own self-righteousness does so on the motivation of arrogance. The hidden issue is grace versus arrogance. No matter what facade of humility a person uses, when he depends upon his own righteousness, he is arrogant.

The holocaust between 1933 and 1945. The greater European mission had a marvelous response in Europe among the Jews. This was made possible by the elimination of so much negative volition.

Man is justified by faith apart from the Law. When you seek to establish your own righteousness,

Israel's Unbelief

Romans 9:30 What then will we say? That Gentiles, not pursuing righteousness, have attained righteousness, and righteousness that is by faith;... (BLB)

The statement in verses 30-31 is not a summary of the previous paragraph; it is a conclusion from the Old Testament documentation.

Principle

1. God's rejection of the racial Jew who is only the physical seed of Abraham is neither arbitrary nor unfair.
2. The racial Jew is a free agent, a creature of his own self-determination.
3. The racial Jew was the beneficiary of doctrine taught by the prophets and recorded in the Old Testament canon. And always it was the first advent which was emphasized.
4. The racial Jew rejects Christ and the resultant imputation of divine righteousness, and they accept instead self-righteousness by keeping the law. By blotting out the first advent they have rejected the imputation of divine righteousness.
5. Faith is non-meritorious volition; therefore faith in the Lord Jesus Christ is the function of free will.
6. Keeping the law is meritorious volition, therefore tantamount to rejection of God's plan and God's grace.
7. Verse 30 emphasizes man's freedom of choice, both the non-meritorious expression of volition and the meritorious expression of free will.
8. Man is a free agent, he must choose between his own self-righteousness or God's righteousness. This becomes a major issue in the human race.
9. The issue is arrogance versus grace. The person who chooses his own self-righteousness does so out of motivation of arrogance. The person who chooses God's righteousness does so from motivation of grace.

"That the Gentiles" – begins with the conjunction hóti (ὅτι) [pronounced HOH-tee], used after Paul's rhetorical question to indicate that the content of the conclusion is demanded. The word is simply translated "that" but it is much more meaningful, it means "all right, we are going to give you a conclusion."

The nominative plural ethnos (ἔθνος, οὐς, τό) [pronounced EHTH-noss] introduces the subject to the Jews. When the Jew develops self-righteousness and the basis for being justified by God he also develops arrogance – he feels himself totally superior to the Gentiles. This arrogance is carried into a realm of unreality rather than reality so that when he discovers that the Gentile is going to heaven it only increases his arrogance. And he develops more scar tissue to contribute to his big blot-out. The absence of the definite article in front of ethnos (ἔθνος, οὐς, τό) [pronounced EHTH-noss] – anarthrous construction – emphasizes the high quality of certain Gentiles who believed in the Lord Jesus Christ in Old Testament times.

God's plan begins with us when human life is imputed to the soul. God does not wait for any of us to commit our first sin in order to condemn us. We are condemned on the basis of the imputation of Adam's sin.

With the mouth they utter the words from Deuteronomy 6:4; they accept his alpha glory and rejected His omega glory. Jesus had to be true humanity in order to die for our sins.

The Jew who rejects Jesus as Savior does not live up to his heritage. Abraham, the first Jew, was a gentile until he cracked the maturity barrier. How do the gentiles hear without a missionary? A client nation sends out missionaries. It takes about 10,000 born-again believers to support one missionary in the field. The client nation sends them out. When we get to Romans 10:15, we will come across this.

In Israel, the big blot out was too massive to send out missionaries.

Daniel was a missionary to the Medes, Persians and the Chaldeans.

We should not send money to other countries; we should only send missionaries.

Next is the articular present active participle from the verb diôkô (διώκω) [pronounced Dee-OH-koh], which means to pursue or to strive for, and with it is the negative mê (μή) [pronounced may] – “did not strive for.” The Jews were keeping the law to strive for righteousness and they produced a nice brand of self-righteousness. Then a Gentile comes along and says that is doing it the hard way, that he is going to believe in Christ and get perfect righteousness. And so he passes the Jew right on by. The definite article here is used as a relative pronoun. The historical present tense with the negative mê (μή) [pronounced may] views the past [Old Testament times] with the vividness of a present occurrence. The active voice: the negative mê (μή) [pronounced may] plus the active voice indicates that Gentiles as free agents did not choose self-righteousness. The participle is circumstantial to present the status quo of certain Gentiles in Old Testament times.

Romans 9:30a Therefore, to what conclusion are we forced? That the gentiles, who did not strive for (pursue after) righteousness...

Then we have the accusative singular direct object from dikaïosunê (δικαιοσύνη) [pronounced dih-kai-oh-SOON-ā/dik-ah-yos-OO-nay] – “righteousness.” Here it refers to self-righteousness. The Gentiles just ignored trying to get into heaven by self-righteousness and thereby were able to get into heaven by believing in Christ who gave them His righteousness.

Principle

1. Self-righteousness in any form is unacceptable to God.
2. Self-righteousness is any form of works-righteousness for salvation.
3. Arrogance is the motivation for self-righteousness; negative volition is the momentum for self-righteousness; disorientation to reality is the result of self-righteousness.
4. God cannot bless self-righteousness any more than God can provide salvation for the self-righteous person.
5. The Jewish unbeliever striving for salvation through keeping the law is simply another case of trying to reinvent the wheel.
6. The wheel of God's plan has existed in eternity past – Alpha time. It is sustained in human history by the integrity of God. That means that in Omega time it is the integrity of God and the uniqueness of God the Son (hypostatic union) that forms the axle.
7. The wheel of God's plan rotates on the axle of divine righteousness which is imputed through faith in Jesus Christ. So you have to recognize the Omega glory of Christ in order to have the right axle -- +R.
8. The superficial and legalistic Jew invents his own axle of self-righteousness and tries make the wheel of the divine plan rotate on his own arrogance rather than rotate on the integrity of God.
9. No one can reinvent the wheel; no one can substitute the axle of self-righteousness for the axle of divine righteousness. The Gentiles who were saved in the Old Testament did not seek salvation through the invention of their own righteousness; they did not try to reinvent the wheel by pursuing after and striving for self-righteousness.

“have attained to righteousness” – aorist active indicative from the verb katalambanô (καταλαμβάνω) [pronounced kat-al-am-BAHN-oh]. It means to seize, to win, to attain, to catch, to overtake, to grasp. Here it means to overtake without effort, hence to attain through grace. The culminative aorist views salvation through faith in Christ in its entirety but emphasizes the existing results. The result in view here is the imputation of divine righteousness. The active voice: the Gentile who believes in Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb by not pursuing self-righteousness through keeping the law but by overtaking without effort the righteousness of God through faith in Christ. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of Gentile salvation in the Old Testament.

Then we have, again, the accusative singular direct object from dikaiosunê (δικαιοσύνη) [pronounced dih-kai-oh-SOON-ā/dik-ah-yos-OO-nay], minus the definite article to emphasize that this is God's righteousness.

“even” – the intensive use of the postpositive conjunctive particle de which is translated “in fact.”

“the righteousness” – this time there is the definite article, the generic use in the accusative case comprehending divine righteousness as a unique category set off in distinction from all categories of creature righteousness.

Finally, there is a prepositional phrase, ek (ἐκ) [pronounced ehk] plus the ablative of pistis (πίστις) [pronounced PIHS-tihs] – “from the source of faith.” The ablative is used for source only when the origin of that source is implied.

Romans 9:30 Therefore to what conclusion are we forced? That the Gentiles, who did not strive for (pursue after) righteousness, have attained (without effort) divine righteousness, that is, the righteousness which is from the source of faith [in Christ].

In Old Testament times many Gentiles were saved through faith in Christ because they did not try to be saved by their works, by their human merit, by production of self-righteousness. They believed in the Lord Jesus Christ and received Him as their personal saviour.

1977 Romans

Lesson #644

644 02/21/1979 Romans 9:30 Principles; Hitler: "The Bunker"; faith–rest promises; works vs. faith (1–21); condemnation of self righteousness

Some believers seem to be fearing evil. Just grab a promise and hang on to that.

Hitler changed my life even more than FDR. Large amount of paper documents burned by Hitler. 4July 1945 when the Americans entered into Berlin.

Faith is the perceptive system and is said to be 40–60% of what we believe.

Everything that you do is based upon thousands of decisions. Our life is perception and self-determination.

Romans 9:30 Therefore to what conclusion are we forced? That the Gentiles, who did not strive for (pursue after) righteousness, have attained (without effort) divine righteousness, that is, the righteousness which is from the source of faith [in Christ].

Faith Versus Righteousness

1. Faith is nonmeritorious perception and the basis for self-determination.
2. This verse emphasizes man as a free agent. Motivation and self-determination is based upon truth for the growing believer. Religion produces a righteousness, but it is self-righteousness. Religion is Satan’s plan. People choose for Satan and against Christ; or for Christ and against Satan.
3. The person who strives for salvation, never receives salvation. The person who works for salvation will never receive salvation. Personal sin is a means of explaining Christ. Giving up personal sins is works righteousness.

4. Striving is a meritorious function of the free will. Pistis is nonmeritorious; diokô is meritorious. The more self-righteousness, the hotter the fire in hell.
5. Faith is compatible with grace.
6. Striving keeps mankind in [X]; faith in Christ advances the person to [Y].
7. The Jews use the Mosaic Law for striving purposes; this is compatible with their arrogance.
8. Since salvation is by means of grace, that grace rejects human works and accepts faith in Christ.
9. Here is the shocker: gentiles from that same lump can become vessels of honor; and Jews can become vessels of dishonor. The Jew has that advantage because of his spiritual background.
10. God knew billions of years ago that in the dispensation of Israel that gentiles would believe in Christ. Those who have believed in Jesus Christ have the same things promised the Jews: predestination and salvation and election. It is advantageous to have a good heritage, but it is our own self-determination which is key. Whether salvation, rebound, faith rest, or any function of the believer's way of life, it must be grace. A person who speaks in tongues can be saved but not spiritual. The tongues crowd is striving. Social action groups are striving.
11. God knew in His omniscience in alpha time that certain Jews would reject Jesus Christ as savior and they would depend upon their own self-righteous in order to keep the Law. We don't get our spiritual heritage from the renaissance; we get it from the Jews and from the reformation. By blotting out the 1st advent, the Jew has denied his heritage and his printout can only read judgment. An unbelieving Jew reasonably would have nightmares over the holocaust. But understanding self-determination, this is not accidental; it is choosing self-righteousness rather than God's righteousness. Ann Frank: You need Jesus Christ for comfort, but I do not.
12. Omniscience fed the facts into the computer.
13. The unbeliever is not predestined to hell. He goes
14. The Jew uses the law to build up self-righteousness for salvation. He has made himself a vessel of wrath. He must be written off as terminal self-righteousness. It is fatal. It can only bring you to the Lake of Fire. Terminal self-righteousness.
15. The fact that the gentiles in the dispensation of Israel believed in Christ and received imputed righteousness while God's chosen people became unchosen by their own choice. Not all who are descended from Israel are really Israel. God's chosen people became unchosen by their own choice. Only the Jew who believes in Jesus is chosen.
16. To be a true Jew, the racial or physical Jew must follow the example of the gentiles. They are a witness to the failure of Israel.
17. Paul dramatically illustrates points of doctrine to the contemporary Jew. In Paul's day, the gentile was thought of as a dog. Any of those gentiles have something you cannot have by striving. They have God's righteousness. They only have self-righteousness. The righteousness of God is the only pass.
18. He compares racial but not regenerate Jews to Pharaoh Amenhotep II.

19. He contrasts racial Jews who depend upon works righteousness to gentiles who possess divine righteousness.
20. If gentiles minus the law can be saved through faith in Christ, there is no excuse for the racial Jew possessing the Law.
21. Being the physical seed of Abraham is not enough. Having the perfect spiritual heritage is not enough. Genesis 15:6

Hitler spent 103 days underground where he experienced a total divorcement from reality. Those who develop evil in the world, always have the most horrible and departure from this world, going into Hades and then the Lake of Fire.

Hitler was a Bavarian; he was not a Super-race. They built beautiful and zany castles. Hitler committed suicide in the bunker and wen to hell; but the many Jews he destroyed also ended up in the same place.

There is no excuse for a racial Jew to spend eternity in the Lake of Fire. The big blot out is one of the most shocking things that could happen. They accept the alpha glory of Jesus Christ but they reject His omega glory.

3rd Principle

1. What a shock that God can reject the racial Jew and accept the regenerated gentile.
2. To the Jew, this is an enigma. The fact that all Jews are not elected is almost impossible for him to understand. His failure to understand Deuteronomy 6:4. All Israel is not Israel. They think they understand Deuteronomy 6:4. But twice in the lines in that verse refer to the God of Israel. They see it but they do not recognize it. There must be the imputation all all personal sin. This same Jesus Christ had to become Echad. ʿechâd (אחד) [pronounced eh-KHAWD]. Everything regarding the 1st advent is blotted out because the unregenerate Jew says no. They cannot even understand not all Israel is Israel. This results in great negative volition. All Jews are not elected; not all Jews are the people of God.

3. Only those Jews who possess the righteousness of God are elect.
4. All Israel is not Israel. For some gentiles who have believed in Christ are more Israel. Bob's family tree goes back to Adam, but without Jewish genes. We have God's perfect righteousness in common with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.
5. Paul's previous dissertation forces the correct deduction. Being a racial Jew does not qualify for heaven or for election.
6. No one can qualify for the title, people of God, without God's righteousness.
7. The justice of God must reject anyone without the righteousness of God.
8. Righteousness demands righteousness, and justice demands justice.
9. The righteousness of God demands that the justice of God condemns the Jew who rejects Christ as Savior. The justice of God demands the salvation of the gentile who believes in Christ.
10. Salvation does not depend upon willing or running, but on believing in Jesus Christ.

A Lengthy Set of Principles

1. The justice of God frees the will of God to function perfectly in compatibility with divine attributes. God's integrity is composed of God's righteousness and justice. It is impossible for the justice of God to give us blessing without compromising His essence. God is immutable. He cannot change His attributes. Man cannot be blessed by God because we have Adam's imputed sin. Producing sins occurs because we have a sinful trend. Our condemnation stands at birth. Because we are sinners, God's justice cannot give us anything. But when we believe in Jesus Christ, we are still sinners. We have a home or a target. When you get into this, Paul demands us to remember what he has just written.
2. Neither the justice of God or the will of God function on the basis of our human ability or self-righteousness. The question. Why do the wicked prosper. You understand.
3. According to v. 21, there are two types of vessels vessels of honor and vessels of dishonor. These Jews believe in Christ and another set do not.
4. God will always impute +R and eternal life to vessels of honor.
5. Both categories of vessels have free will.
6. God uses the free will of man for his glory. God is glorified in saving positive volition and condemning negative volition.
7. The gift and function of freedom demands responsibility, honor, integrity in man's attitude toward God. How is this destroyed? Religion.
- 8.

9. God's perfect justice can have mercy on the believer; but without compromising His attributes.
10. God cannot be unfair or sponsor any form of evil. Therefore, the justice of God saving gentiles who believe in Christ and rejecting Jews who reject Christ is completely in line with His essence.
11. All power, authority, and tyranny did not hinder or frustrate the plan of God.
12. All of the negative volition of the reversionistic Jew will not abrogate or frustrate the plan of God for Israel. God's plan is not affected by any sort of evil, like socialism, the UN, or anything else. The plan of God cannot be stopped.
13. In coming to the antithesis of salvation, the Jews instead of seeking salvation, sought salvation by keeping the Law. Self-righteousness cannot be compared with God's righteousness. Therefore, any rejection of Christ on the part of the Jew, means he accepts his own self-righteousness instead of God's righteousness.
14. In spite of the big blot out, every generation of man will be totally evangelized. The Jews in the Old Testament were the client nation to God. They failed and had to be judged. But even though they were being judged, this did not keep any generation from being evangelized. This will be a major issue in the last half of the next chapter. This is a client nation chapter. Anyone with positive volition will hear the gospel.

God knew ahead of time every person who would believe in Jesus Christ. From the same lump, God makes those for glorification and condemnation.

Y^ehowah is our God; our God is One.

All hyper-Calvinists eventually distort Romans 9. When they say no, the entire 1st advent is blotted out. When the Jew says no to Christ, they have all of this information in front of them.

The combine codex #1 and #3 and building this into a system of self-righteousness. They must have +R, and that is found in codex #2. All of the holy days and articles of furniture. Every one of these things teaches the 1st advent, as does Isaiah 53. So the unregenerate Jew must stand on his own righteousness. The gentile who has believed in Jesus stands on God's perfect righteousness.

If you are going to go nowhere, then do that in style.

Bob has been teaching a lot of advanced material. There is 800-900 at Berachah who are not familiar with the faith-rest technique. They have no promise that they can grab on to. We must concentrate on the doctrine. Whatever it is that grabs our attention can knock us off balance. So we need some promises to grab onto. We cannot reach all of these advanced doctrines when we are concentrating on some problem in life. We need at least ten promises to grab onto. When we stabilize, then we can turn on the concentrator. Bob is going to do a special Sunday Series on the faith-rest technique.

The most complex women dress in the simplest frocks. You must have a stabilized position first.

The Jew says, "Why Hitler?" and you say, "Why do Jews go to hell?" You can develop from Zechariah and Isaiah and present from that Jesus Christ. The key to perfection is believing in Jesus Christ.

The world is evangelized in every generation. This brings us to the Jews as vessels of wrath.

1977 Romans

Lesson #646

646 02/23/1979 Romans 9:31 Jews without excuse; inversion; terminal self righteousness and works vs. imputed +R of the believer in salvation and the Christian way of life

Did the Jews hear the gospel? Did they understand what they were hearing? Yes and yes.

An inversion is caused by arrogance, which is the greatest problem in human life. When the Jew realizes that the gentile is saved, the instantly become jealous (if they are arrogant to begin with). The great inversion is the Church Age. Israel no longer functions as a client nation to God. Gentile nations become client nations. No Jewish nation will function as a client nation to God. The system of discipline Bob designates as inversion. A complete reversal of conditions. Inversions are always used for discipline. They remove your purpose for life. "I will call those who are not my people, my people." That is a reversal of position. "And those who have not been loved as those having been loved." There will be another inversion at the end of the Tribulation.

We start with a lump, which is a reference to free will. Certain privileges have been granted to the Jews. The very heritage of Israel is the righteousness of God.

Romans 9:31 ...but Israel, pursuing a law of righteousness, did not attain to that law. (BLB)

Verse 31 – the Jews as a vessel of wrath. The very heritage of Israel is the perfect righteousness of God offered as a potential. But when that offer is rejected arrogance always takes the rejecter on some kind of an ego trip and he goes for another righteousness with which he expects to get to heaven – his own self-righteousness. Therefore, since he has gone in that direction he has moved away from his heritage. Then along comes the Gentile who does not have his background, the law and the prophets, and therefore he by believing in Christ receives what the Jew bypassed in arrogance. He takes it; the Jew leaves it, and therefore he establishes the principle of judgment by reversionism. Having only self-righteousness there is terrible judgment in time but greater judgment in the lake of fire forever. Having believed in Christ there is the potential for great blessing in time, and eternity spent with God. Under inversion, the one who usually receives blessing is cursed instead; and vice versa.

Some of the words found in the KJV are not found in the Greek text, e.g. “righteousness.” The verse begins with the postpositive conjunctive particle de used as a mild adversative conjunction to set up a contrast between Old Testament Gentiles who believed in Christ and Old Testament Jews who rejected Christ. By their own self-determination they entered into system of inversion and God uses that system of inversion to discipline Israel.

Next is the nominative singular subject from the proper noun Israêl (Ἰσραήλ) [pronounced is-rah-ALE], referring to the racial nut not to the regenerate Jew of the previous dispensation. So we have “But Israel.”

The present active participle of diôkô (διώκω) [pronounced Dee-OH-koh], means to pursue, to run after. The present tense is the historical present, it is used for Jewish negative volition in the dispensation of Israel with the vividness of a present occurrence. In fact, the pattern was the same in Paul’s generation but he is looking at the past. The active voice: the racial Jew in the dispensation of Israel produces the action of the verb – negative volition toward Jesus Christ the God of Israel. The circumstantial participle is used to express the historical circumstances of Jews trying to be saved by keeping the law. They wind up with inversion. What they sought they do not have and what they thought they would have when they got there turns out to be discipline.

The Jew stumbles over the cross; but a gentile comes by next and he takes the rock. That is inversion. The gentile is a have not in the Old Testament, but believes, becomes the have. The Jew who rejects it becomes the have not.

“righteousness” – the ablative of means singular from the noun dikaïosunê (δικαιοσύνη) [pronounced dih-kai-oh-SOON-ā/dik-ah-yos-OO-nay], used here for Jewish self-righteousness in contrast to divine righteousness, plus the accusative singular direct object from nomos (νόμος) [pronounced NOHM-oss], minus the definite article. The anarthrous construction calls attention to the high quality of the law. There is nothing wrong with the law. Nomos (νόμος) [pronounced NOHM-oss] indicates the greatness of the Mosaic law. Only the ablative of means in the singular from dikaïosunê (δικαιοσύνη) [pronounced dih-kai-oh-SOON-ā/dik-ah-yos-OO-nay] distorts the law. The origin is human self-righteousness from keeping the law rather than believing in Christ for imputed righteousness from God. The Jews who were negative toward the gospel distorted the Mosaic Law into a system of salvation by works. This self-righteousness was the result of the big blot-out. The big blot-out or total negative volition toward the first advent destroys all client nation function, including establishment freedom.

Liberal theologians today who are not saved; and they are anti-divine establishment and anti-Christianity.

People ask, what has happened to America? Where is our common sense?

Dr. Davidjohn talked about the mission when the Kurds came down from mountains. They would see the American flag and not touch it. They would walk around it. That is no longer the case.

The influence of doctrine is almost null and void today.

Principle

1. The racial Jew did not become a regenerate Jew in the dispensation of Israel -- that is a general statement; there are always exceptions – because they rejected everything that was taught about Christ. And when you reject the first advent – Christ the God of Israel – you have to accept something else, and they accepted the law as a system of self-righteousness. They put self-righteousness above God's righteousness.
2. From their own free will and self-determination they preferred a righteousness based on keeping the law rather than righteousness from God based on faith in Christ.
3. Therefore the issue was God's righteousness imputed at faith in Christ versus self-righteousness acquired through keeping the law.
4. The negative Jew suffered from that fatal legalistic disease known as terminal self-righteousness.

The word “righteousness does not occur again in the verse, we simply have the aorist active indicative of the verb phthánō (φθάνω) [pronounced FTHAHN-oh] with the negative. It means here to be first, to do first, to come first. In the Attic Greek it meant to overtake. “But Israel has not accomplished.” The culminative aorist tense views the attempt at salvation by keeping the law in its entirety but it regards it from the viewpoint of existing results – not accomplishing the purpose of the law in salvation. The active voice: racial Jews who elected to use their own self-righteousness in keeping the law for salvation are the ones producing the action. The declarative indicative plus the negative ou (οὐ) [pronounced oo] emphasizes the reality of failing to accomplish their purpose and entering into not only the big blot-out but a system of the worst type of discipline -- inversion discipline. Inversion discipline always takes something you want and gives it to someone you don't like.

1977 Romans

Lesson #647

647 02/25/1979 Romans 9:32a Sight orientation; promises; purpose of the Mosaic Law; missions; reason for Jewish failure

We walk by faith and not by sight. Sight-orientation today becomes the way of thinking. King Hezekiah was facing a great problem when Sennacherib was invading. Instead of walking by faith, he functioned by sight. He went to Egypt, which had a great army. He believed that depending on Egypt would be key for their safety.

We have gone to Chinese Communism for help against the Russians. We live in a time of great invention. Scientific laws are God's laws. The television presents a whole series of ideas to people. This was not true before.

Human viewpoint in Iran has erupted into anarchy. Human viewpoint throughout the world is a great disaster.

We know world troubles almost as fast as the bad news happens. There will always be a sight problem, where people believe what they see over what they know. We have become a non-thinking nation because we walk by sight and not by faith. Once you become sight oriented, your life becomes warped.

You must stable before you can move forward. Stabilization is necessary for advancing. In a week, Bob is going to teach the Faith Rest Special. This is the 1979 Faith-Rest for the Crisis series. This was taught on Sundays for four months. It is 34 lessons which is not a part of the Romans series. Bob spends some time discussion this series.

Mosaic Law (Codices)

1. The freedom code, the commandments of Israel; the Ten Commandments. There cannot be freedom without morality or without privacy or without property or without authority. Whenever you have an immoral nation, this invites a freedom nation to become a big government nation. This is what has happened to us as a nation. We have invited the destruction of our privacy, property, freedom, personal authority; all of these with laws passed in Congress. A lot of this is because we, as a nation, have become an immoral people. We ignore that Rhodesia and South Africa are the great nations of the world today. Big government grows under immorality. We are one of the greatest nations for drug abuse. The laws of the Ten Commandments are not a definition of sin, but of freedom. Commandments.
2. Codex #2 is the spiritual code, the doctrinal code, called the ordinances. The spiritual heritage of Israel. Sight and faith are combined. There are the Levitical offerings, which could be seen. Food offerings, burnt offerings. The holy days, the Passover, the Great Day of Atonement.
3. Codex #3 Codex three is the Judgments, the establishment code or the national heritage of Israel. Quarantine, trial, evidence, criminal law, relationship in social life, relationship in national life, dietary laws. This is the like the Constitution to the United States or the Magna Carta to British Law. This also includes a spiritual component, not found in the other laws. This law was not given to the gentiles; only to the Jews. You cannot compare the Mosaic Law to the Hammurabi code. It is like comparing the most beautiful dress with soiled diapers. (Copied from previous notes)

The Jews was pass over Codex #2, which was all about Jesus Christ. The Jews held to the other two codices, and followed codex #2 only as ceremony.

The Mosaic Law was never given to the church. We learn from the Law a great deal about Jesus Christ. We utilize many of their commandments

There are limitations to the Mosaic Law. It cannot save. But it is used for promoting one's own self-righteousness.

Principle

1. Faith in Christ is the end of self-righteousness.
2. There is no way that self or works-righteousness can improve on imputed righteousness.
3. Christ is the end of any system of self or human righteousness since salvation by faith in Christ substitutes God's perfect righteousness for any system of human righteousness.
4. Faith in Christ results in the imputation of divine righteousness from the justice of God, a new foundation for a new modus vivendi. This means based on learning doctrine to receive blessing in time rather than doing something or being something.
5. Imputed divine righteousness cannot be improved. All the believer can do is to build on it with the materials of Bible doctrine inculcated.
6. Once the superstructure of maximum doctrine resident in the soul is completed at maturity then God blesses that building because the foundation is God's righteousness.
7. No system of self or works-righteousness can receive blessing from God or can glorify God.
8. Therefore all systems of self-righteousness have been excluded from both salvation and the Christian way of life.

The last phrase is eis (εἰς) [pronounced ICE] plus the accusative from nomos (νόμος) [pronounced NOHM-oss] – “the purpose of the law.”

Romans 9:31 But Israel who ran after the law with [human] self-righteousness, has not accomplished the purpose of the law.

Principle

1. While this passage is discussing the Jewish unbeliever in relationship to the big blot-out we do have the same conflict in the life of the believer.
2. The believer who rejects Bible doctrine always seeks to establish some system of his own rather than build on the imputed righteousness of God. To build on God's righteousness it is a matter of learning doctrine.
3. Daily perception of doctrine builds on the foundation of God's righteousness.
4. Because of that foundation no personal righteousness has to be established, only the daily perception of doctrine which builds on God's righteousness.
5. The legalistic attempt to establish human righteousness through a system of morality and works results in the failure in the Christian life on earth during phase two.
6. So every believer must settle in his own mind the question” Whose righteousness do you acknowledge?
7. Building on the righteousness of God fulfils the plan of God; building on self-righteousness becomes a part of the great blackout, which is failure to use the faith-rest technique and failure to advance with the faith-rest technique to where you can develop something else.

Somehow we have gotten to this point in the notes, but I don't know where the previous two sets of points came in.

Principle

1. The purpose of the Mosaic law is salvation through faith in Christ – Codex #2.
2. The purpose of the law is the function of freedom in a client nation to God – Codex #1 plus many parts of Codex #2.
3. The purpose of the law is to provide the basis for evangelism, advance to maturity, missionary action from a priest nation to God.
4. The purpose of the law is to demonstrate the fallacy of self-righteousness for salvation and to demonstrate the fallacy of self-righteousness for receiving blessing from God. So works-righteousness or self-righteousness cannot refrain either blessing from God or salvation.
5. The purpose of the law is completely nullified by any system of self-righteousness or works righteousness in keeping the law.
6. While Gentiles were being saved by faith in Christ racial Jews were electing their own self-righteousness – they were keeping the law, the tens commandments to gain salvation.
7. When the vessels of wrath work for salvation God does not change them, but when vessels of wrath believe in Christ God changes them into vessels of honor.

Bob: “There is no shortage of oil in this country.” (1979) There is 100 years of coal that the Yankees could mine right now. Our state department ought to be dedicated to sending out missionaries instead of money. People like Andrew Young are kissing the feet of African leaders and allowing our missionaries to be kicked out of there.

Romans 9:32 Why? Because it was not by faith, but as by works. They stumbled over the stone of stumbling, (BLB)

Verse 32 – the reason for Jewish failure. It begins with a debater's rhetorical question. The rhetoric is designed to bring the Jew around to seeing the true issue. It is the preposition dia plus the accusative neuter singular from the interrogative pronoun tís (τίς) [pronounced tihç] which is literally translated “Because why.” Sometimes it is translated simply “Why?” because that is idiomatically what it means. The question asks why the Jews did not accomplish the true purpose of the law. Paul is asking the question, not because he doesn't understand it; it is rhetorical to bring to the Jews their problem and their failure. The true purpose of the law is to demonstrate that human self-righteousness can never save and that divine righteousness imputed is the only way to go to heaven, and the only way to receive divine righteousness is to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ.

The answer is much simpler. It starts with the causal use of the conjunction hóti (ὅτι) [pronounced HOH-tee]. It goes with dia plus the accusative, “Because.” Then we have, “not by means of faith but by means of works” – the negative ou (οὐ) [pronounced oo], and with it an ellipsis which demands the present active indicative of diôkô (διώκω) [pronounced Dee-OH-koh],: “because they did not pursue.” The Jews failed because they did not pursue the law. And then we have the prepositional phrase of explanation – ek (ἐκ) [pronounced ehk] plus the ablative of means from pistis (πίστις) [pronounced PIHS-tihhs], which is correctly translated, “because they did not pursue it by means of faith.” They did not believe in Jesus Christ, they did not believe in the content of Codex #2; instead they went at it by sight. They saw these commandments and said they would keep them for salvation. The ablative of means here is in the singular, it is by means of faith in the singular, for just one act of faith in Christ produces eternal salvation.

“but” – allá (ἀλλά) [pronounced ahl-LAH], an adversative conjunction setting up a contrast between what they should have done and what they did do. Next is a comparative conjunctive particle hos introducing the characteristic quality of the Jew in the big blot-out – “as.” This is followed by ek (ἐκ) [pronounced ehk] plus the ablative plural of comparison with ergon (ἔργον) [pronounced EHR-gon] – faith is one time and you are saved; many, many works and you never will be saved.

Romans 9:32a Why did they fail? Because they did not pursue salvation by means of faith but by means of works.

1977 Romans

Lesson #648

648 02/25/1979 Romans 9:32b–33; Isaiah 28:16; 8:14 Jesus Christ, Stone of Stumbling; panorama of the Jews: past through the future

Correct translation back to v. 1.

Romans 9:32 Why? Because it was not by faith, but as by works. They stumbled over the stone of stumbling, (BLB)

“For” – there is no gar here in the original text, it is simply “They have stumbled” – aorist active indicative from the verb proskoptô (προσκόπτω) [pronounced pros-KOP-toh] which means to stumble against, to stumble over, and in modern English it would probably be better to say “trip over” if you understand that to trip over something you see it and still fall over, for this is the importance of this particular illustration. The Jews see the Lord Jesus Christ and they still stumble over Him. This is another way of describing the big blot-out. The aorist tense is a culminative aorist viewing salvation by works or keeping the law in its entirety but regarding it from the viewpoint of its existing results which is the big blot-out. The active voice: the negative Jews produced the action of the verb. They were usually arrogant, self-righteous. The indicative mood is declarative for the historical reality of the big blot-out in every generation from Moses to Christ.

Then we have a quotation from Isaiah 8:14 – “the stone of the stumbling.” This is the Lord Jesus Christ in His first advent. The dative singular of the definite article is used as a demonstrative pronoun to show something unique – the Lord Jesus Christ as the God of Israel. With it is the dative singular indirect object from the noun lithos (λίθος) [pronounced LEE-thos] – “stone” or “rock.” Next is the genitive of description from próskomma (πρόσκομμα) [pronounced PROS-kom-mah], a prophetic title for the Lord Jesus Christ. To the Jews, instead of being the rock, the foundation, the gigantic mountain, as it were, He is a stone over which they simply trip over, get up and go on. “The stone on which there is the stumbling which leads to a fall” would be a literal translation. The stone of salvation is the Lord Jesus Christ, and they stumble over Him while they are pursuing something else. The Jews would say no to the Lord Jesus Christ, this was the stone they trip over and they reject Him. The Jews are chasing after the Law and personal self-righteousness; they trip over Jesus Christ, and they get up and continue pursuing the Law. When they stumble over the Lord and keep on going, they are setting aside God’s righteousness and pursue their own.

Romans 9:32 Why not? Because they pursued it not by faith but (as if it were possible) by works. They stumbled over the stumbling stone,... (Isaiah 8:14b)

Romans 9:33 as it has been written: “Behold, I lay in Zion a stone of stumbling, and a rock of offense; and the one believing on Him will never be put to shame.”

Verse 33 – the documentation of the Jewish failure and big blot-out. It begins with the adverb kathôs (καθώς) [pronounced kath-OCE], an adverb of analogy – “Just as.” Then the perfect passive indicative of the verb graphô (γράφω) [pronounced GRAWF-oh] which means to write. The intensive perfect tense emphasizes the existing results of the canon of scripture, the Old Testament, as the finished product. The passive voice gives us the mechanics of inspiration. God the Holy Spirit communicates to authors, like Paul and Isaiah, and this becomes a complete and coherent divine message as a part of the sacred scripture. In the exhale the human writer wrote down in his own language and thoughts the divine message to mankind. The indicative mood becomes declarative for the reality of the Old Testament canon as verified by Paul’s quotation of it in this passage.

Phrases are now quoted from Isaiah 8:14; 28:16. Isaiah 28:16 – “Therefore, so communicates Adonai Jehovah, Behold, I am he [who was] who has laid in Zion a foundation stone [the Lord Jesus Christ as the God of Israel, the founder of Israel], a rock of testing, a cornerstone of honor, a secure foundation; the one who has believed in him will not panic.” All that is quoted by Paul is, “Behold, I laid in Zion; the one who has believed in him will not panic.” Isaiah 8:14 – “Therefore, he will become a refuge; but a stone of stumbling and a rock of offense to both houses of Israel, both a snare and a trap to the inhabitants of Jerusalem.” Paul only quotes, “a stone of stumbling and a rock of offense.”

Paul makes a sandwich out of this, taking a portion of Isaiah 28:16, then puts in between a portion of Isaiah 8:14 and the other piece of bread comes from Isaiah 28:16.

In verse 33, “Behold” – we have a demonstrative particle idou (ἰδοῦ) [pronounced ih-DOO], which is the aorist middle imperative of eidō (εἶδω) [pronounced I-doh]. This demands perception and emphasizes the importance of what follows; it means listen carefully, what follows is important. Then we have the present active indicative of the verb tithēmi (τίθημι) [pronounced TIHTH-ā-mēe] which is used to lay a foundation. The perfective present tense denotes what has come to be in the past but emphasizes that past event as a present reality. The rock of salvation becomes the stone of stumbling to the Jew who rejects the first advent and blots it out. The active voice: God the Father produced the action of the verb under the title Adonai Jehovah. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal idea from the viewpoint of reality.

“in Zion” – Zion is indeclinable but it is with the preposition en (ἐν) [pronounced en], and it is referring to the spot which David conquered. He mentions Zion rather than Israel because Zion was David’s castle and the son of David is Jesus Christ. He is relating David’s rule to the first advent so that no Jew could miss the principle.

The ascensive use of the conjunction kai is translated “even.” Next comes the accusative singular direct object from petra (πέτρα) [pronounced PEHT-ra], which means “rock.” This is the giant rock. Any part in that rock is petros (πέτρος) [pronounced PEHT-ross] – in union with the rock -- the rock which arouses opposition. So the final quotation from Isaiah emphasizes the importance of believing in Christ and becoming a true Jew. Furthermore, it anticipates the big blot-out as well as the great inversion – all found in the next two chapters.

“And whosoever believeth in him shall not be ashamed” – a connective kai which is translated “nevertheless.” This is a conjunction used to emphasize a fact as surprising, unexpected, and therefore noteworthy. Then the articular present active participle from the verb pisteúō (πιστεύω) [pronounced pis-TOO-oh] which means to believe. This is the aoristic present tense used for punctiliar action in present time. This use of the present tense expresses a fact without reference to its progress and it indicates that just as it was true when Paul wrote this, that anyone could believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, so it is true right now. The active voice: Paul is speaking specifically to the racial Jew guilty of the big blot-out and about to come under the judgment of the great inversion. The participle is circumstantial expressing attendant circumstances involved in becoming a true Jew, the spiritual seed of Abraham.

Then we have the prepositional phrase, referring to Christ, epí (ἐπί) [pronounced eh-PEE] plus the locative of the intensive pronoun autós (αὐτός) [pronounced ow-TOSS], used for the third person singular personal pronoun and it means to believe on Him. Epí (ἐπί) [pronounced eh-PEE] is used because epí (ἐπί) [pronounced eh-PEE] means “over” as well as “on,” and they have stumbled over the way of salvation, they have stumbled over the rock. Next, the future passive indicative from kataischúnō (καταισχύνω) [pronounced kat-ahee-SKHOO-noh] which means to be disgraced, humiliated, or to be disappointed. This means disappointed in eternity or not humiliated in the sense of avoidance of the judgment at the great white throne, not be disappointed in the sense of being rewarded at the judgment seat of Christ. The futuristic present tense is predictive for the fact that no believer will be involved in the last judgment. The passive voice plus the negative means the subject, the believing Jew, will never be humiliated at the last judgment. The indicative mood plus the negative is the reality that faith in Christ eliminates condemnation in eternity as well as in time.

You have stumbled over the rock, now come back and believe upon the Rock.

Romans 9:33 Just as it stands written, Behold I lay in Zion a stone of stumbling, even a rock which arouses opposition; nevertheless, he who believes on Him will not be humiliated (or, disappointed). (Isaiah 28:16 8:14)

The true Jews carries all the racial Jews in time. They form a special pivot for their generation. But when there are not enough true Jews, then there is something like the holocaust takes place. Romans 2:28–29

Romans 2:28 Consequently, he is not a Jew who is one by overt manifestation; neither is circumcision that category which is external by overt manifestation.

Romans 2:29 For he is a Jew who is one by hidden birth [regeneration]; and circumcision is that category of heart, by the Spirit [Holy Spirit, the teacher of doctrine], not by the letter [Mosaic law]; whose approval from the justice of God is not from man, but is from God.

The Panorama of Israel, which is the Jews in the past, the Jews in the present and the Jews in the future. This doctrine is found here and in the Israel series. This doctrine was expanded considerably for the Israel series.

The Panorama of Israel (by R. B. Thieme, Jr.)

Romans #648, 2/25/79; Israel #247, 6/3/92

A. Israel in the Past.

1. Abraham is the father of the Jewish race, the pattern of salvation by faith in Christ, the key to the heritage of Israel. Genesis 15:6, "Abraham believed in the Lord and it was credited to his account for righteousness." The origin of the Jews is unique. Abraham became a Jew at age ninety-nine after cracking the maturity barrier. The sign of the new race is circumcision.
 - a. Abraham was an aristocrat of the third dynasty of Ur. As a believer, functioning under the faith-rest drill after salvation, he left Ur and moved to the land which in the future will belong to Israel forever, Hebrews 11:8-10.
 - b. Abraham was the pattern for Old Testament salvation, which is faith in Christ. Genesis 15:6 Romans 4:1-5, 22-25.
 - c. At age ninety-nine, Abraham the Gentile was circumcised. At that moment, God created a new race-the Jew. Romans 4:9-21.
 - d. All races begin in [X] but the Jewish race comes from [Z]
2. As a result of this pattern, there are two categories of Israel.

- a. Racial Israel-those who have the genes of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.
 - b. Regenerate Israel-racial Jews who believe in Jesus Christ. They are God's chosen people. They are both the racial and spiritual seed of Abraham, and therefore, the true Israel.
3. The foundation of racial Israel was regeneration, Romans 9:6-14. The dramatic principle of regeneration is noted in the contrast between Jew and Gentile in the first three generations. Abraham was a Jew and his brother Nahor, an unbeliever, was a Gentile. Isaac was a Jew and his half brother Ishmael was an unbeliever and a Gentile. Jacob was a Jew and his twin brother Esau was an unbeliever and a Gentile. This explains our Lord's title: the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. Exodus 3:6, 6:15-16, 4:5; Matthew 22:32; Mark 12:26; Luke 20:37; Acts 3:13, 7:32.
 4. While Abraham was the father of the Jewish race and the pattern of Old Testament salvation, it is Moses who is the father of the Jewish client nations. At the Exodus, Moses became the father of the first Jewish client nation to God. As a client nation, the Jews were the custodians of the written Canon, the guardians of the laws of divine establishment which resulted in the balance of freedom and authority, and had responsibility for evangelism, Bible teaching, the inculcation of doctrine, and missionary activity. The key to the client nation is its spiritual heritage which demands regeneration. Hence, the importance of the racial Jew becoming the regenerate Jew by the second birth in order to qualify as both the physical and spiritual seed of Abraham.
 5. In the times of the gentiles, only the gentile nations can be client nations to God. In the Age of Israel, only Jewish names could be client nations to God.
 6. Jesus is Jewish royalty, as the dynasty of David; and His 3rd royalty is Jesus at the right hand of God. Members of the royal family of God become His royal family.
 7. The big blot out for the Jews does not keep the Jews from being in every generation.
 8. The spiritual heritage of Israel includes the unconditional promises from God gathered into four great covenants: the Abrahamic, the Palestinian, the Davidic, and the New Covenants. To qualify under the spiritual heritage of Israel every Jew had to have eternal life.
 9. There are five Jewish client nations in the Old Testament dispensation of Israel.
 - a. The theocratic kingdom, Moses through Saul.
 - b. The united kingdom of Israel, Saul to Rehoboam.
 - c. The northern kingdom, Jeroboam to Hoshea (c. 930-721 B.C.)
 - d. The southern kingdom, Rehoboam to Zedekiah (c. 931-586 B.C.) From 586 to 516 B.C. the remnant of the southern kingdom were under the seventy years of the "Babylonian Captivity." During this period, there were great ministries like that of Daniel and Ezekiel. In 538 B.C., the edict of Cyrus the Great allowed a small remnant of Jews to return to Israel to rebuild the Temple. They began in 536 B.C. However, the project was discontinued until 520 B.C., when under the ministry of Haggai and Zechariah, the rebuilding of the Temple was resumed. The Temple was completed in 516 B.C. In 458 B.C., Ezra returned and a "back to the Bible" movement was begun. In 445 B.C., Nehemiah returned to rebuild the walls of Jerusalem. In 432 B.C., Malachi prophesied, which ended the Old Testament canon.

- e. Judea continued from 516 B.C. until August of 70 A.D. when Rome administered the fifth cycle of discipline, beginning the times of the Gentiles, Luke 21:20-24. Israel's past failure resulted in the administration of the five cycles of discipline. The fifth cycle wiped out the Northern Kingdom in 721 BC, the Southern Kingdom in 586 BC, and Judea in 70 AD. The Jews were not wiped out at the beginning of the Church Age because of Paul. Only after His death did the fifth cycle wipe them out and the times of the Gentiles begin.
- 10. The dispensation of Israel was temporarily halted after the resurrection, ascension, and session of Christ, in order that a royal family might be elected for our Lord's third category of royalty. The Jewish Age continues after the Church Age, but there is no Jewish client nation again until the Second Advent.
 - 11. The past failure of the Jews in the big blot out (failure to recognize Christ as Messiah during the First Advent) does not hinder the Jews from continuing in history. There will always be Jews.
- B. Jews in the Present.
- 1. Two things prepared the way for the Church Age: the cycles of discipline to Israel and the dispensation of the Hypostatic Union.
 - a. The halting of the Jewish Age and the intercalation of the Church Age begins the present period of the Jews, which began on the day of Pentecost.
 - b. The Church Age is absolutely unique because of: the baptism of the Holy Spirit, the protocol plan of God, equality under election and predestination, the portfolio of invisible assets, the royal family of God, the royal priesthood and ambassadorship, the mystery doctrine, the indwelling of the Trinity, the availability of divine power, no prophesy, and invisible heroes.
 - c. Galatians 3:26-29 You are the children of God through faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as have been baptized into [union with] Christ, you have clothed yourselves with Christ [you share what Christ has]. There is neither Jew nor Greek [racial distinctions], there is neither slave nor free man [cultural distinctions], there is neither male nor female [social distinctions]; for you are all one in Christ Jesus. And if you belong to Christ, then you are Abraham's offspring, heirs according to promise.

2. As deity, Jesus Christ is royalty with a royal family consisting of the Father and Holy Spirit. As humanity, Jesus Christ is royalty as a descendant in the line of David. As the God-man, He is seated at the right hand of God the Father as the victor of the angelic conflict, having battlefield royalty with no royal family. Therefore, He needs a royal family for His third royal patent.

3. Therefore, the Jewish Age was halted and the Church Age was inserted into the Jewish Age, signified by the baptism of the Holy Spirit for every Church Age believer at the moment of salvation. The dispensation of Israel has not been completed, but will be completed in the Tribulation.

4. In the Church Age, both the Jew and Gentile become royal family at the moment of faith in Christ. If a Jew fails to believe in Christ, and is involved in the big blot out, he gets certain discipline in time from the fifth cycle of discipline and from the lake of fire in eternity.

5. The times of the Gentiles began at the 5th cycle of discipline in 70 A.D. Although Jewish nations may form from time to time during this period, they can never be client nations to God. Therefore, all the collective advantages enjoyed by the Jews in the dispensation of Israel are set aside and replaced by the present advantage of the royal family.

6. So to have advantage now, a Jew must believe in Christ just as a Gentile must. Both Jew and Gentile are one in Christ, and the racial distinction between them is removed. The unconditional covenants do not belong to Church Age Jews who believe in Christ.

7. The Jews must adjust to the justice of God.

C. Future of the Jew.

1. Once the royal family is completed, the Rapture of the Church occurs. Those who are alive go up without seeing death.

2. The end of the Church Age causes the resumption of the Age of Israel. Although Israel will not be a client nation in that age, the primary evangelists of the Tribulation will be the 144,000 Jews (Revelation 7:14). The times of the Gentiles overlap the Tribulation, thus continuing until the Second Advent. Later on, Moses and Elijah will be the two great evangelists.

3. The Tribulation is not a separate dispensation, but the end of the Jewish Age.

4. The times of the gentiles overlaps into the Jewish age.

5. Therefore, instead of a Jewish nation operating as a theocracy, individual Jews perform the responsibility of evangelism in the Tribulation.

6. Because of the elect of Israel, the Tribulation is shortened. The greatest evangelism of all time will occur in the Tribulation. When Christ returns at the Second Advent, the baptism of fire will occur. Unbelieving Jews are cast into fire as part of the baptism of fire. Then Jewish believers go into the Millennium as the client nation. Gentile believers become citizens of the millennial kingdom, while Gentile unbelievers are cast into fire.

7. It is Satan's plan to destroy the Jew in history. Therefore, he is trying to kill all Jews before the Second Advent. Satan wants to destroy the Jews in the Church Age and in the Tribulation. He will fail on both counts.
8. At the beginning of the Millennium, God will fulfill the Abrahamic Covenant completely, and Israel will occupy almost all of the Middle East. Satan's objective is to cut off the Jew from human history. There will be a holocaust from time to time; but we should never play a part in any of this. Satan wants to frustrate the plan of God in any way possible.
9. Anti-semitism is Satan's master plan to frustrate the future of Israel. Fulfillment of the New Covenant means there will be a client nation and Jews in the Millennium and forever.

D. The Jewish Problem.

1. The Jewish problem must be related to dispensations as well as to the Satanic conspiracy.
2. God's plan for the Jew is never hindered by Jewish failure.
3. In any dispensation, in order to become the spiritual seed of Abraham, the only thing any Jew has to do is to believe in Jesus Christ. When he does so, he receives the perfect righteousness of God, eternal life, and the heritage of any true Jew.
4. The Jew must follow the pattern of Abraham if he is to enter into any divine blessing.
5. True Jews are regenerate Jews. False Jews have the genes of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, but are involved in the big blot out of the First Advent.
6. The Jew has no advantages unless he believes in Christ.
7. Grace is never canceled by the failure of any Jew.
8. No believer should ever be guilty of anti-Semitism, which is destructive to both individuals and nations, Genesis 12:3.
9. There is hope for Jews in every dispensation.

Aposiopesis, Anacoluthon and Hyperbaton

[1] Aposiopesis: This is a very effective figure where the sentence is moving along then there is an abrupt breaking off.

[2] Anacoluthon: This is the grammatical term for a writer failing to follow that which is the normal procedure of what comes next and breaking off for some other grammatical construction.

[3] Hyperbaton: This is the grammatical term for a word being out of its normal proper place.

649 03/01/1979 Romans 10:1a Purpose of the Age of Israel, Paul's concern for negative Jews; +R vs. self-righteousness; weapon of prayer and gun analogy

Chapter 10

The purpose of the dispensation of Israel, the previous dispensation, was fourfold. First of all, it was to establish Israel as a client nation to God and therefore to stabilize the laws of divine establishment with regard to any national entity -- to advertise how freedom exists and to provide the basic concept for a national entity. The nation Israel after the Exodus became the first client nation in all of history. Secondly, it was to provide a base for the formation of the canon of scripture. The Old Testament, of course, was written in the nation of Israel. The New Testament writers are all Jewish, with two possible exceptions. Thirdly, to establish a basis for the first and second advents of Christ. Christ is to come each time for the purpose of relating to Israel. He came the first time as the son of David and the Son of God, and was rejected. He will come the second time as the son of David and the Son of God, and will be accepted and re-establish Israel as a client nation to God forever, fulfilling the unconditional covenants. The fourth purpose was to establish a policy of God's dealing with man. Israel, then, becomes the photograph of God's dealing with man and God's relationship with man, the policies of grace and judgment, and when each one applies to an individual or collective human situation.

The foundation of Israel is regeneration. The security and future of Israel is found in their unconditional covenants – the Abrahamic, Palestinian, Davidic, and New covenants. The client nation of Israel therefore is the major consideration in this passage. The punitive alternative for a client nation is found in the five cycles of discipline. The biblical signs of the 5th cycle of discipline are at least seven, and were all developed only for the last time the 5th cycle of discipline would be administered to the client nation of Israel.

The first of the biblical signs of the 5th cycle of discipline is the prophecy of tongues, mentioned in Isaiah 28:11ff. The second great sign which was a warning to the nation of Israel was the virgin birth – Isaiah 7:14ff. The fact is that the Jews understood that no man could ever become God, but what they failed to understand was that God would become man, the Emmanuel of Isaiah 9:6ff. So the only time in history that this miracle occurred was in Bethlehem and our Lord Jesus Christ became true humanity. God became man. The third warning and sign was the betrayal of Messiah. When Messiah, the Lord Jesus Christ, came in the flesh there would be betrayal – Zechariah 11:12,13. This was a warning to the Jews that they were about to go out and they would lose their client nation status under the 5th cycle of discipline. The fourth sign was the resurrection of Messiah after His physical death, described in Isaiah 53:12; 53:10. This in itself was unique. There had been resuscitations where a dead person came back to life in his human body and continued to live for a while. But a resurrection body that lived forever was something brand new, and it was a sign that the Jews were about to go out under the 5th cycle of discipline. The fifth sign was the forty years of evangelism to Israel before the 5th cycle in AD 70, apart from the gift of tongues – Malachi 1:5 and confirmed by the book of Acts. The sixth was given by Luke in Luke 21:20-24 in which he gave the prophecy of the siege of Jerusalem. He recorded the words of our Lord Jesus Christ, the last prophet to Israel and the one who warned them that suddenly they were going to be destroyed. The postponement, then, of the Age of Israel brings up the doctrine of intercalation.

With this in mind we will study the failure of Israel in two paragraphs of Romans chapter 10:

- a) The failure of Israel to accept Jesus Christ as saviour – verses 1-11.
- b) The failure of Israel to function as a client nation – verse 12-21.

Romans 10:1 Brothers, indeed the desire and supplication of my heart to God on behalf of them is for salvation.

Verse 1 – the apostle’s great concern for the Jews’ unregenerate status. The vocative which begins this, the plural of adelphos (ἀδελφός) [pronounced ad-el-FOSS], is addressed to believers. It means “Brethren.” The question is to whom is the vocative addressed? We have already seen that Paul calls racial Jews “brethren,” and racially and nationally that is true. But here he is speaking to believers in the Lord Jesus Christ for primarily throughout the New Testament, especially in the epistles, “brethren” or adelphos (ἀδελφός) [pronounced ad-el-FOSS] is used for royal family of God, those who have believed in Christ and through the baptism of the Spirit have been entered into union with Christ, forming the royal family. So this is addressed to believers in the royal family of God in the dispensation of the Church. It is a reminder to such believers that the failure of Israel, having everything going for them, can be the failure of any Gentile nation throughout history.

Principle

1. Rejection of Christ has resulted in using the law as an instrument of self-righteousness, an expression of human arrogance.
2. The only righteousness that counts with God is His own which can only be imputed through faith in Christ.
3. The only righteousness which has credit with God is the righteousness of God which He imputes to the believer in Christ.
4. The Jews rejected Christ as saviour and in arrogance fell back on their own righteousness.
5. Such rejection arouses Paul’s concern for his own race and nation at the beginning of the Church Age.
6. Such a concern can only be expressed to those who would understand. Therefore he starts this chapter with the word “brethren.”
7. A principle comes out of this. Those who possess the righteousness of God through faith in Christ can never understand why anyone would desire to substitute human righteousness for divine righteousness.

8. Only the possession of divine righteousness is compatible with the grace policy of God.
9. To reject Christ as saviour is the substitution of human self-righteousness for God's perfect righteousness.
10. Human righteousness/self-righteousness is filthy rags in the sight of God – Isaiah 64:6.

Next we have the Greek words η (, the definite article, plus the affirmative particle $\mu\epsilon\upsilon$. This is Classical Greek and it indicates that the clause in which it is found is being distinguished from another clause which is to follow. In other words, the word $\mu\epsilon\upsilon$ is a guarantee that a statement will be made and then there will be another statement to follow, so that if you are short on concentration you get a warning. It is translated “on the one hand.” Paul desires the salvation of the Jew but they themselves through their own negative volition do not desire the salvation he is presenting.

With this we have the nominative singular subject $\epsilon\upsilon\delta\omicron\kappa\iota\alpha$ with the definite article, used for a wish or a desire which has a purpose and direction. But this has not been confirmed from the papyri, therefore it must be rejected. The papyri has something else to say, it says that this means “pleasure, purpose, intention,” therefore “motivation.” The papyri are Koine Greek and they explain much of Classical Greek. The King James version says “my heart's desire.” Well that isn't what it says at all. It is stronger than “heart's desire,” it is mental motivation. With it is the generic use of the definite article which isolates Paul's motivation from all others in the time in which he lived and of all other people in history. So far we have, “Brethren, the motivation.”

Next comes the possessive genitive from the possessive adjective $\epsilon\mu\omicron\varsigma$ (ἐμός) [pronounced ehm-OSS] which means “my.” And with it is the possessive genitive from the noun $\kappa\alpha\rho\delta\iota\alpha$ which means “heart” but not in the New Testament, it is used for the mentality of the soul, the thinking part of the soul. “Brethren, the motivation of my heart [right lobe].”

Summary

1. Proper prayer is based on proper motivation.
2. Like all production in the Christian life mental attitude motivation must precede and comply with divine policy of grace for the production to be legitimate.
3. False motivation destroys good production.
4. Good motivation can only exist where Bible doctrine is resident in the right lobe.
5. Arrogance produces false motivation, therefore the Christian production does not glorify the Lord but the individual who does the Christian deed or function.
6. Prayer which is not motivated from doctrine cannot glorify the Lord.
7. A principle: All Christian production must occur in the filling of the Spirit and motivated from Bible doctrine resident in the soul. These are basic in the use of any weapons which God chooses to give us.
8. Motivation is the key to Christian works. Without doctrine in the right lobe the motivation goes sour. Motivation which is not purposed to glorify the Lord will obviously exist to glorify self, and what glorifies self obviously cannot glorify the Lord.

“and prayer to God for Israel” – the connective use of the conjunction kai to indicate that motivation is related to the use of prayer. There is no verb but it is inserted because it is demanded by ellipsis. The nominative singular subject is dehsij. We have a definite article here used as a possessive pronoun and the first three words are “and my prayer.”

There are two things that happen to this great weapon which has been issued to each one of us as a part of our royal priesthood. First of all, we can neglect it. Secondly, we can abuse it. The concept of prayer as a weapon is based on the fact of its tremendous power, and used by the right person with understanding it is extremely effective.

Prayer

1. Prayer must have a target or an object. The categories of prayer received by God the Father – He is the target, the object – are from three different sources:
 - a. The Lord Jesus Christ who is the superior marksman of all time in the use of prayer – Hebrews 7:25, He makes daily intercession for us at the right hand of the Father.
 - b. The Holy Spirit is also functioning in this field, without any humanity but as eternal God He has a special function of special prayer which is found in Romans 8:26,27.
 - c. The function of prayer from the believer priest. Only the prayers of the believer can be heard. A lot of unbelievers may pray but they are totally a waste of time.
2. All prayer must be addressed to God the Father.
3. The channel of approach is through the Lord Jesus Christ – John 14:13,14.
4. The power of approach is the ministry of the Spirit. In order to be effective as royal family we must be praying under the filling of the Spirit. If we are not filled with the Spirit when we pray our prayers are not answered, or at least not answered in the way we desire. Ephesians 6:18 relates the ministry of the Holy Spirit to prayer. One of the most important factors in prayer is the rebound technique.
5. The Word of God is all involved in prayer – Psalm 116:1,2; Isaiah 65:24; Jeremiah 33:3 are legitimate prayer promises provided you appreciate the context.
6. John 15:7; Ephesians 3:16-19 are two passages which emphasize the principle that the greater the spiritual growth the more effective the use of prayer.
7. Prayer is merely an extension of the faith-rest technique. It is a soul exhale toward God – Matthew 21:22. Prayer is utilizing and claiming by faith certain promises which demand dialogue with God, conversation with God.
8. Prayer demands cognizance of the will of God. You must know God's will within a certain framework and certain limitations so that you do not become disappointed and frustrated by Matthew 18:19 or Mark 11:24. All prayer demands cognizance of the will of God and the sooner we learn doctrine the better. 1John 5:14.

9. Prayer must be offered in the spiritual status of the filling of the Spirit or it is washed out immediately. Ephesians 6:18 says that there can be no effective prayer unless we are filled with the Spirit. Therefore rebound is important.
10. Mental attitude sins, which are generally hidden sins, destroy prayer effectiveness. Psalm 66:18.
11. Efficacious prayer exists to the extent that the believer is grace oriented.
12. The eternal decrees took cognizance of all effective prayer in time and incorporated the answers in the printout from the divine decrees.
13. Prayer effectiveness reaches its zenith at the time of maturity – Psalm 116:1,2.

The Agenda for Private Prayer

1. Make sure of being filled with the Spirit, therefore confession. 1John 1:9; 1Corinthians 11:31.
2. Thanksgiving. This is your capacity for life, your orientation to grace, your appreciation of the source of all logistical grace and all blessing imputed from the justice of God to the righteousness of God – Ephesians 5:20; 1Thessalonians 5:18.
3. Intercession – praying for others.
4. Petition: praying for your own needs and yourself – Hebrews 4:16.

Scripture to study for intercessory prayer: 1Kings 18:42-46. The power of prevailing prayer: Acts 12. The prayer for the unbeliever. The prayer for the unknown believer: the guidelines are found in Colossians 1:3-11. Praying for a known believer: Ephesians 1:15-23; 3:14-21. The greatest intercessory prayer in the Word of God is the true Lord's prayer: John 17, a prayer for the Church Age believer.

Categories of Petition

1. Positive, positive: the petition is answered and the desire behind the petition is answered. Cf. 1Kings 18:36,37; Judges 16:28; Luke 23:42,43; John 11:41-45.
2. Positive, negative: the petition is answered but the desire behind the petition is negative. 1Samuel 8:5-20.
3. Negative, positive: the petition is not answered but the desire behind the petition is answered. Genesis 17:18; 18:23-33; 2Corinthians 12:7-10.
4. Negative, negative: there are about nine different reasons.
 - a. Carnality or reversionism, or both, causing failure to be filled with the Spirit, as per Ephesians 6:18.
 - b. Mental attitude sins in either carnality or reversionism – Psalm 66:18.
 - c. Blind arrogance and the infiltration of evil from that blind arrogance. Job 35:9-13.
 - d. Lust-type selfishness. Many negative, negatives deal with the fact that a person in self-centeredness and selfishness develops inordinate lusts.
 - e. The malfunction of the faith-rest technique. Mark 11:24.

- f. General lack of obedience or subordination to the will of God – 1John 3:22.
- g. Insubordination to the known will of God – 1John 5:14.
- h. Malfunction of marriage; lack of domestic tranquillity – 1Peter 3:7.
- i. Reversionistic lack of compassion; lack of grace orientation – Proverbs 21:13.

Twice in prayer promises there is a reference to grace – Hebrews 4:16; 1Peter 1:7. The principle is that prayer is the privilege of the royal priesthood. It is a grace privilege. Since grace is the basis for prayer no believer can come to God in prayer and expect to be heard on the basis of his own merit, ability, or works. So one of the major abuses of the weapon of prayer is seeking to gain answers to your prayers because of your “sweetness,” your “goodness,” your works – human merit, ability. Every believer approaches God in prayer on the basis of the merits of the Lord Jesus Christ. That eliminates ever having a prayer answered because of something you have done. The Father is propitiated by the blood of Christ and He is no respecter of persons as far as the believer is concerned. In other words, God does not hear and answer prayer because we are good or moral or sincere or religious, etc., or any other reason except the merits of the Lord Jesus Christ. God hears and answers prayer, then, on the basis of who and what Christ is, hence every believer gets through to the throne of grace because of (and for no other reason) the Lord Jesus Christ.

Paul is very confident. He understands the use of this weapon given to the royal family, so next he uses the prepositional phrase prós (πρός) [pronounced pross] plus the accusative of theos (θεός) [pronounced theh-OSS] – “face to face with the God” or “to the God.” It is a reference specifically to God the Father. All prayer is addressed to God the Father in the name of God the Son in the power of God the Holy Spirit. Prayer brings us face to face with God.

Then we have another prepositional phrase, hupér (ὑπέρ) [pronounced hoop-AIR] plus the ablative plural from the intensive pronoun autós (αὐτοῦ) [pronounced ow-TOSS] which is doubled for the personal pronoun, third person – “on behalf of them,” referring to unbelievers in Israel. Then we have to insert the verb eimi (εἰμί) [pronounced eye-ME] – “is.”

We have one other thing here and that is the actual request made in this intercession, and the third prepositional phrase – eis (εἰς) [pronounced ICE] plus the accusative of sôtêria (σωτηρία) [pronounced soh-tay-REE-ah], which means “for their salvation.”

Lesson #650

650 03/02/1979 Romans 10:1b Doctrine of prayer (review); prayer for vs. volition of the unbeliever

Romans 10:1 Brothers, indeed the desire and supplication of my heart to God on behalf of them is for salvation.

Translation: “Brethren, the motivation of my heart [right lobe] and my prayer to the God on behalf of them [Israel], is for their salvation.”

The affirmative particle men in this verse [not translated here] indicates that the Jews themselves have through their own negative volition prevented their salvation. So when men is inserted it means, “Even though they have refused to believe in Christ I am still praying for them.” Prayer for someone’s salvation through faith in Christ can express the motivation of the intercessor but it cannot change the volition of the subject. Paul’s motivation in this prayer was also expressed in the first three verses of the previous chapter.

Principle

1. Prayer expresses conviction and motivation of the one offering the prayer but it cannot change or coerce the volition of the object of prayer.
2. Therefore prayer for the unbeliever must follow the policy of God since God Himself cannot coerce – otherwise everyone in the world would be saved.
3. Such prayer must include the presentation of the gospel and the clarification of the issue of salvation so that the volition of the unbeliever can make a decision based on fact. How do you pray for the unbeliever? You pray that he hears the gospel and that he understands the facts, that the issue is clear to him, so clear that when he says yes or no he knows exactly what he is doing. That is the reason to pray for the unbeliever. You don’t pray that he might be saved, you pray that he might get the facts. Your desire is for his salvation, as Paul expresses his motivation, but you pray that the gospel is clearly presented. God desires that everyone be saved but hell is filled with people who have rejected God’s personal desire in the matter.
4. Several doctrines must be understood in the light of prayer for the unbeliever.
5. God desires the salvation of all members of the human race – 2Peter 3:9. Therefore, such a prayer is compatible with the will of God.
6. The doctrine of unlimited atonement confirms the fact that all members of the human race can be saved. Christ died for all.
7. The role of God the Holy Spirit in common and efficacious grace must be understood; that whether it is witnessing or evangelism that the message goes into the soul. But the message that goes in might be redemption, reconciliation, propitiation, imputation, justification, and regeneration. Some form of soteriology goes in but this is spiritual phenomena. So how can the unbeliever get the facts? He has no human spirit – 1Corinthians 2:14. God the Holy Spirit acts as the human spirit to make the facts of the gospel clear in his soul. That is called the doctrine of common grace. Now, understanding the facts the unbeliever with his own positive volition – faith in Christ, non-meritorious – he can exhale faith in Jesus Christ. That is called efficacious grace.
8. In common grace the Holy Spirit acts as a human spirit so the true issue of salvation can be understood.
9. In efficacious grace the exhale of faith in Christ is registered by the Holy Spirit so that no decision to believe in Christ is ever lost, misplaced, but recorded in heaven.

The tenth and eleventh chapters of Romans is a classical illustration of interpretation being ignored minute details, minutia which is taken out of its place and telescoped into something that is ludicrous. The ninth chapter of Romans is the battleground for the hyper-Calvinistic position, and without the ninth chapter of Romans they would collapse in a heap. Instead, they misinterpret that passage. We are now in one of those areas where interpretation is so critical that we will have to be very careful.

Lesson #651

651 03/19/1979 Romans 10:2 Basis for the evaluation of Israel; purpose of the Age of Israel; intercessory prayer; arrogant zeal for God without +R or Bible doctrine

Romans 10:2 For I bear witness about them that they have zeal for God, but not according to knowledge.

Verse 2 – zeal for God is no substitute for salvation. It begins with the explanatory use of the postpositive conjunctive particle gar. Next is the present active indicative of martureō (μαρτυρέω) [pronounced mar-too-REH-oh] which means to testify on court in Classical Greek, and from that come several other derived meanings. Here we have “For I testify.” Paul is, as it were, giving evidence in court with regard to Israel. He is God’s witness with regard to the status quo of the Jew in the time in which he lived. The historical present tense views the past with the vividness of a present occurrence. The active voice: Paul as the human writer of Romans produces the action of the verb under the ministry of God the Holy Spirit. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal idea from the viewpoint of reality. The dative plural of reference from the intensive pronoun autós (αὐτοῖς) [pronounced ow-TOSS] comes next, used here as it generally is as the third person personal pronoun – “with reference to them.”

Next is the conjunction hóti (ὅτι) [pronounced HOH-tee] used after verbs of testimony for content – that,” plus the present active indicative of the verb echō (ἔχω) [pronounced EHH-oh] which means to have. The retroactive progressive present denotes what has happened in the past and continues into the present time. This particular characteristic of the Jews continues. The active voice: the Jewish unbeliever produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for historical reality. “For I testify that they have.”

Then the accusative singular direct object from zhloj. It is used in the Greek for both zeal and jealousy. Here it refers to zeal. With it is the objective genitive from the noun theos (θεός) [pronounced theh-OSS] – “for God.” Zeal can be disastrous unless it is connected with correct and accurate thought. Correct and accurate thought in the scripture refers to Bible doctrine. Zeal without doctrine is disastrous.

They have a zeal for God

1. This zeal for God must be related to rejection of Jesus Christ as saviour plus arrogance and self-righteousness.

2. The zeal is specifically religious. Religious zeal is simply arrogance plus self-righteousness. Religious zeal motivated the Jews to seek salvation through keeping the law.
3. Self-righteousness through keeping the law is no substitute for the imputed righteousness of God which comes through faith in Jesus Christ.
4. Justification from God demands the imputation of God's to the Jew who will believe in Christ, Paul being the illustration. The other illustration is the rich young ruler who was trying to be saved by keeping the law. He had not followed Christ in regeneration.
5. Righteousness manufactured from religious zeal and human arrogance can never replace the possession of God's perfect and eternal righteousness which comes through faith in Christ, Jesus Christ being the God of Israel.

Next is the phrase "but not according to knowledge" – the adversative conjunction allá (ἀλλά) [pronounced ahI-LAH] sets up a contrast between blind arrogance of the smart person and knowledge of doctrine resident in the soul of the believer. Then the strong negative which denies the reality of the fact – ou (οὐ) [pronounced oo]. It is translated "but not," plus the prepositional phrase kata plus the accusative singular of epignôsis (ἐπίγνωσις) [pronounced ehp-IHG-noh-sis] for doctrine resident in the right lobe in contrast to another technical word, gnôsis (γνώσις) [pronounced GNOH-sis], which is doctrine in the left lobe. So we have "not in conformity to the knowledge of doctrine" or not related to knowledge of doctrine." It should be noted here that kata plus the accusative is also used as the norm and at the same time as the reason for something.

Translation: "For I testify that they have a zeal for God but not as a result of knowledge of doctrine."

Principle

1. Arrogance is cognizance of self-righteousness but ignorant of the imputation of divine righteousness as the basis for justification.
2. Arrogance breeds zeal and self-righteousness.
3. All self-righteousness is works righteousness or energy of the flesh.
4. No one can be saved through the works of the flesh but only through faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. This faith in Christ results in the imputation of divine righteousness as the only righteousness which will ever be acceptable to God.
5. Arrogance is amplified into zeal. Zeal manufactured from self-righteousness or works righteousness is always in direct conflict with the grace policy of God. Therefore, arrogant self-righteousness is always disassociated and disoriented from the plan of God.

6. Self-righteousness can be ecclesiastical or political or social.
7. Relationship between God and man is distorted and destroyed by any arrogance in the soul of anyone, but especially by the presence of arrogance and self-righteousness in a man regardless of the source of that self-righteousness.
8. The humility of man orients to God's righteousness while the arrogance of man orients to self-righteousness.
9. Believing in the Lord Jesus Christ is the unbeliever's only true act of humility.
10. Self-righteousness is so self-centred and so arrogant as to reject God's righteousness through faith in Christ.
11. The Pharisaical self-righteousness of the Jewish unbeliever results in a zeal for God which in reality is antagonism for the plan of God.

Principle

1. True zeal for God cannot exist apart from knowledge of doctrine.
2. Knowledge of doctrine cannot exist apart from faith in the Lord Jesus Christ.
3. Faith in Christ results in that provision of logistical grace whereby the positive believer in Christ can perceive doctrine.
4. On the other hand religious zeal is ignorance of doctrine. True zeal for God is the motivation and the momentum of Bible doctrine in the soul through the daily function of GAP.
5. Religious zeal for God is a tyrant while doctrinal zeal for God is grace modus operandi.
6. The Jewish unbeliever of this passage has a zeal about knowledge while the reversionistic believer has erroneous knowledge without zeal.
7. True zeal is the momentum and the motivation of the plan of God. The believer who has doctrine begins to understand the plan of God and therefore perpetuates his momentum through that understanding.
8. There is a conflict between self-righteousness and divine righteousness. Therefore there is a conflict between ignorant zeal and cognizant zeal, between arrogant zeal and humble zeal.
9. The imputation of divine righteousness results in humility orientation. The development of self-righteousness results in arrogant inflexibility, legalism, mental blindness to doctrine.

10. Mental blindness to doctrine is ignorance of doctrine no matter how high the individual IQ.

11. The function of self-righteousness is arrogance resulting in the resistance of doctrine.

12. The imputation of divine righteousness orients to grace and motivates the believer to persist in the perception of doctrine while advancing to maturity. As he advances and finally attains maturity he glorifies the Lord Jesus Christ.

Lesson #652

652 03/20/1979 Romans 10:3a POW rescue attempt; arrogant self-righteousness and ignorance of the righteousness of God; principle of the integrity of God

Verses 3 & 4 – the issue in the righteousness conflict.

Romans 10:3 For being ignorant of the righteousness of God and seeking to establish the own righteousness, they did not submit to the righteousness of God.

Verse 3 – “For” is the explanatory use of the postpositive conjunctive particle gar. The verse starts agnountej – is the present active participle of the verb agnoeō (ἄγνοέω) [pronounced ag-noh-EH-oh] which means to be ignorant, one of the worst things that can ever happen to us as believers in the Lord Jesus Christ. There is going to come a time when all of us are going to have to call upon the reserves of doctrine resident in our souls. Ignorance is one of the worst of all things that can happen to you as a believer because there is no excuse for ignorance. The present tense is the present of unity of time, known also as the present of duration, which gathers up past and present time into one phrase. The active voice: the Jews with negative volition at God-consciousness and again at gospel hearing produce the action of the verb. The participle is circumstantial expressing attendant circumstances. With this is the accusative singular direct object from the noun dikaiousunē (δικαιοσύνη) [pronounced dih-kai-oh-SOON-ā/dik-ah-yos-OO-nay] -- +R, or one half of divine integrity, God’s righteousness. Then the possessive genitive singular from the noun theos (θεός) [pronounced theh-OSS] – “God.” “For not knowing the righteousness of God.”

The integrity of God

1. The integrity of God is part of the divine essence known as holiness. Holiness is composed of two divine attributes, justice and righteousness.

2. The justice of God is mankind’s point of reference.

3. The love of God has not been the point of reference since the fall of Adam. When Adam lived in the garden with the woman then the divine attribute of love was the point of reference.

4. In the period of innocence in the garden man's point of reference was the love of God. There was no need for the justice of God to come into the picture until man sinned.
5. However, the warning from the justice of God is found in Genesis 2:17, the prohibition of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil and the warning that they day that the fruit was eaten, "Dying thou shalt die."
6. However, in the integrity of God righteousness demands righteousness demands justice.
7. In righteousness the divine love for holiness or integrity is revealed. In justice the divine hatred for sin, human good and evil is revealed.
8. What righteousness demands justice executes. Righteousness rejects man's sinfulness while justice condemns man's sinfulness.
9. At the cross the personal sins of all mankind were imputed to the Lord Jesus Christ and judged by the justice of God.
10. Therefore the integrity of God supersedes the love of God. This is demonstrated by the cross where God the Father set aside His eternal love for god the Son and justice imputed all of our personal sins to Christ on the cross and the justice of God the Father judged every one of them.
11. The imputation of divine righteousness at salvation is the basis for all blessings of mankind from the integrity of God. All blessing comes to us because we as believers possess the righteousness of God.
12. Justice can only bless where perfect righteousness exists. Justice blesses under two categories: logistical grace and supergrace blessings.
13. Self-righteousness is excluded from any phase of the plan of God. Self-righteousness is the basic overt manifestation of human arrogance.
14. Imputed righteousness and self-righteousness are mutually exclusive.
15. Self-righteousness brings cursing from the justice of God while the imputed righteousness of God is the source of blessing from the justice of God.
16. The Mosaic law produces a self-righteousness which is hostile to the imputed righteousness of God.
17. The true purpose of the Mosaic law is not to produce self-righteousness but to condemn man and man's resources, and exclude self-righteousness as the mean's of attainment of blessing from God.

18. The only benefit which can come from God comes through adjustment to the justice of God.

The failure of certain ones in the human race has never abrogated the integrity of God. God's integrity is never cancelled because some person has rejected Christ as saviour or because some believer has failed to advance to maturity. God's integrity is not cancelled because the believer fails to utilize grace. Lack of integrity in mankind has never cancelled the integrity of God toward us. While salvation adjustment to the justice of God results in imputed righteousness from the justice of God, maladjustment results in condemnation from the justice of God. Therefore the justice of God is the source of both blessing and cursing, but the justice of God is never neutral, doing nothing. Therefore, whether justification or condemnation the integrity of God is maintained and constantly functioning in connection with the human race. The very function of the justice of God maintains the integrity of God. Since God is infinite, eternal, invisible and incomprehensible it is necessary for God to reveal Himself to mankind, and He does so through Bible doctrine. The content of the Bible reveals and vindicates the integrity of God. Through comprehension of God we learn of the integrity of God and we adjust to the justice of God. Furthermore, maximum doctrine in the soul through the daily function of GAP is the attainment of maturity adjustment to the justice of God plus maximum blessing for all eternity imputed to our resurrection body. This is the way in which we glorify God. In other words, we learn from self-righteousness versus God's righteousness that man by man's efforts seeks to acquire human integrity. Such activity is maligning God and ignores God's grace. For man to be justified before God he must have the righteousness of God imputed, and this is only accomplished through faith in the Lord Jesus Christ.

So we have to conclude, then, that the integrity of God is infinite, absolute and eternal, part of His perfect essence. The integrity of God is not the mere absence of sin or evil but the sum total of His divine attributes, their perfection, their infinity. The integrity of God is not maintained by the will or sovereignty of God. It is His immutable, unchangeable self. The integrity of God is not maintained by the self-righteousness of man. "Not knowing the righteousness of God" is what Paul is saying in this passage. It is blasphemous to assume that your self-righteousness or unrighteousness promotes divine integrity. Divine righteousness totally rejects man's self-righteousness. God in grace provides all that His integrity demands of the human race; consequently there is nothing man can do to destroy or to compromise the integrity of God. The essence of God, which includes His integrity, stands eternally without any help from mankind. God does not need our help; we need His help.

Imputed righteousness at salvation is the beginning of blessing from God. It also can be very dangerous because if you try to compete with the righteousness of God resident in you by arrogant self-righteousness then you are in for a life of terrible discipline and you are going to fail in the purpose for which God supports you and sustains you under logistical grace. Imputed righteousness is when God begins to share His integrity with us. God found a way to bless mankind without compromising His essence, and that is the imputation of divine righteousness. And God did not do this from human sentimentality or emotional attraction to pleasant personalities. Man often concludes that his self-righteousness pleases God but all of our righteousnesses are as filthy rags in His sight. Neither man's sinfulness nor man's self-righteousness advances the glory of God. The principle is: Only God can glorify God; divine integrity advances the glory of God, and one half of divine integrity resides in us as of the moment we believe in Christ. In other words, only what God has provided for man in grace can glorify God. Any member of the human race who ignores his personal sins as a manifestation of spiritual death and at the same time presents his self-righteousness to God for salvation has neither respect nor awe for the integrity of God. So maladjustment to the justice of God at salvation means no relationship with the integrity of God, no eternal life, no imputation of God's righteousness, and therefore the point of reference, the justice of God, can only condemn the unbeliever.

This is not to say that the unbeliever does not have blessing. The only way, however, he can have this blessing is by somewhere in his life he has association with a mature believer. Blessing by association is the third category of special blessing to the mature believer. This explains why the wicked are blessed.

So we need to remember that God's righteousness and self-righteousness are mutually exclusive. Furthermore, no nation can possess freedom prosperity and blessing apart from the integrity of God. That means that social, economic and political reform apart from the integrity of God is useless.

That brings us to the principle here because "For not knowing the righteousness of God" means that these people as Jewish unbelievers, in their legalism and their pride and their arrogance, do not understand that the integrity of God is never arbitrary. Righteousness demands righteousness, justice demands justice, therefore as long as God is God (which is forever) He must punish sin, He must punish human good, He must punish self-righteousness, He must punish reversionism and evil. This explains the Mosaic law, then, as an instrument of condemnation rather than self-righteousness. The law is incapable of making man righteous before the integrity of God, the only thing that can make man righteous before the integrity of God is to believe in Jesus Christ and receive the imputation of divine righteousness. The law cannot justify, only the justice of God can justify. Remember that justification is a judicial act or verdict from the justice of God recognizing the imputation of divine righteousness at the moment anyone believes in the Lord Jesus Christ. Justification, then, recognizes the imputation of divine righteousness and vindicates the one who possesses it. Justification is not forgiveness. Forgiveness is subtraction; justification is addition. Forgiveness subtracts sin but justification adds the righteousness of God through a judicial imputation. Justification is the basis for the first afortiori, the afortiori of blessing in time. If the justice of God can provide the greater, which is the imputation of divine righteousness, it follows afortiori that He will not withhold the less, i.e. the imputation of great blessing in time, that special blessing that glorifies God.

"For not knowing the righteousness of God."

The principle of this phrase

1. It refers to divine righteousness imputed – one half of divine integrity imputed to the believer at the moment of salvation.
2. When it says, “For not knowing the righteousness of God” this is, in our context, the Jewish unbeliever who is ignorant. He is ignorant with guilt because these Jews had every opportunity to know and to understand the issue of justification or imputation of divine righteousness at the moment of faith in Christ.
3. These Jews by defending self-righteousness by keeping the law have rejected the righteousness of God through faith in Christ.
4. In their arrogance they established an imaginary orthodoxy, which does not exist in the plan of God, but in their evil and arrogant imagination it is real.
5. Since Christ is the source of righteousness of God imputed they have excluded Him from their imaginary system of orthodoxy, and as a result they have maligned Him with blasphemy and rejection.
6. This arrogant self-righteousness of the law has motivated Jewish participation in the crucifixion of our Lord.
7. Such arrogance and self-righteousness is the basis of Jewish persecution of Christianity in Paul’s time. Paul was under constant pressure from his Jewish brethren. Cf. John 16:2. The Jews assumed that they were doing God a favour by killing Christians.
8. Where arrogance exists there is always self-righteousness. This self-righteousness is divorced from reality and gathers momentum in zeal, zeal to destroy those who know the truth, witness to the truth, communicate the truth.
9. Arrogance always chooses personal righteousness or self-righteousness over any other righteousness, including the righteousness of God.
10. Arrogance approves of self-works and rejects the work of God, known to us under the title “grace.”
11. Arrogance is the vacuum of the soul which sucks in every false doctrine, every evil thought, accepting the false as true and accepting the true as false.
12. It is therefore inevitable that rejection of God’s imputed righteousness through faith in Christ will be replaced with arrogant self-righteousness.
13. Rejection of Christ as saviour leads to the establishment of some form of self-righteousness.

“and going about to establish their own righteousness” – or better, “and seeking to establish their own righteousness. Again, we have the noun dikaionsunh, but it is not repeated, it is understood. What we have is the connective use of the conjunction kai, plus the verb, the present active participle of zhtew which means to seek what is lost. In the case of self-righteousness what does not exist to God is what is being sought. As far as God is concerned self-righteousness doesn't exist. This is a pictorial present tense; it presents to the mind a picture of an event in the process of occurrence. This was occurring in Paul's day. The active voice: those who reject doctrine, both unbeliever rejecting the gospel and the believer rejecting doctrinal teaching, produce the action of the verb. The participle is instrumental; it indicates the means by which the action of the main verb is accomplished. Therefore it is translated "and by seeking."

Next is the aorist active infinitive of the verb histêmi (ἵστημι) [pronounced HIHS-tay-mee] – to establish or confirm. The constative aorist is for a fact or action extended over a period of time. The active voice: those who reject the gospel or believers who are negative toward doctrine produce the action of the verb. In this context we are dealing with the unbeliever, but it does have application to the believer as well. This is the infinitive of intended result, which combines both purpose, and result in one concept. The result indicates the fulfilment of a deliberate objective -- to establish their own righteousness. And with it is the accusative singular from the adjective ídios (ἴδιος) [pronounced IH-dee-os], which means "their very own," and again we have dikaiosunê (δικαιοσύνη) [pronounced dih-kai-oh-SOON-ā/dik-ah-yos-OO-nay] used as a noun which means the self-righteousness of the negative Jew. There is the accusative singular definite article used as a possessive pronoun, and we translate: "and by seeking to establish their own [righteousness]."

1. While this passage pertains to the Jewish unbeliever in Paul's time the same conflict versus divine righteousness exists in the realm of Christianity right now.
2. The issue, therefore, has application to us right now. Whose righteousness are you building your life on? You can be positive toward doctrine or negative toward doctrine and still be building on your own righteousness. But you can only be positive toward doctrine and build on the righteousness of God. It is a matter of ignorance versus cognizance of the doctrine of imputation/justification.
3. In this context the unbeliever who rejects the gospel seeks to establish his own righteousness as the means of salvation. One of the most common systems of establishing one's own righteousness is to say no to the gospel. That means you have rejected the work of Christ on the cross as the way of salvation, and once you say no to that you must link up your own self-righteousness with some system. This is what man inevitably does, and for the Jew he had the law there and he reached out and said he would keep the law.
4. The believer in Christ who rejects Bible doctrine and Bible teaching always seeks to establish his own righteousness. So we know a principle now: When people reject the truth, either at the point of the gospel or after they are saved they resist Bible doctrine, it is inevitable that they will seek to establish their own righteousness.

5. The imputed righteousness of God is the only true foundation for the Christian way of life. Again, ever life support system under logistical blessing comes from the justice of God to the righteousness of God resident in us.

6. Imputed righteousness of God is the home or target for the imputation of logistical blessing and, if you crack the maturity barrier, the imputation of special blessing.

7. This affinity between God's righteousness and God's blessing of the believer cannot exist without Bible doctrine in the soul. We must go from ignorance to cognizance.

8. God cannot impute personal blessing to His own righteousness in the believer until capacity for blessing exists.

9. The residence of God's imputed righteousness at salvation demands the residence of Bible doctrine for capacity for special blessing. This special blessing is imputed after maturity.

10. Therefore the imputed righteousness of God can only be established by the daily perception of Bible doctrine, in contrast to human self-righteousness which, being motivated by arrogance and established by systems of spirituality by works – morality, taboos, and which have no relationship to doctrine as such, all seek to establish our own righteousness.

11. Therefore the believer must face the issue of grace versus blasphemy. Or, the question: On whose righteousness do you build?

12. Whose righteousness is the motivating factor in your life? Your own works righteousness or God's imputed righteousness? You cannot say that God's imputed righteousness is the motivating factor in your life until you understand the pertinent doctrines.

“have not” – the negative ou (οὐ) [pronounced oo] with the indicative which indicates that Jewish unbelievers have rejected Christ, plus the aorist active indicative from the verb hupotassô (ὑποτάσσω) [pronounced hoop-ot-AS-so]. Hupotassô (ὑποτάσσω) [pronounced hoop-ot-AS-so] is one of the systems of humility that orients us all to life. No one can ever be oriented to the realities of life until he recognizes the authorities of life. God has set up a system of authorities which we call establishment. God has set up a spiritual system of authorities as well. Orientation to the realities of life and the ability to cope with life is based in large measure on authority orientation. So this means, “they have not been obedient.” It means to be subordinate, to submit to authority. The middle voice means here to subject one's self, but here we have the passive voice to connote being subordinate and the passive denotes a result only. They have not been obedient. The culminative aorist tense views the rejection of the gospel in its entirety. They have rejected the gospel and its authority. But they regard it from the viewpoint of its existing results, and that is what the culminative aorist does – rejection of God's imputed righteousness, and therefore they have accepted their own self-righteousness. The Jews heard the gospel but they rejected the gospel. The gospel offered them God's perfect righteousness and they said no to it because they were satisfied with their self-righteousness. They had been keeping the law for salvation, they had been following some system of morality for salvation, they had been doing something themselves, and therefore they thought more of their own righteousness than they did of the righteousness of God. So as unbelievers they had set up their own righteousness and therefore rejected the righteousness of God. The passive voice notes the results of rejecting Christ as saviour as not being subordinate to the imputed righteousness of God. The indicative mood plus the negative is the declarative indicative and it presents the verbal idea from the viewpoint of reality.

With this is a dative singular of reference from the noun dikaïosunê (δικαιοσύνη) [pronounced dih-kai-oh-SOON-āldik-ah-yos-OO-nay], used here for the righteousness of God because with it is the possessive genitive of the noun theos (θεός) [pronounced theh-OSS] – “they have not been obedient to the righteousness of God.”

Lesson #654

654 03/22/1979 Romans 10:3b Madame Chiang Kai-shek; arrogant anti-grace self righteousness vs. +R target of logistical and special blessing

Romans 10:3 For being ignorant of the righteousness of God and seeking to establish the own righteousness, they did not submit to the righteousness of God.

Translation: “For not knowing the righteousness of God, and by seeking to establish their own righteousness, they have not been obedient to the righteousness of God.”

Principle

1. There is only one way to be submissive or subordinate to the righteousness of God.
2. First, the individual must believe in the Lord Jesus Christ so that the righteousness of God can be imputed. Illustration: the father of the Jewish race. “Abraham believed in the Lord and it [his faith in Christ] was imputed to him for righteousness.” The Jewish race was founded on regeneration and, as a result of that, logistical grace support until Abraham cracked the maturity barrier and the moment of his circumcision and he became the father of the Jewish race. How did he get there? God kept him alive, providing all of the necessary life support systems. It was the imputation of the justice of God to the righteousness of God. The issue, then, was the integrity of God.

3. Once the righteousness of God is resident in the believer it becomes the foundation for the Christian modus vivendi.
4. There is no sense in developing self-righteousness in the Christian life to compete with divine righteousness. The fact that you are developing any self-righteousness merely indicates the amount of arrogance, blind or known, resident in your life.
5. The very existence of God's righteousness in the believer demands something higher, something greater, something compatible with grace. Remember that grace is the policy of the justice of God in imputing blessing to the righteousness of God. First logistical blessing and then, if you advance to maturity, special blessing.
6. Therefore God's righteousness is the foundation while doctrine is the building material.
7. The erected building is the mature believer who receives the imputation of special divine blessing to the target or home – imputed righteousness. This imputed blessing glorifies God in time.
8. Subordination to divine righteousness demands faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. Then for exploitation of the possession of divine righteousness consistent perception of doctrine.
9. The divine plan excludes any form of human self-righteousness. To construct your life on human self-righteousness is to build on a foundation of sand, and when adversity and disaster and catastrophe strike you will be destroyed.

Principle

1. All of this is the obedience of faith in Christ by which God's righteousness is imputed. This verse is saying we have God's righteousness through obedience of faith. Righteousness is imputed on the basis of a non-meritorious system.
2. This is the believer's obedience to the discipline of doctrinal inculcation through the daily function of GAP.
3. There can be only one righteousness in the life of the believer – God's imputed righteousness.
4. All systems of self-righteousness are both arrogance and blasphemy, a denial of the divine policy of grace.
5. Self-righteousness is produced by human volition apart from divine help or sponsorship.
6. There is a place for morality in Christianity but never as a system of self-righteousness.

7. Pride or arrogance sets up one's own self-righteousness to blaspheme and reject the very purpose and plan related to the righteousness of God. God has imputed His righteousness for a purpose: to carry out His predetermined plan.
8. Therefore all legalism is based on self-righteousness; all grace function is based on the imputed divine righteousness at salvation.
9. God cannot impute blessing to self-righteousness. Such legalism is blasphemous and a compromise to the attributes of God.
10. Self-righteousness is a curse to the possessor. For the unbeliever, an eternal curse – the lake of fire; for the believer, the source of divine discipline in time, loss of special blessing in time, loss of eternal rewards.
11. The principle: Self-righteousness cannot glorify God, only the person who possesses it. Self-righteousness glorifies the individual; God's righteousness precludes any glorification of the individual. God's righteousness imputed can only glorify God.

1977 Romans

Lesson #655

655 03/23/1979 Romans 10:4 Cult identification; Jesus Christ fulfills the Mosaic Law; imputation of +R replaces all systems of self righteousness

Romans 10:4 For the end of Law is Christ, unto righteousness to everyone believing.

Verse 4 – generally what is left out of considerations of this passage is the phrase “for righteousness.” The phrase in the Greek begins telos (τέλος) [pronounced TEHL-oss] gar nomou. “For” is postpositive conjunctive particle gar. The postpositive conjunction is a cause or a reason for the preceding statement. The fourth word actually comes next as far as we are concerned in forming the English sentence – Christos (χριστός) [pronounced krees-TOHSS], the nominative singular of one of the names for our Lord Jesus Christ. It is the subject in the nominative case; it refers to the second person of the Trinity, the Lord Jesus Christ. So we begin, “For Christ.” The absence of the definite article in front of Christos (χριστός) [pronounced krees-TOHSS] emphasizes the qualitative aspect of the noun and emphasizes, therefore, the hypostatic union – the uniqueness of the person of Jesus Christ. He is eternal God, co-equal with the Father and with the Holy Spirit, and at the same time He is true humanity but superior to all humanity as the last Adam, impeccable and perfect.

Then we insert, as we are authorized to do (no verb is there) the present active indicative of the verb eimi (εἶμι) [pronounced eye-ME]. This is legitimate in the function of ellipsis where the words that follow are in the nominative case. The verb to be can only take the nominative case. The word that follows is the first word in the Greek sentence, telos (τέλος) [pronounced TEHL-oss], which is in the nominative. It is a predicate nominative meaning on the Koine Greek “end, termination, cessation, void, objective or goal. In the Attic Greek it also means achievement, fulfilment, or the carrying out of something. It also meant the completion of a state, therefore the final step or the supreme stage. It was also used for an obligation, and there are three translations which are permissible in this verse. The first is “objective,” the second is “termination,” and the third is “obligation.” “For Christ is the objective, termination, or obligation.” “Obligation” is eliminated as unique in the writing of Demosthenes and therefore having no connotation in the Koine Greek of the New Testament, even though Paul was familiar with Demosthenes. This leaves two possibilities: objective or goal, termination, end or cessation. But before we can reach a conclusion as to what it actually means we must first understand what Paul meant by the word nomos (νόμος) [pronounced NOHM-oss] – “law.’

We know that the Mosaic law refers to Codex #1, Codex #2, Codex #3. Codex #1 refers to the Decalogue, the ten commandments, which includes a number of sins all stated in a negative way to define freedom under establishment. Freedom is absolutely necessary as a part of the laws of divine establishment for evangelism, for advance or retrogression in the Christian way of life, to fulfil the angelic conflict. And so freedom is described in terms of privacy, property, relationships in life. Next is Codex #2 which presents a complete Christology and soteriology. In other words, it presents the Lord Jesus Christ who is the God of Israel as the only saviour. Codex #3 dealt with the laws of divine establishment in general. It dealt with the functions of government, its limitations and its rightful functions related to freedom. It defined in terms of a client nation to God income tax, for example, which is ten per cent of anyone’s income. It defines the military function of a nation, the basis for maintaining the freedom of a national entity. It also took up dietary habits and defined diet in terms of foods that are acceptable and foods that are prohibited. It set up a system of all of the social relationships in life and defined it in terms of crime, as sin, and also in terms of how people should be condemned and what punishments they should receive for criminal actions.

Paul is referring to the Mosaic law, though nomos (νόμος) [pronounced NOHM-oss] is used for other parts of the Word and occasionally even for the entire canon of scripture. The law is not an instrument of salvation, therefore keeping the law would not provide salvation. However, the law presented the way of salvation through faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. Keeping the law for salvation produced self-righteousness, but by understanding and listening to the law, Codex #2 where Christ was presented, and believing in Christ, produced not only salvation but the imputation of divine righteousness. So we have the Mosaic law considered in two ways in this passage. First of all, as a way of salvation. That produced self-righteousness. The Mosaic law also presented Christ as the only way of salvation, and for those who believed in Christ they received the imputation of divine righteousness. So once again the Mosaic law is brought into focus in this general overall subject of the passage, human self-righteousness versus divine righteousness.

The Jews to whom Paul addresses this were trying to be saved by their own self-righteousness, by keeping the Mosaic law. Cf. Romans 3:20, 28. These verses indicate that Christ is the termination, the cessation, the end of the law for those who believe in Him. According to these verses telos (τέλος) [pronounced TEHL-oss] would indicate termination. The first advent of Christ fulfilled Codex #2 of the Mosaic law, for all of the Levitical sacrifices portrayed in Codex #2 of the law the various types of the modus operandi of the Levitical priesthood, the functions of the holy days, the work of the Lord Jesus Christ in receiving the imputation of all of our personal sins and being judged for them. In that sense, then, Christ fulfilled the law. Christ is the termination of the law. Every type, every illustration, every declaration of doctrine regarding soteriology on Codex #2 was fulfilled by the first advent and the spiritual death of our Lord on the cross, bearing our sins and taking our place. So it must be understood that the first advent of Christ fulfilled Codex #2 of the Mosaic law. But the Jews are blind to the first advent and therefore they chose their works righteousness over imputed righteousness.

There are also certain passages of scripture which indicate that Christ fulfilled the law which uses other words and other connotations of telos (τέλος) [pronounced TEHL-oss]. For example, Matthew 5:17 – “Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfil.” Here the law or the prophets refers to Old Testament scriptures and therefore is not pertinent to the subject of the Mosaic law. “Law and prophets” was used for the first section of the Old Testament [Law], the Pentateuch, and the other two sections of the Hebrew Old Testament [the prophets]. Pertinent is another passage, however, Galatians 3:24 – “Wherefore the law was our school bus [pedagogue] to lead us unto Christ, that we might be justified by means of faith.” Codex #1 of the Mosaic law demonstrates that man is a sinner and needs a saviour. It also defines freedom in terms of morality. Codex #2 of the Mosaic law reveals Christ as the only saviour, and therefore the law is a school bus, a pedagogue, leading us to Christ. By the way, a pedagogue was never a teacher in the school, a pedagogue was the Greek slave that acted as a body guard for the children, taking them to school and back from school, so that they would not be kidnapped or harmed.

While this conception of the law is true doctrine, pertinent to this context is the fact that Christ is the termination, the end, the cessation of the Mosaic law for believers. Self-righteousness produced by keeping the law will not save, will not justify, and furthermore, after salvation will not advance the believer. The law will not save or justify, only the possession of divine righteousness imputed at the moment of faith in Christ.

So we translate this, “For Christ is the cessation of the law.” The word “cessation” is legitimate for telos (τέλος) [pronounced TEHL-oss] and it also explains the change to another dispensation. When our Lord died physically on the cross He was three days in the grave, He was resurrected, then He ascended, and He was seated at the right hand of the Father. By being seated at the right hand of the Father He became the cessation of the law. That means that the Age of Israel, which was not completed as yet, was interrupted and the Lord Jesus Christ having a new category of royalty needed a royal family. So there was an interruption of the Age of Israel and we live in the Church Age, the dispensation of the Church where the royal family is being formed. So when it says that Christ is the cessation of the law it also implies that Israel as a client nation to God is finished. This, the Church Age, is called the times of the Gentiles in which only Gentile nations can function as a client nation to God, and it is a time in which no Jewish nation is recognized by God as a client nation. Any Jewish nation that does exist therefore must be regarded in the same light as Gentile nations. This will continue until the end of the Tribulation and the second advent when Israel will be restored to their client nation status and the four unconditional covenants to Israel will be fulfilled.

But this, “For Christ is the cessation of the law,” is speaking not of dispensations but of something very specific. The next phrase is a prepositional phrase, eis (εἰς) [pronounced ICE] plus the accusative singular of dikaiosunê (δικαιοσύνη) [pronounced dih-kai-oh-SOON-ā/dik-ah-yos-OO-nay] – “with reference to righteousness.” Paul states it this way for a very specific reason. The Jews are like the rich young ruler; they are trying to be saved by keeping the law. The Lord admitted later that the rich young ruler had followed the commandments very well but there was something missing. When the disciples asked what it was He said, “He has not followed me by means of regeneration” – believing in the Lord. In other words, the law cannot produce a saving righteousness. Only faith in Christ can produce a saving righteousness.

“to every one that believeth” – the dative singular indirect object, also the dative of advantage, from adjective pás (πάς) [pronounced pahs]. Pás (πάς) [pronounced pahs] means “to all” but in the singular it means “to each one” or “to every one.” The adjective is used here as a substantive. We translate it “to each one.” Then an articular present active participle from the verb pisteúō (πιστεύω) [pronounced pis-TOO-oh], the basic word for believing. The participle has a suffix, the dative singular of advantage. The definite article is used as a personal pronoun. The aoristic present is for punctiliar action in present time. The active voice: positive volition at gospel hearing produces the action of the verb, i.e. faith in Christ. The participle is a causal participle. So we translate it correctly: “to each one because he believes.”

Lesson #656

656 03/26/1979 Romans 10:4 Principle; conflict of self-righteousness by works vs. imputed +R of God as the basis for salvation and blessing ends at salvation

Romans 10:4 For the end of Law is Christ, unto righteousness to everyone believing.

Translation: “For Christ is the termination of the law with reference to righteousness to each one because he believes.”

Principle

1. Because the believer believes in Christ, Christ is the termination of the law with reference to righteousness. You do not develop your own righteousness for divine blessing, you already have the righteousness for divine blessing.
2. Imputed righteousness terminates self-righteousness by keeping the law. That is what this passage means.

Principle

1. The phrase is explained: "For not knowing the righteousness of God, and by seeking to establish their own righteousness they have not been obedient to the righteousness of God."
2. Faith in Christ is obedience to the righteousness of God.
3. The Jews sought to establish their own righteousness by keeping the law, but Christ is the termination of self-righteousness. He is the termination of that myth of salvation through keeping the law.
4. As far as righteousness is concerned Christ is the termination of any system of human self-righteousness because faith in Christ results in the imputation of God's perfect righteousness.
5. No system of human righteousness can compete with God's righteousness. Cf. Matthew 6:33. Logistical grace provision will be added after you have His righteousness.
6. The Jews in the client nation of Israel failed when they substituted self-righteousness from keeping the law for God's righteousness through faith in Christ.
7. In the conflict of human self-righteousness versus divine imputed righteousness there is no contest.
8. Only human arrogance erroneously concludes that righteousness from keeping the law could provide salvation.
9. But God's plan and policy of grace not only excludes human self-righteousness but in place provides His own perfect righteousness.
10. Therefore the blindness of Israel was the blindness of arrogance -- that self-achievement can impress God. God is only impressed with His own integrity or holiness, not with man's counterfeits.

Principle

1. Because the individual believer in Christ receives the imputation of divine righteousness, the same divine righteousness is instant justification and perpetual motivation for advancing to maturity through maximum doctrine resident in the soul.
2. The conflict, then, between law righteousness and faith righteousness, or better, the conflict between self-righteousness and imputed righteousness, is terminated at salvation when you believe in Christ.
3. The imputation of divine righteousness at the moment of faith in Christ once and for all replaces any system of self-righteousness or pseudo spirituality.

4. Christian legalism is arrogance of ignorance, failure to understand the implications of the imputed righteousness of God.
5. No man can establish two conflicting systems of righteousness. He must accept one or the other – either self-righteousness or imputed divine righteousness.
6. For the believer to establish self-righteousness is the arrogance of legalism.
7. For the believer to establish imputed righteousness is the humble grace orientation of inculcated doctrine.
8. The power of thought exceeds the power of deeds. The deed only has merit as it relates to the thought.
9. Bible doctrine resident in the soul is the thought which motivates compliance with the plan of God and a general grace orientation to life.
10. Grace excludes any system of self-righteousness as a basis of merit or blessing from God.
11. You can only build on the foundation of imputed righteousness and the building must be perception of doctrine.
12. Therefore, the conflict of self-righteousness versus divine righteousness imputed existed in the previous dispensation of Israel as a definite stumbling block to the Jew.

Lesson #657

657 03/27/1979 Romans 10:5a; Lev. 18:1–6 Battle of the Bulge: scout platoon at Lanzerath; Moses' reference to codices 1 and 3 of the Mosaic Law

The Message of Salvation to All

Romans 10:5 For Moses writes of the righteousness that is of the Law that “The man having done these things will live by them.”

Verse 5 – we begin with the word “Moses.” The second word is the first word in the English – “for,” the postpositive conjunctive particle gar, here the explanatory use, and it translated “you see” or “for you see.” Next is the present active indicative of the verb graphō (γράφω) [pronounced GRAWF-oh] which means to write, and here refers to the writing of Moses in the book of Leviticus, specifically 18:5. The present tense is a historical present viewing a past event, the writing of Leviticus, with the vividness of a present occurrence. The active voice: Moses in the human author of Leviticus under the ministry of God the Holy Spirit. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the formation of the canon of scripture, the Old Testament from which Paul quotes. The Greek word for Moses is Mwushj. “You see, Moses wrote.”

Next is the conjunction hóti (ὅτι) [pronounced HOH-tee] which introduces a direct discourse which in English is represented by quotation marks and is therefore not translated.

The accusative which follows is translated “about the righteousness” – “You see, Moses wrote about the righteousness,” the accusative singular direct object from dikaiousunê (δικαιοσύνη) [pronounced dih-kai-oh-SOON-ā/dik-ah-yos-OO-nay]. With this are two definite articles on each side of dikaiousunê (δικαιοσύνη) [pronounced dih-kai-oh-SOON-ā/dik-ah-yos-OO-nay]. We have the accusative feminine definite article, then dikaiousunê (δικαιοσύνη) [pronounced dih-kai-oh-SOON-ā/dik-ah-yos-OO-nay], and then the definite article again – thn. The first definite article denotes a previous reference in verses 3 & 4 to human self-righteousness from keeping the law, but the second definite article which follows dikaiousunê (δικαιοσύνη) [pronounced dih-kai-oh-SOON-ā/dik-ah-yos-OO-nay] is used as a relative pronoun. It is correctly translated “about the righteousness which is.”

Then we have a prepositional phrase, ek (ἐκ) [pronounced ehk] plus the ablative of means from nomos (νόμος) [pronounced NOHM-oss] – “by means to the law.” “You see, Moses wrote about the righteousness which is by means of the law.” This is the point at which the quotation begins.

Principle

1. Moses and Paul are talking about two different things. When Moses wrote Leviticus 18:5 he was talking about one thing, and as Paul quotes him here Paul is talking about another thing, so we have to understand that part of the interpretation is to remember that in Leviticus 18 Moses was talking about one thing whereas Paul in Romans 10:5 is talking about something else. Therefore when Paul quotes Moses we have to know what Moses was talking about originally, what Paul is talking about, and why Paul goes to Leviticus to make the point when they are talking about two different things. This means that we have two men of genius brought together.

2. Moses was talking about obedience to Codex #1 and Codex #3 of the Mosaic law. Paul is talking about self-righteousness from keeping the law. Moses is saying that it was their responsibility living in a client nation to obey Codex #1, the Ten Commandments, to obey Codex #3, the laws of divine establishment. Paul in Romans 10 says that the Jews who did this for salvation were wrong: you do it as a citizen of a client nation but you don't do it for salvation and you don't do it for blessing. They were talking about two different things but they were using the common ground. Paul is giving this information to Jews who have rejected Christ because they are trying to keep Codex #1 and Codex #3 for salvation and, you see, Codex #2 is the way of salvation. Yes, there is a place for Codex #1 which is the basis for human freedom. Yes, there is a place for Codex #3 because no nation can function without the laws of divine establishment. Because there are divine laws for freedom and establishment it does not imply that by keeping these laws you can have salvation; that is salvation by works.

So Moses was saying that we (the Jews) as members of a client nation (Israel) must observe Codex #1 and Codex #3. Paul then says, yes, that is correct, Moses is right, but you don't keep them for salvation, you keep them as the function of a client nation.

Leviticus 18:1-6

Verse 1 – Then Jehovah spoke to Moses, saying,

Verse 2 – Speak to the people of Israel, and say to them, I am the Lord your God [Adonai Elohenu].

Verse 3 – You shall not do what you have done in the land of Egypt [practice idolatry], where you lived; nor are you to do what is done in the land of Canaan [the practice of idolatry], where I am bringing you; you shall not walk in their statutes [laws].

Verse 4 – You are to perform my judgments [Codex #3], and keep my statutes, to walk in them: I am the Lord [Adonai Elohenu] your God.

Verse 5 – So you shall keep my statutes, and my judgements, which the man who does them, also shall live by them [Codex #1 & Codex #3]: I am Jehovah.

Verse 6 – None of you shall approach any blood relative of his, to uncover his nakedness: I am the Lord. (From here it goes on to take up all the laws of incest and sexual degeneration, a part of Codex #3. Although the principle, "Thou shalt not fornicate," is found in Codex #1 it is amplified in Codex #3 under the laws of divine establishment. These are the degenerate results of Satan worship and/or idolatry).

Both the way of salvation and spirituality after salvation is only described in Codex #2 or the ordinances which are not found in Leviticus 18. The spiritual heritage of Israel enucleated in Codex #2 includes the tabernacle, the holy days, the Levitical offerings, the modus operandi of the Levitical priesthood, and none of these things are mentioned in Leviticus 18 which is strictly Codex #3 information. This must be kept in mind in order to understand the interpretation when Paul quotes from it.

Morality: Morality is designed for the client nation's unbeliever as well as the client nation's born again believer. Morality is for the human race rather than for one category.

"the man who does them shall also live by them" – this is a reference to a lifestyle in a client nation, it does not refer to salvation. Lifestyle is not the basis for salvation. Only the work of Christ on the cross is the basis for salvation. The Jews set up a system (even though the work of Christ was presented to them in Codex #2) in which they took their own work/morality, based on their arrogance, and set up their self-righteousness versus the righteousness of God. This has always been the major blind spot of Israel. No lifestyle, including semi-perfection, can open the gates of heaven. They have been opened by the works of Christ on the cross. Arrogance distorts lifestyle into a way of salvation by works. Doing is a lifestyle, but believing in Christ is salvation.

Principle

1. The Jews avoided incest and sexual abuses (Leviticus 18) and concluded from this establishment morality that their self-righteousness was worthy of salvation.
2. Such a blasphemous conclusion violates the entire purpose of the passage.
3. Morality is designed for the client nation unbeliever and believer alike.
4. Leviticus 18 refers to lifestyle, not salvation. Lifestyle is not the basis for salvation.
5. No lifestyle, including semi-perfection, can open the gates of heaven; they have been opened by the work of the Lord Jesus Christ in being judged for our sins on the cross.
6. Arrogance distorts lifestyle into a way of salvation and sets up the principle of competition: human righteousness versus God's righteousness.
7. Doing is a lifestyle; believing in Christ is salvation.
8. It is imperative in understanding this passage to rightly divide the Word of truth. Do not confuse lifestyle with salvation.
9. Doing is simply living by the laws of establishment in a client nation – Romans 13:1-7.
10. Morality is never salvation; it is the lifestyle of citizens of a client nation.

“That the man” – the definite article ο(. This is an articular aorist active participle. Poihsaj is the aorist active participle from the verb poieô (ποιέω) [pronounced poi-EH-oh]. It is the exact equivalent of the Hebrew asah in Leviticus 18:5. The definite article is used as a relative pronoun and translated “who.” The aorist tense of the verb poieô (ποιέω) [pronounced poi-EH-oh] is a constative aorist for a fact or an action extended over a period of time. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: the believer or the unbeliever in the client nation of Israel produces the action of the verb in compliance of the laws of divine establishment which are summarized in Codex #1 and Codex #3. Leviticus 18 is a part of Codex #3. The participle is circumstantial.

Next is the nominative singular subject from the noun anthrôpos (ἄνθρωπος) [pronounced ANTH-row-pos] which includes believer and unbeliever. The noun is generic for homo sapien – “mankind who does it” is the best translation.

Then we have the future middle indicative of the verb zaô (ζάω) [pronounced DZAH-oh] – “shall live by it.” Everything here is about morality, establishment, and client nation function. The future tense of zaô (ζάω) [pronounced DZAH-oh] is a gnomic future for a fact or performance which may be expected under the conditions of keeping the law, keeping establishment in a client nation. The middle voice is the indirect middle emphasizing the agent as producing the action rather than participating in its results. The indicative mood indicates the main verb. The action of the aorist participle precedes the action of the main verb and therefore we have a very specific manner in which this particular quotation follows exactly what was given in the Hebrew, bringing it into the equivalent Greek. With it is the preposition en (ἐν) [pronounced en] plus the instrumental of the intensive pronoun autos (αὐτός) [pronounced ow-TOSS], used for a second person singular personal pronoun and translated “it.”

1977 Romans

Lesson #658

658 03/28/1979 Romans 10:5b Principle of morality as a necessary lifestyle of everyone for survival cf. works for salvation and spirituality

The Message of Salvation to All

Romans 10:5 For Moses writes of the righteousness that is of the Law that “The man having done these things will live by them.”

Translation: “You see, Moses wrote [Lev. 18:5] about the righteousness which is by means of the law: The man who does it shall live by it.”

Principle

1. Morality is a lifestyle, not a way of salvation. Furthermore, lifestyle is for believer and unbeliever.
2. To distort morality into a way of salvation is both blasphemous and disastrous.
3. Codex #3 requires morality as a lifestyle but it never requires morality as a way of salvation.
4. Furthermore, it is a lifestyle for both believer and unbeliever in the client nation.
5. Lifestyle has nothing whatever to do with salvation. Salvation was started and completed at the cross. Salvation is the work of Jesus Christ, not the work of mankind in a client nation.
6. This means that the appropriation of salvation does not depend upon morality, it depends upon faith in the Lord Jesus Christ.
7. Man has a lifestyle of morality by keeping the law but not a way of salvation in that morality.

8. This does not imply that we should be immoral. The lifestyle of morality is desirable but it must not be distorted by arrogance nor applied by stupidity.
9. The distortion is the substitute of self-righteousness of mankind for the imputed righteousness of God.
10. Faith in the Lord Jesus Christ is the end of self-righteousness or any system of works righteousness.
11. There is no way that the righteousness of man can improve on the righteousness of God.
12. Therefore is the end of any system of self or works righteousness. The believer in the Lord Jesus Christ receives divine righteousness. The Christian way of life does not exclude morality but is infinitely superior to human morality.

Principle

1. Codex #1, the Ten Commandments, and Codex #3 define morality in terms of the law of divine establishment.
2. For example, our context – Leviticus 18:6ff – defines morality in terms of avoiding incest, which not only includes families but even in-laws.
3. Inasmuch as sin is an attack on establishment morality, defined in Codex #1 and #3, obviously Codex #1 and #3 is not the antidote for the unbeliever and believer as far as salvation or relationship with God is concerned. That comes from faith in Christ.
4. Morality belongs to the entire human race; it is not the monopoly of the believer.
5. Therefore morality cannot be either the way of salvation or the way of spirituality. Salvation is instant relationship with God; spirituality is the ministry of the Holy Spirit.
6. This does not imply that Christianity is immoral or antinomian but simply anything the unbeliever can do is not the Christian way of life.
7. Christianity includes morality but at the same time exceeds morality, both in the way of salvation and in the dynamics of the filling of the Spirit after salvation.
8. Morality is conformity to the laws of divine establishment but it is not salvation.
9. Salvation is faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, therefore the total exclusion of self or works-righteousness.

10. Morality is keeping the laws of divine establishment but not the Christian way of life which is the ministry of God the Holy Spirit in fulfilling the royal family honor code.

11. Obviously the Christian way of life is not in conflict with morality. Just because the Christian way of life is far greater in its scope and in its requirement it does not imply that it is in conflict with morality.

Principle

1. While morality sponsors human freedom to the believer in Christ, morality in itself is neither salvation nor spirituality.
2. Hell will be filled with very moral people whose satisfaction with their own self or works-righteousness motivated, then, in arrogance to reject the offer of the righteousness of God through faith in Christ.
3. Morality provides freedom, and freedom is the environment for evangelism. It is the environment for decision, and non-meritorious decision is the basis for salvation.
4. The object of the decision is the Lord Jesus Christ, not keeping the law.
5. Faith in Christ results in the imputation of divine righteousness while keeping the law results in the development of self-righteousness.
6. God accepts His own righteousness for justification but He rejects self-righteousness. As a matter of fact God condemns self-righteousness in the unbeliever.

Principle

1. The failure of Israel is the failure of all self-righteous and legalistic people. It is the failure of choosing the wrong righteousness, i.e. self.
2. The wrong righteousness is any form of self or works-righteousness.
3. The right righteousness is the righteousness of God.
4. This righteousness is imputed at the moment anyone believes in Christ.
5. This is Paul's Old Testament documentation regarding self-righteousness.
6. Coming up in the next few verses, one of the most critical principles in the Word of God, Paul's Old Testament documentation regarding the imputed righteousness of God.

Morality

By definition morality is right conduct and excellence in the practice of establishment. It pertains to the character, the conduct, the ethics, the motivation and integrity related to the laws of divine establishment. Morality is the doctrine of duty and responsibility of all adult members of the human race regarding establishment principles. This means, of course, that morality is a part of Christianity but morality is also a part of being an unbeliever. Christianity is not a morality, it is a relationship with God – 2Corinthians 5:17. The believer is a new creature because he is “in Christ.” The relationship of Christianity is described, then, in terms of positional sanctification and that means that morality is not Christianity, it is a by-product of any adult person under establishment, believer or unbeliever. The plan of God does not give the believer licence to sin, nor does the Bible condone antinomianism, nevertheless morality has no spiritual dynamics as far as the Christian way of life is concerned. Any thing the unbeliever can do is not the Christian way of life. Under the laws of divine establishment, then, morality is for believer and unbeliever. Since the unbeliever can be, and often is, moral, so should the Christian be moral. However, in the Christian way of life morality is the result, not the means, of living the Christian life. So the true dynamics of Christianity is in the mechanics of experiential sanctification which is the filling of the Spirit plus perception of doctrine. But Christian dynamics include morality and at the same time, then, exceed morality. Morality cannot provide salvation, cannot produce the filling of the Spirit, cannot advance the believer in the Christian way of life, and therefore morality cannot provide supergrace or ultra-supergrace, areas that glorify the Lord Jesus Christ. Morality is designed by God for the survival of the human race as well as its perpetuation in the angelic conflict. Morality is designed by God the for the function of human freedom in relationship to issues of the angelic conflict, such as salvation or spiritual growth or the function of spirituality in the life of the believer, as well as divine blessing imputed. This is where morality comes in as a stabilizer in the field of freedom and privacy. Morality fulfils the divine institutions of volition, marriage, family and nationalism. And morality demands that the believer be a law-abiding citizen and a participant in any fight against tyranny.

1977 Romans

Lesson #659

659 03/29/1979 Romans 10:6a Billy Graham, change of viewpoint; "The Black Death"; Jews with maximum knowledge of Jesus Christ in the right lobe reject Him

Verses 6-8, the Old Testament documentation regarding the imputed righteousness of God.

Romans 10:6 But the righteousness of faith speaks thus: "You should not say in your heart, 'Who will ascend into heaven?' (that is, to bring down Christ)...

Verse 6 – a quotation from Deuteronomy 30:12. The verse begins with the adversative use of the conjunctive particle de, “but.”

Principle

1. The emphasis in the previous verse is doing the law, therefore works righteousness; but the emphasis here is on faith righteousness or God's righteousness imputed at the moment of faith in Christ.
2. Under faith righteousness the Word or doctrine is near you, in your mouth, and in your right lobe – Romans 10:8.
3. Therefore the conjunction de sets up a contrast between the self-righteousness of mankind and the perfect righteousness of God.
4. A contrast between works righteousness and faith righteousness is the subject of Moses' last words in Deuteronomy 30 and Paul's remarks in Romans 10.
5. In the previous verse, verses 5, we have a righteousness resulting from keeping the law – self-righteousness/works righteousness.
6. But now in contrast, verse 6, we have a righteousness [God's righteousness] imputed to the one who believes in Christ – imputed at the moment of faith in Christ.
7. There is no contradiction between Moses in Leviticus and Deuteronomy and Paul in Romans.
8. The contradiction is between the distortion of Moses by arrogant self-righteousness and Jews negative toward the gospel and the true principle of salvation by grace through faith.
9. Codex #1 & Codex #3 is a way of life for a client nation while faith in Christ is the only way of salvation.
10. You cannot distort a way of life under establishment into a way of salvation.
11. This creates human righteousness competing with God's righteousness.
12. Human righteousness competing with God's righteousness is not only blasphemy but also the quintessence of human arrogance.

Next we have a nominative singular subject from the noun dikaïosunê (δικαιοσύνη) [pronounced dih-kai-oh-SOON-ā/dik-ah-yos-OO-nay] which refers to the perfect righteousness of God. The generic use of the definite article categorizes or classifies the righteousness of God as absolutely unique, the only righteousness that can justify man. Man has no righteousness by which he can be justified; the only righteousness that can justify man is the righteousness of God imputed from the justice of God at the moment of faith in Christ.

This is followed by a prepositional phrase ek (ἐκ) [pronounced ehk] plus the ablative of means from pistis (πίστις) [pronounced PIHS-tihs] – “by means of faith.” The ablative is not the ordinary was of expressing means but when the expression of means is accompanied by the implication of origin or source then it is used instead of the instrumental case.

Next is the present active indicative of the verb légô (λέγω) [pronounced LEH-goh]. Righteousness from faith or God's righteousness is personified. God's righteousness is going to speak. To give expression is the meaning of légô (λέγω) [pronounced LEH-goh] here. The present tense is a retroactive progressive present, it denotes what has begun in the past (Deuteronomy 30:11-14) and continues into the present. The final commentary on Deuteronomy 30 is Paul's commentary in this section. The active voice: the imputed righteousness of God is actually doing the speaking, producing the action. This is the personification of the righteousness of God to communicate thought. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the existence of the righteousness of God and the reality of its communication of a principle. With this is the adverb of manner houtos (οὕτως) [pronounced HOO-tos] which means "in this manner."

Translation so far: "But the righteousness which is by means of faith communicates in this manner."

Lesson #660

660 03/30/1979 Deut. 30:11–12 CO's to think, not outdo the troops; Jews say salvation unattainable, obscure and requires self-righteousness

Approaching the Hebrew of Deuteronomy 30

1. The passage now quoted, after the word "manner," is a quotation from Deuteronomy 30:11-14. Romans 10:6 will quote Deut. 30:12. Verse 7 does not quote from the Hebrew of Deuteronomy 30:13 but starts out paraphrasing it and comparing it with Amos 9:2. Verse 8 quotes Deut. 30:14, which is the key to understanding Romans 10:9,10.
2. Verses 6,7 of Romans 10 have in mind the impossibilities of Psalm 139:8.
3. To interpret this passage and come to its correct application the first step involves understanding the context from which Paul quotes.
4. The thrust of both Moses in Deuteronomy and Paul in Romans 10 is not the inability of the Jews to be good but the inability of the Jews to believe in Lord Jesus Christ.
5. The Jews had a penchant for self-righteousness by keeping the law, but they lacked the volition of faith. Therefore, they did not fulfil Codex #2 which demands faith in Christ for salvation rather than works righteousness.
6. The failure of the Jews was the inability of will or volition rather than inability of self-righteousness. Self-righteousness was merely the cover for their inadequacy.

7. In living on this earth there is a place for establishment righteousness, but establishment righteousness is never the way of salvation.

8. Furthermore, what makes it easy is that salvation by faith in Christ is closer to the Jews than the Mosaic law.

Deuteronomy 30:11-14

Deuteronomy 30:11 "For this commandment that I command you today is not too hard for you, neither is it far off.

Verse 11 –“commandment,” mitzwah is a command or a precept. With it is the cognate, the piel participle of tsawah, plus the second masculine singular suffix used for Israel. The first word is mitzwah—commandment with hazoth: this commandment. With that is an equivalent to gar, ki—For this commandment.

“which” – asher; “I command you [Israel];” ha jom, “today.” “For this commandment which I command you today.” This is where we start understanding Romans 10:6-8.

1. The commandment refers to all categories of the Mosaic law—Codex #1, #2, #3.
2. Moses has commanded the function of freedom in Codex #1. The Ten Commandments are designed to protect human freedom for everyone.
3. This freedom is to be used to make a decision for believing in the Lord Jesus Christ—the God of Israel, the only saviour, Codex #2.
4. Therefore the command here is to Codex #2 which presents Christ as saviour.
5. The command also refers to Codex #3 which is the modus vivendi of the laws of divine establishment for a client nation. Israel coming out of the exodus was the first client nation in history.
6. Moses therefore, when he said in Deuteronomy 30:11, This commandment which I command you today, had in mind all three sections of the Mosaic law. Paul in quoting this passage only has one section in mind—Codex #2 or the attainment of divine righteousness through faith in Christ.
7. This information was not concealed by Moses from the people. But Codex #2 was designed to reveal Christ as saviour and encourage faith in Christ for salvation.
8. Therefore, the gospel in the Mosaic law was not withheld from the people as something they would have to go to heaven to hear. It was not something they would have to cross the sea to learn. It was revealed, not concealed.

9. Therefore Moses is saying, salvation is neither unattainable [in heaven] or difficult to find [across the ocean]. Moses is facing a new generation. They have not been evangelized. They act as though salvation was something mysterious, and you had to go to heaven to get it or you had to cross the ocean to learn it.

10. So Moses is saying to the new generation just before he died, “Salvation is near, it is in your right lobe and in your mouth.” Since you were little children you have been going to prep school; you have learned the meaning of the tabernacle; you have learned the meaning of various articles in the tabernacle; you have related them to the person and the work of Jesus Christ; you have learned the Levitical offerings and related them to the function of Christ on the cross, redemption, reconciliation, propitiation; you have observed since you were little children all of the various holy days—the Passover, unleavened bread, firstfruits. You have understood atonement, you have followed through on these things. You learned them all in prep school, therefore salvation is in your right lobe and in your mouth. It is much nearer to you than heaven or across the sea. Moses, in other words, was commanding the new generation to believe in Christ.

“it is not hidden from thee, neither is it far off” – the third person singular pronoun hiwa refers to salvation through faith in Christ, at which time we receive God’s righteousness. It refers here to Codex 2. It is the subject of both phrases. Next is the niphthal participle from pala, which means to hide, plus the negative lo. In the niphthal it means to be difficult; with the negative it means not to be difficult. So we translate: “it is not difficult.” That is, it is not unattainable. This explains verse 12 in terms that salvation is not in heaven and therefore unattainable; salvation is on earth, therefore attainable.

Next we have an adjective, rechochah, which means far off. But here it is used as a predicate adjective and should be translated, nor is it too far away. It means you don’t have to travel some great distance to find it. Rechochah explains verse 13.

Translation: “This commandment [to be saved through faith in Christ] which I command you today, is not too difficult for you [not unattainable for you], nor is it too far away [not unavailable].”

Lesson #661

661 04/06/1979 Deut. 30:11–12 Cooper course; self-righteousness vs. +R; arrogance; salvation not unattainable nor unavailable

Principle

1. Salvation is not unattainable so that you have to depend on your own righteousness for it.

2. Salvation is not too far away so that you have to cross the ocean. Or as Paul changes it, go to the bottom of the ocean to receive it.
3. Actually, you do nothing for salvation. You cannot use your own self or works righteousness by keeping the law.
4. Salvation demands the imputation of divine righteousness for justification.
5. Such imputation can only occur through faith in Jesus Christ.
6. If salvation were unattainable then there would be some excuse for substituting human righteousness by keeping the law for divine righteousness.
7. But salvation is attainable, not unattainable. Salvation is available, not unavailable.
8. If salvation were in heaven and not revealed, then it would be unattainable.
9. If salvation were across the ocean, or as Paul puts it, at the bottom of the sea, then it would be unattainable.
10. But salvation is near—in the right lobe, through the perception of the gospel, and in the mouth, the function of non-meritorious volition called faith in Christ.
11. How close is your right lobe? It is in your soul. Or, in your mouth? It is a part of your human anatomy. In other words, it couldn't be much closer.
12. Therefore there is no excuse for the Jew substituting his own righteousness by keeping the law, substituting it for the righteousness of God through faith in Christ. The Jew is without excuse.
13. But Jewish arrogance rejects the gospel and substitutes his own righteousness from the law. Out of this comes a principle: You cannot ignore Jesus Christ and get away with it.

Deuteronomy 30:12 It is not in heaven, that you should say, 'Who will ascend to heaven for us and bring it to us, that we may hear it and do it?'

Verse 12 – salvation is not unattainable; verse 13 – salvation is not unavailable. Those are the key words.

Verse 12 – “It,” 3rd person pronoun hiw, the subject, and again the subject is salvation. With it is a prepositional phrase, be shemajim—“in heaven.” The trouble is the Jews do not understand Deuteronomy 30:11-14. Paul knew that it was the key to the ministry of Moses to every generation of Jews, and so he picks up on it and explains it again in terms of the Church Age ... and they still don't get it.

Then we have a prefix le and the noun amar. The prefix to the qal infinitive is so that, and then you say it is not in heaven. They are confused and so he gives them the interrogative of confusion, mi—"who." The next word is the qal imperfect from the verb alah, meaning to go up or to ascend.

In other words, 'Go up to heaven and get it for us.' And why? Qal imperfect of the verb laqach, "that he might bring it [salvation] to us."

This verse emphasizes salvation as unattainable, something in heaven that we cannot get.

"that we may hear it and do it" – the hiphil imperfect from the verb shama. The hiphil stem is causative active voice. In other words, if someone like Moses in our generation will go up into heaven and get this straight scoop then that will cause us to hear. A smart Alec comment. This is what happens when you get a whole race of people with a very high IQ. Next we have the qal imperfect of asah, we'll keep on doing it, whatever it is. Arrogance and self-righteousness.

Corrected translation: "It is not in heaven, so that you say, Who shall go up to heaven for us, that he might bring it to us and cause us to hear it, so that we might do it."

Principle

1. Salvation is not in heaven, therefore unattainable. It is on earth, therefore attainable.
2. Paul will expand on this verse in Romans 10:6 by indicating that Christ is salvation, and such a concept brings Christ back to earth, which is unnecessary since He already came once and He died for our sins. Paul is going to update Moses.
3. But this verse emphasizes the fact that salvation is attainable.

Lesson #662

662 04/09/1979 Deut. 30:13–14; Amos 9:2 Why Paul changes from SEA to SHEOL; Jesus Christ after physical death; Stone Age viewpoint

Deuteronomy 30:13 Neither is it beyond the sea, that you should say, 'Who will go over the sea for us and bring it to us, that we may hear it and do it?'

Verse 13 – Literally, "Neither is it [salvation] over or beyond the sea, so that you must say." This verse will emphasize the fact that salvation is not unavailable. There are two key words: unattainable and unavailable. Unattainable related to heaven; unavailable related to across the sea.

Next is the interrogative pronoun "Who" – mi, in the Hebrew; "will pass over with us to the other side of the sea," or "Who will cross the sea for us."

“that he might bring it” – the qal imperfect from the verb laqach. The verb means to seize it [salvation] and bring it to us.” This verse emphasizes geographical isolation.

“that we may hear it and do it” – the hiphil imperfect from the verb shama. This takes us back to Moses. Moses came down from the mountain and they heard the law, and they were commanded to do the law—not for salvation, except Codex #2 which refers to faith in Christ. The third person plural suffix refers to the Jews. The hiphil stem of shama means just as Moses caused them to hear it, so they will be caused to hear it. Remember that the passage refers to the entire Mosaic law, Codex #1, #2, and #3. However, Paul in quoting this passage is dealing with salvation only in Codex #2. Finally, we have the qal imperfect of asah indicating that they were going to do the law for salvation—keep the ten commandments, and so on.

Translation: Neither is it [salvation] over the sea [or beyond the sea], so that you must say, Who will cross the sea for us in order that he might bring it [salvation] to us, and cause us to hear it, that we might do it?”

Across the sea indicates that salvation is not available, and such is not the case. However, salvation is not across the sea but it is as close to them as their mouth and their heart. So the conclusion of verse 14: Salvation is attainable, not in heaven; salvation is available, not across the sea, not in geographical isolation.

Deuteronomy 30:14 But the word is very near you. It is in your mouth and in your heart, so that you can do it.

Verse 14 – we have the adversative use of the conjunction ki setting up a contrast. Instead of finding it in heaven and therefore not attainable, or across the sea, which means not available. It is on the earth; it is as close to them as their soul [heart] and their body [mouth]. Therefore it is available; geographical isolation has nothing to do with it. If you have volition it is available. “But the word [salvation] is very near you” is the corrected translation. By the word word–dabar—here is meant salvation. Sometimes this means doctrine.

“in your mouth, and in your heart” – in your mouth has to do with the fact that this is the means of expressing thought. Expressing thought is to God Himself; in your heart is the area where faith exists.

“that we may do it” – asah, simply means doing it hear means to believe in Christ.

Lesson #663

663 04/10/1979 Romans 10:6b Right lobe source of faith or arrogant rationalization; rejecting the true function of Codex 2 + First Advent of Jesus Christ

Romans 10:6 But the righteousness of faith speaks thus: “You should not say in your heart, ‘Who will ascend into heaven?’ (that is, to bring down Christ)...

Translation: “But the word [salvation] is very near to you, in your mouth, and in your heart [right lobe], that you may do it.”

Principle

1. Salvation through faith in the Lord Jesus Christ is attainable and available. Therefore, not in heaven and not across the sea.
2. In the structure of this passage (Deut. 30:11-14) we first of all have a premise in verse 11.
3. After the premise (verse 12) salvation is not hidden from the Jews, i.e. not in heaven where it would be unattainable.
4. In verse 13, salvation is not too far away, i.e. over the sea where it would be unavailable.
5. But salvation is as close to the Jew as his mouth—a part of his body—and his heart, i.e. a part of his soul.
6. In the context of Deuteronomy 30:11-14 Paul quotes directly from Deuteronomy 30:12 in Romans 10:6. But he adds the implication of the first advent from the historical viewpoint. Notice that Moses says nothing about the first advent, but Paul will add, “that is to bring Christ down from heaven.”
7. Next, Paul will quote Deuteronomy 30:13 in Romans 10:7. He will quote it in principle but will not use the same illustration. He will change the illustration from Moses—across the sea; he will say, at the bottom of the sea.
8. Finally, Paul quotes Deuteronomy 30:14 in Romans 10:8.
9. The result is Old Testament documentation regarding not only faith in Christ for salvation but faith in Christ resulting in the imputation of divine righteousness.
10. Once the person understands the imputation of divine righteousness it eliminates any form of self or works righteousness used for divine approbation. What can we learn from this? Never to make the fatal mistake of trying to present your own works for any system of blessing from God. We never seek divine approbation by self-righteousness or works righteousness.
11. God accepts only His own righteousness. He never accepts self-righteousness or works righteousness from mankind.
12. The Jews in arrogance had adopted their own self or works righteousness—they tried to keep the law.

13. Such arrogance is blasphemous and disastrous. The Jews by accepting their own righteousness from keeping the law had rejected the righteousness of God through faith in Jesus Christ.

14. Therefore they had blotted out the first advent.

Paul quotes verse 12 in Romans 10:6, starting with the phrase, “But the righteousness which is by means of faith communicates in this manner.” Paul makes a direct quotation using heaven as the same illustration as Moses, but in quoting verse 13 in Romans 10:7 Paul will change the illustration from over the sea to Sheol. In doing so Paul retains the Mosaic principle of salvation being available but he changes the illustration of Moses from across the sea to a more pertinent illustration—Sheol, which is regarded as either the bottom of the sea or the actual Sheol, hell. Why does Paul change it? Because Amos made some reference to this in Amos 9:2—“Though they dig into Sheol, from there shall my hand take them; and though they ascend into heaven, from there I will bring them down.” So by going to Amos to change up the illustration he replaces the sea of Moses to the Sheol of Amos. The concept of the Deuteronomy passage is maintained, but Paul can amplify the passage in Deuteronomy from the viewpoint of the first advent of Christ. The Lord Jesus Christ went into Sheol [His body went into Sheol] after His physical death. Sheol, as used by Paul refers to Hades. Heaven and Hades are in contrast in Paul’s use of the Mosaic passage. So by going to Amos to get better illustrative material related to the first advent Paul maintains the integrity of what Moses says but changes the illustration slightly. In other words, the Sheol of Amos 9:2 is combined with the heaven of Deuteronomy 30:12 so that the emphasis in Deuteronomy is not changed but amplified by Romans. The heaven of Moses is combined with the Sheol of Amos so that the concept hangs together—the unattainable in heaven; the unavailable in Sheol, rather than across the sea.

The question arises: Why does Paul change from the Mosaic analogy—across the sea—to the Amos analogy—in Sheol? We have already established the fact that he maintains the Mosaic principle. He keeps heaven intact so that he quotes exactly Deuteronomy 30:12, but he changes across the sea to Sheol. He still maintains the principle of unattainable and unavailable but why does he change the analogy? Answer: Because the contemporary Jews, the Jews of Paul’s day, had blotted out of their minds the first advent of Christ and its total salvation message, i.e. the fulfilment of everything in Codex #2 of the Mosaic law.

Why did Paul make a change from the Mosaic analogy of the sea to the Amos analogy of Sheol?

1. To make direct reference to the first advent of the Lord Jesus Christ. The whole problem today with Israel is that they ignore the first advent and its Codex #2 implications.

2. The first advent terminated with the ascension of the Lord Jesus Christ.

3. Paul will add to Moses’ in heaven analogy by showing its implication. It brings Christ down from heaven.

4. Every time a Jew seeks to be saved by keeping the law he is ignoring the first advent, the cross, and in effect tries to say Messiah has not yet come. Therefore he brings Christ down from heaven, and to bring Christ down from heaven is to say that the work of Christ was not efficacious. To say that the work of Christ is not efficacious is blasphemous and therefore the unbelieving Jews remain in a perpetual state of blasphemy.

5. But Paul must change the sea analogy of Moses to the Sheol analogy of Amos.

6. Why? After the death of our Lord Jesus Christ the three parts of His humanity went in three separate directions. The body of our Lord went into the grave—Luke 23:53. The spirit of our Lord went into the presence of God the Father—Luke 23:46. The soul of our Lord went to Sheol or Hades, into the compartment called Paradise—Psalm 16:10; Luke 23:43; Acts 2:27; Ephesians 4:9.

7. In the resurrection the soul and spirit of our Lord Jesus Christ rejoined the body in the grave, therefore the soul to rejoin the body had to come up from Sheol.

8. In Paul's time the first advent of Christ with its death, burial and resurrection, was history. Christ was now seated at the right hand of the Father in hypostatic union. That means after resurrection and ascension.

9. Moses talked about salvation not being in heaven, and Paul could quote that and refer to the fact that Jesus Christ does not have to come back to the earth to save anyone. His work on the cross is efficacious.

10. Moses talked about salvation not being over the sea, but Paul cannot use that analogy in relationship to the first advent because Christ in resurrection did not come out of the sea. In resurrection Christ came out of Sheol. The Jews, therefore, had blotted out the first advent but Paul is saying, "You cannot ignore Christ and get away with it."

11. Therefore Paul had to switch to Amos and Sheol since the soul of Christ came from Sheol in resurrection.

12. The failure of the Jews to be saved by faith in Christ means that they have accepted substitutes. They keep then law for salvation. The failure of the Jews has been to ignore the first advent of Christ and its implications—the fulfilment of Codex #2 of the Mosaic law.

13. Paul not only quotes Moses in Deuteronomy but adds the implications of the 1st advent, being even stronger than Moses on how close and how salvation is near to every Jew.

14. Salvation is as close as the Jewish mouth and mind—body and soul—but even more so since the first advent. Because the first advent is historical Paul is stronger than Moses, and Moses was as strong as you could be. Reason: the first advent is now historical.

15. Moses and Paul say the same thing: salvation is not in heaven, therefore it is attainable. Salvation is not over the sea or in Sheol, therefore it is available.

16. Salvation is even more attainable and available since the first advent. Paul therefore says the Jews, since the first advent is history, have even less excuse than they had between Moses and Christ—and they had no excuse then. The Mosaic law, Codex #2, was absolutely lucid with regard to salvation; but now even more so.

17. Salvation is as close to the Jew as his mouth and his mind.

18. But salvation is as far away as heaven or Sheol to the person who is negative in volition and therefore in arrogance. Negative volition creates arrogance; arrogance creates a system of salvation by works.

19. The Jews have blotted out the first advent of Christ and civilization, therefore, cannot save them. Being civilized will not save a person any more than being pristine.

20. Therefore their attempt to be saved by keeping the law is like trying to bring Christ down from heaven or to bring Him up from Sheol—we must have a repeat of the resurrection. But Christ has already come down from heaven in the first advent and up from Sheol in resurrection. By ignoring the first advent the Jews offer the God of all Israel the greatest of all insults.

Why does Paul change from the sea analogy of Moses to the Sheol analogy of Amos?

1. In the time of Moses the 1st advent and the incarnation of Christ was prophetic, i.e. eschatological.

2. In the time of Paul the 1st advent and the incarnation was historical.

3. In the time of Moses Jewish blindness to the first advent was neither a problem nor a failure, it was still prophetic.

4. In the time of Paul and until now Jewish rejection and blotting out of the first advent is their greatest failure and their greatest problem, though they are not aware of it in many cases.

5. Just as the Jews have distorted the Mosaic law into a system of salvation by works, so the Jews have blotted out the first advent which is the basis of salvation by faith.

6. By ignoring the 1st advent of Christ the Jews have substituted their own works-righteousness by keeping the law for God's imputed righteousness through faith in Christ.

7. All of this anticipates Romans 10:6-8.

Romans 6b – “Say not in thine heart.”

Explanation

1. Israel’s blind rejection of the first advent is tantamount to rejection of the righteousness of God and replacing it with their own self-righteousness—by keeping the law.
2. This blasphemy is now attacked by the apostle Paul who is the Hebrew of the Hebrews and the greatest Jew of them all.
3. The blind arrogance of ignoring the first advent is the Pauline application of the Mosaic statement in Deuteronomy 30:12-14.

“Say not” is the aorist active subjunctive of the verb légō (λέγω) [pronounced LEH-goh] plus the negative mē (μή) [pronounced may]. The verb légō (λέγω) [pronounced LEH-goh] means to speak and to say, but that means to form words. The words that are formed are thought, so instead of giving it the usual translation, Say not, we will give it exactly what it means—think not. Sometimes légō (λέγω) [pronounced LEH-goh] is an idiom, not meaning to speak but to think. This is a constative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, but forbids it with the negative mē (μή) [pronounced may]. Active voice: the Jew is forbidden to produce the action of the verb. The subjunctive mood plus the negative mē (μή) [pronounced may] is called the subjunctive of prohibition.

“in thine heart” – en (ἐν) [pronounced en] plus the locative of kardia [right lobe], with the possessive genitive singular from the personal pronoun su, meaning your heart. You have to do your own thinking. “Do not think in your right lobe.”

“Who” is the interrogative pronoun tís (τίς) [pronounced tihç], which asks the question. The verb is the future middle indicative of a)nabainw, which means to ascend. The future tense is called a deliberative future, it simply states a question of uncertainty—which one will do it. When it is uncertain of which one will do it then it is stated in the future tense because it hasn’t happened yet, we don’t really know who is going to do it. The middle voice is the indirect middle, emphasizing the agent as producing the action of the verb rather than participating in the results.

Then the prepositional phrase, eis (εἰς) [pronounced ICE] plus the accusative of ouranos (οὐράνιος) [pronounced oo-RAHN-ee-os—into heaven. In the original quotation of Deuteronomy 30:12 Moses is saying that salvation is not unattainable (in heaven).

Principle

1. Salvation is not in heaven; salvation is where people live on earth. Salvation is s close to us as the right lobe and the mouth.

2. Imputed righteousness through faith in Christ does not say, Who shall go up to heaven for us?
3. God's perfect righteousness which is in heaven is imputed to any person who will believe in Christ. You believe in Christ in your right lobe.
4. Only the person who attempts to be saved by keeping the law says, Who shall go up to heaven?
5. Therefore the issue is human self-righteousness versus divine righteousness, or human arrogance versus the plan of God.
6. The heart or the right lobe which is the source of faith is also the source of rationalization. Who will go up to heaven? is a rationalization. Who will go across the sea? is a rationalization. Rationalization comes from arrogance. It says, 'My thoughts are better than divine revelation.' Therefore arrogance rejects faith and rationalizes. Arrogance and grace are mutually exclusive.
7. This is the rationalization of unattainability. The rationalization that salvation is in heaven implies unattainability. The truth of the matter is that salvation is in the heart, which implies attainability. Where is faith? In your right lobe. Where is the rationalization? In the right lobe. The reason people are not saved is because in their arrogance they choose rationalization instead of faith.

Principle

1. Such a rationalization—Who shall ascend into heaven?—rejects Romans 10:4, "For Christ is the termination of the law ... to each one because he believes."
2. Just as the unbelieving Jew of the Old Testament rejected the prophetic message of Codex #2 of the law, so the unbelieving Jew of today [Church Age] rejects and blots out the first advent of Christ which was the fulfillment of Codex #2. Christ is the termination of the law; Christ fulfilled Codex #2.
3. In both dispensations the unbelieving Jew rejects the imputed righteousness of God which is available through faith in Christ, and instead accepts his own righteousness through keeping the law.
4. The issue, then, is self or works-righteousness versus the imputed righteousness of God [faith-righteousness].
5. The conflict is found in the right lobe of the soul. Negative volition is represented by rationalization and positive volition is represented by faith.
6. Paul uses the warning of Moses, first given to the Jews in Deut. 30:11-14.

7. Moses saw the real problem regarding the law: Jewish arrogance and negative volition would be quick to distort Codex #1 and #3 into a system of works righteousness which God would never accept. (Christians do the same thing. Sabbath-keeping = part of Codex #1)

8. Furthermore, just as the negative Jew blots out of his mind the true function of Codex #2 in the time of Moses, so the negative Jew would blot out the first advent of Christ in the time of Paul.

9. The unbelieving Jew from Moses to Christ would blot out Codex #2—soteriology—by emphasizing the ritual of the animal sacrifices to the exclusion of reality. This is ritual without reality. Arrogance always emphasizes the ritual; grace always emphasizes the reality. Ritual without reality is meaningless.

The reality anticipated the 1st advent of Christ, which was then and is now the #1 Jewish stumbling block.

11. In the time of Moses the unbelieving Jew rejected the first advent of Christ and this is why Isaiah said, “Who has believed our report, and to whom has the arm of the Lord been revealed” – the arm of the Lord being Jesus Christ, Isaiah 53:1.

12. Unbelieving Jews not only wanted ritual without reality but they wanted the Millennium without salvation; they wanted the crown without the cross.

13. Ritual without reality was animal sacrifice practiced without faith in Christ. To offer animal sacrifices without believing in what they represented was ritual without reality.

14. The Millennium without salvation was blotting out the first advent of Christ, and therefore the cross. The Jews wanted the Second Advent and the fulfilment of the unconditional covenants apart from faith in Christ or apart from the cross.

15. The crown without the cross is analogous to blotting out the first advent in the right lobe of the Jewish unbeliever.

16. Therefore the wild rationalization noted by Moses in Deuteronomy 30:12 is now amplified by Paul in Romans 10:6.

17. The first advent was prophetic to Moses but the historical fulfilment was a reality to Paul. Therefore Paul now adds something that Moses did not give.

The KJV puts the additional phrase in a parenthesis, perhaps to show that this was not part of the quotation from Deuteronomy 12: “that is, to bring Christ down from above [heaven].” Paul now looks back to the cross and gives the implication. The Jew who is an unbeliever rejects the first advent and the cross. Moses accepted the cross prophetically; Paul accepted the historical cross, but the Jewish unbelievers are negative toward the entire first advent.

“that is” is a nominative neuter singular from the demonstrative pronoun houtos (οὗτος) [pronounced HOO-tos]. The demonstrative emphasizes a conclusion here. With it is the present active indicative of the verb eimi (εἶμι) [pronounced eye-ME], and it is literally and correctly translated, “that is.” However this is an idiom, something the literal translation does not convey. The idiom means “this means” or “this implies.” This is a near rather than a distant demonstrative, therefore “this” is used rather than “that.”

Next comes the aorist active infinitive of katagw, which means to bring down, to lead down. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. In other words, the Jew of today still is looking for the coming of Messiah even though Messiah came 2000 years ago. He is looking for something that has already become historical. Therefore in his soul he has blotted out the reality of the fulfilment of all of the principles found in Codex #2. The active voice: the rationalizing Jewish unbeliever produces the action of the verb. Principle: The Jew is a photograph of the individual soul in the time in which we live. For just as the Jew has blotted out the cross, the first advent, so the unbeliever in his arrogance rejects the cross and in his arrogance he sets up a system of human works. Arrogance + works = pseudo-salvation. In other words, it is rejecting the perfect righteousness of God and accepting one’s own righteousness as a substitute. The infinitive is conceived result which is assumed as a consequence of such rationalization or follows the nature of the case. Then we have the accusative singular direct object from Christos (χριστός) [pronounced krees-TOHSS], referring to Christ: “this implies to bring Christ down from heaven.”

1. To bring Christ down from heaven is to ignore, reject, and blot out the historical first advent of Christ with all of its implications regarding eternal salvation.
2. Faith must have an object in salvation—the Lord Jesus Christ. “Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved” is accomplished in the soul.
3. The problem with the Jews in Paul’s time and right up to this moment is their rejection, ignoring, and blotting out of the first advent of Christ.
4. This is tantamount, then, to rejection of Christ as saviour.
5. The rationalization first mentioned by Moses and now quoted by Paul rejects Christ as saviour by blotting out of the mind the first advent—blotting it out as a prophecy, as in Isaiah 53, or, Codex #2, blotting it out historically in the days of Paul and thereafter.
6. Christ is both the beginning of the law as the God of Israel and the end of the law as the saviour of Israel.
7. The same Christ who was judged on the cross for our sins is the God on Mount Sinai who gave the law to Moses.

664 04/11/1979 Romans 10:6c Ritual without reality and the Millennium without salvation; destructiveness of socialism; heaven rejects self-righteousness

Romans 10:6 But the righteousness of faith speaks thus: "You should not say in your heart, 'Who will ascend into heaven?' (that is, to bring down Christ)..."

Translation: "But the righteousness which is by means of faith communicates in this manner, Do not think in your right lobe, Who shall ascend into heaven. The implication is to bring Christ down from heaven."

Principle

1. This is the first illustration of Paul's basic premise in verse 3.
2. Obedience to the righteousness of God is personal faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, and it results in the imputation of God's righteousness.
3. Righteousness by means of faith in Christ does not fall into the trap of rationalization.
4. Paul quotes the Mosaic warning against such rationalization and adds the blasphemous implication. To bring Christ down from heaven is to say that the cross is not efficacious; it is to blot out the first advent and all of its concepts.
5. Jewish arrogance in setting up self or works righteousness through keeping the law has previously rejected divine righteousness imputed by faith in Christ.
6. But the Jews have not simply rejected Christ as saviour; they do not even acknowledge His existence, or the first advent, or the fulfilment of Codex #2 of the Mosaic law at the cross.
7. Therefore the Jewish problem in the time of Moses was to ignore the first advent of Christ as a prophetic or eschatological doctrine. They ignored it by accepting the ritual which taught it but they rejected the reality of it. The animal sacrifices were ritual which taught it. The modus operandi of the Levitical priest was a ritual which taught it. The observation of the day of Atonement or the day of the Passover was a ritual which taught it. They went through the ritual but they rejected the reality.
8. The Jewish problem in the time of Paul, and still is, is to ignore the first advent of Christ through blotting out that point of history and substituting their own righteousness.
9. There are other implications as well. Historical disaster has come to the Jews because of a principle: You cannot ignore Jesus Christ and get away with it.

Principle

1. This verse implies also that self-righteousness has the right to ascend into heaven. This is what the rich young ruler said to Jesus. He implied that he was going to heaven because he kept the law.
2. The Jew in blind arrogance and rejection of Christ suggests that righteousness through keeping the law is acceptable in heaven.
3. The only righteousness permitted in heaven is God's righteousness.
4. All believers in Christ enter heaven because they possess the righteousness of God.
5. For the Jew to be saved by keeping the law is to blasphemously conclude that Christ must return to the earth because His work was not sufficient, or because He wasn't even Messiah.
6. This ignores our Lord's words—John 19:30. Tetelestai, the perfect tense of the verb teleō (τελέω) [pronounced tel-EH-oh]. It means it has been finished in the past with the result that it stands forever. Salvation was completed while Jesus Christ was still alive on the cross and breathing—before His physical death.
7. Christ does not have to return to the earth to provide salvation. He accomplished it once and for all on the cross. He will return to the earth to regather Israel and to terminate the times of the Gentiles.
8. Salvation by works implies inadequacy of the blood atonement while salvation by faith in Christ concludes the efficacy of the blood of atonement—Ephesians 2:8,9.
9. The interpretation, then, of this verse emphasizes the fact that salvation is attainable, not unattainable.
10. However, if you blot out the first advent, the incarnation, the hypostatic union, redemption, reconciliation, propitiation of the cross, then there is no salvation.

The Jew in the time of Moses, the time of Paul, and even today, circumvents the first advent with works righteousness from keeping the law.

1977 Romans

Lesson #665

665 04/12/1979 Romans 10:7 Jews with #1 spiritual heritage blaspheme God by the rejection of Jesus Christ and reap persecution; salvation as near as the right lobe and mouth

Romans 10:7 ...or, 'Who will descend into the abyss?' (that is, to bring up Christ out from the dead)."

Verse 7 begins with the disjunctive particle h(, It is used as an interrogative particle here to introduce a question which is parallel to the preceding one and is correctly translated “Or.” Then comes the interrogative pronoun tís (τίς) [pronounced tihç], translated “who.” The verb katabainw means to go down or to descend. The deliberative future is for a question of uncertainty. The middle voice is the indirect middle emphasizing the agent as producing the action. The indicative mood is the interrogative indicative. “Or who shall descend.”

Next is the prepositional phrase eis (εἰς) [pronounced ICE] plus a)bussoj, which is a part of Sheol or Hades and denotes the realm of the dead. While it is related to demons and fallen angels in Revelation it is used here for descent into the underworld in contrast to the previous verse where we have ascension into heaven. In Amos 9:2 this abyss is called Sheol in contrast to across the sea by Moses. Note that Paul does not quote exactly from Deuteronomy 30:13 but gives the principle of the passage, of unavailability. Paul must also change the words of Moses, across the sea, into something which is more in keeping with the conclusions which he draws from the first advent. Paul must change the illustration because now the first advent is historical. In the days of Moses it was prophetic.

The nominative singular neuter of the demonstrative pronoun houtos (οὗτος) [pronounced HOO-tos] plus the present active indicative of eimi (εἰμί) [pronounced eye-ME] is literally translated, “that is” or “this is,” but it means “this implies,” or even better, “this is the implication.” The aorist active infinitive of a)nagw means to bring up. The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. Active voice: the rationalizing unbelieving Jew produces the action of the verb. The infinitive is the conceived result which is assumed as a consequence of such a rationalization. It follows the nature of the case. If the Messiah has not come, as the unbelieving Jew alleges, then obviously this would bring Christ up again from the dead.

Translation: “Or, Who shall descend into the abyss [Sheol or Hades]? This is the implication, to bring Christ up from the dead.”

Principle

1. To reject the resurrection of Christ is to reject, ignore, or blot out the historicity of the first advent with its doctrinal implications regarding salvation through faith in Christ.
2. Faith must have an object in salvation, and that object is the Lord Jesus Christ who is, of course, the God of Israel who has come to the earth as the God-Man and has provided eternal salvation on the cross.
3. The problem with the Jews is the failure to accept the first advent of Christ.
4. They have blotted out of their minds the first advent, which is tantamount to rejecting Christ as saviour.

5. The rationalization of unavailability first mentioned by Moses [Deut. 30:13] and now cited by Paul completely ignores the first advent, the incarnation, the salvation ministry of the cross, and the resurrection from the dead.

Principle

1. The rationalization of the previous verse [6] is the unattainability of salvation, while the rationalization of this verse [7] is the unavailability of salvation. Both concepts are blasphemous.

2. These rationalizations result in Jewish distortion of the law into a system of salvation by works.

3. The conclusion is obvious. The Jews are depending on works or self-righteousness for salvation instead of the imputed righteousness of God provided at salvation.

4. Rationalization leads to distortion. Codex #2 of the law teaches clearly the first advent of Christ but the Jews rejected the first advent, therefore they would cling to Codex #1 and #3 as a system of works righteousness.

5. Works righteousness is no substitute for divine righteousness.

6. Works righteousness is the function of the energy of the flesh, while divine righteousness is imputed only to the one who believes in Christ.

7. To believe in Christ one must accept the veracity and historicity of the first advent.

8. The Jews have blotted out the first advent with disastrous results throughout their history.

9. The incarnation and resurrection are facts of history. Between these two points of time Christ provided eternal salvation on the cross. Therefore the big blot-out is the quintessence of blasphemy. The Jews who had the greatest spiritual heritage have also entered into the greatest rationalization and have distorted their very own spiritual heritage – from salvation by grace through faith they have distorted into a system of salvation by works.

Principle

1. It is blasphemous to imply that Christ must come back to the earth to provide salvation. The Jews are always looking for the coming of Messiah.

2. It is blasphemous to imply that Christ must die and be raised again from the dead.

3. These blasphemies deny the efficacy of the blood atonement, the work of Christ on the cross in bearing our sins and being judged for them.

4. The unbelieving Jew denies the efficacy of the redemption of the cross by blotting out the first advent—arrogance plus rationalism in his right lobe.
5. The Jews in the time of Moses ignored the eschatological doctrine of the first advent. They ignored it again in the time of Isaiah—Is. 53:1. When Christ actually came they ignored Him during His earthly ministry.
6. They ignored it in the time of Paul; they have continued to ignore it right up to the present moment.
7. The perpetuation of this Jewish unbelief is the most blasphemous function in history because the Jews have such a marvellous spiritual heritage. They had the scriptures which so clearly portrayed the 1st advent with its eschatological implications.
8. Paul adds to the Mosaic sermon by indicating the implications historically—as a past event.
9. The Jews have rejected everything from the incarnation to the resurrection of the Lord Jesus Christ, the God of Israel and the only saviour.
10. Salvation is not unattainable, or unavailable in Sheol/Hades or the abyss, but salvation is attainable and available by faith in Christ. Only negative volition makes unattainable or unavailable. The theological implications of salvation, resurrection, ascension and session at the right hand of God the Father, the strategic victory of the angelic conflict, are all merely a part of Jewish heritage which every unbelieving Jew rejects.
11. Christ is the beginning of the law on Mount Sinai and the end of the law at Calvary's cross. The God on Mount Sinai who gave the law to Moses is the same God who was hanging on the cross in the form of man, bearing our sins, taking our place, becoming our substitute; and therefore the only saviour.

1977 Romans

Lesson #666

666 04/13/1979 Romans 10:8 Jews substitute keeping the distorted Mosaic Law for faith in Jesus Christ; review of the doctrines of faith and salvation in the Old Testament

Romans 10:8 But what does it say? "The word is near you, in your mouth, and in your heart." That is, the word of faith which we proclaim,...

Verse 8 – Deuteronomy 30:14 is quoted. "But" is the adversative conjunction allá (ἀλλά) [pronounced ahI-LAH] which sets up the contrast between unattainability and unavailability and availability and unavailability; the nominative neuter singular interrogative pronoun tís (τίς) [pronounced tihç] plus the present active indicative from légô (λέγω) [pronounced LEH- goh]—“But what does it say.” The present tense is a historical present viewing the past event, the message of Moses in Deuteronomy 30, with the vividness of a present occurrence. Active voice: it, or faith-righteousness, the imputed righteousness of God at salvation, produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative for the unqualified and dogmatic statement of doctrine. The quotation from Deut. 30:14 follows: “But the word [imputed righteousness through faith in Christ] is very near you, in your mouth and in your right lobe, that you may do it [believe in Christ].”

Now for the Greek equivalent. What does faith-righteousness say? It says:

The nominative singular from r(hma is the subject, it connotes that which is said. It means message, the message of salvation—imputed righteousness from God through faith in Christ.

Next is the adverb of space, e)gguj, which means near in the sense of close to you; plus the enclitic dative singular from the pronoun su which means you as an individual. This is the same as the objective genitive and therefore is translated near you. There is no verb. Then the present active indicative of eimi (εἰμί) [pronounced eye-ME].

“in thy mouth” – the prepositional phrase, en (ἐν) [pronounced en] plus the locative of stoma; also the personal pronoun su which is a possessive genitive. This is translated, “in your mouth.” If the mouth is closer then salvation is closer than trying to keep the law.

1. The mouth is the expression of faith since words are generally enunciated by the mouth.
2. While the mouth is the expression of faith it is not the origin of faith. The origin of faith is the right lobe or the heart.
3. The mouth is the means of expressing words and thoughts but the heart or right lobe is the origin of those words and thoughts.
4. When the individual believes in Christ he expresses in words and sentences to God his faith.
5. Therefore the mouth is the expression of faith—and much closer to the Jew than the Torah.

“and” – the connective use of kai; the second prepositional phrase, en (ἐν) [pronounced en] plus the locative of kardia, the word for heart and always used for the right lobe.

Principle

1. The heart or the right lobe is the source of faith; the mouth is the expression of faith.
2. In both cases the object of faith is the Lord Jesus Christ, the only saviour.

3. With the heart mankind believes in Christ; with the mouth he confesses to God the Father his faith in Christ—in words and sentences faith is expressed.
4. Then God the Father imputes His own righteousness to that person.
5. Salvation is as close as faith and the expression of faith to God the Father. Therefore, salvation is not unattainable.
6. Salvation is not unavailable, therefore neither across the sea nor in the abyss.
7. Salvation is as near as your mouth and your mind, for salvation is not by keeping the law but by believing in the Lord Jesus Christ.
8. Add to the doctrine the fact that the origin of faith is in the mind or the right lobe of the soul, plus the fact that the expression of that faith is in the mouth—confession to God, not to the general public.

Principle

1. Both Moses and Paul agreed that salvation is by faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, therefore always available before or after the first advent of Christ.
2. However, the Jew who has the greatest spiritual heritage in history failed in Old Testament times, with the exception of a remnant in every generation. His failure from Moses to Paul, and from Paul to the present day, is called by us the big blot-out, which is the blotting out of the mind the first advent of Christ.
3. In the time of Moses the first advent was prophetic; in the time of Paul the first advent was historical.
4. In the time of Moses the first advent was rejected and blotted out of the Jewish mind through ritual without reality.
5. The unbelieving Jew, then, observed the animal sacrifices and the shedding of sacrificial blood, but rejected the reality of the work of Christ on the cross—redemption.
6. The unbelieving Jew who rejected the first advent of Christ and its implications rationalized and distorted salvation by grace through faith as something unattainable, i.e. in heaven, or something unavailable, i.e. across the sea.
7. In every generation of Israel's history there have been and will continue to be unbelieving Jews. These unbelieving Jews have rejected the blood atonement of Christ as the God of Israel. They will blot out of their minds and their hearts the incarnation, the hypostatic union, the cross, the resurrection, the ascension and the session of the Lord Jesus at the right hand of the Father. They have in effect rejected the omega glory of the God of Israel.

8. When the Jewish unbeliever rejects Christ as his saviour he rejects the entire principle of faith-righteousness and therefore accepts in arrogance his own self-righteousness or works righteousness by keeping the law.

9. Not only does it apply to the Jews with their magnificent spiritual heritage but it applies to us as well. You cannot ignore Christ and get away with it.

“that is” – the nominative neuter singular from the demonstrative pronoun houtos (οὗτος) [pronounced HOO-tos], followed by the present active indicative of eimi (εἰμί) [pronounced eye-ME]. It is correctly translated “that is” but it is the idiom of implication, and what it really means is “this implies.”

“the word” – the nominative singular subject r(hma, which means the message: that is the message, plus the descriptive genitive singular from the noun pistis (πίστις) [pronounced PIHS-tihs]. Pistis (πίστις) [pronounced PIHS-tihs] means faith, or what is believed, i.e. doctrine. Here it means faith, salvation by faith in Christ rather than by keeping the Mosaic law. Translation: “that is the message of faith.”

Next is the nominative neuter singular from the relative pronoun hos (ὅς) [pronounced hohç], which; and finally the present active indicative from the verb kêrussô (κηρύσσω) [pronounced kay-ROOS-so]. It is taken from the noun kêrux (κῆρυξ) [pronounced KAY-roox] which was a herald. It doesn't mean to preach so much as the proclamation of a herald and it connotes public speaking to the masses, therefore it is translated, “that is the message of faith we proclaim.” The static present represents a condition which perpetually exists. The message is proclaimed in every generation. Active voice: Paul and all the true communicators of the gospel produce the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal idea from the viewpoint of its reality.

Translation: “But what does it [faith-righteousness in contrast to works-righteousness] say? The message [salvation through faith in Christ] is near you [closer than the law], in your mouth and in your right lobe: that is, the message of faith, which we proclaim.”

Principle

1. The mind of heart, instead of receiving the message of faith, in arrogance receives instead the false doctrine of works-righteousness—salvation through keeping the law.
2. Arrogance plus works-righteousness completely blots out the 1st advent of Christ.

3. With false doctrine in the mind or heart it is impossible for the mouth to express in words and sentences faith in Christ to God the Father.
 4. Instead the mouth expresses the arrogance and self-righteousness of salvation by works, salvation by keeping the law.
 5. If the mouth is not talking about the imputed righteousness of God it will be talking about the self-righteousness of keeping the law.
 6. Salvation by faith in Christ is obedience to the righteousness of God.
 7. To disobey the righteousness of God is to reject Christ as saviour and to accept one's own rationalized substitute.
 8. This is the issue stated in Romans 10:3.
 9. No one can ever say that salvation is beyond his reach. Salvation is as close as one's own soul.
 10. Therefore salvation is neither unattainable or unavailable. Instead, salvation is as near as your mind and mouth.
 11. The Mosaic law was close enough to the Jew to be distorted into a system of salvation by works. Therefore keeping the law produced works/self-righteousness.
 12. The gospel is closer than the law, as close as the mouth and the soul.
 13. Faith is a non-meritorious system of perception originating in the soul and expressed with the words of the mouth which are the thoughts of the soul.
 14. In other words, the mouth enunciates what the mind thinks. The mind thinks faith in Christ; the mouth enunciates that faith to God, with the result that the person who does it is saved.
 15. This is going to be amplified in the next two verses, but remember that the unbelieving Jew ignores the first advent and you cannot ignore the first advent and get away with it.
- Why does Paul say "we [proclaim]"? He is referring to Moses whom he quotes, along with himself. And he is referring to all of the prophets who quoted this message of salvation[1] by faith.[2]

1977 Romans

Lesson #667

667 04/16/1979 Romans 10:9a General Wedemeyer; blind arrogance hinders witness; Jewish salvation in the Old Testament; mechanics of the expression of faith

Romans 10:9 ...that if you confess with your mouth, “Jesus is Lord,” and believe in your heart that God raised Him out from the dead, you will be saved.

Verse 9 – this is the conclusion from the previous verse. The conjunction hóti (ὅτι) [pronounced HOH-tee] is used after a verb of communication or preaching to indicate the content of what is communicated in the message of salvation. Here it is not only the mechanics of salvation, it is also the nearness of salvation. Mechanically this passage is for the Jew; it is Jewish salvation in the Old Testament. It is dealing with how people were saved in the time of Deuteronomy. The Jew was to understand that salvation was something closer to him than the law. The correct translation of hóti (ὅτι) [pronounced HOH-tee] here is not that but namely.

Next comes the conditional conjunction eán (ἐάν) [pronounced eh-AHN]. Used with the subjunctive introduces a 3rd class condition, known as the more probable future condition. It is translated “if.” The introduction of the word if means that every person in the human race who possesses free will—whether free will in the jungle or in some distant mountain, or in the midst of a large and sophisticated modern society—makes up his own mind about salvation. That free will is never hindered or coerced in making a decision, yes or no. The condition in the protasis is a probability based on the function of free will to express faith in Christ. Behind faith in Christ which is positive or rejection of Christ, which is negative, is free will. Even people in slavery have free souls and they are free to make a positive or a negative decision. Every human being who has reached the age of accountability has actually made his own decision.

The verb is the aorist active subjunctive of the verb homologeô (ὁμολογέω) [pronounced hoh-moh-loh-GEH-oh]. It means to agree, to admit, to acknowledge, to concede, and to make a legal statement. It was also used in a philosophical sense to agree with someone, to agree with a system of philosophy; but that is not the meaning here. It connotes understanding and candid declaration. So we have, “Namely, if you will acknowledge.” It means to make a statement to God, not confessing to a congregation of people. The constative aorist refers to a momentary action which occurs at the point of salvation. Active voice: the person believing in Christ produces the action of the verb in the direction of God, not people. The subjunctive mood is the potential subjunctive used with eán (ἐάν) [pronounced eh-AHN] to introduce the protasis of a 3rd class condition, indicating the function of free will in salvation.

The prepositional phrase, en (ἐν) [pronounced en] plus the instrumental singular of stoma (στόμα) [pronounced STOHM-ah] which means mouth. The mouth forms the words, the thoughts of the soul. There is no way to know what is going on in someone else’s soul until they form the words with the mouth. Plus the genitive of the personal pronoun su—your mouth.

Next we have what is incorrectly translated in the KJV. It is not “the Lord Jesus,” this is a double accusative. A double accusative requires more than one object to complete its meaning. Here is the accusative of subject and predicate. Both are in the accusative case but one acts as a subject—Iêsous (Ἰησοῦς) [pronounced ee-ay-SOOCE] is Jesus, the subject; kurios (κύριος) [pronounced KOO-ree-oss] is the predicate of a double accusative. This is correctly translated, “Jesus as Lord.”

Principle

1. Note that the admission is made about Jesus to God, not to mankind. In other words, this is an expression of faith in words and sentences. In effect it is an instant result of believing in Christ.

2. The expression occurs in the soul. Words are enunciated with the mouth but they are formed in the soul. The failure of the unbelieving Jew in blotting out of his mind the 1st advent is the issue that Paul presents when he said, “Jesus as Lord.” The principle that Paul is making when he mentions the mouth first is that the Jew cannot ignore the 1st advent of Christ and escape the consequences of condemnation forever.

“Lord” – kurios (κύριος) [pronounced KOO-ree-oss] denotes deity. Here it denotes Jesus Christ, not just as deity but also, as the God of Israel.

1. This passage is for Jews in the Old Testament. The Jew must acknowledge to God the Father that Jesus Christ is the God of Israel, for the God of Israel is the only saviour. That is why He has the title of Alpha and Omega.

2. It was Jesus Christ as the God of Israel who gave Moses the law on Mount Sinai. He did not give Moses the law to keep as a way of salvation. Codex #1 was given to promote freedom of decision, for salvation was as close as every Jew’s mouth [body] and his soul.

3. The same Jesus Christ who gave the law to Moses on Mount Sinai is the Jesus Christ who is the God of Israel. The same Jesus Christ who is the God of Israel is the one who went to the cross as the God-Man. There the imputation of all of the sins of history resulted in the judgment of all of the personal sins of history. Jesus Christ as the God of Israel is also the only saviour.

4. No Jew can acknowledge Jesus as Lord unless he believes in Him. So the mouth forming the words to God is the result of salvation; faith becomes before admitting it to God.

5. In this sense confession is more than an expression of faith in Christ, it is a direct result of believing in Christ. The decision which provides salvation comes first, the admission comes second as a result.

6. The distinction is necessary because of the next phrase in which the heart or the right lobe is the origin of faith.

7. The mouth expresses what is on the mind.

8. The source of faith is the right lobe or the mind while the expression of that faith in words is the silent or verbal enunciation of the mouth.

9. Remember again, the expression of faith in Christ is made to God, not man.

10. But the unbelieving Jews failed because they blotted out of their minds the first advent. They rejected Christ and then they blotted it out.

11. You cannot ignore the first advent of Christ and get away with it.

12. To acknowledge or to admit that Christ is God is to recognize that Christ is the Messiah, the God of Israel. It is a recognition of what is in Codex #2, what is in Isaiah 53, 9, 7. To acknowledge Jesus Christ as Lord is not to bring Him back from heaven but to keep Him on His throne at the right hand of the Father, waiting for the Second Advent and the restoration of Israel.

Principle

1. Acknowledging Christ as Lord in this context and in the light of the sermon of Moses in Deut. 30:11-14 is to recognize the first advent of Christ and its true significance related to eternal salvation. It is to further recognize salvation in the Old Testament.

2. Such admission or statement to God is the basis for receiving the imputed righteousness of God. No Jew could receive +R until he believed in his heart or right lobe. Then with his mouth he acknowledged to God he had believed in Christ.

3. Such an admission or statement to God is the basis for receiving the imputed righteousness of God. The righteousness is there because the admission is the result of faith.

4. Such admission or statement to God eliminates the use of any system of self or works righteousness, like keeping the law, morality, or any other system of works for salvation. In other words, once you acknowledge to God that you have believed in Him you have acknowledged you are already saved. And being already saved means you do not keep the law for salvation.

5. Salvation by works includes all of the distortions of this phrase, which includes walking an aisle, raising hands, being baptized, joining the church, weeping tears of repentance at the altar, and the other distortions which are practiced by present day "fundamentalists." They are not really fundamentalists; they have departed from the fundamentalists of the faith.

6. The mouth expresses what is on the mind in terms of words and sentences, hence and expression of inner faith.

7. The mouth is used to represent nearness.

8. The person does not have to form the words out aloud, he can enunciate the words in the thoughts of his soul—God reads thought!

9. The mouth is used because to the Jew the mouth is closer than the Mosaic law. Therefore faith-righteousness is closer to the Jew than works righteousness. Obviously then, salvation is neither unattainable nor unavailable.

Principle

1. Faith righteousness is closer to the Jew than works righteousness.

2. Salvation is neither unattainable nor unavailable. It is as close to the individual Jew as his mouth and his heart or soul.

3. This is the nearness of salvation which Moses describes in Deuteronomy 30:14 and Paul describes in Romans 10:8

4. Remember this confession is done privately in the same manner as confession in the rebound technique.

Now the resurrection is brought in because you cannot have Messiah's first advent without His resurrection since it was clearly declared by Codex #2 that Messiah must die. Resurrection is an issue related to the first advent. If you blot out the first advent you must blot out resurrection.

We have a connective use of kai which continues the protasis of a 3rd class condition; plus the aorist active subjunctive of the verb pisteúō (πιστεύω) [pronounced pis-TOO-oh]. There is no subjunctive in salvation, remember we are still dealing with the protasis. The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it refers to a momentary action which occurs in the soul the moment anyone believes in Christ. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety; it is instantaneous. Active voice: the Jewish person of the Old Testament produces the action of the verb. The subjunctive mood is potential depending on the free will of the individual Jew. Therefore this is not yet a statement of salvation. The subjunctive mood indicates we are still in the protasis of a 3rd class condition and the protasis does not state the conclusion. The conclusion about salvation is stated in the apodosis—verse 10.

Notice the prepositional phrase, en (ἐν) [pronounced en] plus the instrumental of the noun kardia, referring to the right lobe of the soul. Also there is the second person pronoun in the possessive genitive—your right lobe. You cannot believe with someone else's right lobe, you believe in your own right lobe—says the personal pronoun su in the genitive case. Faith is a non-meritorious system of perception which originates in the mentality of the right lobe of the soul.

Next is the conjunction hóti (ὅτι) [pronounced HOH-tee]—that. It introduces the content of faith related to Paul's addendum to the message of Moses. Plus the subject, ho theos (θεός) [pronounced theh-OSS] in the nominative case. The generic use of the definite article indicates God the Father and God the Holy Spirit, both of whom are involved in the resurrection of Christ. This is a specific citation of the resurrection of Jesus Christ as a part of the first advent.

“hath raised” – aorist active indicative from the verb egeirō (ἐγείρω) [pronounced ehg-ī-row]. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety—the resurrection. Active voice: God the Father and God the Holy Spirit had a part in the resurrection of Christ. The Father is said to have raised Him from the dead in Colossians 2:12; 1Thessalonians 1:10; 1Peter 1:21. The Holy Spirit is also said to have had a part in the resurrection—Acts 2:24; Romans 1:4; 8:11; 1Peter 3:18. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the resurrection of Messiah. In the mechanics of resurrection it should be noted that the three categories of our Lord’s humanity separated in physical death were rejoined in resurrection. The accusative singular direct object from the intensive pronoun autós (αὐτός) [pronounced ow-TOSS] is used for the third person singular personal pronoun, and it refers here to Christ—him.

“from the dead” – ek (ἐκ) [pronounced ehk] plus the ablative of nekros (νεκρός) [pronounced nehk-ROSS].

“thou shalt be saved” – future passive indicative of sōzō (σώζω) [pronounced SOHD-zoh]. The subjunctive is used with the third class condition, but this is an indicative indicating that the great way to evangelize the Jew is through the resurrection of Jesus Christ. This is what puts it on the line for the Jew. Either he must accept Jesus as Messiah or reject Him. The historicity of the resurrection says He is the Messiah. Therefore they reject knowing exactly what they are rejecting. This is a gnomic future tense for a fact which can be expected when you believe in the Lord Jesus Christ—salvation. Passive voice: the Jew who believes in Christ receives salvation at the moment he believes. Eternal salvation is based on faith in Christ and is expressed in words and sentences to God the Father.

Lesson #668

668 04/17/1979 Romans 10:9b Communist psychological warfare; Big Blot Out; salvation is private and without works; use "resurrection" in evangelizing Jews

Romans 10:9 ...that if you confess with your mouth, “Jesus is Lord,” and believe in your heart that God raised Him out from the dead, you will be saved.

Translation: “Namely if you will make a statement [to God] with your mouth Jesus as Lord, and if you will believe in your right lobe that God has raised him from the dead, you will be saved.”

Principle

1. Here are two sides of the same coin rather than two independent concepts.

2. Faith originates in the soul's right lobe or heart.
3. Faith must be expressed to God, so the mouth is used to represent that expression.
4. The mouth expresses the formation of thought; it refers to the enunciation of words. The words can be thoughts in the mind or they can be thoughts vocalised, but whichever it is it is a private matter between the individual and God.
5. This excludes that form of evangelism which demands public pronouncement and overt declaration for salvation.
6. Such a concept not only distorts the context but becomes a blasphemous thing with regard to salvation by works.
7. This does not mean a public confession at baptism or standing in front of the church and so declaring it; nor does it imply an altar call.
8. Salvation is a private matter between each individual and God. It is the soul that is saved; it is the soul that must make the declaration.
9. The mouth represents the formation of words into sentences which declare to God the Father personal faith in the Lord Jesus Christ.

Romans 10:9,10 is Jewish salvation for the dispensation of Israel, it is a commentary on Old Testament salvation refuting salvation by keeping the law. In Romans 10:6 Paul is quoting Deuteronomy 30:12, "Say not in thine heart who shall ascend into heaven? Conclusion: "that is to bring Christ down from heaven." Verse 7 — "Or who shall descend into the abyss?" Implication: "that is to bring Christ up from the dead." Verse 8 — "But what does it [faith righteousness in contrast to works righteousness] say? (Quoting from Deuteronomy 30:14) The message [salvation through faith in Christ] is near you, in your mouth and in your right lobe [end quote]: that is the message of faith which we proclaim."

Verse 9 — "Namely if you confess [make a statement to God, acknowledge, admit, concede] with your mouth Jesus as Lord, and if you will believe in your right lobe that God has raised him from the dead [the principle: the resurrection is the basis of evangelizing the Jew, it is the greatest approach to the Jew. The resurrection is historical, it demonstrates from Old Testament eschatology the actual fact, the reality, that Messiah would die and that Messiah would be resurrected], you will be saved."

Lesson #669

669 04/18/1979 Romans 10:10 S. Hannon: Political Tactics and Defense Strategy; private expression to God vs. Baptist distortion of salvation

Romans 10:10 For in the heart is belief unto righteousness, and in the mouth is confession unto salvation.

Verse 10 — the reversing of the situation in order to show that salvation is not the use of the mouth. The mouth is used to form words as the result of salvation already existing in the soul.

“For” is the explanatory use of the post positive conjunctive particle gar, correctly translated “For you see.”

“with the heart” is the instrumental of means from the noun kardia — “For by means of the right lobe.” Salvation is as close as your right lobe. Not that the order is reversed to give the sequence of cause and effect. Salvation is accomplished in the soul. The soul is saved, the soul makes the decision, the soul does the thinking. The result of faith in Christ is the expression, confession, acknowledgment of that faith to God.

“believeth” is the present passive indicative from the verb pisteúō (πιστεύω) [pronounced pis-TOO-oh]. This is called this is called the impersonal construction of pisteúō (πιστεύω) [pronounced pis-TOO-oh], it means this is a principle. This is not giving a salvation appeal, this is dealing with salvation, Old Testament salvation, as a principle and it is literally translated, “For you see by means of the right lobe it is believed,” impersonal construction. There is no word “man” in the Greek. The present tense is an aoristic present for punctiliar action in present time. The passive voice: this is the impersonal passive voice in which the subject is conceived as a category or classification of the human race. It is used to present principle, only principle, it is not a salvation appeal. Acts 16:31 is a salvation appeal, it says “believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved.”

“For you see by means of the right lobe it is believed.” The impersonal form has only a predicate, the subject is absent in the impersonal form in the Greek. The subject is absent to that the verb implies a subject as a category, therefore a subject drawn out of the verb categorically. This means that everyone who was ever saved in the history of Israel down to the end of the dispensation of Israel he was saved by believing in the Lord Jesus Christ, Adonai Elohim, the God of Israel. This categorical idiom places great emphasis on the fact that the verb has no merit. Only the object of the verb has merit. The verb is in the passive voice so that the subject is involved with the verb without merit, important as far as the concept is concerned. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal idea from the viewpoint of reality.

“unto righteousness” — prepositional phrase eis (εἰς) [pronounced ICE] plus the accusative singular of dikaïosunê (δικαιοσύνη) [pronounced dih-kai-oh-SOON-ā/dik-ah-yos-OO-nay] which means righteousness. And this is God’s righteousness. Having God’s righteousness gives us blessing from God. Without God’s righteousness there is no blessing from God, there is no salvation, there is no logistical blessing, there is no special blessing. Special blessing and logistical blessings are only imputed to God’s righteousness in us. God’s righteousness cannot be in us unless we believe in Christ. Eis (εἰς) [pronounced ICE] plus the accusative here means “resulting in righteousness.”

1. The function of the right lobe is thought. If thought is going through your mind the circulation of that thought is the function of the right lobe called the heart. The heart is the right lobe, it circulates thought throughout the soul just as the heart in the body circulates blood throughout the body. Faith is thinking, it is not blind. But faith is non-meritorious thinking.

2. It is the object which has the merit in the perceptive system of faith. The subject of faith has no merit, only the object of faith gives merit to this system of perception.

3. Believing is a method of thinking. Believing is not feeling, it is not sincerity, it is not emotion. Emotion is not found in the heart or the right lobe. When you insert emotion into thought you destroy thought. So believing is a method of thinking, not feeling, not emoting.

4. The Greek idiom of impersonal construction can be rendered into English as follows. "For by means of the right lobe function faith results in righteousness." The object of faith is the Lord Jesus Christ.

5. Righteousness is a reference to the imputed righteousness of God in contrast to self or works righteousness by keeping the law or any other system of works.

6. There are always several ways of translating impersonal concepts of Greek into English. Changing the verb to its noun is another. "For by means of the right lobe mankind believes resulting in imputed righteousness" is the use of the verb. The other way is to change the verb from the passive voice to the active voice in translation and provide an impersonal subject which would be mankind, and that is the way that they tried to do it in the King James version. But that has been rejected by modern grammarians as being completely and totally out of line. It is better to retain the verb in the impersonal construction.

Imputation of God's righteousness occurs as a result of believing in Christ. That is what is meant whether you translate the impersonal literally, "it is believed resulting in righteousness," or whether you change it to "mankind believes resulting in imputed righteousness." Without imputed divine righteousness there can be no justification and there can be no logistical blessing, and there can be no special blessing in six categories. No Jew could be justified apart from faith in Christ and the unbelieving Jew ignores Christ, thrusts out of his mind the first advent and salvation connotation.

Translation: "For by means of the right lobe mankind believes resulting in imputed righteousness of God."

"and with the mouth" — the connective or transitional use of the post positive particle de, indicating that this is a continuation with the result connotation. Again, we have the instrumental singular from the noun stoma, the "mouth" — "and by means of the mouth."

"confession is made" — present passive indicative of homologeō (ὁμολογέω) [pronounced hoh-moh-loh-GEH-oh]. The meaning of a word is determined by its usage. This word was set up to be used in a courtroom. It means to name, it means to cite. It has no emotional connotation. It means a candid, honest, honorable declaration. It means to acknowledge, to concede, to admit, to agree that this is true in a courtroom situation. "By means of the mouth it is confessed.” Again, we have the impersonal concept. The aoristic present for punctiliar action on present time. The passive voice is the impersonal passive in which the subject is conceived as a category or classification of the human race. The impersonal form is an idiom and therefore we only have a predicate, we have no subject. The subject is absent so that the verb implies a categorical principle rather than an actual situation. This categorical idiom places great emphasis on the fact that the verb is non-meritorious in its function or action, and only the object has merit. The verb is passive impersonal so that the subject involved is involved in the verb without merit. This is declarative indicative representing the verbal idea from the viewpoint of reality.

“unto salvation” — a prepositional phrase, eis (εἰς) [pronounced ICE] plus the accusative of sôtêria (σωτηρία) [pronounced soh-tay-REE-ah]. This means “resulting in salvation” or “for salvation.” The literal translation is: “And by means of the mouth it is confessed [acknowledged] for salvation.” Again, the impersonal construction can be rendered into English by changing a verb into a noun, “and by means of the mouth a statement can be made [to God] about salvation.” This is a legitimate translation of the idiom.

Translation: “For by means of the right lobe mankind believes resulting in imputed righteousness; and by means of the mouth mankind makes a statement to God about salvation.” In other words, the statement to God is the result, it is not the means. This is not salvation before men, that is salvation by works. This means to make a statement to God. The words are formed in the mind, they can be uttered overtly if you’re alone, they can be uttered in the mind if you are in a group, as in a church.

Principle

1. It becomes obvious that salvation is a transaction between an individual making his own decision and God. It does not involve other people. Other people can witness or provide information, and that is all. It must be one person and God and, of course, the ministry of the Holy Spirit — common and efficacious grace.
2. The individual must believe for himself in the Lord Jesus Christ, no one can do it for him.
3. Faith in Christ includes the statement made to God, the confession, acknowledgment, and admission to God that one has believed. He believes and then tells God about it. The mouth is a result of what is in the right lobe.
4. Therefore mouth and mind [right lobe, heart] are two sides of the same coin. Why mind and mouth? Your mouth is closer than the Mosaic law, your mind is closer than the Mosaic law. Soul and body are closer to you than the Mosaic law. The point is you cannot be saved by keeping the law, salvation is much closer to you than that.
5. The mind or the heart is the source of faith while the mouth is the expression of faith.

6. The mind is the source of the words, the mouth is merely the enunciator of the words. The mouth enunciates what is in the right lobe. Thought must be enunciated.
7. Public announcement to people is not necessary for salvation. Tell people if you want to, or you can keep it to yourself, that is a matter of personal business and personal environment.
8. Some form of witness or testimony often results from believing in Christ but this is a result and not the means.
9. Confession with the mouth is forming of the sentences directed toward God in which the individual involved admits to the Father that he has believed in Christ. Paul's careful attention to detail is not to be construed with raising hands, walking of aisles, weeping tears, standing at the altar, etc. These are man-made devices that have nothing to do with salvation. The pattern of salvation — Ephesians 2:8,9.

Principle

1. The detailed reference to mouth and mind is taken from Deuteronomy 30:14. "... that you may do it," i.e. believe in Christ.
2. Salvation is as near as your mind and your mouth, i.e. your soul and your body.
3. Salvation, therefore, is not in heaven and consequently salvation is not unattainable.
4. Salvation is not across the sea or in Hades, therefore it is not unavailable.
5. Salvation is an accomplished fact at the cross, the very purpose of the first advent of Christ.
6. The unbelieving Jews have blotted out of their minds the first advent with its finished work of eternal salvation. This is their problem, this is the cause of the holocaust.
7. Salvation is closer to the Jew than the Mosaic law. It is in the thought of the mind, it is in the sentence of the mouth.
8. The mouth does not have to enunciate the sentence out loud as a vociferous demonstration but can just as easily be an inaudible whisper or form the words mutely. Simply acknowledge to God that you have believed in Christ. It is a result. And it is between the person believing and God.
9. Obviously, then, the mouth and mind are much closer to the individual Jew than the Mosaic law.
10. Such faith in Christ is the end of self or works righteousness from the law. There is no way that human righteousness can improve upon perfect divine righteousness. That is why it says in Romans 10:4 that Christ is the end of any system of self-righteousness, Christ is the end of the law for those because they believe in Him.

1977 Romans

Lesson #670

670 04/23/1979 Romans 10:11; Isa. 28:16 Coolidge vs. police union; Old Testament verification of the mechanics of salvation

Romans 10:11 For the Scripture says, "Everyone believing on Him will not be put to shame."

Verse 11 starts with the inferential use of the postpositive conjunctive particle gar which means here "Therefore." The inference is from the preceding verse which says that salvation is by faith in Christ—salvation is closer to you than the law. Confession or acknowledge is merely a part of that faith, the expression of it. It is the faith that saves, not the expression of it. The subject in this particular sentence is the nominative singular graphê (γραφῆ) [pronounced graf-AY] plus the generic use of the definite article. Graphê (γραφῆ) [pronounced graf-AY] refers to the scriptures and the generic use of the definite article indicates that the scriptures are unique, and that this is a specific part of the unique scriptures—the Old Testament canon.

Next is the present active indicative of the verb légô (λέγω) [pronounced LEH-goh]. It is a static present indicating that the verse which is now being quoted is in the canon of scripture which lives and abides forever. Active voice: the scripture produces the action of the verb, namely Isaiah 28:16. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the existence of the Old Testament canon as a part of God's Word and preserved forever on principle. So we translate: "Therefore the scripture says." Isaiah 28:16 – "a foundation stone, a tested stone, a precious corner stone, a sure foundation." All of these are prophetic references to the first advent of Jesus Christ. Isaiah picks up where Moses left off. Moses looked down in his day and saw that the people were already rejecting the cross in the first advent as presented in Codex #2 of the Mosaic law. They were rejecting it and blotting out the cross, and instead, picking up Codex #1 and keeping it. Therefore they followed the principle of the great blot-out, in which every day in the time of Moses (just once a week now) they would utter from Deuteronomy, "Adonai Elohenu, Adonai echad." They would utter it with total rejection. Adonai means Jesus Christ; Elohenu—Jesus Christ is our God. That is the Alpha glory of Jesus Christ as the God of Israel. Then they would add, Adonai echad—Jesus Christ is unique. That is the Omega glory of Jesus Christ. They would accept His alpha glory, they would reject His omega glory; they were rejecting the first advent and its significance and in their arrogance accepting a substitute which was their own works righteousness. Jesus Christ offered them the righteousness of God.

"Behold I am he who has laid a foundation in Zion" or "set up a decree in Zion." The decree in Zion is David's son. Zion was the palace of David, therefore the whole Davidic line is related to the word "Zion." David refers to David first, and then to the son of David, the Lord Jesus Christ. The stone or the rock is the Lord Jesus Christ who was tested at the first advent and passed the test by bearing our sins and being judged for them, and as a sign that He passed the test He was resurrected. He was tested on the cross in bearing our sins and therefore became the foundation for eternal salvation. Therefore to reject Christ and accept the Mosaic law is the greatest of all blasphemies, which is exactly what happens in the big blot-out. The words, “a precious cornerstone” means a battlement and is metaphorically used for a prince. So it is either a prince or a battlement. We have a prince, then, who is a cornerstone. One wall of the battlement is Israel; the other wall is the church. These are the two elections to privilege. The prince who is the ruler of both is Christ.

The precious cornerstone

1. It is a reference to Jesus Christ as the God of Israel and the prince ruler of the Church. It is the concept of Jesus Christ as the firstborn having the double portion. Double portion: a) The ruler of Israel; b) Prince ruler of the Church.
2. Both Israel and the Church had to be purchased at the cross. Therefore this is an emphasis on the first advent of Christ.
3. The righteousness of God is imputed by faith in Christ, and the Jews who have rejected the first advent build up layers of scar tissue. Consequently they prefer their own works righteousness. Arrogance always prefers self-righteousness to God’s righteousness.
4. The word foundation connotes the entrance into the plan of God which can only occur through faith in Christ.
5. As the God of Israel Jesus Christ guarantees the foundation of Israel. As the Son of God Jesus Christ is the foundation of Israel.
6. As the prince ruler of the Church Jesus Christ is responsible for the eternal and temporal security of the royal family of God, and as saviour every believer is in union with Christ the rock.
7. To the Jew who blots out the first advent of Christ through unbelief, rejection of Christ, Christ is a stone of stumbling now and a rock which will crush in eternity—Romans 9:33; 1Peter 2:8.
8. The honor of Israel is the Lord Jesus Christ who is the God of Israel.
9. The Jew who rejects Christ has no honor. By blotting out the first advent he has rejected the honor of Israel.
10. God the Father laid Jesus Christ as the foundation stone at the cross in the first advent. But the Jews ignored that stone. They walk over and pick up their own stone—self-righteousness through keeping the law.

“he that believeth on him shall not make haste” – correctly translated, the one having believed. It has the idea behind it: you are caused to believe because you have gospel information; the hiphil stem does not mean so much to make haste as it does not be disturbed. It means in the hiphil to accelerate to panic or to be disturbed. Therefore this is translated, the one believing will not be disturbed.

Translation[Isaiah 28:16]—“Therefore so communicates Adonai Jehovah, Behold, I am he who has laid a stone in Zion, a tested stone [1st advent of Christ, the cross], a cornerstone of honor [the resurrection], for a foundation, a secure foundation; the one believing will not be disturbed.”

So Isaiah recognized what had already been recognized by Moses: that is every generation of Jewish history there is this phenomenon, the big blot-out. The rock, then, becomes to them a rock of offence. The rock of salvation is to the Jew who is negative to the gospel the rock of offence. Just as Paul linked up with Moses, so Peter linked up with Isaiah in 1Peter 2:6-8. This blotting out of the first advent is a major failure in any generation, it explains the holocaust and many other problems in addition to the Satanic desire to destroy the Jew. The Jews destroy themselves in certain generations by the big blot-out.

Romans 10:11 – Whosoever,” the masculine singular from pás (πάς) [pronounced pahs], and adjective often used as a substantive. It is the subject; it means all or anyone. Here is means whoever, or anyone. The articular present active participle of pisteúō (πιστεύω) [pronounced pis-TOO-oh] follows. It means to believe. The definite article is used with the adjective pás (πάς) [pronounced pahs] making it a substantive, and therefore the translation is anyone. The aoristic present tense denotes punctiliar action in present time. It only takes a second to believe in Christ. Active voice: the Jewish believer produces the action. This is a temporal participle translated correctly, when anyone believes.

Next comes the preposition phrase epí (ἐπί) [pronounced eh-PEE] plus the locative from the intensive pronoun autós (αὐτός) [pronounced ow-TOSS], used for the third person personal pronoun. There is no third person personal pronoun in Koine Greek. Autós (αὐτός) [pronounced ow-TOSS] is therefore used and it is simply translated on him—when anyone believes on him.

Then comes the future passive indicative of kataischúnō (καταισχύνω) [pronounced kat-ahēe-SKHOO-noh], and this is Paul’s interpretation of Isaiah. With it is the negative: they shall not be disappointed. The future tense is predictive, referring to the last judgment—no disappointment at the last judgment. The passive voice plus the negative ou (οὐ) [pronounced oo] indicates that the Jew who believes in Christ will never receive the action of the verb, he will not receive disappointment. Indicative mood: declarative for the reality of no disappointment in heaven.

Translation: “Therefore the scripture says [Isaiah 28:16], When anyone believes on him [Christ], they shall not be disappointed.”

Principle

1. There is no disappointment in heaven.
2. The person who believes in Christ will never be disappointed about that decision for it is the means of the imputation of God’s perfect righteousness. It also means eternal life.

But for the Jew who blots out the first advent, which is tantamount to rejection of Christ, there is personal and historical disappointment. Historical disappointment is the holocaust.

Verses 12 & 13 begin the first increment of the paragraph which is the universal character of salvation. Salvation being as close as the right lobe or the mouth indicates the fact that anyone in the world at any time in history can be saved.

1977 Romans

Lesson #671

671 04/24/1979 Romans 10:12a Rhodesia vs. WCC; universal character of salvation; race issues in the U.S. and history

Romans 10:12 For there is no difference between Jew and Greek; for the same Lord of all is rich toward all those calling Him,...

Verse 12 – “For” is the explanatory use of the postpositive conjunctive particle gar. Then the present active indicative of the verb eimi (εἶμι) [pronounced eye-ME] plus the negative ou (οὐ) [pronounced oo]. With it is a predicate nominative singular meaning distinction or difference, the word diastole (διαστολή) [pronounced dee-as-tol-AY]. The present tense of the verb is a static present for a principle taken for granted as a fact. Active voice: the human race produces the action of the verb. Indicative mood: a dogmatic unqualified statement of doctrine. There is no distinction between a Jew and a Gentile. In the plan of God race is not an issue. It is personal volition and attitude toward doctrine that counts, plus the time logged in the filling of the Spirit.

The explanation of this issue now starts with the postpositive conjunctive particle gar. What chance do you have in the plan of God? Everyone has the same chance. The nominative singular subject autós (αὐτός) [pronounced ow-TOSS] is the intensive pronoun used for the third person personal pronoun. However, it is occasionally used in the attributive sense and this is one of those rare cases and so we translated it “For the same.” Then we do not have the word Lord immediately, but we know that it is the Lord Jesus: For the same Jesus is Lord of all—an appositional nominative of kurios (κύριος) [pronounced KOO-ree-oss] to tell us that we are talking about the Lord Jesus Christ. There is also the descriptive genitive plural of pás (πάς) [pronounced pahs] and this is all translated: “For the same Jesus, Lord of all.” Lord of all means of all races. When you believe in Christ, regardless of your racial background, this same one is Lord of all races.

Next comes the verb, the present active participle of plouteō (πλουτέω) [pronounced ploo-TEH-o]. It means here to keep on being generous. The word means to be rich or to be generous. Logistical grace is for all believers. Logistical grace is the meaning of the verb is generous. God will provide your needs. If you are positive He will provide doctrine. He will provide food, shelter and clothing. He will provide transportation, time, environment—whatever it takes to have you advance. He will protect you and sustain you in the most awful historical disasters; you will live through them to grown in grace, and when you get to the end of the line there will be blessing in disaster for you. God’s plan goes on regardless of historical environment. Active voice: Jesus Christ as God produces the action of the verb in providing logistical grace for all. The participle is circumstantial. The ascriptive participle describes a fact, quality or character through the noun kurios (κύριος) [pronounced KOO-ree-oss]. Since this is nominative singular, present active participle of the verb plouteō (πλουτέω) [pronounced ploo-TEH-o] it becomes a predicate nominative, and that is why we translate it “is rich” or “is generous.”

“unto all that call upon him” is a little misleading. First of all is the prepositional phrase eis (εἰς) [pronounced ICE] plus the accusative plural of the adjective pás (πάς) [pronounced pahs], correctly translated to all [those]. The problem comes with the articular present middle participle from epikaleō (ἐπικαλέω) [pronounced ehp-ee-kal-EH-oh]. This word is often construed simply as prayer. This is very difficult because the middle voice here determines the meaning of epikaleō (ἐπικαλέω) [pronounced ehp-ee-kal-EH-oh]. It means to call on someone for help or for aid, and that is where you get the idea of prayer. But the participle is used here in the sense of believing in the Lord Jesus Christ. It really picks up on that part of Romans 10:9,10 where with the mouth you acknowledge to God that you have believed in Christ. That is the meaning here. The participle is used in the sense of with the mouth man acknowledges to God for salvation. The meaning of the word is determined by its usage and the next verse uses this verb as a synonym for faith in Christ. So this is not prayer, it is faith in Christ. The definite article in the accusative plural is used as a demonstrative pronoun to emphasizes a special object in context, and the special object in context is the Jew and the Gentile. Therefore it is translated “to all of those who call upon him.” The aoristic present tense is for punctiliar action in present time, the momentary action of believing in the Lord Jesus Christ. The middle voice is a permissive middle representing the agent, whether Jew or Gentile, voluntarily yielding himself to the results of the action, i.e. salvation. With this is the accusative singular of the intensive pronoun autós (αὐτός) [pronounced ow-TOSS], used here as the personal pronoun and referring to the Lord Jesus Christ.

Lesson #672

672 04/25/1979 Romans 10:12b Arrogance; U.S. intelligence; race not an issue in the plan of God and logistical grace for all believers; snobs; five synonyms of faith; self-righteousness

Romans 10:12 For there is no difference between Jew and Greek; for the same Lord of all is rich toward all those calling Him,...

Translation: “For there is no distinction made between Jew and Gentile: for the same Jesus, Lord of all, is generous to all those who call upon him [in the sense of believing in Christ].”

The five synonyms for faith

1. The verb receive, e.g. John 1:12.
2. The words eat and drink. The reason that these are used for faith is because they portray the non-meritorious connotation.
3. The verb to come, found in Matthew 11:28, a reference to salvation.
4. Call upon, Romans 10:12,13. Again, it emphasizes the non-meritorious aspect of faith.
5. The word to obey the gospel in Romans 16 simply means to believe in Christ.

Principle

1. Salvation is not restricted to any race or any special group of people. Salvation has no restrictions except your own personal volition.
2. The sins of the entire human race were imputed to Christ and judged—doctrine of unlimited atonement.
3. Therefore salvation is for all people in the human race without partiality.
4. There is no such thing, therefore, as a handicap regarding salvation.
5. The entire human race receives a fair shake—“Whosoever believeth.” Anyone can believe in Christ.
6. Consequently the only restriction is individual negative volition and the choice of another way of salvation—like the Jewish blasphemy of keeping the law for salvation.

Lesson #673

673 04/26/1979 Romans 10:13; Joel 2:31–3:2; Acts 2:21–24 Seven judgments; blindness of the Big Blot Out Jews and U.S. liberals

Romans 10:13 ...for, “Whoever shall call upon the name of the Lord will be saved.”

Verse 13 – this is a quotation from Joel 2:32. The context is dealing with the second advent of Christ and the Jews who are going to be delivered at that time. The background for this context is a prophecy about the end of the Jewish age. The Jewish Age was moving along until the death, burial, resurrection and ascension of Christ. When Christ was seated at the right hand of the Father he needed a royal family, so the age of Israel was halted, discontinued temporarily, and the Church Age or the dispensation of the royal family of God was begun. It continues until its termination with resurrection. Then the Tribulation begins and this is the period of the conclusion of the Jewish Age, and then the Second Advent. This particular context in Joel chapter two is dealing with the second advent of Christ and the restoration of Israel. The deliverance of the Jews is based on the fact that they were not guilty of the big blot-out.

In the first verse of Joel chapter three we have the restoration of Israel, which is documented by other passages. We should know that the Bible teaches that Israel is going to be restored in the future. Isaiah 5:26, 30; 10:19-23; 11:11-16; 14:1-3; 60:4-6; Zechariah 10:6-12; Joel 3:1; Ezekiel 39:27,28.

Joel 3:2 describes the baptism of fire in which the Jewish unbelievers are thrown off the earth and the Jewish believers go into the Millennium to receive the fulfilment of the unconditional covenants.

Joel 2:32 is quoted exactly by Paul in Romans 10:13. It begins with the postpositive conjunctive particle gar, used in the explanatory use for documentation. Next is the nominative masculine singular from the adjective substantive pás (πάς) [pronounced pahs], which means anyone or whoever. It means that there is no such thing as a reprobate who can't be saved. The nominative singular from the relative pronoun hos introduces a relative clause. It's antecedent is pás (πάς) [pronounced pahs], so we translate this, "For anyone who."

Then we have the conditional particle án (ὅτι) [pronounced ahn], which is a little tricky in the Greek. It is very important for interpretive reasons. It denotes that the action of the verb is dependent on some circumstance or condition. With the aorist subjunctive which follows the relative pronoun forms the protasis of a conditional sentence. This is equivalent to the protasis of a 3rd class condition. But is used here with the relative and it means ever. Hence, the relative pronoun hos plus án (ὅτι) [pronounced ahn] means whoever. It also indicates some will and some will not.

The verb is the aorist middle subjunctive of epikaleô (ἐπικαλέω) [pronounced ehp-ee-kal-EH-oh] which is a synonym for faith. Anyone can call out, and that is all it takes—"I believe." The aorist tense is a constative aorist for a moment of time when anyone believes in the Lord Jesus Christ. The reason that Paul uses epikaleô (ἐπικαλέω) [pronounced ehp-ee-kal-EH-oh] is because in the past history of the Jews, as well as the future history in the Tribulation, and probably during the last holocaust, a lot of Jews were saved in the last few moments of their life by simply believing. The middle voice of the verb: the subject acts with a view toward anticipating in the outcome. In other words, the participation in the outcome is eternal salvation. Therefore the subject in the middle voice is called the agent. The dynamic middle is used here emphasizing the part taken by the subject in the action of the verb. The subjunctive mood indicates that this is potential. It implies a future reference and is qualified by the element of contingency: maybe you will and maybe you will not but at least you have the opportunity.

Next is the accusative singular of the noun onoma (ὄνομα, ατος, τό) [pronounced OHN-oh-ma]. It does mean name but it often means a name in the sense that you don't know much about them, you just know their name. It also refers to a person about whom you know very little. Therefore it indicates that you don't have to know a great deal about the Lord to be saved. There are two places where onoma (ὄνομα, ατος, τό) [pronounced OHN-oh-ma] is used as a synonym for the word Jesus—Acts 5:41; 3 John 7.

“shall be saved” – future passive indicative of sôzô (σώζω) [pronounced SOHD-zoh]. The indicative mood instead of the subjunctive is very important. If you do call upon the name of the Lord you are going to be saved. From the subjunctive to the indicative is from the potential to the reality. The gnomic future is for a statement of fact which can be anticipated at the moment of faith. The passive voice: the individual receives the action of the verb by believing in Christ. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of fact.

Translation: “For whoever will call on the name of the Lord will be saved.”

1. Peter quotes these words on the day of Pentecost in Acts 2:21. There is no doubt that Peter applied them to the Lord Jesus Christ.

2. In Acts 2:24 there is a description of the big blot-out that keeps people from calling on the name of the Lord. The one thing the Jews knew about the first advent was that resurrection was one of the great prophecies that would occur.

3. Peter relates this to Joel 2:32 and explains that in Joel 2:32 the Hebrew word is Jehovah, but Jehovah is Jesus Christ. He explains that the Lord is Jesus Christ. Paul is even more specific in 1 Corinthians 1:2, “their [the Jews] God and ours.” He uses the same words, “whoever calls on the name of the Lord Jesus Christ.” So he specifies that Joel was talking about the Lord Jesus Christ, he is talking about Christ, Peter is talking about Christ in Acts 2:21. It is obvious, then, that the Lord Jesus Christ is the object of faith in salvation. However, the Jews who rejected Christ as saviour under the concept of the big blot-out refused to relate Christ on the cross to the God of Israel. They accepted His alpha glory but they reject His omega glory.

Principle

1. The only hope for Israel is the Lord Jesus Christ. He is the God of Israel; He is the saviour of Israel.

2. Yet this context indicates that the Jew is not only equivalent but greater in his negative volition toward Christ than the Pharaoh of the exodus.

3. Amenhotep II who was the Pharaoh of the exodus was negative toward the Lord in his confrontation with Moses.
4. God even extended his life so that he could increase his record of negative volition.
5. Pharaoh then, a Gentile, held the record for scar tissue of the soul, negative volition or hardness of heart, until Moses recognized the new record-holder in Deuteronomy 30:11-14.
6. The record-holder in every generation of history is always a Jew guilty of the big blot-out.
7. When the first advent was prophetic in the Old Testament there were Jews in every generation who blotted out the first advent and its salvation results.
8. Therefore, great historical disaster came to any generation of Jews who formed the large pivot of the big blot-out.
9. When Christ actually came, that generation actually exceeded all others even though they were face to face with fulfilment of details of prophecy.
10. In the next 40 years the big blot-out continued until the 5th cycle of discipline.
11. Periodically historical disaster overtakes the Jews because of this phenomenon, the big blot-out.
12. Therefore there is only one hope for the Jew as well as for the Gentile and that is to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, as per Joel 2:32 or Acts 2:21; Romans 10:13.

In the general context of verses 14 & 15 we have Jewish responsibility as a client nation. Two doctrines must be understood clearly. Firstly, the client nation. When the Jews were called a client nation to God they were called by the title "Priest nation to God." They had a specialized priesthood in the nation but when the nation was referred to in its client nation status it was called a priest nation. Exodus 19:6 is not talking about the Levitical priesthood which was specialized and limited to the tribe of Levi and the family of Aaron but it is talking about the entire nation. That was something new in history. When the Jews were brought out of Egypt in the exodus they were brought out as a client nation to God. They were brought out to fulfil something in history that had never been fulfilled before. It now became necessary in history because of two factors: a) Internationalism which is Satanic and evil. The first UN building was personally destroyed by God—the tower of Babel in Genesis 11. b) The concept that nations become degenerate very rapidly, so rapidly that in order to revitalise and re-evangelize them it must be done from the outside. Therefore the principle of missionary activity from a client nation. Wherever missionaries have to go today it means that these nations have fallen apart. And God can do one of two things. He can completely destroy them as a people or He can revitalise them, beginning with missionary activity. Missionaries go to evangelize and then to train believers and form their own local church under the indigenous missionary concept. But these people must have a base, a place from which they start, and the only place that can sponsor missionary activity is a free nation, a client nation to God. So the responsibility throughout all of Old Testament times for missionary activity was one of the Jewish nations.

The second thing that a client nation does after evangelism is therefore missions. But neither evangelism nor missions are any good without the third factor—spiritual growth, operation local church or its equivalent, someone who communicates doctrine. The fourth factor: none of these things could exist, even the local church, without the laws of divine establishment.

675 04/30/1979 Romans 10:14a Salt; Israel and the U.S. responsibilities as client nations; principle of heathenism: missions and God consciousness

Romans 10:14 How then shall they call on Him whom they have not believed? And how shall they believe on Him of whom they have not heard? And how shall they hear apart from preaching?

In verses 14 & 15 there are four rhetorical questions designed to present vital information about all clients, not just Israel in the past. The first question deals with the problem of no gospel hearing among certain nations.

Verse 14 – the question begins with the interrogative particle -pôs (-πώς) [pronounced poce], used for a direct question, to determine how something comes to be. With it is an inferential particle. Paul in Romans is following logical procedures and therefore he uses many different categories of inferential particles. This inferential denotes what it introduces is the result from what precedes. It is translated either “how then” or “consequently how.”

Next is the aorist middle subjunctive of the verb epikaleô (ἐπικαλέω) [pronounced ehp-ee-kal-EH-oh], which means to call upon or call on. This is a synonym for faith. The constative aorist refers to a momentary action—believing in Christ. This looks at the situation from the standpoint that Israel is the client nation. In all directions there are Gentile nations and Gentile people. The culminative aorist recognizes that the people living in these foreign lands (foreign to Israel), living under varying conditions, cannot possibly call upon the name of the Lord, and/or believe in Him, unless they have a message. Someone has to bring the message to them in their own language. This is the problem and the difficulty. The intensive middle voice gives the verb an individualistic or special application. The subjunctive mood is potential, it implies future reference and is qualified by the element of contingency. “Consequently, how shall they call on.”

Next is the preposition eis (εἰς) [pronounced ICE] plus the accusative of the relative pronoun hos (ὃς) [pronounced hohç]—“in whom.” “Consequently, how shall they call on Christ in whom.” Christ is implied from the previous verse, “... call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved.” Plus the aorist active indicative of the verb pisteúō (πιστεύω) [pronounced pis-TOO-oh], plus the negative ouk (οὐκ) [pronounced ook], “they have not believed.” The culminative aorist tense views faith in Christ in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of its existing results. The idiom is best translated in the English by the perfect tense. The active voice plus the negative indicates the Gentiles are not producing the action of the verb because of spiritual malfunction in a client nation—the failure of believers. The indicative mood is an interrogative indicative assuming that there is an actual answer to the question.

The first question introduces two problems. The more obvious problem relates to the fact that no one, Jew or Gentile, can call on the Lord—i.e. to confess to God faith in Christ—unless he has believed in his right lobe. The next question will answer the obvious question with logical progression in the form of a rhetorical question. In other words, a question answers a question so that another question answers that question, and so on, through four of them. The less obvious problem (less obvious than the first problem) is the problem of heathenism which deals with positive or negative volition at the point of God-consciousness. This question introduces the fact that many times there is no missionary, no evangelism to that nation because there is no positive volition.

In the first chapter of Romans Paul covered the doctrine of heathenism, and so he continues with the logical progression regarding Jewish responsibility as a client nation to God.[3] Heathenism is the reversion of the unbeliever. A perfect description is found in 2Peter chapter two where we have the passage which ends up with the dog returning to his vomit. That is heathenism. The vomit is heathenism. Heathenism is satisfied with heathenism.

Principle of the issue of God-consciousness: If any member of the human race, regardless of geographical isolation or linguistic barrier desires relationship with God (has +V) after reaching God-consciousness then God will provide the necessary information through which that person can be saved. This is taught in Jeremiah 29:13; John 7:17; Acts 17:27.

No one, Jew or Gentile, can call on the Lord or confess to God faith in Christ unless he has first of all believed in Christ. Pattern: Romans 10:9,10.

The second question here deals with the subject of communication. The subject is the client nation. The client nation is the source of communication. Without the client nation there could be no missionary base, no evangelism in any generation.

“and how shall they believe” – the interrogative particle pōs (πῶς) [pronounced pohç] used for a direct question in a logical procession is correctly translated “how.” Then follows the postpositive conjunctive particle de, used here as a transitional particle without any contrast intended and simply translated “now” – now how or furthermore how. The word furthermore is a better translation because it indicates a logical and rational progression in these rhetorical questions. These are not questions that people are asking Paul for information, these are questions that Paul is using as a part of debater's technique. Next is the aorist active subjunctive of the verb pisteúō (πιστεύω) [pronounced pis-TOO-oh]. Each question picks up something from the previous question. The principle is a very simple one. If you are going to pick up from one to another then you must have a logical progression. The word believe is picked up again for the logical progression. "Furthermore how shall they [the Gentiles] believe [in Christ]." The constative aorist gathers up into one entirety the action of the verb—believing in Christ. Active voice: the Gentiles produce the action of the verb under the principle of efficacious grace. The subjunctive mood is a part of the logical progression, used as a part of a rhetorical device; it is called the deliberative subjunctive—a series of subjunctives in questions are used to set up logical progression; a series of rhetorical questions are used to prove a point.

The objective genitive singular from the relative pronoun hos is correctly translated "about whom." Then the aorist active indicative of the verb akoúō (ἀκούω) [pronounced ah-KOO-oh] with the negative ouk (οὐκ) [pronounced ook]—"they have not heard." The culminative aorist tense views common grace, hearing the gospel, evangelism in other countries through missionaries, but it regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. The existing results: efficacious grace. People are saved in countries other than the client nation type. The active voice plus the negative indicates that the Gentiles are not producing the action of the verb because no missionary has come to give them the Word. Remember the background is Old Testament history. Gentiles did not hear the Word unless Jews who were mature believers went out as missionaries. The indicative mood is the interrogative indicative, it assumes that there is an actual fact which may be stated in answer to the question.

Principle

1. The Gentiles cannot believe in Christ, though positive at God-consciousness, unless someone communicates to them the gospel. The point is that a missionary must come to them from another country, from a client nation.
2. It is the responsibility, then, of a client nation to God to become the communicators through missionary activity.
3. Then client nation is essentially a missionary nation. It is a nation of spiritual impact.
4. Only God Himself in omniscience knows where there is positive volition at God-consciousness. Therefore certain qualified believers in the client nation have the missionary responsibility.

Principle

1. The Gentiles have a heart/right lobe. This is the source of faith. Gentiles have a mouth to confess to God the Father faith in Christ or to call on His name.

2. But Gentiles cannot believe or call on the name of the Lord unless they hear the gospel.
3. Hearing the gospel (common grace) precedes believing in Christ (efficacious grace).
4. The message cannot be heard unless there are missionaries from the client nation to the heathen nation.
5. In Paul's time the client nation was Israel. But two years after his death the client nation would be Rome.

The logical sequence continues with a third question. It should be noted that Paul himself as the apostle to the gentiles was the last great missionary from client nation Israel. When he dies the nation died within two years. The nation followed him in death through the fifth cycle and a new client nation was established—the Roman Empire.

The third question deals with the communicator, the missionary from the client nation—the importance of missions, the importance of the client nation: “and how shall they hear without a preacher?”

“how” – the interrogative particle pōs (πῶς) [pronounced poħç] used for logical progression. With it is the postpositive conjunctive particle de. Translation: “Furthermore, how.”

“shall they hear” – aorist active subjunctive of the verb akoúō (ἀκούω) [pronounced ah-KOO-oh], which means to hear. “Furthermore, how shall they [the Gentiles] hear.” The constative aorist gathers into one entirety the action of the verb, the missionary presentation of the gospel. Interpreting is not witnessing. This is not a witnessing passage. This is not a minister teaching a doctrinal passage where the gospel exists to his congregation. This is not an evangelist speaking to his own kind. This is a missionary who has gone from a client nation to a foreign country and is making a presentation of the gospel. “How shall they hear without a missionary.” Active voice: the Gentiles produce the action of the verb through the principle of common grace. The subjunctive mood is the deliberative subjunctive; it is a part of the rhetorical debater's technique. With this we have an adverb used as an improper preposition to introduce a proper function—chōros (χωρος) [pronounced KHOH-ross], meaning apart from or without. It takes the genitive case. In this case it takes the articular present active participle from the verb kêrussō (κηρύσσω) [pronounced kay-ROOS-so]. Here it is used as a noun. When the participle is used as a noun it must be translated that way, and the correct translation is messenger or missionary.

Lesson #676

676 05/01/1979 Romans 10:14b Nuclear power; divine guidance of missions; client nation; indigenous churches need believers and evangelization; heathenism

Romans 10:14 How then shall they call on Him whom they have not believed? And how shall they believe on Him of whom they have not heard? And how shall they hear apart from preaching?

677 05/02/1979 Romans 10:14c Missionary evangelism; client nation function and positive volition areas; common and efficacious grace

Romans 10:14 How then shall they call on Him whom they have not believed? And how shall they believe on Him of whom they have not heard? And how shall they hear apart from preaching?

Translation: “Consequently, how shall they [the Gentiles] call on him [the Lord Jesus Christ] in whom they have not believed? Furthermore, how shall they [the Gentiles] believe in him [Christ] about whom they have not heard? Furthermore, how shall they [the Gentiles] hear without a missionary.”

Principle

1. The first question develops a negative regarding efficacious grace. The negative is that the mission field is made up of those who have not believed in Christ—no efficacious grace.
2. The second question develops a negative regarding common grace.
3. The third question develops a negative regarding missionary function of the client nation. The heathen [Gentiles] may have been positive at God-consciousness but they had not heard the gospel—minus common grace. Because they have not heard the gospel they have not exhaled faith in Christ—minus missionaries. This means the client nation has had a malfunction resulting in the malfunction of missionary function, resulting in failure to use the normal divinely-ordained system for reaching the foreigner.
4. However, the adverb chōros (χωρος) [pronounced KHOH-ross] implies that where a Gentile nation contains some positive volition there is a probability that some missionary will be sent. A missionary will go and evangelize. But for that missionary to go you have to have alertness among believers. What this third question is saying is: Believers have not taken in doctrine, have not advanced and are not missionary minded, and therefore no missionary has been sent.
5. However, in the fourth question are two words eán (ἐάν) [pronounced eh-AHN] mê (μή) [pronounced may], the word if introducing a 3rd class condition plus the negative adverb. This implies that no matter how many in the heathen country fail to hear and believe God will provide a messenger, even if it has to be a supernatural function. But to the extent that God enters into supernatural function to save those with positive volition in other countries, to that extent the client nation is faulted, and if it is faulted often enough it is removed—5th cycle of discipline.

6. Common grace must precede efficacious grace. People cannot believe in Christ or exhale faith in Christ until they understand the gospel. To understand the gospel they have to hear the gospel.

7. There can be no common grace in a heathen nation apart from missionary evangelism.

Missionary evangelism gives the opportunity for the function of free will and the possibility of efficacious grace—the exhale of faith in Christ. Therefore missionary evangelism is one of the most important functions of a nation.

1977 Romans

Lesson #678

678 05/03/1979 Romans 10:15a Review; Mosaic Law codices 1–3; evangelism; communists conquer by thought; freedom vs. equality

Romans 10:15 And how shall they preach unless they are sent? As it has been written: “How beautiful are the feet of those proclaiming good news of good things!”

Verse 15 – it must be remembered that this passage is not dealing with the Church Age per se but is an explanation of the problems which have accumulated to Israel over the many centuries since they have suffered from the administration of the fifth cycle of discipline. The missionary function of the client nation now becomes the issue.

First in this verse we have the postpositive conjunctive particle de, used for the final question in the logical progression and is translated “Finally.” Then we have the interrogative particle pōs (πῶς) [pronounced poħç]—“Finally how.” Next is the aorist active subjunctive of the verb kêrussō (κηρύσσω) [pronounced kay-ROOS-so], taken from the old Greek word kêrux (κῆρυξ) [pronounced KAY-roox] which means a herald. Kêrux (κῆρυξ) [pronounced KAY-roox] denotes aristocracy and it means a representative of royalty, someone who is making an announcement that the king is coming. The herald went first and made preparation. It also means the announcement of good news for the city was always honored when the king came. So he represented aristocracy and he was the bearer of good news. The herald had the authority of the king. “Finally how shall they proclaim [the gospel].” This is the primary function of missionaries in a foreign country. The aorist tense is a constative aorist for an action which extends over a long period of time and is gathered up into one entirety. The active voice: missionaries produce the action of the verb in evangelizing in a foreign country. The subjunctive mood is potential. It depends on the function of the client nation of Israel in sending out missionaries.

With this we have a conditional conjunction eán (ἐάν) [pronounced eh-AHN] plus the negative mê (μή) [pronounced may]. eán (ἐάν) [pronounced eh-AHN] introduces a third class condition [maybe yes, maybe no], plus the aorist passive subjunctive in a protasis of the verb apostellō which means to send out—“unless they [referring to missionaries] are sent out.” The third class condition means maybe the client nation will send them out and maybe the client nation will not. It depends upon stability in the client nation—laws of divine establishment for believer and unbeliever alike. Secondly, it depends upon the spiritual heritage function and that depends on how believers are going—are they advancing to maturity, cracking the maturity barrier, or are they going into reversionism? It all depends upon their attitude toward doctrine, whether it is positive or negative. The aorist tense of the verb is a culminative aorist, viewing the sending out of missionaries from the client nation in its entirety but emphasizing the existing results, evangelizing in a foreign country. Passive voice: the missionaries receive the action of the verb, being sent out by the client nation to God. Subjunctive mood: the missionary activity from the client nation is potential depending on spiritual conditioning of the believers in that client nation.

Principle

1. All of the subjunctive moods indicate that the big blot-out destroys all client nation function, but especially missionary activity.
2. Many time Gentiles who were positive at God-consciousness had to be evangelized by other means than missionaries from a client nation—which means malfunction of that client nation.
3. The big blot-out hindered missionary activity. Israel's failure under the big blot-out resulted in a change of policy in the times of the Gentiles.
4. So that today only Gentile nations can act as client nations to God. Israel will be eternally a client nation to God but not during the times of the Gentiles. Only Gentile nations can act as a client nation to God until the second advent of the Lord Jesus Christ.

“as” – katháper (καθάπερ) [pronounced kath-AP-er], which means “just as.” It introduces the concept of documentation –now that he has rhetorically proved his point and indicated that the Jews have lost out. In the next chapter he will become very elliptical in pointing out the fact of how sad it is that the Jews lost out as a client nation and God had to transfer the spiritual heritage of Israel to the royal family of God or the Church which is the body of Christ. So as goes the believer in a national entity so goes the national entity, and it is the function of the laws of establishment, the function of evangelism and Bible teaching, the providing of a haven for Israel during the time of their dispersion, plus the sending out of missionaries, that determines a client nation.

Then we have the perfect passive indicative of the verb graphô (γράφω) [pronounced GRAWF-oh], indicating that this is documentation from the Old Testament scriptures. The perfect tense is the dramatic perfect emphasizing the results of the action and portraying the prominence of the Old Testament canon and are minder to us that the Old Testament is a part of our spiritual heritage, for the spiritual heritage of Israel was transferred in A.D. 70 at the time of the fall of Jerusalem. At the time the spiritual heritage of client nation Israel became the heritage of the Church. This is why the Church is sometimes called a nation, though the Church is not really a nation, it is simply a community in a nation that determines client nation status. We have the New Testament scriptures, we have the spiritual heritage of Israel; it has been handed down to us, and with that heritage comes responsibility. Heritage demands responsibility. The passive voice of this verb tells us that Isaiah 52:7 is being quoted, therefore receives the action of the verb—which is the quotation for documentation. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the passage quoted, the reality also of verbal plenary inspiration of scripture. Corrected translation: “just as it stands written.”

The quotation starts out with hos (ὅς) [pronounced hohç], used as a relative adverb or relative pronoun. It is correctly translated “How” but the meaning, its purpose in grammar, it to introduce the characteristic quality of a person in an interrogative sentence, the characteristic quality of a category. In this case it is the characteristic of a category. We already know the category—missionaries. The nominative plural for the adjective w(raioj) follows, which means beautiful in the sense of timely or seasonable. It does not mean beautiful in the sense of symmetry of pulchritude.

Next is the predicate nominative plural from the noun pous (πούς) [pronounced poocē], referring to the feet at a means of travel, therefore again, missionary emphasis. Note that the first function of a missionary is evangelism in a foreign country. After that, indigenous function, but not before. The function of the missionary is to satisfy positive volition. The reason the Lord leads the missionary to an area is positive volition in that area. The feet are a means of travel. Missionaries are involved.

Then we have the articular middle present participle from the verb euaggelizō (εὐαγγελίζω) [pronounced yoo-ang-ghel-EED-zo] which means to evangelize, to announce the good news, to proclaim the good news. In Classical Greek it was to proclaim the good news of victory in battle, but in Koine Greek of the New Testament it was to announce the good news of the work of Christ on the cross. The present tense is a perfective present, it denotes the continuation of existing results, hence it refers to a fact which has come to be in the past but is emphasized as a present reality. The middle voice is the dynamic middle, it emphasizes the part taken by missionaries in the action of the verb. The participle is circumstantial. Translation: “those who proclaim the good news [the gospel].”

“of peace, and bring glad tidings of” – not found in the original. (Too bad to the liberals!!) It refers not to the gospel and salvation doctrine, it refers to the entire plan of God because with the gospel or good news we also have “and also about intrinsic good things.” We have to translate it this way to distinguish it from the good news of the gospel. So we have “How beautiful are the feet of those who proclaim the gospel [good news] about intrinsic good things,” or “about the good.” The good is the plan of God—X + Y + Z.

Romans 10:15 And how shall they preach unless they are sent? As it has been written: “How beautiful are the feet of those proclaiming good news of good things!”

Translation: "Finally, how shall they proclaim the gospel, unless they [the missionaries] are sent out? Just as it stands written, How beautiful are the feet of those who proclaim good news about intrinsic good things."

1. If the pastor is a mouth or a voice the missionary is a foot. He goes to the foreign nations from the client nation to God. (He must be spiritually prepared)
2. The beauty of the messenger's feet is in the divine guidance and function of a missionary, as well as the content of his message.
3. The missionary messenger must be sent out from a client nation. This means he is supported by local churches to sustain him on the mission field, and the policy of his government is to protect missionaries.
4. The client nation to God is motivated to encourage and support missionaries through spiritual advance to maturity on the part of believers.
5. The big blot-out hinders missionary activity from a client nation to God. When there are too many people rejecting the gospel, too much negative volition in a client nation, a failure to form a pivot, and the client nation is going to malfunction in missionary activity.
6. The Jews failed in their client nation responsibility because of the big blot-out. They also failed because those who were believers did not advance to maturity and form a pivot.
7. Missionary function is the responsibility of believers only in a client nation.
8. Furthermore, it takes hundreds and sometimes thousands of believers to support one missionary on a foreign field.
9. Add to that the fact that only a mature believer is properly motivated to support missions—or one positive and approaching maturity—and we have a picture of how the big blot-out can hinder missionary activity. The big blot-out also discourages believers from doctrinal advance.
10. A decline of missionary activity indicates a decline in spiritual modus vivendi of a client nation.
11. such a decline includes the big blot-out [hardness of heart] toward evangelism plus apathy or indifference toward doctrine on the part of believers.
12. This results in a decline of establishment principles in the general population and a lack of missionary support for the believer.

Lesson #681

681 05/08/1979 Romans 10:16; Isa. 53:1 Rejection of truth produces scar tissue and voids former understanding and application to Israel and the U.S.

Romans 10:16 But not all heeded the good news. For Isaiah says, “Lord, who has believed our report?”

Verse 16 – “But” is the adversative conjunction allá (ἀλλά) [pronounced ahI-LAH] which sets up a contrast between the evangelistic communication of the gospel and the Jewish people rejecting the gospel, resulting in the big blot-out. Since the unbelieving Jews were guilty of the big blot-out they obviously would not take the gospel to the Gentiles. They cannot take to the Gentiles what they have not understood or accepted themselves. They have actually understood the issue but have rejected it by their own personal self-determination. They could not evangelize because they were not saved. With this is the negative adverb ou (οὐ) [pronounced oo] plus the nominative masculine plural subject from pás (πάς) [pronounced pahs]—“But not all.”

“obeyed” is the aorist active indicative of the verb hupakouô (ὑπακούω) [pronounced hoop-ak-OO-oh] [akouô (ἀκούω) [pronounced ah-KOO-oh] = to hear or to listen; u(p = under)]—under authority of, under subordination to. It is correctly translated by the word obeyed. It means to concentrate, to listen, to perceive when you are being taught information. It means here with the negative to hear accurate information and to reject it. The constative aorist is for a fact or action extended over a period of time. During the time of the entire dispensation of Israel, during the time that Israel became a client nation, down to A.D 70 when they lost their client nation status for the last time until the Millennium. It means, first of all, when they have heard the gospel. Not only have they heard it but they have heard the greatest presentations that anyone could ever have—every function of the Levitical priesthood in communication. It is the heritage of Israel from the beginning. Active voice: the Jews produce the action of the verb, the rejection of Jesus Christ as saviour. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the big blot-out in every generation—in some generations a lot of Jews, in some a few.

“the gospel” – dative singular indirect object from euangelion (εὐαγγέλιον) [pronounced yoo-ang-GHEL-ee-on]. It means good news—gospel. The Jews had the best exposure to the gospel that anyone ever had but they used their volition to reject it. They understood it and rejected it. Disobedience to the gospel is expressed through unbelief or rejection of the Lord Jesus Christ. When you understand something and reject it you build a layer of scar tissue on the soul, and when you keep rejecting it you build more layers of scar tissue until you no longer understand what you previously understood. The principle is that the more you reject something the less you understand it. Disobedience to the gospel is expressed by rejection. Every act of rejection makes the thing rejected more obscure. By not obeying the gospel the Jews cannot send out missionaries to the Gentiles as a client nation function.

“For Esaias [Isaiah] saith” – the explanatory use of the conjunctive particle gar and the present active indicative of the verb légō (λέγω) [pronounced LEH-goh] which means here to communicate-- “For Isaiah communicates.” The perfective present tense refers to the fact of Isaiah’s ministry in the past but emphasizes it as a present reality in that this is a part of the Word of God which lives and abides forever. This is a quotation from Isaiah 53:1. Active voice: Isaiah produces the action of the verb as the human author of both the first section of Isaiah and the last half—called Deutero-Isaiah by the liberals and allegedly written by someone else. The reason for that is typical liberal stupidity. All great scholars know that half of Isaiah is written in prose and half of it is written in poetry. The liberals say that Isaiah wrote the prose but he didn’t write the poetry because the style is different, not realising, the dummies that they are, that anyone who writes poetry and writes prose both has a different style for each. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of Isaiah’s message as a part of the Old Testament canon.

Isaiah 53:1 begins with the interrogative pronoun mi [who] and it is referring to every individual Jew in the client nation during Isaiah’s generation, but it also refers to every individual Jew in the client nation from the Exodus to, prophetically, the end of the Jewish nation as a client nation in A.D. 70. Isaiah began his ministry in a time of apostasy and God punished the Jews for their apostasy by the Sennacherib invasion. So we can say that this is pre-Sennacherib. Isaiah apparently had been preaching for some time and was slightly discouraged because apparently no one was responding. So he says “Who [is responding].” This was one of those statement which was parlayed into a prophecy.

Next is the hiphil perfect from the verb amen, the verb used for salvation faith in the Hebrew. This verb in the hiphil stem was used for the salvation of Abraham. The hiphil stem is causative active voice. “Who has caused to believe?” Abraham was caused to believe in the Lord and it was credited to his account [imputed to him] for righteousness. He was caused to believe because he had information. The gospel that he heard was the information to which he responded. So Isaiah now says, “Who has been caused to believe,” the point being that now the people are negative at God-consciousness and negative at gospel-hearing. They heard the gospel at first but as they said no they continued to build up scar tissue. By the use of the hiphil stem he is pointing out that they understand it but reject it.

Then comes the indirect object, shemuah, which mans doctrine or message. The message and the doctrine is actually the entire first advent with emphasis on the cross. Isaiah is giving an illustration of what he has been preaching in the verses that follow.

“the arm of the Lord” – zeroa, a title of the Lord Jesus Christ in the first advent. It is an anthropomorphism: Christ is not an arm but an arm explains the thought. “Arm” means His humanity. Then we have the title of His deity, pronounced by the Jew Adonai, and we call it Jehovah. Arm of the Lord then becomes the title for the hypostatic union, therefore a reference to the first advent which the Jewish unbeliever blocks out of his soul.

The niphāl perfect from the verb galah means to reveal. Translation: “The arm of the Lord, to whom has it been revealed?”

The first question: Who has believed our message?” The implication is that not only in Isaiah’s day but in every generation there are many Jews who reject Christ as saviour though the spiritual heritage of Israel is the presentation of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Back to Romans 10:16. The word “Lord” is a vocative singular from kurios (κύριος) [pronounced KOO-ree-oss] and is equivalent to the tetragrammaton. It is a reference to God the Father, to whom Isaiah addresses this. The interrogative pronoun tís (τις) [pronounced tihç] is correctly translated “who.” It means an individual; salvation is an individual matter.

“hath believed” is the aorist active indicative of the verb pisteúō (πιστεύω) [pronounced pis-TOO-oh]. The constative aorist refers to the momentary action of believing in Christ or the momentary action of rejecting Christ. Constative aorist takes the constant rejection to the point where they said no so often they no longer understood what they were rejecting. Active voice: the Jews potentially produced the action of the verb. The indicative mood is the potential indicative of obligation in a client nation.

“our report” – dative singular indirect object of a)kōh, based on the same root as akōúō (ἀκούω) [pronounced ah-KOO-oh] which means something you hear, therefore a report or a message; plus the possessive genitive plural from the first person plural pronoun, “our report.”

Lesson #683

683 05/10/1979 Romans 10:17 Witnessing and the client nation; doctrine of reconciliation; there will never be a conversion of the whole world any time

Romans 10:17 So faith is from hearing, and hearing through the word of Christ.

Verse 17 – begins with the illative particle ára (ἄρα) [pronounced AHR-ah] which means “consequently.” It brings together an inference from what has been taught and an inference in anticipation of what the conclusion will be. The nominative singular subject is pistis (πίστις) [pronounced PIHS-tihç] and it refers not only to the basis for perception of doctrine but it also refers to the initial entrance into the plan of God, faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. Also, after faith in Christ, it refers to the function of the faith-rest technique in claiming promises to stabilize the mentality, and then using reverse concentration to start rational thought, and finally coming to conclusions. This is the dynamics for the Christian way of life under a pressure situation. With this is a definite article used as a demonstrative pronoun to set aside this faith as a special dynamic concept in the Christian way of life. “Consequently that faith.” This is a reference to faith in Christ which is the means of salvation. There is no verb.

Next comes the prepositional phrase ek (ἐκ) [pronounced ehk] plus the ablative of a)koh which means a message, or the content of a message, or a report—“Consequently, that faith from a message.” In other words, people must hear the gospel to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ. Common grace precedes efficacious grace. Common grace is a theological designation for the presentation of the gospel to an unbeliever. The presentation of the gospel to the unbeliever finds the unbeliever unable to understand because while he has a human soul he is minus the human spirit. All spiritual phenomena is understood by means to the human spirit, and since the unbeliever does not have one the Holy Spirit acts as a human spirit so that the gospel information can be understood. Once it is understood then the individual unbeliever can respond, positive or negative. Positive volition is the exhale of faith in Christ; negative volition is rejection of Christ. So we call this inhale gospel presentation and perception; exhale is faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. The inhale is called common grace; the exhale is called efficacious grace—believing in the Lord Jesus Christ, receiving Him as personal saviour. The great issue is the fact that the unbeliever must have absolute correct information. He doesn’t need a persuasive personality, salesmanship, or some form of apologetical persuasion. All he needs is the information. This is because whatever the form of evangelism—whether it is the function of an evangelist outside of a church speaking to great crowds or a pastor communicating gospel information in a pertinent passage, or the individual believer witnessing for Christ—accurate information is necessary because of the principle that God the Holy Spirit is the agent of personal witnessing; He takes the information and utilizes it for the understanding of the gospel. So the unbeliever must have correct information regarding the person and the work of the Lord Jesus Christ before he can believe. One thing we must be very wary of is making an issue out of sin. Sin is not the issue in the gospel. Sin is a true fact, that should be understood, but the good news is the fact that Christ was judged for every sin ever committed in the human race. The unbeliever can have eternal life, not by renouncing sin but by believing in Christ. Christ is the issue, not giving up sins. The gospel is correct information.

Then we have a transitional or continuative use of the particle de—“moreover.” This is followed by a nominative feminine singular from the definite article used as a demonstrative pronoun, plus a)koh again—“moreover that message.” Finally there is a preposition phrase, and still no verbs; we are still in the field of ellipsis: dia plus the ablative of means from r(h)ma. It means literally, through the agency of a word or a doctrinal discourse. Then the objective genitive of Christos (χριστός) [pronounced krees-TOHSS]. It is correctly translated, “a doctrinal discourse about Christ.”

Translation: “Consequently, that faith comes from a message; moreover, that message comes through the agency of a doctrinal discourse about Christ.”

In other words, there must be an evangelist to communicate the gospel.

Principle

1. There must be an evangelist, a pastor, an individual believer, a missionary to communicate the gospel to those who have positive volition at God-consciousness.
2. Therefore to reach people in foreign countries with the gospel there must be a missionary. To have a missionary he must have a base, and the base is the client nation.
3. The client nation must possess establishment function, including freedom. The client nation cannot function apart from the laws of divine establishment.
4. Under the function of establishment there must be evangelism within a client nation, and for evangelism to occur there must be freedom.
5. As a result of such evangelism there must exist a body of believers within that client nation who from the standpoint of this context fall into two categories.
6. Category #1: those who remain behind in a client nation to grow in grace and support missionaries.
7. Category #2: those who grow in grace and are sent out from the client nation to other peoples as missionaries.
8. Israel failed as a client nation because they lost their establishment function, they lost their freedom, they failed to evangelize, they had two categories of reversionism—believer and unbeliever, and eventually went out under the fifth cycle of discipline. They finally came to the place of ritual without reality.
9. They did not believe in Christ but used their negative volition to develop the stages of the big blot-out.
10. Therefore there were no Jewish missionaries to the Gentile nations during Old Testament times—except on rare occasions, like Jonah and Daniel as remarkable exceptions, and Jeremiah after the fall of Jerusalem.
11. From the standpoint of mechanics no one can be evangelized unless he hears the gospel. That means emphasis on the first advent of Christ, especially underlining the cross.
12. There can only be one subject for evangelism—not sin, not social action, not giving money, not being baptized or joining the church, but the saving work of Jesus Christ on the cross.

Lesson #684

684 05/11/1979 Romans 10:18–19a; Psalm 19:1–4 Provision for positive volition at God-consciousness from observation of the universe; no excuse at the Last Judgment

Romans 10:18 But I ask, did they not hear? Indeed: “Their voice has gone out into all the earth, and their words to the ends of the world.”

Verse 18 – divine provision for positive volition, which means the world has been evangelized in every generation in spite of the big blot-out. The failure of people to accept Christ does not imply non-evangelization. Learn to distinguish between two concepts: evangelization of the world and the conversion of the entire world. Evangelization of the world is a legitimate biblical doctrine; the conversion of the entire world is a heresy, the heresy of post-millennialism.

“But” is the adversative conjunction allá (ἀλλά) [pronounced ah-LAH] which sets up a contrast between Israel’s failure as a client nation, as well as individuals, and at the same time the fact that God’s plan moves on. With it is the present active indicative of the verb légō (λέγω) [pronounced LEH-goh], to communicate, to say, to speak. The present tense is aoristic present for punctiliar action in present time, indicating a slight change of subject in order to add great rational emphasis to what has already been taught. Active voice: Paul produces the action of the verb as the continuation of a debater’s technique. The indicative mood is declarative, indicating the fact that we have an independence of qualification or condition.

We have a double negative here, mê (μή) [pronounced may] ouk (οὐκ) [pronounced ook]. mê (μή) [pronounced may] is the negative adverb used with the subjunctive; ouk (οὐκ) [pronounced ook] is the negative adverb used with the indicative mood. The two of them are combined to have a slightly different implication. A double negative in the English means a positive, but a double negative in the Greek is the strongest negative. In questions with mê (μή) [pronounced may] a negative answer is expected; in questions with ou (οὐ) [pronounced oo] or ouk (οὐκ) [pronounced ook] a positive answer is expected. But in questions with mê (μή) [pronounced may] ouk (οὐκ) [pronounced ook], mê (μή) [pronounced may] is the negative with the verb and therefore a strong affirmative is expected. The verb is the aorist active indicative of akoúō (ἀκούω) [pronounced ah-KOO-oh], which means to hear. “But I say, Have they not heard?” The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it gathers the action of the verb into one entirety and spread over a period of time when Israel acted as a client nation to God, until the time that Paul wrote this passage in Romans. Active voice: Paul notices and presents the Gentiles as producing the action of the verb, in spite of the failure of Israel to function as a client nation. This is also the interrogative indicative which assumes that there is an actual fact which may be stated in answer to the question. Again, in questions with mê (μή) [pronounced may] the verb is negated, meaning that the answer to the question is based on ou (οὐ) [pronounced oo], and therefore the question expects an affirmative answer.

Because of the double negative we now have the answer. It comes out in combining three particles into one word with one accent between them—menoun ge (γέ) [pronounced geh], and it is translated as an emphatic positive—“Indeed they have, certainly they have, emphatically yes.” Jewish failure is the principle here. Jewish failure as a client nation does not hinder God’s plan in evangelizing every generation. He evangelizes every generation with or without the client nation. Principle: There is no such thing as God making His plan depend on you or me, or any other person.

Principle

1. Jewish failure in the big blot-out did not hinder the Gentiles from hearing the Word of God.
2. It has been stated that you must hear the gospel to respond by faith in Jesus Christ.
3. In view of the fact that Paul has previously stated that the Gentiles were saved by faith in Christ (Romans 9:30-33) it is obvious that Paul will answer this debater's technique with an emphatic yes.

The Old Testament documentation is taken from Psalm 19:4. We need to be careful about something here. It is very simply while we are dealing with the principles that teach the interpretation to ignore the fact that God's plan of eternity past—depending upon God's perfect character and integrity—is not only going to go right on, but to fail to understand that nothing depends on you and that you depend on God will involve yourself in a great deal of arrogance.

Psalm 19:1-4.

Verse 1 – “The heavens are telling the glory of God.” Why? So that people can reach God-consciousness.

“and the firmament [the earth] is declaring the work of his hands.” In other words, you can study the earth in many ways and come to the conclusion that the order that is found must have someone who started it. So this verse is dealing with the subject of God-consciousness.

Verse 2 – “Day to day pours forth speech.” Speech comes from words. Words are formed in the mind to make thought and out comes speech. Each day when you learn a little more about life you come closer to realising that all of this could not just have happened. You come to the conclusion that behind it all is a God, there is someone greater than what we have in this world.

“night unto night showeth knowledge” – back up the fact that by studying the stars and the universe brings us to the same conclusion.

Verse 3 – “There is no speech, nor are there words, their voice is not heard.” The universe which teaches the reality of the Creator, the reality of God, does not actually speak to you and say there is a God; you have come to this conclusion through your own function of reason.

Verse 4 – “But their sound has gone out through all the earth, and their utterance to the ends of the world.” Once a person has reached God-consciousness and has thrown up positive signals, while no one spoke out of heaven and said, I am God, he had to come to the conclusion of the existence of God through his own thought pattern in his own way. Once he did, positive volition went up and the sound went out through all the earth—the sound of the gospel.

1. This much of verse 4 has been quoted by Paul (Romans 10:18) to document complete evangelization of the world in every generation of human history.
2. This means that Gentiles, as well as Jews, have been evangelized. This means especially Gentiles during the dispensation of Israel.
3. While the Jews as a client nation to God failed to evangelize the Gentiles their positive volition at God-consciousness demanded that they receive the gospel message through some other means.
4. Therefore God by-passed the Jews under the big blot-out and used other means to reveal Jesus Christ as the only saviour.
5. God recognized +V at God-consciousness and provided gospel information so that anyone could believe in the Lord Jesus Christ. This principle has always been true.

In verse four we have two lines. The first line deals with God-consciousness and the second line, in reality, deals with gospel hearing. It relates God-consciousness to gospel hearing.

Romans 10:18—The word ἠκούσθη is in the nominative singular subject and is at the end of the phrase. It means sound or voice: their sound or their voice. This is the sound or voice of nature. The word “their” is the possessive genitive plural from the intensive pronoun αὐτός (αὐτός) [pronounced ow-TOSS], used as a third person plural personal pronoun. It means their. So we have their sound or their voice.

Next we have an aorist active indicative of ἐξέρχεται, and it means to go out. The aorist tense is a culminative aorist, it views the God-consciousness of the human race in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, i.e. the world is evangelized in every generation. It emphasizes the result. All +V in history has been evangelized. The aorist tense gathers all generations of history into one entirety and says in effect, there never was a person who was positive at God-consciousness who did not have an opportunity to hear the gospel. There are a lot of places where the gospel is not even so much as uttered. That is solid negative volition at God-consciousness which is tantamount to rejection of Christ as saviour. Evangelization means everyone who was positive, and often many others, are given the opportunity of hearing the gospel. The active voice: nature produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of doctrine, the reality of God-consciousness.

With this is a prepositional phrase, eis (εἰς) [pronounced ICE] plus the accusative of the adjective pás (πάς) [pronounced pahs] and the noun gh—“to all the earth.” Again, this line deals with the subject of God-consciousness which always precedes gospel hearing.

“and their words unto the ends of the world” – we have a connective use of the conjunction kai which merely introduces the second line. It is not comparable to anything in the Hebrew. The subject is the nominative plural from r(hma, and with the genitive plural again it means “and their words [or, message].” It refers to the gospel. Then a prepositional phrase, eis (εἰς) [pronounced ICE] plus the accusative of the adjective peraj which means ends in the sense of the earth being spherical, not in the sense of the earth being square. The descriptive genitive with peraj is o)ikoumenhj, which does not refer to the world as planet earth, it refers to that part of planet earth occupied by people, the world of the inhabited earth.

Translation: “But I say, They have no all heard, have they? Certainly they have, their voice [of nature] has gone out to the entire earth, and their words to the ends of the inhabited earth.”

Conclusion

1. This is a specific answer to the problem of the evangelization of the Gentiles in Old Testament times, but it applies also to every generation of history.
2. There never has been a generation of history which has not been evangelized.
3. God knew in eternity past the soul of every person in history.
4. He knew every positive volition at God-consciousness and responded in grace.
5. It is the integrity of God which provides gospel hearing for every case of positive volition at God-consciousness.
6. Every human being in history is therefore without excuse at the great white throne judgement.
7. Every person of history, Jew or Gentile, has the same chance or opportunity through faith in the Lord Jesus Christ.
8. When Christ was on the cross every sin in the human race was imputed to Him and judged.
9. Since all sins were judged at the cross there is no such thing as a person overlooked.
10. The first line of Psalm 19:4 deals with God-consciousness; the second line to gospel hearing. Positive volition at God-consciousness is a guaranteed opportunity to hear the gospel.

11. The big blot-out does not hinder the plan of God. The big blot-out in any client nation does not hinder the complete evangelization of the world in every generation.

Verses 19-21, documentation of Old Testament scripture regarding the big blot-out. While this passage is addressed to us it is about the Jew, and therefore documentation from the Old Testament scriptures is absolutely necessary.

Romans 10:19 But I ask, did Israel not know? First, Moses says: "I will provoke you to jealousy by those not a nation; I will anger you by a nation without understanding."

Verse 19 – quotation from Deuteronomy 32:21. It begins with the adversative conjunction allá (ἀλλά) [pronounced ahl-LAH] and the present active indicative of the verb léγω (λέγω) [pronounced LEH-goh]. Tis is an aoristic present, punctiliar action in present time. Active voice: Paul produces the action of the verb as the human writer under the ministry of the Spirit, and he continues his rhetorical debater's technique. The indicative mood is declarative for the fact that he is now going to present fresh documentation.

The negative mê (μή) [pronounced may] is used in an interrogative clause to express doubt. Furthermore, the negative mê (μή) [pronounced may] also expects in a question an answer, no. The subject is Israêl (Ισραήλ) [pronounced is-rah-ALE], and with it is the aorist active indicative of ginôskô (γινώσκω) [pronounced gih-NOH-skoh], which means generally to know by experience. With it is another negative, ouk (οὐκ) [pronounced ook]—"Did Israel fail to know?" The negative ou (οὐ) [pronounced oo] follows, meaning no. They knew. The constative aorist of ginôskô (γινώσκω) [pronounced gih-NOH-skoh] is for a fact or action extended over a period of time. In other words, there was never was a Jew in the Old Testament who didn't know by the time he was five years old or have a clear picture of the gospel. They all knew. Ginôskô (γινώσκω) [pronounced gih-NOH-skoh] is used for a very simple reason: they knew by watching the ritual and hearing the explanation. They knew, and then they said yes or no.

Note that a) lla léγω (λέγω) [pronounced LEH-goh] here is used twice. It begins this verse and the previous one. In each verse Paul uses the debater's question to enter a plea on behalf of Israel. In each case the plea is refuted by the facts. God judges on the basis of facts—that is the principle. In the previous verse Paul enters a plea about hearing the gospel, and in this verse an understanding of what they heard. "But I say" is merely to differentiate between the two rhetorical questions which have set up a debater's technique. Each one is a different subject but he states a negative question that demands a positive answer. So, when they are saying no they are agreeing. In each case the plea is refuted by the evidence.

Verse 19 quotes from Deuteronomy 32:21. "But" us the adversative conjunction allá (ἀλλά) [pronounced ahl-LAH]; "I say" is the present active indicative of the verb léγω (λέγω) [pronounced LEH-goh], which means to say, to think, or to communicate. Here it means to communicate. The aorist present tense is for punctiliar action in present time. Active voice: Paul produces the action of the verb as a continuation of the debater's technique. This is a declarative indicative for the reality of the canon of scripture. The reality of the writing of Paul, the human author, has been divinely inspired under the principle of plenary, verbal inspiration of the scripture. Next is the negative mê (μή) [pronounced may] which is used in a question. This negative adverb when found in a question means that the answer to the question is no. The nominative singular subject of Israêl (Ἰσραήλ) [pronounced is-rah-ALE] and the aorist active indicative of the verb ginôskô (γινώσκω) [pronounced gih-NOH-skoh] plus the negative ou (οὐ) [pronounced oo] follows. The constative aorist is for a fact or action extended over a period of time, over the entire Old Testament history. Active voice: Israel did not produce the action--the negative ou (οὐ) [pronounced oo]. In other words, they did not know. The indicative mood is an interrogative indicative which assumes that there is an actual fact which may be stated in answer to the question. "But I say, Did Israel fail to know?" and the answer is no. This is the basis for understanding scar tissue of the soul. Every Jew in every generation of Israel's history, from the Exodus to A.D. 70, understood the gospel at a very early age. Not only did they understand it but they said no to what they understood, and the longer they said no the more scar tissue they put on their soul and finally there came a no where the gospel was abstruse. What started out to be clear became abstruse by the building of scar tissue on the soul. No toward the gospel or no toward any form of doctrine builds scar tissue on the soul, and finally truth can no longer be understood.

The Jews could not say they did not understand the gospel because they did understand it, it was very clear to them. So Israel is without excuse because they not only did hear the gospel but at the same time they understood clearly what they heard. Paul now goes on to the two greatest witnesses in Jewish history, Moses and Isaiah, and in effect Paul calls Moses and Isaiah to the witness stand to answer the debater's question about Israel's hearing of the gospel and Israel's understanding of the gospel. Moses is called to the witness stand to give evidence of Jewish jealousy over Gentile salvation—Deuteronomy 32:21. Then in the next two verses Isaiah's testimony is entered as evidence that Israel understood the gospel which they rejected under the function of the big blot-out.

Romans 10:20 And Isaiah is very bold and says: "I was found by those not seeking Me; I became manifest to those not inquiring after Me."

Verse 20 will quote Isaiah 65:1 as evidence for Gentiles, that they understood the gospel without the law. Verse 21 quotes Isaiah 65:2 as evidence for the Jews that they understood and rejected the same gospel that the Gentiles understood and accepted.

"First Moses saith" – the nominative from the adjective numeral prôtos (πρῶτος) [pronounced PROHT-oss] means first in the order of studying. It means here, first of several witnesses—first to the witness stand. "First [witness] Moses speaks" – the present active indicative of légō (λέγω) [pronounced LEH-goh] in which we take the testimony of Moses. This is a static present tense for a perpetual state of Deuteronomy 32:21, a permanent witness against Israel throughout every generation of their history as a client nation. Active voice: Moses as the human author, Moses as the witness, speaks. The indicative mood is declarative for the veracity, for the correct evidence, that Moses gives. Now the quotation from Deuteronomy in corrected translation from the Hebrew text:

"They [the Jews in every generation] have made me [God] jealous [an anthropopathism] with a not God [something that is not God--idols]; they have provoked me [Jesus Christ, the God of Israel] to anger with their idols: so I will make them [the Jews] jealous with those who are not a people [the Gentiles]; I will provoke them to anger with a stupid nation [and Gentile nation in history that has been a client nation to God]."

This is the deposition of Moses regarding the trend of the Jews in every generation—they have clearly understood the gospel and they have clearly rejected it. Now let's see what Paul does with the quotation from Deuteronomy in the Greek language. Notice that the first half of the verse is not quoted by Paul, but it is self-evident, obvious. The subject they refers to unbelieving Jews who have entered into the big blot-out.

"I" is egó (ἐγώ) [pronounced ehg-OH], the personal pronoun. Starting out with this is most unusual, but Jesus Christ is speaking, the God of Israel. This is followed by the verb.

Principle

1. This is quoted from Deuteronomy 32:21 which begins with the first person singular personal pronoun, referring to the Lord Jesus Christ as the God of Israel.
2. The integrity of God judges the big blot-out, not only in time but also in eternity.
3. First in the sequence is divine judgment of the big blot-out.

4. Such divine judgement indicates that Israel not only heard but they understood what they heard and rejected it as the first stage in scar tissue of the soul.
5. Having rejected the gospel which they understood they came to believe the lie that there was no first advent. This was the big blot-out or maximum scar tissue of the soul.
6. The big blot-out is dramatized by the great inversion of the Old Testament in which a reversal of position between Jew and Gentile became the basis for punishing the Jews and blessing the Gentiles.
7. The inversion finds Gentiles without the Jewish spiritual heritage not only believing in Christ but advancing to maturity, while Jews with total divine revelation reject Christ as saviour and enter into scar tissue of the soul.
8. The inversion, then, is composed of saved Gentiles and unsaved Jews.
9. The inversion includes believing Gentiles possessing God's righteousness and unbelieving Jews possessing only their own self-righteousness. So the inversion sets up a contrast between the imputed righteousness of God possessed by Gentile believers and the self-righteousness of the Jew, as God accepts His own righteousness and rejects the self-righteousness of the Jew.
10. The inversion includes the God of Israel blessing the Gentiles and punishing the Jew. Therefore, punishment by inversion includes Jewish arrogance turned into jealousy over the Gentiles. (Arrogance is prone to jealousy)

The first verb in the quotation the future active indicative of the verb parazhlow.

It means to provoke to jealousy, to arouse jealousy, to make jealous—"I will make you jealous." The future tense is the predictive future which prophecies a divine judgment as a result of the great inversion. The inversion finds the Jews and the Gentiles changing roles. The Jews had the perfect spiritual heritage, a complete and total revelation. At an early age every Jew had received gospel information which he thoroughly understood but rejected. Every time he rejected it he built an additional layer of scar tissue on the soul. So what he started out understanding, i.e. the gospel, by the time he has said no a few times he no longer understands it, and therefore accepts the lie—false doctrine, false teaching. Therefore he has darkness or the blackout of the soul. The Gentile was minus that great spiritual heritage but had positive volition at God-consciousness. Therefore God was responsible to provide the gospel, sometimes through a Jewish missionary, like Daniel, but more frequently through other means. So that when the Gospel was presented to the Gentile he said yes and responded instantly. Because of his response he entered into the plan of God in which he received information. Such a person was Cyrus the Great of Persia. The Jew became jealous of the Gentile who fulfilled this principle. So the predictive future prophecies judgment expected to occur when the Jews fall into the pattern of the big blot-out. When the Jews rejected Christ and blotted out the first advent in their souls they were punished by an inversion—salvation and blessing to those they scorn from arrogance.

They look down at the Gentile, he doesn't have their heritage, their background. The active voice: the justice of God produces the action of the verb which is punishment by inversion. The indicative mood is declarative, viewing the action of the verb from the viewpoint of historical reality.

Next we have the accusative plural direct object from the second person singular pronoun su—"I will make you jealous." This is the first part of the inversion. Then there is a preposition epí (ἐπί) [pronounced eh-PEE] plus the locative singular from ethnos (ἔθνος, οὐς, τό) [pronounced EHTH-noss]—"over a nation." There is one other word with ethnos (ἔθνος, οὐς, τό) [pronounced EHTH-noss] and that is the negative adverb ouk (οὐκ) [pronounced ook], which to the Jews is not a nation, not a client nation. A Gentile nation, in other words—"I will make you jealous over a no nation."

Principle

1. The no nation is a reference to the Gentiles of the Old Testament. They were not and could not be a client nation to God—one exception: Persia for 70 years, and part of that 70 years might even include the Chaldean empire.
2. Gentiles without client nation status believed in Christ, making the Jews with client nation status very jealous because they followed their faith in Christ with advance to maturity.
3. But they could not have been jealous unless they were first arrogant. No one is ever jealous without prior arrogance—pride.
4. Arrogance precedes jealousy.
5. No one is ever jealous apart from abnormal self-consciousness.
6. Jewish arrogance came from their own negative volition. First they said no to the gospel. Every time they said no they built a new layer of scar tissue of the soul and at the same time created darkness in the soul. The darkness set up the vacuum so that they believed the lie.

Principle

1. The big blot-out is jealous of theocratic inversion. Perhaps this explains the Jewish antagonism toward the first advent of Christ.
2. It does not mean that the blessing of the gospel has passed from Jew to Gentile in the Church Age, however.
3. Since A.D 70 there has not been, nor cannot be, a Jewish client nation to God. There will not be a Jewish client nation to God until the second advent of Christ in the Millennium.
4. Therefore the great inversion continues throughout the Church Age and the Tribulation.

5. Remember that an inversion is a reversal, position, or relation.
6. All three characteristics are found in the great inversion of the Church Age.
7. There is first of all an inversion of relationship, i.e. a reversal of relationship. Gentiles are believers in Christ and Jews are unbelievers rejecting Christ as saviour (there are always marvellous exceptions). We are talking about the general trend of the Church Age.
8. Secondly, there is a reversal of position. Gentiles possess the righteousness of God through faith in Christ, while Jewish unbelievers possess self-righteousness by means of keeping the law and following the ritual of Israel. The great spiritual heritage is not in the ritual, the ritual merely illustrates doctrine. The Jews have rejected the doctrine but accepted the ritual.
9. There is a third factor: the reversal of order. Saved Gentiles become royal family of God while unsaved Jews are excluded from the family of God.

“and by a foolish nation I will anger you” – by a foolish nation is the preposition ἐπί (ἐπί) [pronounced eh-PEE] plus the locative singular from ethnos (ἔθνος, οὐς, τό) [pronounced EHTH-noss], plus an adjective, asunetos (ἄσύνετος) [pronounced as-OON-ay-toss], which means dull, stupid, without understanding. This verse implies that the Gentiles are dull or stupid in relationship to the Jews. Note that Paul converts the Hebrew nabal, without understanding. The Gentiles were without understanding, however, because they did not have doctrine.

With this is an Attic Greek future active indicative of parorgizw which follows; it means to make angry, plus the accusative plural direct object from su—“I will make you angry.”

Translation: “But I say, Did Israel fail to understand? No. First [witness] Moses speaks, I will make you jealous over a no nation, and I will make you angry over a nation without understanding.”

Principle

1. There is a near and distant fulfilment of this punishment. It is under the principle of the dual fulfilment of prophecy.
2. The near fulfilment includes case history Jonah.
3. The distant fulfilment in Isaiah’s day emphasizes the Gentile client nations of the Church Age.
4. But fulfilments include the great inversion in which saved Gentiles are blessed by God while unsaved Jews are disciplined by God.

5. The Jews who are guilty of the big blot-out are punished by inversion. (Being smart is nothing until it is converted to wisdom; wisdom is being smart without arrogance).
6. When a reverse pivot of too large a blot-out occurs then added to punishment by inversion is a great historical disaster—like the holocaust that occurred in Hitler’s time, and the terrible things that happened in the Inquisition, etc.
7. To be replaced by a nation without the Word of God—by Persia, Chaldea, SPQR, the Franks, etc—has aroused the indignation of the smart people of Israel.
8. Therefore, inversion as a punishment for reversion is the subject for this quotation. Moses is talking about inversion being a system of punishment for reversionism.
9. But the inversion punishment could not occur unless the Jews had been a client nation, unless they understood the gospel, and unless they were a very smart and moral people.
10. Therefore Paul says the Mosaic prophecy and the divine fulfilment throughout the dispensation of the Israel and the Church Age proved that the Jews understood the gospel which they rejected.
11. Inversion discipline resulted from rejection after understanding the gospel, and behind that rejection is arrogance. Arrogance rejects the truth.

Verse 20 – “But” is the postpositive conjunctive particle de, used to introduce the next witness. We can translate this “next [witness] Isaiah.” Then we have a verb to describe that this witness is not only honest but also very courageous—present active indicative from a)potolmaw [ἀπό (ἀπό) [pronounced aw-PO] = emphasiz, extreme; tolmáō (τολμάω) [pronounced tol-MAH-oh] = brave], which means maximum courage without loss of sanity. Some people appear to be courageous at times because they are not thinking. They do not anticipate the dangers and they have no imagination. But this word means to have maximum courage without being stupid, without being emotional. This is cold, clear moral courage.

This is a historical present tense which Isaiah’s moral courage in the past with the vividness of a present occurrence. The courage comes out in his writing, it is a part of the Word of God, and when it is remembered that his contemporaries were often ready to stone him and that finally one of his contemporaries sawed him in two, his courage can be understood. Active voice: Isaiah, the human writer of the book, produces the action of the verb under the ministry of the Holy Spirit, a demonstration of great moral courage under the filling of the Spirit. The indicative mood is declarative for the historical reality of Isaiah’s courage as a witness.

This is a part of an idiom—a)potolmaw plus de. The idiom is actually taken from the writings of Demosthenes. The rest of the idiom includes the conjunction kai plus the present active indicative of légo (λέγω) [pronounced LEH-goh] which is translated like an infinitive. We translate kai here, “as.” So this is correctly translated, “Next witness, Isaiah, is so bold as to say.” This is not the literal translation, it is the correct translation. The present tense of duration denotes what was begun in the past and continues into the present time. Active voice: Isaiah produces the action in making his statement in Isaiah 65:1. The indicative mood is declarative to fulfil the reality of the idiom.

“I was found” – aorist passive indicative of the verb heuriskō (εὕρισκω) [pronounced hyoo-RIHS-koh] which means to discover or to be found. In the passive voice it means “I was discovered” or “I was found.” The aorist tense is a constative aorist for a fact or an action extended over a period of time. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, and it refers to the inversion discipline in history wherever it occurs. The passive voice: Jesus Christ receives the action of the verb as the God of Israel. He was discovered by Gentiles when Jews rejected Him. This refers historically to A.D. 70, the administration of the fifth cycle of discipline. It also refers to other administrations of the fifth cycle of discipline in the past—721 B.C. when the northern kingdom went out in the 5th cycle by the hand of the Assyrians, and 586 B.C. when the southern kingdom went out through Nebuchadnezzar. Whenever that happened there was always a Gentile nation to fill in as client nation until the situation could be restored. The reality of the indicative mood is important because not only does it represent the verbal idea from the viewpoint of reality, but the reality is the fact that the Gentiles in the dispensation of Israel found Christ because they were positive at God-consciousness. Isaiah 65:1 indicates that Gentile conversion existed in every generation of the previous dispensation apart from the function of client nation Israel.

Isaiah 65:1 in corrected translation from the Hebrew: “I have permitted myself to be sought” – a tolerative niphāl perfect from the verb darash—“by those [Gentiles] who did not ask for me”—i.e. they did not have the spiritual heritage and they did not know in whom to believe for salvation, but they were positive at God-consciousness. But the Jews didn’t send out missionaries because they were in a state of apostasy, operation big blot-out. Does God let the positive volition of the Gentiles die without having the opportunity of believing in Christ? Never! So He uses other means and other circumstances in order to reach these people. Therefore the Gentiles were being blessed of God because they were in the plan of God, whereas the Jews who had the spiritual heritage for the plan of God rejected it. So there is cursing for the Jew in apostasy and there is blessing for the Gentile in the momentum of the plan of God.

We have a second phrase, “I [Jesus Christ, the God of Israel] have permitted myself to be found.” This time we have the tolerative niphāl perfect from the verb matsa. This means gospel hearing.

“by those who did not seek me,” i.e. under the name of Jesus Christ, because they were Gentiles. So the first line in the Hebrews deals with positive volition at God-consciousness and the second line in the Hebrew deals with positive volition at gospel hearing. Paul says that Isaiah as a witness is very courageous because Isaiah is a Jew and he is talking about Gentile salvation, which stirred up the unbelieving Jews.

The continuation of Isaiah 65:1 which Paul did not quote, says, “I [Jesus Christ] said, Here am I, here am I, to a nation which has not called on my name.” In other words, the Jews [client nation] have said no, whereas the Gentiles who are not the client nation and have no heritage have said yes. Therefore they have blessing and the Jews have cursing. So there is inversion. Furthermore, the Jews discover the prosperity of these Gentiles and are jealous. The prophetic part of this passage is the fact that the Gentiles are also saved in the Tribulation.

Next in Romans 10:20 the instrumental plural from the definite article tois (τοῖς) [pronounced toiç] used as a demonstrative pronoun. The demonstrative pronoun in its function calls special attention to the Gentiles as the objects of evangelism and salvation apart from any Jewish missionary. It is correctly translated “by those.”

The dative plural present active participle from the verb zêteō (ζητέω) [pronounced zay-TEH-oh] is next. The present tense is a historical present, it views a past event with the vividness of a present occurrence. It refers to Gentiles who did not know how to call upon the name of the Lord Jesus Christ after God-consciousness because they didn’t know about Jesus Christ. They didn’t have the spiritual heritage of the Jews—the Levitical sacrifices, the sacred articles of furniture which taught Christology, the modus operandi of the Levitical priesthood which gave ritual demonstrations daily of who and what Christ is. They were positive at God-consciousness but they had not direction for their positive volition once they wanted a relationship with God. The active voice: the Gentiles with +V produced the action. The participle is circumstantial for Gentiles being positive at God-consciousness.

With this is the accusative singular direct object from the first person singular pronoun egō (ἐγώ) [pronounced ehg-OH]. It is translated, “I [Jesus Christ, the God of Israel] was found by those [Gentiles]”—the demonstrative pronoun always specifies the category—“who were not looking for me.” They wanted salvation but they didn’t know who the saviour was.

1977 Romans

Lesson #688

688 05/17/1979 Romans 10:20b; Isa. 65:2 Jesus Christ's direct evangelization of the Jews; doctrine of inversion, reverse roles of Jews and Gentiles

Romans 10:20 And Isaiah is very bold and says: “I was found by those not seeking Me; I became manifest to those not inquiring after Me.”

Translation: “Next witness, Isaiah, is so bold as to say, I [Jesus Christ] was found by those Gentiles who were not looking for me.”

“I was made manifest” – this is actually I became, because we have the aorist middle indicative of the verb gínomai (γίνομαι) [pronounced GIN-oh-my], and it means here to become. It should be translated I became because the constative aorist refers to a fact or action extended over a period of time, the period of time being the dispensation of Israel from the Exodus to A.D. 70. The middle voice is the indirect middle in which Christ as the agent produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of gospel hearing to those Gentiles who were positive at God-consciousness. Then we have a predicate nominative singular from the noun ε)mfanhj—manifest or known, and it refers to being comprehended. “I [Jesus Christ] became manifest.”

The dative plural indirect object of the definite article τοις (τοις) [pronounced toiς] is used here as a demonstrative pronoun, emphasizing then Gentiles who had positive volition at God-consciousness—“to those.” With it is the dative of indirect object indicating that these Gentiles are the ones in whose interest Christ became manifest. They were positive at God-consciousness, they had no spiritual heritage, they did not know the Lord Jesus Christ, they lived in an area of darkness in their own circumstances, and therefore the Lord Jesus Christ had to reveal Himself to them some other way, apart from client nation Israel. The manifestation was not accomplished by the client nation Israel but through other means. There is also a dative plural present active participle from the verb ε)perwtaw which means to ask or to request, and here with the accusative singular direct object of the personal pronoun ε)γω (ε)γω) [pronounced ehg-OH] it means simply to request. The historical present of the participle views the past event with the vividness of a present occurrence. While the Gentiles were positive at God-consciousness they did not know the object of faith for salvation, and therefore Christ had to be revealed to them. This ordinarily would have been the job of client nation Israel sending out missionaries but because of their failure under the big blot-out they did not send out missionaries. Nevertheless Christ was revealed by other means so that in every generation of the Old Testament Gentiles believed in Christ with or without the Jewish function and cooperation. Active voice: the Gentiles with positive volition at God-consciousness produce the action of the verb. The participle is circumstantial for Gentiles having the opportunity for common grace apart from the client nation Israel.

Translation: “Next [witness] Isaiah is so bold as to say, I [Jesus] was found by those Gentiles who were not looking for me; and I [Jesus] became manifest to those Gentiles who did not ask about me.”

Principle

1. In all of human history, in every generation from Adam to the present, and from the present to the last generation of the Millennium, God does not ignore positive volition at God-consciousness. He provides gospel information on which to be saved by faith in the Lord Jesus Christ.
2. The conventional method of providing such information is the function of client nation missionaries. Throughout all history, beginning with the Exodus, the conventional method of providing information to positive volition at God-consciousness is the function of client nation missionaries.
3. The backup system when a client nation fails includes many other forms of gospel information. There is always a backup system.

4. Obviously Paul has made his point. He is not developing the backup systems in detail to satisfy our curiosity but he is pointing out that Israel has failed. The failure of Israel as a client nation does not hinder the plan of God.

5. The client nation which fails, however, is disciplined. God not only uses other means to reveal Christ in salvation but because of the failure of the client nation that nation is under discipline. This is part of the inversion doctrine of saved Gentiles and unsaved Jews.[4]

Verse 21 – the third documentation, Isaiah 65:2. “But” is the postpositive conjunctive particle de, and it is used here in the adversative sense—to make a contrast between Jews rejecting Christ and Gentiles believing in Him. With it is the prepositional phrase, prós (πρός) [pronounced pross] plus the accusative singular of the definite article. The definite article merely indicates the case involved in the noun which is the object of the preposition. “Israel” is not declined, it is an indeclinable noun. This should be translated “face to face to Israel.” Now the Lord Jesus Christ turns to Israel in a special appeal to them to believe in Himself in Isaiah 65:2. Isaiah’s witness, then, actually shows the Lord Jesus Christ evangelizing in Israel. That tells us something. Just as the Lord Jesus Christ evangelized in Israel where the Jews said no, obviously then he would evangelize the Gentiles where they had said yes at God-consciousness. So this is the greatest witness of all, for since there are no Gentiles to go to the Jews in their status quo, the big blot-out, Jesus Christ Himself goes to them. This is the ultimate in using Isaiah as a witness, and Paul reminds his brethren according to the flesh, the Jews, that this as, as it were, the greatest insult of all—the God of Israel must personally appeal to the Jews who have the perfect heritage for this.

We have a present active indicative of légō (λέγω) [pronounced LEH-goh] to quote the Lord Jesus Christ. “Face to face with Israel he [Jesus Christ] says.” The present tense is a present of duration, it denotes what happens in the past and continues into the present time. In every generation there are always Jews who reject Jesus Christ as saviour. Jewish negative volition, then, is the issue. Active voice: the subject, the Lord Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb in the constant and persistent evangelization of the Jews in every generation of history. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the evangelization of the Jew.

Isaiah 65:2 – “I [Jesus Christ] have spread out my hands all day long to a rebellious people [Jew with negative volition toward the gospel and their resultant big blackout].” The key here is the piel perfect from the verb parash. It indicates continuous and intense evangelism to the Jews throughout the entire dispensation of Israel. Parash is a spreading of the hands, it is a desperate appeal to the Jews. The next phrase: “who walk in ways which are not good.” The word walk is the qal active participle of halak—linear aktionsart means they keep on walking in every generation. They are walking in ways which are said to be in the Hebrew, lo tob. Tob is equivalent to agathos (ἀγαθός) [pronounced ag-ath-OSS], and agathos (ἀγαθός) [pronounced ag-ath-OSS] is the way of expressing the plan of God. They are walking in ways which are not the plan of God.

“after their own thoughts” – machashabah, which has the third masculine plural suffix with it, referring to Jews guilty of the big blot-out. The word thoughts here refers to thoughts and machinations.

Hebrew translation: “I [Jesus Christ] have spread out my hands all day long to a rebellious people [Jew with negative volition toward the gospel and their resultant big blackout], who walk in ways which are not good, after their own thoughts.” In other words, they said no to the Lord’s thoughts—to doctrine, the truth.

Romans 10:21 But as for Israel he says: “All the day I have stretched out My hands to a disobeying and contradicting people.”

Romans 10:21 – “All” is the accusative singular from the adjective holos (ὅλος, η, ον) [pronounced HOH-Ioss] which means entire, it means more than that here, it means day in an day out. It means, “I am spending all of my time evangelizing the Jews who have already rejected the gospel as presented in Codex #2, and eloquently by the prophets.

“the day” is the accusative singular from the noun hêmera (ἡμέρα) [pronounced hay-MEH-raw], day in the sense that every generation is made up of X number of days, and it means every day in that generation.

The aorist active indicative follows, ἐκτείνω means to extend to stretch out, it is actually an imploring gesture of invitation. It is the invitation to believe in Christ. The dramatic present tense takes a present reality with the certitude of a past event. Active voice: the Lord Jesus Christ, the God of Israel, performs the action. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of our Lord’s invitation to Israel for salvation. The “whole day” refers to the entire dispensation of Israel and to every generation in that dispensation.

“unto a disobedient and gainsaying people” – prepositional phrase, πρὸς (πρός) [pronounced pross] plus the accusative of laos (λαός) [pronounced lah-OSS]. This means “facing a nation.”

The accusative singular present active participle follows, the verb ἀπειθέω (ἀπειθέω) [pronounced ap-i-THEH-oh]—disobedient. Then we have the accusative singular present active participle of the verb ἀντιλέγω, which means obstinate. It is used here for the accumulation of scar tissue.

Translation: “But face to face with Israel he [the Lord Jesus Christ] says, I have extended my hands the entire day [the dispensation of Israel] face to face with a disobedient and obstinate [Jews in the big blot-out] nation.”

Principle

1. In effect, the two witnesses, Moses and Isaiah, have testified to the fact that Israel failed as a client nation.

2. The Jews, instead of using their freedom and their spiritual heritage of the law and the prophets to be evangelized and therefore to receive Christ as saviour, they rejected Him and distorted the law and the prophets, the entire Old Testament Torah, especially in relationship to the first advent.
3. The function of a client nation to God demands evangelism prior to production. You cannot represent God in a client nation in any capacity until you have a relationship with God. In other words, you have to be born again before you can be an ambassador for Christ.
4. If the Jews are not born again they cannot serve God while the Jews were under client status.
5. Therefore in every generation of the Jewish Age there was evangelism, but in every generation there was rejection of Christ as saviour so that the minority in every generation were the believers—after the Exodus generation.
6. They accepted our Lord's Alpha glory but they rejected His Omega glory.
7. Having rejected Christ as saviour under the last three stages of reversionism the Jews possessed hardness of heart.
8. There was no way that the Jews could fulfil their client nation responsibility as evangelists to the Gentiles when they completely blotted out of their souls the first advent of Christ and its salvation implications.

Chapter 11

Israel has a special history in three dispensations—the dispensation of Israel, the dispensation of the Church, and the Millennium. In the dispensation of Israel the Jews became the first client nation to God in history, after the Exodus. The four unconditional covenants to Israel guarantee that Israel will have a future forever, but only to those Jews who possess eternal life through faith in the lord Jesus Christ—in other words, true Israel. In the Church dispensation the final administration of the fifth cycle of discipline occurred forty years after the Church Age began. It resulted in the times of the Gentiles in which no Jewish nation can be a client nation to God in this dispensation. Because the Jews in this dispensation have rejected Christ as saviour they are branches broken off the good olive tree. We, the wild Gentiles, are grafted in to the good tree. That tells us that even though in many generations of history there have been relatively few Jews who have accepted Christ as saviour they are still the tree. Therefore we are grafted in to their spiritual heritage. In effect, our spiritual heritage as the Church, the royal family of God, the body of Christ, is still Jewish. Because it is we must avoid any arrogance and, above all, we must avoid like the plague that vicious type of evil called anti-Semitism. So the Jews in the dispersion still have the spiritual heritage of which we partake. The Gentile believers are grafted in; the Jewish believers are really the tree. In every generation of the Church Age there will always be Jewish believers. There never will be a generation in the dispensation of the Church without Jewish believers. The Millennium brings us to the restoration of Israel as a client nation God and the fulfilment of the four unconditional covenants.

In Romans chapter nine we learn five points about the Jews. a) the uniqueness of Israel—verses 1-5; b) the premise: all Israel is not Israel—verse 6; c) the premise was illustrated by the formation of the Jewish nation—verses 7-18; d) the premise was illustrated from the essence of God—verses 19-29; e) the premise was illustrated by the salvation of the Gentiles—verses 30-33.

In Romans chapter ten two points were added. a) the failure of Israel to accept Christ as saviour—verses 1-11; b) the failure of Israel to function as a client nation—verses 12-21.

Because of Israel's failure, does Israel have a future? That is a major consideration in chapter 11. There are three paragraphs: a) the rejection of Israel is not total—verses 1-10; b) the rejection of Israel is not final—verses 11-24; c) the perpetuation of the Jewish remnant in the Church Age demands special consideration because the nucleus for the body of Christ is the born-again Jew of the Church Age, and we, the Gentiles, are grafted in.

692 05/23/1979 Romans 11:1a Department of Energy and California; rhetorical questions; Jews not fully rejected by God; rejection of truth leads to belief of lies

The Remnant of Israel

Romans 11:1 I ask, then did God reject His people? Never may it be! For I also am an Israelite, of the seed of Abraham, of the tribe of Benjamin.

Verse 1 – a rhetorical question. “I say” is the present active indicative of the verb λέγω (λέγω) [pronounced LEH-goh]. The present tense is an aoristic present for punctiliar action in present time. The aorist conveys the idea of punctiliar action with reference to past time, but the aoristic present gives us punctiliar action in present time, and therefore sets forth an event as now occurring. Active voice: Paul in the function of debater’s technique produces the action of the verb. The aoristic present connected with the active voice tells us that this is just as pertinent right now as it was at the time of writing. The indicative mood is declarative, which views the action from the standpoint of reality.

With this is the postpositive inferential particle οὖν (οὖν) [pronounced oon] in which we have a concept, inference from what precedes, namely Romans 9:16-33 and 10:19-21. The question anticipates opposition from the brilliant minds of Israel. Those who have rejected Christ as saviour and are guilty of the big blot-out have accepted lies in place of the truth.

The nominative singular subject is ho theos (θεός) [pronounced theh-OSS]. The definite article does not have to be translated. The purpose of the definite article is merely to indicate either a noun with which you are familiar, i.e. God, or a proper noun which is set up as the subject by the use of the definite article. Next is the verb, aorist middle indicative from ἀπορῶ, to refuse, to reject, to cast away, to push aside, to repudiate, plus the negative μή (μή) [pronounced may]. The negative μή (μή) [pronounced may] in a question always demands an answer. The aorist tense is a culminative aorist, it views the event in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. The rhetorical question which demands a negative answer says, Definitely God has not repudiated His people. The middle voice emphasizes the agent or the subject. This is a direct middle, the subject acts with a view toward participating in the outcome. The indicative mood is interrogative, it assumes that there is an actual fact of doctrine which may be stated in answer to the question.

With this is the accusative singular direct object from laos (λαός) [pronounced lah-OSS], plus the possessive genitive singular from the intensive pronoun αὐτός (αὐτός) [pronounced ow-TOSS] used as the third person personal pronoun. “I say then, God has not repudiated his people, has he?” In addition to the negative μή (μή) [pronounced may] which demands a negative answer we get a strong answer, the old idiom, μή (μή) [pronounced may] genioto. The aorist optative of γίνομαι (γίνομαι) [pronounced GIN-oh-my] plus the negative μή (μή) [pronounced may] would literally be translated, “Let it not be so.” But the idiom is not translated literally, it translated with something that emphasizes the no—“Emphatically not.”

Principle

1. The Jews are the people of God in the sense of election to privilege.
2. They were brought into existence as the newest of races, a race to become the first as well as the last client nation to God.
3. While they do not function as such during the times of the Gentiles, which includes the Church Age, the Jews have not been repudiated as the people of God.
4. However, racial Jews who have the genes of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob through physical birth are not qualified until they become regenerate Jews through faith in Christ.
5. We have noted that all Israel is not Israel [9:6]. Only those racial Jews who believe in the Lord Jesus Christ are true Israel.
6. The Jew was the only race to be founded on regeneration and to require regeneration for the fulfilment of the unconditional covenants.

Paul now emphasizes the strong negative by adding the explanatory postpositive conjunction gar, and with it the adjunctive use of kai, and the first person singular pronoun egó (ἐγώ) [pronounced ehg-OH] followed by the present active indicative of eimi (εἶμι) [pronounced eye-ME]. The present tense is a static present for a condition which has perpetually existed or is taken for granted as a fact. Active voice: Paul produces the action. The indicative mood is for the dogmatic historical reality involved in his statement. “For I also am an Israelite” – Israēlītēs (Ἰσραηλίτης) [pronounced is-rah-ale-EE-tace]. He adds to that the ablative singular of source from the noun fulh for tribe. Whenever any nation is developed into a client nation it evolves as a nation from establishment organization. The tribal system provided the basic system of establishment from which the client nation Israel came; “of Benjamin” – Benjamin.

Paul establishes the pattern for the Jew in the Church Age and in the times of the Gentiles. He is both a racial Jew and a regenerate Jew. The profile of Saul of Tarsus, known as Paul, forms the categorical pattern for the true remnant of Israel. Paul’s biography as a Jew is found in Philippians 3:5-9. Paul as the worst sinner in history is found in 1 Timothy 1:12-15. Remember he was the worst sinner in history because he was self-righteous. The third area of the Pauline profile is found in 1 Corinthians 15:10 where he states the fact that he is a trophy of grace where cursing is turn into blessing by the grace of God.

Because the Jews were set aside as the client nation to God they were also by A.D. 70 scattered throughout the world under the fifth cycle of discipline, sometimes called the diaspora. But this great discipline administered by the justice of God does not imply or suggest that God has cast off His people. Far from it. The regenerate Jew is always in the election of God, either as a believer in the dispensation of Israel or as a member of the royal family of God in the Church Age. If God could save Paul, then He could save any Jew. The Jews, therefore, have no excuse under the big blot-out.

Lesson #693

693 05/24/1979 Romans 11:1b–2a Arrogant self–pity; plan of God unhindered by negative volition; spankings; discipline of Israel = divine prerogative

The Remnant of Israel

Romans 11:1 I ask, then did God reject His people? Never may it be! For I also am an Israelite, of the seed of Abraham, of the tribe of Benjamin.

Translation: “I say then, the God has not repudiated his people, has he? Definitely not. For I also am an Israelite, from the tribe of Benjamin.”

Principle

1. The general overall principle introduced by this verse is: Israel is not rejected. The elect of Israel are saved and accepted forever as the people of God.
2. So an Israelite, the greatest Jew of them all, writes how God has not cast off or repudiate His people.
3. Even though there are times of great apostasy, and divine discipline which becomes national disaster, God preserves a remnant of Jews who are believers, just as He did in the time of Elijah when 7000 Jews had not bowed the knee to Baal. But there is more to it than that: 7000 Jews had formed a pivot of mature believers, preserving the northern kingdom in its time of apostasy.
4. The principle: The inevitable deliverance and preservation of a client nation to God is a spiritual factor.
5. In spite of the Satanic conspiracy the Jew continues to live on the earth. He continues to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, the God of Israel. And the unbelieving Jew continues on the earth as well.
6. The failure of some Jews to believe in Christ does not cancel the grace of God, just as the failure of some believers to accept doctrine does not hinder the plan of God.
7. Individual or collective failure to believe in Christ has never hindered the plan of God in history, and especially for Israel. And it has not hindered the validity of the Word of God.
8. The plan of God moves on with or without the Jews, with or without us as believers.

9. Failure on the part of the Jew does not abrogate the promises of God for regenerate Israel. The failure of the Jew does not cancel the promises of God for true Israel.

10. While rejection of Christ puts the Jew outside the plan of God, such individual rejection does not cancel God's plan for the elect of Israel.

11. God's promises to Israel have not been cancelled because some Jews have rejected Christ as saviour. Being a racial Jew does not imply automatic salvation.

12. The unconditional promises are fulfilled only to that Jew who believes in Christ. In other words, the only rejection of Israel is individual. The Jew who rejects Christ as saviour is out.

Principle

1. The physical descent of natural birth is worthless in the transmission of divine promises and the imputation of divine blessing.

2. The individual Jew must possess the imputed righteousness of God for the fulfilment of the blessings of his heritage.

3. This righteousness of God is only imputed through faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, the only saviour, and the God of Israel.

4. Paul as a Jew illustrates the pattern. When Paul believed in Christ God's righteousness was imputed to him.

5. Therefore as the recipient of +R God could provide logistical blessing as well as special blessing beginning at maturity.

6. Those Jews who do not possess the righteousness of God will be cast off in eternal judgment—as individuals. But Israel will go on into eternity as a nation composed of its regenerates.

7. Those Jews who believe in Christ have followed the pattern of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. Therefore regenerate Jews of the dispensation of Israel, including the Tribulation, will be the recipients and the beneficiaries of the unconditional covenants to Israel at the Second Advent.

8. Regenerate Jews of the Church Age will be blessed under a separate category since they belong to the royal family of God forever.

9. Therefore the basic principle and doctrine of verse 1: God has not, and God will not repudiate the Jew. There will always be a remnant of believing Jews in every generation of history.

Verses 2-4, the application of the foreknowledge of God.

When Bob gets to v. 9 or so, he will teach something else for 3 months, and then come back to this study, starting in v. 2. If there are additional notes to be found in the next 8 verses, then they must come from the later study.

Romans 11:2 God did not reject His people, whom He foreknew. Or do you not know what the Scripture says in Elijah, how he pleads with God against Israel:

Verse 2 – “God,” nominative singular of theos (θεός) [pronounced theh-OSS], plus the aorist middle indicative of the verb αποσῶ, and with it the negative οὐκ (οὐκ) [pronounced ook]: “God has not repudiated.”

The aorist tense of αποσῶ is a gnomic aorist for a generally accepted fact or doctrine regarded as so fixed in its certainty as to be axiomatic in its character. This is a direct middle voice, the subject acts with a view toward participating in the outcome—the preservation of Israel. The indicative mood is declarative, plus the negative οὐκ (οὐκ) [pronounced ook], emphasizing the fact that Israel has not been repudiated by God. Individuals, yes; the nation, no. Next is the accusative singular direct object from λαός (λαός) [pronounced lah-OSS], plus the possessive genitive from αὐτός (αὐτός) [pronounced ow-TOSS] is “his people.” The Jews are His people.

The accusative singular relative pronoun ὃς –“whom,” and the aorist active indicative of the verb προγινώσκω (προγινώσκω) [pronounced gih-NOH-skoh], which means to foreknow, is correctly translated, “whom he has foreknown.” The culminative aorist views the foreknowledge of God in eternity past but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results and application to our own lives.

“how” – the comparative ὡς (ὡς) [pronounced hohç] indicates the manner in which something proceeds. Here it is used as a temporal conjunction which is why we translated it “when” instead of the KJV “how.” Then comes the present active indicative of the verb ἐντυγχάνω (ἐντυγχάνω) [pronounced en-toong-KHAN-oh]. It means to petition, but when you have kata following it, the preposition, it means to speak against, to plead against in the sense of courtroom procedure. We might even say to prosecute—“when he prosecuted before God against Israel” would be a legitimate translation but we translate it, “when he pleaded to God against Israel.” The present tense is a pictorial present which presents to the mind a picture of events in the process of occurrence. The active voice: Elijah produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for historical reality.

The dative singular direct object from θεός (θεός) [pronounced theh-OSS] means here “against God” when the preposition kata is found following it, plus the definite article τὸν used as an indeclinable proper noun with Israel. It means he “pleaded to the God against Israel.” The word “saying” is not in the original, therefore we leave it out.

695 06/01/1979 1Kings 19:1–8 Fourth estate and Vietnam; ultra supergrace believer Elijah fears and forgets faith—rest and logistical grace; arrogant men vs. smart women

Elijah Flees Jezebel

1Kings 19:1 Ahab told Jezebel all that Elijah had done, and how he had killed all the prophets with the sword.

1Kings 19:2 Then Jezebel sent a messenger to Elijah, saying, "So may the gods do to me and more also, if I do not make your life as the life of one of them by this time tomorrow."

1Kings 19:3 Then he was afraid, and he arose and ran for his life and came to Beersheba, which belongs to Judah, and left his servant there.

1Kings 19:4 But he himself went a day's journey into the wilderness and came and sat down under a broom tree. And he asked that he might die, saying, "It is enough; now, O LORD, take away my life, for I am no better than my fathers."

1Kings 19:5 And he lay down and slept under a broom tree. And behold, an angel touched him and said to him, "Arise and eat."

1Kings 19:6 And he looked, and behold, there was at his head a cake baked on hot stones and a jar of water. And he ate and drank and lay down again.

1Kings 19:7 And the angel of the LORD came again a second time and touched him and said, "Arise and eat, for the journey is too great for you."

1Kings 19:8 And he arose and ate and drank, and went in the strength of that food forty days and forty nights to Horeb, the mount of God.

696 06/04/1979 1Kings 19:8–16 Dangers of arrogance in leaders; self–pity, self righteousness, inflexible and useless in the plan of God

1Kings 19:8 And he arose and ate and drank, and went in the strength of that food forty days and forty nights to Horeb, the mount of God.

The Lord Speaks to Elijah

1Kings 19:9 There he came to a cave and lodged in it. And behold, the word of the LORD came to him, and he said to him, "What are you doing here, Elijah?"

1Kings 19:10 He said, "I have been very jealous for the LORD, the God of hosts. For the people of Israel have forsaken your covenant, thrown down your altars, and killed your prophets with the sword, and I, even I only, am left, and they seek my life, to take it away."

1Kings 19:11 And he said, "Go out and stand on the mount before the LORD." And behold, the LORD passed by, and a great and strong wind tore the mountains and broke in pieces the rocks before the LORD, but the LORD was not in the wind. And after the wind an earthquake, but the LORD was not in the earthquake.

1Kings 19:12 And after the earthquake a fire, but the LORD was not in the fire. And after the fire the sound of a low whisper.

1Kings 19:13 And when Elijah heard it, he wrapped his face in his cloak and went out and stood at the entrance of the cave. And behold, there came a voice to him and said, "What are you doing here, Elijah?"

1Kings 19:14 He said, "I have been very jealous for the LORD, the God of hosts. For the people of Israel have forsaken your covenant, thrown down your altars, and killed your prophets with the sword, and I, even I only, am left, and they seek my life, to take it away."

1Kings 19:15 And the LORD said to him, "Go, return on your way to the wilderness of Damascus. And when you arrive, you shall anoint Hazael to be king over Syria.

1Kings 19:16 And Jehu the son of Nimshi you shall anoint to be king over Israel, and Elisha the son of Shaphat of Abel-meholah you shall anoint to be prophet in your place.

1Kings 19:17 And the one who escapes from the sword of Hazael shall Jehu put to death, and the one who escapes from the sword of Jehu shall Elisha put to death.

1Kings 19:18 Yet I will leave seven thousand in Israel, all the knees that have not bowed to Baal, and every mouth that has not kissed him."

The Call of Elisha

1Kings 19:19 So he departed from there and found Elisha the son of Shaphat, who was plowing with twelve yoke of oxen in front of him, and he was with the twelfth. Elijah passed by him and cast his cloak upon him.

1Kings 19:20 And he left the oxen and ran after Elijah and said, "Let me kiss my father and my mother, and then I will follow you." And he said to him, "Go back again, for what have I done to you?"

1Kings 19:21 And he returned from following him and took the yoke of oxen and sacrificed them and boiled their flesh with the yokes of the oxen and gave it to the people, and they ate. Then he arose and went after Elijah and assisted him.

697 06/05/1979 Romans 11:2b–3a Divine foreknowledge; arrogance of Elijah; results of obsession with apostasy and disaster

Romans 11:2 God did not reject His people, whom He foreknew. Or do you not know what the Scripture says in Elijah, how he pleads with God against Israel:

Translation: “God has not rejected his people whom he foreknew. Or do you not know what the scripture says about Elijah? when he pleaded to God against Israel.”

Principle

1. In the principle of this verse Paul refutes the casting off of Israel since it is impossible for God to ever repudiate what He has foreknown.
2. Since foreknowledge is a printout of the divine decrees for believers only it is obvious that regenerate Jews are in view, not Israel as a whole. It is important to understand that when it says all Israel shall be saved in Romans 11:26 it doesn't mean that at the end all Jews are going to be saved, it means all those Jews who are born again at the Second Advent, coming out of the Tribulation, will be delivered.
3. Nothing can be foreknown until it is first decreed—which means that foreknowledge and omniscience are not synonyms. Logically omniscience precedes the decrees and logically foreknowledge is a printout of the decrees.
4. There is always a remnant of believing Jews in every generation of the dispensation of Israel.
5. To this remnant of believers in Christ the unconditional covenants will be fulfilled at the second advent.
6. There was such a remnant in the time of Elijah when in self-pity and arrogance Elijah sulked in the cave. He had an attack of arrogance under pressure which produced self-pity, and later when he came out of the cave it switched to self-righteousness. He came up with a conclusion that only he was left. He was totally divorced from reality.
7. The arrogance of Elijah ignored the existence of this remnant because he was too preoccupied with what is wrong with Israel.
8. The prevalence of apostasy and degeneration does not warrant ignoring the remnant of believers or the pivot. The only hope of a nation is always the divine solution—a believer advancing to maturity. It is the pivot that changes everything.

Principle

1. The failure of many Jews to believe in Christ does not hinder the plan of God for Israel.

2. There is nothing the unbeliever can do to frustrate the plan of God, and furthermore there is nothing the believer can do to frustrate the plan of God.
3. In eternity past God knew that many Jews, though possessing the genes of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, would not possess the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, i.e. the Lord Jesus Christ, the God of Israel.
4. Nevertheless, the plan of God is constructed around believers in Christ, therefore all regenerate Jews of the previous dispensation will receive the unconditional covenants, and the failure of the unbelieving Jews will not hinder the blessing of Israel in the future.
5. God never permits human failure to cancel his promises or abrogate His plan.
6. What is true of the Jew in the dispensation of Israel is true of the believer in the Church Age, Jew or Gentile. The failure of any believer does not hinder or frustrate the plan of God.
7. The plan of God marches on with or without the cooperation of the believer.
8. Preoccupation with disaster becomes a distraction to the Christian life.

Romans 11:3 “Lord, they have killed Your prophets, they have torn down Your altars, and I alone have been left, and they are seeking my life”?

Verse 3 – the principle: preoccupation with apostasy is a distraction. This is the distraction of disaster, a quotation of 1Kings 19:10 which was repeated again in 19:14. Notice the accuracy of Paul’s quotation. He uses the words that Elijah used but it is in the Greek. In the Hebrew Elijah used the tetragrammaton, the sacred word for God. In quoting it Paul uses kurios (κύριος) [pronounced KOO-ree-oss], equivalent to Jehovah and has the basic connotation of deity. The secondary implication which will be emphasized is that the plan of God for the believer continues in time of crisis and disaster as well as in time of blessing and prosperity. God’s plan for the believer goes on whether times are good or bad. Logistical grace works just as well in time of war as in time of peace, in time of disaster as well as in time of prosperity. Therefore the believer must not become so preoccupied with disaster that he is distracted from the plan of God. This is the implication of Psalm 48:14.

“they have killed the prophets” – aorist active indicative of apokteinô (ἀποκτείνω) [pronounced ap-ok-TEE-no], which means they killed them in a terrible way, to kill with extreme violence. The culminative aorist views the disaster in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. Active voice: apostate and reversionistic Jews produced the action of the verb in the northern kingdom around B.C. 850. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the disaster and also the reality of Elijah’s obsession with disaster.

Principle:

1. Preoccupation with disaster is a distraction to both logistical and supergrace blessing.
2. Preoccupation with disaster is a distraction to doctrinal perception as well as capacity for life. There is no momentum in the plan of God and there is no motivation when you are preoccupied and obsessed with disaster or failure.
3. Obviously then, preoccupation with disaster is a distraction to the Christian way of life.
4. Disaster must be regarded in the light of the Word of God and pertinent Bible doctrine.

Preoccupation with disaster produces blind arrogance in the form of fear, self-pity, self-centeredness, and a distortion of the truth.

“prophets” – accusative plural direct object from the noun prophētēs (προφήτης) [pronounced prof-AY-tace]. This emphasizes one category being persecuted by the Ahab-Jezebel team: “they have killed your prophets,” the possessive genitive singular from the pronoun su. We do know that the prophets had been killed. What we do not know is whether they had been straight or not. There are a couple of passages which seem to indicate that they might have been apostate. In which case, better to have no clergy than confused clergy. If God put them out under the sin unto death, then that is the way it should be. If they were martyrs then the nation would not be restrained by their preaching and would follow its ultimate course to the fourth and fifth cycles of discipline.

“and digged down thine altars” – aorist active indicative of kataskaptw [kata = down; skaptw = to dig or to tear]. Here it means to tear down. The culminative aorist tense views the disaster in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of its existing results—the attack on doctrine. Apostasy and reversion always mean an attack on doctrine. Active voice: the people in apostasy have destroyed property that has a sacred connotation, the connotation related to the work of Christ on the cross where offerings under five categories were offered to portray who and what Christ is and His ministry of salvation. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality and accuracy of the historical disaster, plus Elijah’s preoccupation with it. To the extent that you become preoccupied with disaster to that extent you do something beside building scar tissue. Preoccupation with disaster starts shock, and the greater the shock waves in your soul the further you become divorced from reality.

“altars” – the accusative plural direct object from the noun quasiasthron, meaning an altar used for burn offerings, with the possessive genitive su referring to God: “they have torn down your altars.”

Principle

1. Note that the attack is against both doctrine and the communicator of doctrine in time of apostasy and national disaster. You can always tell times of apostasy. There is always an attack upon whatever spiritual forms may exist, and also upon property.
2. The prophets communicate doctrine and the altars represent doctrine.
3. All historical disaster is related to negative volition toward Bible doctrine and toward the Lord Jesus Christ (represented by the altar).
4. Rejection of the Lord Jesus Christ as saviour means rejection of Bible doctrine, which is the mind of Christ. When the lie is believed and Christ is turned against, any property which is related to it is destroyed—the altars were destroyed. This indicates the madness of the population.
5. Historical prosperity is related to adherence to doctrine, while historical disaster results from rejection of doctrine.
6. The doctrinal foundation of David's reign over Israel resulted in the prosperity of Solomon's reign.
7. The accuracy of Elijah's estimate of the situation is followed by the inaccuracy of his application. He can see what is happening but he can't explain it.
8. Elijah was still alive, therefore God had a purpose for his life.
9. Disaster must not become a source of distraction from doctrinal perception or application.
10. Disaster had finally broken Elijah's concentration, resulting in preoccupation with disaster; therefore arrogance, therefore vacillating between self-pity and self-righteousness.
11. Distraction from doctrine means self-centeredness. Self-centeredness always cracks under pressure.

“and I” – a contraction made up of two small particles, kai plus the personal pronoun egó (ἐγώ) [pronounced ehg-OH] which is kagw. It is translated literally, “and I,” but this is the intensive use, so we translate it, “in fact I.” Then follows an adjective, monos (μόνος) [pronounced MON-oss] in the nominative, and it should be translated “only” or “alone.”

Next comes the aorist passive indicative of the verb u(poleipw which means to be left in the sense of remaining. “In fact I alone am left.” The aorist tense is a dramatic aorist which states a present reality with the certitude of a past event. Passive voice: Elijah receives the action of the verb through logistical grace. The indicative mood is declarative for a simple statement of fact.

The present active indicative of zêteô (ζητέω) [pronounced zay-TEH-oh] follows—“and they seek.” The present tense is a perfective present which denotes the continuation of existing results. It refers to a fact which has come to be in the past but is emphasized as a present reality. Active voice: the apostate Jews and Phoenicians produce the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal idea from the viewpoint of reality. The accusative singular direct object psuchê (ψυχή) [pronounced psoo-KHAY] is literally soul, but generally means life in this type of a situation.

Translation: “Lord, they have killed your prophets, they have torn down your altars; and I am the only one left, and they seek my life.”

Principle

1. Self-centeredness is always a form of arrogance.
2. Such arrogance placed under pressure produces self-pity.
3. The historical disaster in northern Israel includes apostasy, economic depression, lawlessness resulting in violence.
4. God has renewed the economic discipline but the apostasy continues.
5. Elijah has become so preoccupied with the pressure of historical disaster that he has become distracted from such basic and fundamental doctrines as the fact that Jesus Christ controls history, and the principle of logistical grace.
6. Therefore Elijah has forgotten that God has a plan for his life as long as he is on this earth, and that God personally takes the responsibility for sustaining his life as long as that plan continues.

7. Elijah has in arrogance blinded his soul to a doctrine present in his soul—logistical grace.

8. So by becoming occupied with self Elijah lost the perspective of grace and succumbed to the pressure of historical disaster.

1977 Romans

Lesson #700

700 06/08/1979 Romans 11:4b–5 Elijah's abuse of authority; principle re the pivot and client nation status and hovering disaster

Romans 11:4 But what was the divine answer spoken to him? "I have left to Myself seven thousand men, who have not bowed the knee to Baal."

Verse 4 – “But.” The adversative conjunction allá (ἀλλά) [pronounced ah-LAH] sets up a contrast between arrogance and self-pity in Elijah on the one hand, plus divine viewpoint on the Other. Next is the nominative neuter interrogative pronoun tís (τις) [pronounced tihç]—“But what.” With it is the present active indicative of the verb légō (λέγω) [pronounced LEH-goh], to say, to communicate. The present tense is a historical present, it views a past event with the vividness of a present occurrence. The nominative singular subject, xrhmatismoj, means the divine answer. With it is the dative singular indirect object from the intensive pronoun autós (αὐτῶς) [pronounced ow-TOSS] used as the third person personal pronoun, and it is translated, “to him.” “But what says the divine answer to him [Elijah]?” This is an idiom which means, “What is the divine response to him?”

Principle

1. When the believer rationalizes in his right lobe instead of functioning under the faith-rest drill the human viewpoint immediately replaces the divine viewpoint.

2. Elijah completely lost track of logistical grace. Therefore he lost a special blessing at Mount Carmel.

3. Yet, Elijah is one of the greatest experts on logistical grace. He had many situations of being deprived of the necessities of life and had been the beneficiary of logistical grace.

4. Therefore, in emphasizing the situation, Elijah was being supported in a miraculous way under the principle of logistical grace.

5. Elijah could have reasoned from his experiences of logistical grace and come up with the right answer. As long as God wants him on this earth He will provide.

6. Therefore Elijah could have applied logistical grace through reverse concentration. Instead of being preoccupied with disaster he could have been preoccupied with Christ.

7. Under the faith-rest drill Elijah malfunctioned for two reasons—arrogance from authority and irrationality with regard to logistical grace.

8. The divine answer relates to a pivot of mature believers who are still functioning under the faith-rest technique. It would be over 100 years before the northern kingdom would lose its client nation status.

“I have reserved” – aorist active indicative of the verb kataleipw. It means to leave behind, but with the reflexive pronoun e(mautou[for myself]) it means to reserve to one’s self: “I have reserved for myself.” The aorist tense is a culminative aorist, it views the remnant or pivot in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results—the fact that the nation will continue for another 130 years, the fact that they will not be destroyed, the fact that the major part of the crisis is over and there will be some problems from time to time, the fact that the nation will be victorious in its great wars with Benhadad and Syria. So the culminative aorist emphasizes the preservation of the northern kingdom as a client nation to God due to the fact that there is a pivot of 7000 people. Active voice: God has preserved or kept for Himself the remnant or pivot of mature believers. Under the principle that Jesus Christ controls history this pivot of 7000 believers is the basis for the preservation of northern Israel during the time of apostasy. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the pivot which has not compromised.

“men” – andraj, accusative plural direct object, used also for honorable men. It does not mean male, it means honorable people. They were not all males.

“who have not bowed the knee to Baal” – the nominative masculine plural from the qualitative relative pronoun hostis (ὅστις) [pronounced HOHS-tiss]. It has to be translated in such a way that these people are high quality people—“who are of such a character.” What makes them high quality? They were born again and they advanced to maturity. The verb is the aorist active indicative from kámptō (κἀμπτω) [pronounced KAMP-toh], plus the negative ouk (οὐκ) [pronounced ook] because we have the indicative—“have not bowed.” The constative aorist is for a fact or an action extended over a period of time. They had been under great pressure but they were never distracted. They had grown to maturity and maintained. Active voice: the mature believers in the pivot produced the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for a statement of absolute fact. The nominative singular from gonu (γόνυ) [pronounced gon-OO], the word for knee in the Greek, is next. It is an independent nominative and it names an idea rather than the object of the verb.

“Baal” is dative singular indirect object, “to Baal.”

Translation: “But what is the divine answer to him? I have kept for myself a pivot seven thousand honorable men, who [because of their maturity] have not bowed a knee to Baal.”

Principle

1. The history of a client nation depends on the pivot of mature believers in that nation.

2. Both preservation and prosperity are related to the attitude of believers toward doctrine.
3. As goes the believer in the client nation, so goes that client nation in history.
4. The seven thousand mature believers preserved Israel in time of maximum apostasy.
5. The northern kingdom would last for 130 more years.
6. The true dynamics and impact of history is located in the pivot of mature believers in any given generation.
7. Jesus Christ controls history, and a major factor in preservation and prosperity resides in the principle of blessing by association plus historical impact of the pivot of mature believers.
8. Such a remnant of pivot is constructed on the grace policy of God based on the individual believer's attitude toward doctrine.
9. Preoccupation with disaster is one of the major reasons that believers peel off from doctrine. This preoccupation distracts from doctrine and becomes a case of demon obsession.
10. Such distraction results in arrogance which becomes obsessed with the problems and human solutions. The only divine solution is excluded.
11. Negative volition causes the believer to believe a lie.
12. Preoccupation with disaster becomes a distraction to perception of doctrine and momentum in the plan of God.
13. The believer who is preoccupied with disaster becomes an arrogant crusader full of self-righteousness which disaster turns into self-pity.
14. Self-righteousness ignores the divine solution in the pivot of mature believers.

Romans 11:5 So then also, in the present time, there has been a remnant according to the election of grace.

Verse 5 – the perpetuation of the pivot. It begins with the adverb of manner, houtos (οὗτος) [pronounced HOO-tos], “in the same manner.” Then comes the inferential conjunction oun (οὖν) [pronounced oon] which introduces a conclusion, an inference from what precedes—“therefore.” The conjunction kai is used as an adverb, “also.”

Next comes a prepositional phrase, en (ἐν) [pronounced en] plus the adverb nun (νῦν) [pronounced noon], plus the locative of time, kairos (καιρός) [pronounced kī-ROSS]. Literally, “in the now time,” but we translate it, “in the present period of time.”

“a remnant” – nominative singular subject leimma, which means a remnant or a pivot.

Finally a prepositional phrase, kata plus the accusative of eklogê (ἐκλογή) [pronounced ek-log-AY]—an election to privilege or a selection, plus the instrumental of means singular charis (χάρις) [pronounced KHAHR-iç], “by grace.”

Next is the perfect active indicative of the verb gínomai (γίνομαι) [pronounced GIN-oh-my], meaning to come into existence. This is a dramatic perfect tense in which something has occurred in the past but is emphasized as an existing state. The dramatic perfect always emphasizes the results of a past completed action, i.e. the formation of a pivot of mature believers. Every generation always has some type of pivot. Mature believers are the salt of the earth.

Translation: “Therefore in the same manner also, at this present period of time [Church Age], a remnant according to a selection by grace [the function of GAP] has come into existence.”

Principle: Just as a pivot existed in the time of Elijah preserving northern Israel, so a pivot existed in the time of Paul preserving the Roman empire as a client nation to God. The overriding factor: Jesus Christ controls history. The restraint of disaster, the restraint of historical catastrophe in times of apostasy, is directly related to the fact that Jesus Christ controls history.

Principle

1. Both Israel and the Church are special elections to privilege by God.
2. Therefore both Israel and the Church perpetuate their function in the plan of God through the existence of the pivot of mature believers.
3. In the previous dispensation of Israel the pivot of mature believers guaranteed the perpetuation as a client nation to God.
4. In the Church Age the pivot is essential for whatever Gentile nation or nations function as client nations to God in any given generation.
5. While disaster is immanent in USA such disaster has been postponed because of a pivot of mature believers in the country.
6. Once the pivot has departed to be with the Lord then judgment often falls on a nation.
7. The judgment of Israel occurred in AD 70, two years after the death of Paul.

8. Any period of stability in human history must be related to a pivot, a remnant according to a selection by means of grace.

9. Therefore the greatest thing a believer can do for his country is to persist in his perception of doctrine to form a part of the pivot which preserves that nation and forms the basis for national prosperity.

Lesson #701

701 06/15/1979 Romans 11:6a Logistical grace vs. ignorance of misrepresentation of sin, spiritual status and works; marking time

Romans 11:6 And if by grace, it is no longer from works; otherwise grace no longer would be grace.

Verse 6 – “And” is the postpositive conjunctive particle de used in a transitional sense, “Now.” With it is the conditional particle ei (εἰ) [pronounced I] which introduces the protasis of a 1st class condition, a supposition from the viewpoint of reality; “grace” is the instrumental singular from charis (χάρις) [pronounced KHAHR-ic], a word that expresses the policy of the integrity of God. “Now if by means of grace [and it is].” There is a time when sin is the issue and there is a time when sin is not the issue. When we are talking about grace sin is not the issue—not in salvation because our sins were judged on the cross. Anything that is by means of grace excludes any works of any kind.

The next phrase is logical rather than temporal use of an adverb—oukēti (οὐκέτι) [pronounced ook-EHT-ee]. It usually means no longer and has a temporal connotation. Sometimes it means no more. But here the logical use is translated “then not.” Then we have a prepositional phrase, ek (ἐκ) [pronounced ehk] plus the ablative plural of ergon (ἔργον) [pronounced EHR-gon]—“then not from works [plural].” This is plural works because people are always contending that God is blessing them because of what they do. God doesn’t bless us because of what we do! God does not bless us for any reason except one: His integrity—grace.

“not by means of works” – the ablative of means which expresses means when accompanied by the implication of origin or source. The origin of blessing is never any works. Grace and works, therefore, are mutually exclusive. They cannot coexist. “Now if by means of grace then [logically] not by means of works: otherwise grace no longer grace itself”—no verb.

“otherwise grace” – the causal conjunction epei (ἐπεὶ) [pronounced ehp-IH] after an ellipsis to introduce a logical conclusion. It stands for a conclusion based upon rational, lucid, logical thinking. Then the nominative singular subject charis (χάρις) [pronounced KHAHR-ic] plus the generic use of the definite article setting aside grace as a category with which there can be no compromise. The no compromise is found in an adverb, oukēti (οὐκέτι) [pronounced ook-EHT-ee], meaning no longer—“otherwise grace no longer.” Then the verb to be, the present middle indicative of gínomai (γίνομαι) [pronounced GIN-oh-my] which means to be or to become— “otherwise logically grace is no longer grace itself.”

Principle

1. The existence of a pivot in any given generation is strictly a matter of grace.
2. First the believer in the pivot is saved by grace—Ephesians 2:8,9.
3. Then the believer is sustained by logistical grace in the advance to maturity or the retreat into reversionism.
4. After maturity the pivot of mature believers are blessed in six categories by grace, including blessing by association, including historical blessing—the two categories which are the basis for the preservation of a nation.
5. At no point in the advance is legitimate production, illegitimate production, or any other works or self-righteousness a factor.
6. Any system of self or works righteousness is a hindrance to the advance of the believer.

Principle

1. The believers starts with grace and therefore he must continue in grace. All spiritual advance is based on the grace policy.
2. To deviate from grace is to become involved with arrogance. Arrogance is not only a mental attitude sin but it is a whole system of sinning.
3. All blessing after salvation, whether logistical or special, originates from the justice of God and is imputed to its target or home, the imputed righteousness of God now resident in every believer.
4. The plan of God continues in every type of historical circumstances. Advance in the plan of God is a grace operation, therefore never hindered by historical disaster and never helped by historical prosperity.
5. Logistical grace makes provision to sustain the believer in every circumstance of history.
6. Therefore catastrophe or disaster does not hinder the believer from spiritual growth.
7. The only hindrance to growing in grace—works, self-righteousness as a distraction, crusading as a distraction.

8. Both self and works righteousness compete with and exclude grace provision from God. They become a distraction from doctrine and from spiritual growth.

9. Because of grace in every era of history there has always been a remnant, a pivot of mature believers. Spiritual momentum and motivation is based on grace. Apostasy and reversionism is based on self-righteousness and the expression of self-righteousness in human works.

Lesson #703

703 06/19/1979 Romans 11:7a Occupation with the gift and deliverance vs. with the Source; arrogance vs. true humility; MacArthur's one failure

Romans 11:7 What then? What Israel is seeking, this it has not obtained, but the elect obtained it. And the rest were hardened,

Verse 7 – When it says “Israel hath not obtained that which he seeketh for,” it means with the greatest spiritual heritage the world has ever known the big blot-out separates the origin from the possession. The Jews had great possession. They have the greatest spiritual heritage in history. They also have great genes—they are smart. And when they started out in the Exodus they had tremendous wealth and possessions.

“What then?” – not quite the correct translation. We have the nominative neuter singular from the interrogative pronoun tis (τις) [pronounced tihç], correctly translated “what.” Then comes the inferential postpositive conjunction oun (οὐν) [pronounced oon]. This is literally translated, “What shall we say then?” It is an idiom. It means, How does the case stand? Since God has not cast out Israel and although many Jews have failed, even as many Christians are failing today, does it mean the plan of God is cancelled? God never changes His plans to accommodate failure! God’s plan doesn’t depend on us.

“Israel” – the indeclinable proper noun Israêl (Ισραήλ) [pronounced is-rah-ALE], the subject, plus the nominative neuter singular from the relative pronoun hos (ὅς) [pronounced hohç]—“what.” Then the verb, the present active indicative of e)pizetew [zêteô (ζητέω)

[pronounced zay-TEH-oh] = to seek; epí (ἐπί) [pronounced eh-PEE] intensifies the seeking]—“What Israel is seeking for.” The pictorial present tense presents to the mind a picture of the events in the process of occurrence. Israel is constantly seeking for salvation through works. They are seeking for salvation by something they can do. Active voice: Israel produces the action as the election to privilege in the Old Testament. The indicative mood is declarative viewing the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality.

Next is the nominative singular subject from the demonstrative houtos (οὗτος) [pronounced HOO-tos]—“this.” “What Israel is seeking for is this.” Then the aorist active indicative of the verb e)pitugxanw, plus the negative—“this it did not obtain.” The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. Israel constantly sought salvation by works. Active voice: the unbelieving Jews did not produce the action of obtaining or attaining salvation. The indicative mood is the historical reality of unbelief.

“Therefore to what conclusion are we forced [how stands the case]? What Israel is constantly seeking this [salvation] it did not obtain.”

“but the election hath obtained it” – the election means that there are exceptions to Jewish unbelievers in every generation.

“but” – postpositive conjunctive particle de, used to set up a contrast between the Jews who are trying to be saved by self-righteousness [unbelievers] and the Jews who are saved by believing in Christ. In this passage we call them elected to privilege. The word election is referring to the believing Jew of the Old Testament. The subject is the nominative singular from eklogê (ἐκλογή) [pronounced ek-log-AY]. With the generic use of the definite article it emphasizes believers in Israel as a special category: privileged—“but the elect to privilege.” The privileged ones, the believers, those who have +R.[1]

Next is the aorist active indicative from e)pitugxanw which means to attain or obtain. The culminative aorist regards salvation in its entirety but it emphasizes it from the standpoint of its existing results, i.e. in every generation there is a remnant of Jews who are privileged. The privilege we are studying in this passage is logistical grace. Active voice: Jewish believers in Christ produce the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the historical reality of regenerate Jews in Israel in every generation in the Old Testament, and in the Church Age the continuation of such a remnant.

“and the rest were blinded” – o(i de loipoi, but the rest. These are unbelievers who do not fulfil the principle of founding the Jewish race; “were blinded” is not quite correct. The aorist passive indicative of the verb porow which means to harden. The word means to build scar tissue on the soul. The Jews began hearing the truth, or doctrine, in their youth. They said no, and that started porow. Passive voice: the unbelieving Jews through persistent negative volition received the action of the verb—scar tissue of the soul [the big blot-out]. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of this type of reversionism—scar tissue of the soul.

Lesson #707

707 06/25/1979 Romans 11:8a God extended the life of Pharaoh of the Exodus to evangelize the world; con artists; doctrine of the inspiration of Scripture (review)

Romans 11:8 as it has been written: "God gave them a spirit of stupor, eyes not to see, and ears not to hear, unto this very day."

Verse 8 – "According as" is katháper (καθάπερ) [pronounced kath-AP-er] and correctly translated "Just as." With it is the perfect passive indicative of the verb graphô (γράφω) [pronounced GRAWF-oh]. The perfect tense is the intensive perfect, it emphasizes the existing results of a finished product—the Old Testament canon which is going to be used to document the fact that the majority of Jews on the OT times failed, and yet Israel was perpetuated from generation to generation. The failed under the principle of the big blot-out—negative volition at the point of God-consciousness and at gospel hearing. We have a quotation here which is a colation of three verses found in the Old Testament: Deuteronomy 29:4; Isaiah 29:10; 6:9,10. The passive voice of graphô (γράφω) [pronounced GRAWF-oh] gives us the mechanics of inspiration. Inspiration is basically involved under two concepts: a) the inhale of the information. The human writer takes in the doctrine; b) the exhale. The human writer puts it down in the language in which he thinks.[2]

Isaiah 29:10 –“For the Lord has poured over you a spirit of deep sleep.” This is the first description of the big blot-out in the documentation. This spirit of deep sleep also goes to two categories of communicators—prophets and seers. There is a slight difference between them. A prophet was recognized throughout the land as one who stayed in one place essentially, and people came to him for the message. The seer went out to others. Both had the gift of communicating doctrine but one went out communicating here and there, but the prophet had a regular ministry in some specific location. The prophets: “he has shut your eyes.” The seers: “he has covered your heads.” In other words, the communicators of doctrine also were caught up in the big blot-out.

Deuteronomy 29:4—“Yet to this day the Lord has not given you a heart [right lobe] to know, nor eyes to see, nor ears to hear.” These are three descriptions of the big blot-out.

Isaiah 6:9,10 – “And he said, Go, and tell the people, Keep on listening, but you will never understand; keep on looking, but do not understand. Render the right lobes of these people insensitive, make their ears dull, and their eyes dim; lest they see with their eyes, hear with their ears, understand with their right lobes, and consequently repent and be healed.”

“God” – ho theos (θεός) [pronounced theh-OSS]. Literally, “the God.” It is not necessary to translate the definite article. The definite article is generic, and it indicates that at least the ones who are reading this passage have familiarity with God.

“hath given” – aorist active indicative of didōmi (δίδωμι) [pronounced dihd-OH-mee], which stems from the fact that Jesus Christ controls history and that He controls history directly and then indirectly: directly through His own power; indirectly through His laws which He has set up. The violation of these laws leads to destruction. This is a culminative aorist tense which views the big blot-out in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results—great apostasy and resultant divine discipline. Active voice: God produces the action of the verb. He gives as a result of apostasy. The indicative mood is declarative for the historical reality—the maximum reversionism and spin-off from the pivot.

“them” – dative plural indirect object plus the dative of disadvantage from the intensive pronoun autós (αὐτός) [pronounced ow-TOSS] which is used as a personal pronoun. It is used here as a personal pronoun for the people of Israel and is correctly translated “to them.” The principle is very simple. The alertness of a nation is found in its thinking. A nation is alert through thought or it is non-alert through thought. The greatest of nations cannot exceed the greatness of its thinking or the failure of its mental attitude.

“the spirit” – accusative singular direct object from pneuma (πνεῦμα) [pronounced PNYOO-mah], used here for a state of mind. Pneuma (πνεῦμα) [pronounced PNYOO-mah] means breath or spirit, but here it refers to an actual state of mind.

“of slumber” – descriptive genitive singular of katanucij, and is means insensibility. So we translate it, “to them a state of mind of insensibility.” Insensibility comes from arrogance. This is scar tissue of the soul as a part of reversionism, and it results from maximum negative volition toward Christ and the first advent, as far as Jews are concerned—in other words, the big blot-out. This scar tissue is now described.

“eyes that they should not see” – accusative plural of general reference from ophthalmos (ὀφθαλμός) [pronounced opf-thahl-MOSS]. The accusative is used with the infinitive as the subject. Actually, it is not the subject but it appears to be that way because the accusative of general reference describes the person or the thing connected with the action of an infinitive. So we just simplify that by saying this is a case of where the accusative acts as the subject of the infinitive. With it is a genitive article, tou, and then the present active infinitive of the verb blepō (βλέπω) [pronounced BLEHP-oh] which means to see, to glance; plus the negative mē (μή) [pronounced may]. The present tense is historical present which views the past function of Jewish negative volition with the vividness of a present occurrence. The Jews produce the action of the verb under the big blot-out, and the infinitive plus the negative mē (μή) [pronounced may] is a negative purpose—“eyes for the purpose of not seeing.” The eyes are used in reading for perception and the whole connotation is perception—failure in that field.

“and ears that they should not hear” – the word for ears is the accusative plural of general reference, ou (οὐ) [pronounced ooj]. Then the present active infinitive of akoúō (ἀκούω) [pronounced ah-KOO-oh] with the negative mē (μή) [pronounced may]. This, again, is the basic system for learning—teaching, listening, concentrating. The eyes refer to the concentration, the ears refer to the reception of the material. Again, the historical present views the past event (the big blot-out) with the vividness of a present occurrence. Active voice: Jewish unbelievers produces the action. The infinitive plus the negative is a negative of purpose—“and ears for the purpose of not hearing.”

And Paul brings it right up to date when he says, “unto this day.” The temporal conjunction e)wj used as an improper preposition with the genitive singular of the definite article and a genitive adverb hēmera (ἡμέρα) [pronounced hay-MEH-raw]—“until this very day.” In other words, the big blot-out continues right down to Paul’s day. The change of dispensation in which there is no longer a Jewish client nation to God, and cannot be until the Second Advent, sees the continuation of the Jewish unbelief.

1977 Romans

Lesson #708

708 06/26/1979 Romans 11:8b; Isa. 29:9–14; Rev. 1:7–8; Deut. 6:4–7 Negative volition to truth causes scar tissue of the soul and insensibility; doctrine of the Big Blot Out

Romans 11:8 as it has been written: “God gave them a spirit of stupor, eyes not to see, and ears not to hear, unto this very day.”

Translation: “Just as it stands written, God has given to them [unbelieving Jews only] a state of mind of insensibility, eyes for the purpose of not seeing, ears for the purpose of not hearing, until this day.”

Principle

1. The greater the presentation of the gospel (evangelism) the greater the resistance of the unbelieving Jew “until this very day.” The greater the presentation of doctrine to the believing Jew, the greater the resistance of the negative volition believing Jew.
2. The reason for this is interlocking systems of arrogance.
3. Arrogance often manifests itself in prosperity through self-righteousness, and at the same time manifests itself in adversity through self-pity. Both self-righteousness and self-pity reject doctrine.
4. Therefore arrogance, whatever its manifestation, produces strong negative volition.
5. Furthermore, the greater the revelation, the clear doctrinal presentation, the greater the resistance to that doctrine.
6. In the status quo, then, that develops [scar tissue of the soul] the eyes do not see and the ears do not hear. Once the perceptive system of faith is shut down by negative volition then not only has arrogance resisted but it produces an empiricism or a false rationalism. That is the difference between a philosopher who is anti-doctrine [rationalism] and an empiricist who is anti-doctrine [e.g. a scientist who believes in evolution]. When you reject doctrine and the means of perception of doctrine as a believer arrogance must select a system of perception which is compatible with the arrogance resident in the soul.

Lesson #720

720 10/07/1979 Romans 11:9a Catharsis of drama, emotion and music; prosperity distractions; greater spiritual heritage and responsibility

Romans 11:9 And David says: “Let their table be for a snare and for a trap, and for a stumbling block and for a retribution to them.

Verse 9 – “Also David saith,” quoting Psalm 69:22, 23: “Let their table be made a snare, and a trap.” This begins with the nominative singular of the noun trapeza. It refers to the Jewish spiritual heritage, as it did in Psalm 69, the Jewish spiritual heritage of Codex numbers 1, 2 & 3 of the Mosaic law. It includes in Codex #2 the concept of the table of shewbread. Plus the possessive genitive plural of the intensive pronoun autós (αὐτῶς) [pronounced ow-TOSS]. It is used for the third person personal pronoun and is correctly translated “their table.”

Then the aorist passive imperative of gínomai (γίνομαι) [pronounced GIN-oh-my]. The aorist tense is a gnomic aorist for a doctrine which is regarded as so certain that it is axiomatic in character and described as though it were actually occurring at this moment. Passive voice: the table or the spiritual heritage of Israel as a client nation receives the action of the verb. This is called the imperative of entreaty in the Greek which does not convey the finality of a command but has the force of an urgency of request and is therefore comparable to the jussive in the Hebrew. With this we have a prepositional phrase, eis (εἰς) [pronounced ICE] plus the accusative of pagij—“for a snare.” Then the connective kai—“and,” then a second prepositional phrase, eis (εἰς) [pronounced ICE] plus qhra—“and a trap.” So there is a slight amplification from Psalm 69.

Why does Paul add “for a snare” which is not found in the Hebrew of Psalm 69? The snare indicates responsibility; the trap indicates what happens when that responsibility is ignored.

1. The responsibility of freedom under the laws of divine establishment. This belongs to the entire client nation;
2. Evangelism, which is the responsibility of believers only;
3. Spiritual growth or advance through the perception of Bible doctrine; Missionary responsibility.

The fact that a client nation has these responsibilities means that there is the potential of failing, the potential of not living up to the responsibility. The possession of these things requires a responsibility response. When this responsibility fails then it becomes a trap. The ritual of the Mosaic law becomes a trap when the reality of the person of Christ is rejected.

“and a stumblingblock” – the preposition eis (εἰς) [pronounced ICE] plus the accusative skandalon (σκάνδαλον) [pronounced SKAN-da-lon], a word which is used in a very significant way in 1 Corinthians 1:23. It is a stumblingblock only to the Jews. But to the Greeks and Gentiles in general it is foolishness. The Jews had client nation responsibility. When they reject the very source of the existence of their client nation, as well as their own salvation, then they stumble and fails as a client nation. The Greeks had no client nation status and therefore they had no responsibility. Their rejection is tantamount to saying that this is merely foolishness. Those who have responsibility and reject that responsibility are the ones who actually suffer the most in this life. Christ at the first advent is a stumblingblock only to the Jews because they were the client nation. Skandalon (σκάνδαλον) [pronounced SKAN-da-lon] is the big blot-out, it refers to the Jewish obstacle in believing in Christ. When they reject Christ as saviour they build scar-tissue on the soul, they enter into interlocking systems of arrogance. Cf. 1Peter 2:6-8.

“and a recompense unto them” – this should be translated, and for a retribution. We have eis (εἰς) [pronounced ICE] plus the accusative of a)ntapodoma, and that means to whom much is given much is expected. The word means just punishment. When the responsibility of the client nation to God is rejected then there is only one thing left. The justice of God must punish that lack of responsibility. With this is the dative plural indirect object and the dative of disadvantage from that same intensive pronoun autós (αὐτοῖς) [pronounced ow-TOSS]—“to them.” This refers to the fact that throughout history in the last dispensation the Jews suffered terrible things and acted in a very strange way, nationally and individually, because of their arrogance in the big blot-out. So also they do the same thing again and again in this dispensation.

Lesson #721

721 10/07/1979 Romans 11:9b Bitterness; denial of spiritual heritage yields fear; results of ignoring responsibility as a client nation

Romans 11:9 And David says: “Let their table be for a snare and for a trap, and for a stumbling block and for a retribution to them.”

Translation: “Also David says, May their table [the spiritual heritage of Israel] be for a snare, and for a trap, and for a stumblingblock, and so for a retribution to them.”

The table is the spiritual heritage of the client nation, the snare is doctrine and the gospel, the trap is the ritual gospel, and for a stumblingblock the first advent of Christ with emphasis on the cross. The retribution is the five cycles of discipline, the fifth of which destroys the client nation.

The spiritual heritage of Israel is so lucid that there is no excuse for rejection of Christ as saviour or the function of the big blot-out. Therefore this same spiritual heritage, including gospel presentation and the illustrative ritual, becomes a snare and a trap for the Jewish unbeliever. The key is the stumblingblock of the first advent with emphasis on the cross, and therefore the threefold retribution from the justice of God.

There are four results, then, of rejecting the table of spiritual heritage:

1. The snare—rejection of the gospel as it is presented.
2. The trap—rejection of the ritual presented in the gospel in Codex #2 of the Mosaic law.

3. The stumblingblock—the Jew rejecting the omega glory of the Lord Jesus Christ.
4. The retribution from the justice of God.

Lesson #722

722 10/08/1979 Romans 11:10 Americans standing in line to die; scar tissue of the soul degeneracy neutralizes IQ and invites national destruction

Romans 11:10 Let their eyes be darkened not to see, and their backs bent over forever."

Verse 10 – we have now a quotation from Psalm 69:23. The first line is quoted from the Hebrew and the second line is quoted from the Greek of the Septuagint. The first line starts with the aorist passive imperative of skotizō (σκοτίζω) [pronounced skot-IHD-zo], which means to be darkened. The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. It refers to a fact or an action extended over a period of time. Passive voice: the eyes of the Jewish unbelievers and the eyes of the Jewish reversionistic believers receive the action of the verb under the function of the big blot-out. The imperative mood is the imperative of entreaty which does not convey the finality of a command but the force of a request in an imprecatory prayer. The nominative plural subject ophthalmos (ὀφθαλμός) [pronounced opf-thahl-MOSS] refers to objective perceptive ability. These are not literal eyes. Plus the genitive plural of autós (αὐτῶς) [pronounced ow-TOSS] used as a third person pronoun. This is quoted from the Hebrew and translated into Koine Greek—"Let their eyes be darkened." It is a reference to scar-tissue of the soul which comes from reversionism. The unbeliever's reversionism is the rejection of the establishment principles of Codex #1 & 3. The believer's reversionism comes from the resistance of Bible doctrine.

This is followed by a negative purpose clause, including the genitive singular of the definite article used to introduce that negative purpose clause, plus the present active infinitive from blepō (βλέπω) [pronounced BLEHP-oh] and the negative mē (μή) [pronounced may]. The historical present views the past function of Jewish negative volition or the big blot-out with the vividness of a present occurrence. The active voice: the Jews produce the action of the verb as a part of their reversionism historically, and that becomes an illustration for the reversionism of any client nation during the Church Age. The infinitive with the negative mē (μή) [pronounced may] indicates a negative purpose clause. It is correctly translated, "for the purpose of not seeing."

The problem here is twofold. In a client nation there is the believer and the unbeliever. The unbeliever rejects establishment. With this we have destruction of freedom and the taking of the authority into the hands of incompetent and irresponsible people, so that whereas before there was a balance, now there is tyranny. Freedom without authority is anarchy, but authority without freedom is tyranny.

The next line does not follow the Hebrew text, it follows the Greek of the Septuagint. The Hebrew says, "Make their loins tremble." But Paul does not quote that. So by not following the Hebrew text but the Septuagint we have, “and make their backs crooked always.” This is what Paul is going to quote from. A crooked back is a terrible handicap in life. Why does Paul quote the Septuagint instead of the Hebrew text? The answer can be found in the historical fact of the perpetuation of the big blot-out which has two factors related to it: arrogance and blackout of the soul. Blackout of the soul or scar tissue of the soul destroys the talent and the ability of one’s perspicacity and talent. The trembling loins is a temporary fear but a crooked back is a permanent disease with perpetuating pain. Perpetuating pain changes one’s outlook on life, and this is a great illustration of the Jews who, along with the Calvinistic peoples of western Europe, are responsible for the industrial revolution and free enterprise in Europe for 200 years. The Roman Catholics were anti-free enterprise, as admitted by their own historians. The bog blot-out is the permanent disease of Israel until the Second Advent of Christ, with wonderful exceptions in every generation when there are Jews who believe in the Lord Jesus Christ.

“and” – kai, plus the aorist active imperative of sugkamptw which means to bend or to bow. Here it means to bend—“and to cause their backs to bend.” It is a culminative aorist, it views the big blot-out in terms of its entirety but emphasizes the result. With this is the accusative singular from the noun vwtoj, which means the back of a person, and with the generic use of the definite article it indicates the backs of the Jews who fell into the trap—interlocking systems of arrogance from rejecting Bible doctrine.

Next comes the prepositional phrase, dia plus pás (πάς) [pronounced pahs], which means literally, through all. This is a prepositional phrase which is used as an adverbial idiom meaning always or constantly. So the corrected translation: “and caused their backs to bend constantly.”

Translation: “Let their eyes be darkened for the purpose of not seeing, and always cause their backs to bend.”

Gentiles Grafted In

Romans 11:11 I ask then, did they stumble that they might fall? Never may it be! But in their trespass is salvation to the Gentiles, so as to provoke them to jealousy.

Verse 11 – a second debater’s question. This begins with the postpositive inferential conjunction oun (οὖν) [pronounced oon] which is translated “therefore.” An inference is drawn from the previous paragraph, an inference from the rise and fall of nations, as illustrated by the rise and fall of client nation Israel in its various categories. Oun (οὖν) [pronounced oon] begins an idiom.

Next is the present active indicative of légô (λέγω) [pronounced LEH-goh], the verb of communication. It is derived from logos (λόγος, ου, ό) [pronounced LOHG-oss] which means word or thought. légô (λέγω) [pronounced LEH-goh] means to communicate a word or thought and is generally translated to say—“Therefore I say.” The customary present is for habitually occurs after the dissertation in verses 1-10, the first paragraph. Active voice: Paul produces the action of the verb with a rhetorical question. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality in order to establish the basis for the communication of doctrine in the second paragraph. The negative mê (μή) [pronounced may] in a question expects a negative answer. (The negative adverb ou (οὐ) [pronounced oo] in a question expects a positive answer)

Then comes the aorist active indicative of the verb ptaiw which means to stumble. “Therefore I say, They did not stumble so as to fall into ruin, did they?” The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, which is the big blot-out in Israel—unbeliever reversionism. Believer reversionism is related only in the sense of rejection of doctrine after salvation. The active voice: the unbelieving Jew produces the action of the verb. The historical indicative mood indicates the reality of this in every generation, not only among Jews who are used for the illustration but for Gentiles as well in any client nation during the Church Age.

Next we have the phrase, “that they should fall”—hina (ἵνα) [pronounced HEE-na] peswsin. Hina (ἵνα) [pronounced HEE-na] introduces a final clause which expresses a distinct purpose conceived as the objective of the action indicated in the principle verb, translated here “so as.” Then the aorist active subjunctive of piptô (πίπτω) [pronounced PIHP-toh]—to fall, referring to the fifth cycle of discipline. The culminative aorist views the Jewish big blot-out or the unbeliever reversionism in its entirety but emphasizes the existing results from it, which is the 5th cycle of discipline. The active voice: the Jews produce the action in the former dispensation. Paul is using them as the illustration as to what will happen to any Gentile nation in the dispensation of the Church. We have the deliberative subjunctive mood employed as a rhetorical device. Not only do we have the negative mê (μή) [pronounced may] demanding an answer, no, but we also add to it another negative idiom, mê (μή) [pronounced may] genoito (γίνοιτο) [pronounced GEE-noyt-oh]—may it not be so, but it is an idiom which means of course not or definitely not.

Principle

1. The failure of some Jews to believe in Christ did not destroy the plan of God for Israel. Furthermore, by application the failure of some Jewish believers to accept doctrine did not destroy the plan of God for believers who are positive toward doctrine.

2. The failure of many racial Jews to believe in Christ does not cancel the integrity of God. God's integrity is never cancelled on the basis of our personal failures, neither is God's integrity cancelled on the basis of the collective failure of a national entity. The integrity of God is never diminished or cancelled in any way by any human failure, collective or individual.
3. The failure of certain Jews to respond to the gospel and believe in Christ does not abrogate the integrity of God, and the failure of certain Jewish believers to respond to doctrinal teaching does not cancel logistical grace support.
4. The grace policy is never cancelled by those who reject it at any point. The unbeliever rejects the gospel; that doesn't cancel the grace policy. The born-again believer rejects Bible doctrine and becomes a reversionist; that does not cancel the grace policy. In other words, grace is never neutralized by what others do or fail to do.
5. Man's failure cannot cancel the integrity of God.
6. God never lowers Himself to man's failure, except once: at the cross, i.e. when He took all the sins of the human race and imputed them to Christ at the cross and judged them.
7. Jewish rejection of Christ declares God to be false. But such blasphemy does not change God. Principle: Failure may change you but failure never changes God. God's integrity remains reliable in judging the big blot-out while blessing those who believe in Christ—logistical grace blessing.

Principle

1. The Jewish rejection of their spiritual heritage resulted in rejection of Christ as saviour. In effect, this is what rejection of their spiritual heritage is, inasmuch as the whole foundation of Israel is regeneration.
2. This apostasy, which we might classify as unbeliever reversionism, resulted in the eventual administration of the fifth cycle of discipline, a final administration in A.D. 70.
3. The fifth cycle of discipline administered by the Romans in A.D. 70 destroyed the client nation status of Israel and ushered in the times of the Gentiles mentioned in Luke 21:24.
4. The fifth cycle of discipline administered to Israel in A.D. 70 was not designed to destroy Israel but to transfer their spiritual heritage to the Gentiles temporarily, i.e. until the Second Advent. Such a transfer of heritage demands not only understanding the Old Testament but understanding something that God gave in the transference, making every believer in this dispensation a member of the royal family of God forever—permanent royalty.
5. Throughout the Church Age certain Gentile nations will be called client nations.

6. Gentile nations have become client nations to God so that Gentiles throughout the world with +V at God-consciousness can be evangelized. Inasmuch as the Jews are now scattered throughout the world as well they too can be evangelized.

7. As stated at the end of this verse, an additional purpose in the evangelization of Gentiles is to stimulate the Jews to emulation, i.e. to faith in Christ.

8. We live in the dispensation where Gentiles evangelize Jews, rather than Jews evangelizing Gentiles, as per the dispensation of Israel and as per the dispensation of the Millennium, as well as the Tribulation.

Principle

1. Israel is not ruined by the fifth cycle of discipline. Israel is scattered throughout the world to face the issue of the gospel.

2. Being scattered throughout the world the Jews are evangelized by the Gentiles. There is another advantage to the Church Age: wherever the Jews are scattered they bring blessing—for several reasons. For example, given freedom they have demonstrated a genius for business.

3. Furthermore, the Jewish race is preserved during their dispersion by Gentile nations who act as client nations to God.

4. While at various times during the Church Age there has been a Jewish nation in Palestine, that Jewish nation is barred from functioning as a client nation. This is the times of the Gentiles during which no Jewish national entity can serve as a client nation to God.

5. In other words, there will be no Jewish client nation until the second advent of Christ which will terminate the diaspora, and under the aegis of Christ they will be regathered to form the client nation for the Millennium.

6. There will be no Jewish client nation to God, then, until the Millennium. Then they will be the client nation for the last thousand years of history and for all eternity.

7. It is our privilege as a client nation to provide a haven for Israel during these troublesome times.

8. The divine discipline of the Jew, then, is not to blot out Israel or to destroy the race. The race cannot be destroyed; God preserves it.

Gentiles Grafted In

Romans 11:11 I ask then, did they stumble that they might fall? Never may it be! But in their trespass is salvation to the Gentiles, so as to provoke them to jealousy.

Romans 11:12 But if their trespass is the riches of the world, and their failure is the riches of the Gentiles, how much more their fullness!

Verse 12 – the application of the principle of cursing turned to blessing. That is, we have here the a fortiori of Israel’s cursing and blessing, but always a Gentile blessing.

It begins with the postpositive conjunctive particle de, and is correctly translated Now. It is a transitional use of the conjunction, and with it is the transitional particle ei (εἰ) [pronounced /] which introduces a protasis of a 1st class condition, if and it is true. Then, the nominative singular of the noun paráptōma (παράπτωμα) [pronounced par-AP-to-mah] which refers to apostasy and reversionism, and with it the possessive genitive of the intensive pronoun autós (αὐτοῦ) [pronounced ow-TOSS] used as a third person personal pronoun: “Now if their apostasy” – referring to the Jews’ defection from their spiritual heritage. There is no verb in this verse, hence ellipsis in which an idea is not fully expressed grammatically. The ellipsis of the verb in this verse indicates the strong emotional undercurrent of Paul as the human writer. We therefore insert the present active indicative of eimi (εἶμι) [pronounced eye-ME] or gínomai (γίνομαι) [pronounced GIN-oh-my] which are not found here. They are legitimate because they are the only two common verbs that take a predicate nominative. The reason that one of these can be inserted in the translation is because we have a predicate nominative (not an accusative) of ploutos (πλοῦτος) [pronounced PLOO-toss]—“becomes the riches.” Next is a descriptive genitive plural from kósmos (κόσμος) [pronounced KOSS-moss]—“of the world.” This is true. The apostasy of Israel has become the riches of the world—client nation status to Gentile nations.

Principle

1. The spiritual heritage of Israel included its client nation status with the responsibility of missionary evangelism.
2. The failure of Israel in this regard resulted in the times of the Gentiles. The apostasy of Israel in rejecting their spiritual heritage and transferring of evangelistic and missionary responsibility to other than Jewish nations results in the riches to those nations throughout world history.

“and the diminishing of them the riches of the Gentiles” – as Israel diminished certain Gentiles began to prosper. The connective kai continues the 1st class condition; the nominative subject is h(ttma, it means failure or defeat rather than diminishing; with it is the possessive genitive plural of autós (αὐτῶς) [pronounced ow-TOSS]—“and their failure.” Loss of client nation status. Again, since this is an ellipsis we use the aorist active indicative of gínomai (γίνομαι) [pronounced GIN-oh-my]—“became.” Then we have the predicate nominative, ploutos (πλοῦτος) [pronounced PLoo-toss], plus ethnos (ἔθνος, οὐς, τό) [pronounced EHTH-noss] in the possessive genitive—“the riches of the Gentiles.”

The spiritual heritage of Israel is transferred to the Church. The Church is not a national entity and this is the basic reason why there must always be a separation between Church and state. The Church is royal family in any nation, and the larger the royal family in a nation the greater the prosperity of that nation historically. This is the spiritual interpretation of history. The rise and fall of nations since A.D. 70 can be directly attributed to the amount of true believers who reach maturity in that nation.

Principle

1. Without Jewish apostasy there would be no royal family of God in the Church Age.
2. Without Jewish apostasy the glorious spiritual heritage of Israel would not be transferred to the Church as the body of Christ. Christ is the origin of the spiritual heritage of Israel and Christ is the origin of the spiritual heritage of the Church. Therefore it is transferred from origin to origin, which makes it compatible with the essence of God.
3. Without Jewish apostasy there would be no hope and no divine plan for the Gentile. In that we have the fulfilment of Psalm 76:9,10.

“how much more their fullness?” This phrase will bring us face to face with a detailed study of a fortiori. It begins with a dative of advantage from an interrogative, correlative pronoun, posoj—“how much.” Also, the instrumental case of posoj means literally, by how much. But when used adverbially before a comparison it is translated, instead of the instrumental by how much, simply the dative of advantage (or disadvantage), how much. With this is the comparative adverb mallon (μᾶλλον) [pronounced MAL-lon], which introduces concept a fortiori [a = with; fortiori = greater reason]—“more.”

If Jewish apostasy [the big blot-out] and discipline to Israel has become a blessing to the Gentiles, it follows a fortiori that their restoration at the Second Advent and resumed client nation function during the Millennium will be even a greater blessing than ever before. Paul is using this system of logic under the ministry of the Spirit to demonstrate that not only have the Jews not been set aside permanently but their future is greater than their past. That is grace.

Next is the predicate nominative, plêrôma (πλήρωμα) [pronounced PLAY-roh-mah], which refers to the restoration of Israel as a client nation in the Millennium. Again, we have the possessive genitive plural from the intensive pronoun autós (αὐτοῦς) [pronounced ow-TOSS], and again it is used as a third person plural personal pronoun. It is correctly translated, “their fullness.” Here plêrōma (πλήρωμα) [pronounced PLAY-roh-mah] refers to the great blessings of Israel during the Millennium and the blessing by association of other nations which will exist in the Millennial reign of Christ. Obviously, plhrwoma connotes the client nation of Israel in the Millennium which provides great blessing, as per Zechariah 8:22, 23. We translate this, “how much more will be their fulness?” The words will be are not found in the original, it is simply inserted on the basis of the fact that this is an ellipsis and you go from the nominative subject to a predicate nominative, and therefore a verb can be inserted, eimi (εἶμι) [pronounced eye-ME] or gínomai (γίνομαι) [pronounced GIN-oh-my].

1977 Romans

Lesson #726

726 10/12/1979 Romans 11:12b Fifth cycle not to destroy Jews; blessing from the dispersion; client nation prosperity

Romans 11:12 But if their trespass is the riches of the world, and their failure is the riches of the Gentiles, how much more their fullness!

Translation: “Now if their apostasy [the big blot-out] becomes the riches of the world, and if their failure [5th cycle of discipline] the riches of the Gentiles; how much more will be their fullness?”

Principle: If the justice of God provides the greater by blessing the Gentiles through Jewish discipline in the times of the Gentiles, it follows a fortiori that He will not withhold the less—greater blessing to the Gentiles in the Millennial restoration of Israel as the client nation to God. While the Gentiles have great blessing in the Church Age and the times of the Gentiles they will have even greater blessing in the Millennium in the time of Israel’s fullness. Perfect environment cannot exist in this world until Christ supersedes Satan as the ruler of the world, and until Israel is restored to client nation status.

The a fortiori of verse 12

1. If the justice of God provides the greater in blessing the Gentiles through Jewish apostasy and punishment it follows, a fortiori, that God will not withhold the less – even greater blessings to the Gentiles in the Millennial restoration of Israel as a client nation.
2. This emphasizes the fact that the greater is not quality or quantity but degree of effort. In other words, it is easier for God to bless the Gentiles when the Jews enjoy client nation status than during times of the Gentiles when only Gentile nations can function as a client nation.

3. The greatest blessings will come to the Gentiles during the Millennial reign of Christ when the Jews have been restored to their client nation status.
4. The Millennium, then, is the time of Israel's fullness which produces much more blessing for the Gentiles under the principle of blessing by association.
5. The times of the Gentiles, therefore, is in contrast to the time of Israel's fullness.
6. The Gentiles have maximum blessing in the Church Age through Israel's fall, but the Gentiles will have greater than maximum blessing in the Millennium when Israel is restored as a client nation to God.
7. There cannot be perfect environment on the earth without the overthrow of Satan and the function of Israel as a client nation, plus the restraining of the old sin nature.

Verses 13 & 14 is a parenthesis in which we have Paul's ministry to the Gentiles. This helps the Jews.

1977 Romans

Lesson #727

727 10/14/1979 Romans 11:13a Intercessory prayer; doctrine of A FORTIORI; blessing of Gentiles in Jewish apostasy and greater in the Millennium

Romans 11:13 Now I am speaking to you the Gentiles. Therefore indeed inasmuch as I am apostle of the Gentiles, I magnify my ministry,

Verse 13 begins with the postpositive conjunctive particle de, used to insert an explanation or a parenthesis. If it is used to insert an explanation we simply put in the phrase, "that is." But we can use an explanation by simply putting in a parenthesis. With it is the present active indicative of the verb légō (λέγω) [pronounced LEH-goh], which is taken from logos (λόγος, ου, ό) [pronounced LOHG-oss] which refers to thought. légō (λέγω) [pronounced LEH-goh] means the expression of thought and is therefore generally translated to speak, to utter words. We translate this, "I am speaking." This is a pictorial present, it presents to the mind a picture of Paul's communication as in the process of occurrence. The active voice: Paul as the human writer produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal idea from the viewpoint of reality—verbal plenary inspiration of the Scripture. With it is the dative plural indirect object from the personal pronoun su—"to you." It is also dative of advantage. Plus the dative of advantage plural from ethnos (ἔθνος, ους, τό) [pronounced EHTH-noss], referring to Gentiles in contrast to Jews.

"inasmuch as" is actually a prepositional phrase, the preposition epí (ἐπί) [pronounced eh-PEE] plus the accusative, emphasizing motion or direction, plus hosos (ὅσος) [pronounced HOS-os]. With it is an inferential conjunction, oun (οὖν) [pronounced oon], translated "therefore"—"inasmuch as therefore."

Next is Paul's autobiographical statement: the present active indicative of the verb eimi (εἰμί) [pronounced eye-ME]—"I am." The present tense is a static present, representing a condition which is taken for granted as a fact—Paul is an apostle. The active voice: Paul produces the action as a part of his ministry. The indicative mood is declarative for the historical reality of Paul's apostleship and unique position in the Church Age. With it is the nominative singular subject from the personal pronoun egó (ἐγώ) [pronounced ehg-OH], plus an anarthrous predicate nominative from the noun apostolos (ἀπόστολος) [pronounced ap-OSS-tol-oss] which is transliterated, not translated. It emphasizes the high gift and the quality of the ministry of the apostle Paul. With it is the objective genitive plural from the noun ethnos (ἔθνος, οὐς, τό) [pronounced EHTH-noss], referring to Gentiles in contrast to Jews in setting up for the Church Age the fact that there are no racial distinctions any more between the sons of Noah, and the only unique race and racial distinction is the fact that the Jews continue to exist after the administration of the 5th cycle of discipline and they are scattered throughout the world until such time as the Second Advent—"inasmuch as I am an apostle to the Gentiles."

"I magnify mine office" – the present active indicative of doxazô (δοξάζω) [pronounced dox-AD-zo] should be translated, "I am magnifying." Doxazô (δοξάζω) [pronounced dox-AD-zo] refers to glorifying, honoring, praising or magnifying. The descriptive present indicates what is now going on in the parenthesis. The active voice: Paul is producing the action and doing so without arrogance. The confidence that comes from doctrine is not arrogance. The accusative singular direct object is diakonia (διακονία) [pronounced dee-ak-on-EE-ah], and we translate it "ministry."

1977 Romans

Lesson #728

728 10/14/1979 Romans 11:13b Doctrine of apostleship; DIAKONOS; Gentile blessing by fifth cycle of discipline to Israel; Jews' failures and the Church Age believer

Romans 11:13 Now I am speaking to you the Gentiles. Therefore indeed inasmuch as I am apostle of the Gentiles, I magnify my ministry,

Translation: "I am speaking to you Gentiles, therefore inasmuch as I am an apostle to the Gentiles, I am magnifying my ministry."

Paul magnifies his office because it is the ministry to bring blessing in the Church Age. It is the ministry of doctrine which the Gentiles accept whereby they whereby the fulfil one of the ministries of the client nation, which is to provide the haven for Israel during the 5th cycle of discipline, and in some cases evangelize Israel.

1. The Gentiles are blessed by the cursing to the Jews. All Gentiles in history since AD 70 have had blessing because God removed the Jews as a client nation to the 5th cycle. The dispensation of Israel is replaced by the dispensation of the Church.

2. The client nation of Israel is set aside and Gentile client nations exist in the royal family dispensation.

3. This means that the Gentiles are blessed by Israel's failure and discipline. This also means that the Gentiles of the Church and the client nation to God have received the transfer of Israel's spiritual heritage and therefore custodian responsibility.

4. The Gentiles are blessed by Jewish cursing in this dispensation, but Paul anticipates that Gentiles will receive even greater blessing when Israel is restored as the client nation to God in the Millennium.

5. As the apostle to the Gentiles Paul inserts a parenthesis to magnify the ministry to the Gentiles. This is because as the Gentiles are blessed from the perception of doctrine, so that blessing will overflow back to the Jews. The Jews receive their blessing, not directly from their spiritual heritage but from the Gentiles—client nations.

6. Therefore Paul has a ministry which not only blesses the gentiles but in turn provides blessing for true Jews.

7. The blessing to the Gentiles through justification results in the establishing of client nations and the evangelization of the Jews. As the individual Jew responds to the message of salvation presented by the Gentile believer the curse is turned into blessing, and he, the Jew, becomes a member of the royal family of God forever. He is no longer a Jew, he is a royal family in a special category of blessing.

Principle

1. Paul is anxious for the salvation of the Gentiles and for the formation of Gentile client nations to God, because this is the way the Jews will be evangelized in coming generations.

2. Therefore for the Jew who believes in Christ his cursing is turned to blessing. His blessing is perpetuated under the freedom of the Gentile client nation.

3. Not only does the believing Jew of this dispensation receive eternal life but he is entered into the royal family of God by means of the baptism of the Spirit and has the same option and opportunity to use doctrine to advance to maturity.

4. In the previous dispensation of Israel only those Jews in the line of David were royal family. But now, any Jew who believes in Christ, regardless of his tribe, he is royal family of God because of the baptism of the Spirit.

5. Furthermore, many of the Jewish royal family in the dynasty of David were unbelievers, and therefore you have the case of royalty in hell. But any Jew in this dispensation who believes in Christ is royalty in heaven forever.

6. Any Jew, regardless of tribe or status, who believes in Christ during the Church Age automatically becomes royal family of God forever.

7. Therefore Paul's ministry is glorified or magnified because a direct ministry to the Gentiles becomes instantly an indirect ministry to the Jews.

8. The preservation of a remnant of believing Jews in every generation of the times of the Gentiles and the double blessing of that remnant with imputed righteousness and royal family status is a magnificent display of God's wisdom and grace.

9. The administration of the 5th cycle of discipline to Israel in AD 70 indicates their terrible apostasy and total failure at that time. Their evil and degeneracy prior to their fall is well documented. But no matter how great their failure the plan of God marches on, and Jewish failure in the past does not hinder or destroy Jewish failure in the present or Jewish restoration in the future at the Second Advent.

Application

1. We have a magnificent consolation and encouragement to know that in times of maximum evil and degeneracy God preserves the believer, whether Jew or Gentile. No matter how bad things become for each believer God's plan moves right on. Historical disaster does not in any way imply that God's plan is cancelled and that until better times come no one is going to advance to maturity. Some of the greatest advances to maturity are accelerated by disaster.

2. Not only is the believer in the plan of God—Jew or Gentile—under logistical grace, but he is under the same principle of super-grace blessing as a potential as in good times. Illustration: Daniel.

3. Therefore times of defection and declension have never hindered the momentum of the plan of God for the positive believer. It is only the negative believer who peels off and goes through the cycles of reversionism.

4. The principle. No historical disaster can hinder the plan of God for the Jew or the Gentile; no historical disaster can hinder the momentum of those believers who are positive toward Bible doctrine.

5. No historical disaster can cancel either present blessing to the Jewish remnant or future blessing to restored Israel of the Millennium.

6. God is faithful; God keeps His word. The faithfulness of God is based on the integrity of God which is composed of two divine characteristics: righteousness and justice.

7. Divine judgment to degeneracy and apostasy never hinders divine blessing to the pivot of mature believers. Nor does historical disaster hinder the momentum of advance to maturity.

8. Many times in history Jewish declension and apostasy have been so great that alarming segments of the world's Jewish population have been destroyed by divine discipline.

Whenever this has occurred those Jews who died, died as a result of saying no more times than Pharaoh at the Exodus.

9. Such disastrous destruction does not cancel or abrogate God's plan for the true Israel—those who believe in Christ. Nor does it hinder the future restoration of Israel at the Second Advent.

10. Jewish failure cannot destroy the Jewish future. The failure of Israel does not hinder the plan of God, and therefore does not hinder the future of Israel.

11. Today many Jews throughout the world are the richest people of the world, yet their wealth can never replace for them their spiritual heritage, the true riches.

Lesson #729

729 10/15/1979 Romans 11:14–15a Soviet arms race; Jews: stimulated to faith in Jesus Christ and believers in every generation; doctrine of reconciliation

Romans 11:14 if at all I shall provoke to jealousy my own flesh, and shall save some of them.

Verse 14 – begins with the conditional conjunction ei (εἰ) [pronounced /] which introduces the protasis of a first class condition, assuming the protasis to be true. With it is the enclitic particle -pôs (-πῶς) [pronounced pocē], meaning in some way or some how—“If somehow.” Next is the future active indicative of parazhlow, which means to stimulate to emulation, to provoke or stimulate the Jews to emulate the Gentiles in believing in the Lord Jesus Christ in this dispensation. We have a gnomic future tense for a statement of fact or performance which may be rightfully expected under normal conditions. Therefore the future tense is not future from the standpoint of prophecy but future from the standpoint of its gnomic consideration. This is what can be expected under normal conditions—that throughout the Church Age Jews will be evangelized by Gentile client nations, missionaries or personal witnessing, and that out of all of the Jews being evangelized many of them will emulate Gentiles, believe in Christ and become members of the royal family of God. The active voice: Paul produces the action of the verb as the apostle to the Gentiles. This is why he is so enthusiastic about his responsibility and his title. His conversion will stimulate some Jews to believe in Christ; the writing of the doctrine which occurs in this chapter will stimulate others. The indicative mood is declarative indicating the reality of the situation.

Next comes the possessive genitive singular from the personal pronoun egó (ἐγώ) [pronounced ehg-OH], the word for my. With it is the accusative singular direct object from the noun sarx (σάρξ) [pronounced sarx]—“flesh.” By using sarx (σάρξ) [pronounced sarx] Paul is referring to the racial Jew who has the genes of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, but as an unbeliever does not possess the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. Therefore, “stimulating to emulation my flesh” refers to stimulating Jews to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ.

“and” – the connective use of the conjunction kai; “might save” – aorist active subjunctive of the verb sôzô (σώζω) [pronounced SOHD-zoh]. The aorist tense is a constative aorist for a fact or action extended over the entire period of the Church Age, beginning at AD 70 and going to the Rapture—the times of the Gentiles. The active voice: Paul produces the action. The subjunctive mood is potential, it depends on the individual volition of every Jew who hears the gospel. With it is the accusative plural direct object of the indefinite pronoun tis (τις) [pronounced tihç]. The accusative plural is used to represent a specific category—the racial Jew.

Then there is a prepositional phrase, ek (ἐκ) [pronounced ehk] plus the ablative plural of the intensive pronoun autós (αὐτός) [pronounced ow-TOSS], used as the third person personal pronoun—“from among them,” or simply “among them” or “of them.”

Translation: “If somehow I shall stimulate to emulation [of the Gentiles who believe] my flesh [the racial but not the regenerate Jew], and might save some of them.”

Principle

1. God has not cast away His people Israel, for in times of Jewish apostasy God has always preserved the remnant of believers, beginning with the Exodus generation right down to the last administration of the 5th cycle of discipline in AD 70.
2. True Israel [those who have believed in Christ] is regenerate Israel, and in every generation there is a remnant of believing Jews.
3. The fall of Israel is neither universal nor perpetual, for during the times of the Gentiles Gentile salvation through faith in Christ will become a stimulus to Jewish faith in Christ.
4. In times of greatest Jewish apostasy and declension there is therefore always a remnant of believing Jews.
5. Paul therefore as the apostle to the Gentiles has a ministry which results in thousands of Gentiles believing in Christ, and among those who do some who will be missionaries to other countries, and others who will witness to Jews in the client nation.
6. Gentile salvation through faith in Jesus Christ stimulates Jews to look at the grace function of the plan of God.
7. The natural seed of Abraham can only become the spiritual seed of Abraham through faith in Christ—which means that Gentile believers are responsible for witnessing to Jews as individuals and responsible for missionary activity in any geographical area where Jews live.
8. Paul’s ministry to the Gentiles also benefits the Jews—evangelization, indoctrination which advances the saved Jew to maturity, and the blessings which come from fulfilling the plan of God.

That ends the parenthesis, and now Paul resumes the concept, the amplification of verse 12.

Romans 11:15 For if their rejection is the reconciliation of the world, what will their acceptance be if not life out from the dead? (BLB)

Verse 15 – cursing is turned into blessing for the Jew because Gentiles have responded to the gospel. Cursing has been turned into blessing for the Gentile who believes. This stimulates the Jew to believe so that cursing can be turned into blessing for him.

The verse begins with the conditional conjunction ei (εἰ) [pronounced /], introducing the protasis of a 1st class condition—if and it is true. With it is the postpositive conjunctive particle gar. The explanatory use of the conjunction is translated, “Now if” or “For if.” The nominative singular subject is apobolh which means rejection, and with it is “autos (αὐτός) [pronounced ow-TOSS]—“their rejection.” This is a reference to the administration of the 5th cycle of discipline which destroyed Israel’s client nation status and in affect was the reason for the change of dispensation from the Age of Israel to the Church Age.

There is an ellipsis again in this verse—the omission of verbs. This shows the great emotional stress under which Paul wrote. We can insert the aorist active indicative of ginomai (γίνομαι) [pronounced GIN-oh-my] because of the predicate nominative coming up—“has become.” Then the predicate nominative of the noun katallagê (καταλλαγὴ) [pronounced kat-al-lag-AY], which refers to reconciliation. “For if their rejection has become the reconciliation [and it has].” We have an anarthrous situation here, there is no definite article. The absence of the definite article emphasizes the quality of the noun, therefore it is translated into English with the definite article. English uses the definite article for emphasize; the Greek uses it for de-emphasis.

The removal of Israel as the client nation to God through the 5th cycle of discipline had two results: the halting of the dispensation of Israel and the insertion of the Church Age. This means that Jews who believe in Christ in this dispensation are automatic royalty, whereas Jews who believed in Christ in the past dispensation were not. The second result was the beginning of the times of the Gentiles or the function of Gentile nations as a client nation to God. In the previous dispensation that was a function for Israel only, except for 70 years.^[3]

“what” is the interrogative pronoun tis (τις) [pronounced tihç]. We have to insert a verb here since it is elliptical, so we have the future active indicative of eimi (εἶμι) [pronounced eye-ME]—“what is,” and then the predicate nominative from the definite article which is used here as a possessive pronoun—“what is their.” Then comes the predicate nominative from proslhmyij, which means acceptance—“what is their acceptance.” This is a reference to the restoration of Israel as a client nation to God at the Second Advent of Christ. The restoration of Israel includes not only the regathering of Jews from their present dispersion but the resurrection of all of the Old Testament saints, including the Jews, and the fulfilment of all the covenants to Israel.

The words ei (εἰ) [pronounced /] mê (μή) [pronounced may] is an idiom. It is literally, “if not.” It is translated “but” here, it is an exclusion concept, and the result is in the nominative singular of zôê (ζωή) [pronounced dzoh-AY]—“life.” Then comes ek (ἐκ) [pronounced ehk] plus the ablative plural of nekros (νεκρός) [pronounced nehk-ROSS]. It means life from the dead, and it a reference to the resurrection of all the Jewish believers of the Old Testament who are present in their resurrection bodies for the restoration of Israel. This refers also to the resurrection of the nation as a client nation to God, which we call simply restoration.

1977 Romans

Lesson #730

730 10/16/1979 Romans 11:15b 16a Jews: Second Advent promises, perpetuation in the dispensation of Israel; offering of first fruits and mass of Old Testament believers

Romans 11:15 For if their rejection is the reconciliation of the world, what will their acceptance be if not life out from the dead?

Translation: “For if their rejection [the 5th cycle of discipline and loss of client nation status] has become the reconciliation of the world [and it has], what will be their acceptance, but life from the dead?”

This also infers that there will always be a remnant of true Israel in every generation. Even though Satan is constantly working at destroying the Jews he will never succeed in doing so. The Jews today are under a curse, but when they believe in Christ the cursing is turned to blessing and they become royal family of God. The future restoration of Israel in the Millennium means fantastic blessing for the entire world in the environment of the Millennial government.

Romans 11:16 Now if the firstfruit is holy, also the lump; and if the root is holy, also the branches.

Verse 16 – the principle that comes out of the concept: the perpetuation of true Israel. The first half of this verse is the perpetuation of Israel during the dispensation of Israel; the last half of the verse is the perpetuation of Israel during the Church Age and/or the times of the Gentiles.

It begins with the transitional use of the postpositive conjunctive particle de, and since we are now moving into a new area for interpretation this is translated, “Moreover.” With it is the conditional particle ei (εἰ) [pronounced /], which is used to introduce the protasis of a 1st class condition. The first class condition of supposition looks at it from the standpoint of historical reality.

Next is the subject, the nominative singular subject of aparchê (ἀπαρχή) [pronounced ap-ar-KHAY], and it refers to sacrificial firstfruits of a heave offering. A heave offering is an offering that is waved before the Lord. It refers to a sacrifice, the sacrifice of the firstfruits with a heave offering. The word for heave offering goes back to the Hebrew of the Old Testament, terumah, used for a gift (usually a gift of food) brought to the temple or to the priest. It derives its name from the fact that a portion was lifted from it or taken by a person from his property as an offering to God. It included anything offered by the Jew, either by the command of God or of his own volition, for the erection and maintenance of the temple and for the living of the Levitical priests. Here it refers to a portion of dough taken as a heave offering. The generic use of the definite article represents a category at this point. Aparchê (ἀπαρχή) [pronounced ap-ar-KHAY] refers to the sacrifice of the firstfruits of the famous heave offering, called terumah in the Old Testament. This is the heave offering of Numbers 15:18-21.

18 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, When ye come into the land whither I bring you,

19 Then it shall be, that, when ye eat of the bread of the land, ye shall offer up an heave offering unto the LORD.

20 Ye shall offer up a cake of the first of your dough for an heave offering: as ye do the heave offering of the threshingfloor, so shall ye heave it.

21 Of the first of your dough ye shall give unto the LORD an heave offering in your generations.

This heave offering was in recognition of the fact that God prospered them in an agricultural economy. When the harvest was in the first part of the harvest was to be given to the Lord.

So Paul uses the firstfruits of this heave offering to form an analogy to the meaning of true Israel in the dispensation of Israel. We also have to add the predicate nominative of a(gia) which is used for the word holy. And by inserting because of ellipsis the present active indicative of eimi (εἰμί) [pronounced eye-ME] we now have a translation: “Moreover, if the firstfruits [the dough of the heave offering] are holy [and they are]”—1st class condition. What does it mean that the firstfruits are holy? The word holy is the key, an old English word for integrity. The integrity of God is the combination of His justice and His righteousness. The grace pipeline goes from the justice of God to the righteousness of God. The blessing that comes through that pipeline is logistical grace blessing and, at the point of maturity, super-grace blessing. So when it says that the firstfruits are holy it is simply a recognition that no talent, ability, system of morality or self-sacrifice, are responsible for that blessing; but that it came from the justice of God, down the grace pipeline to the righteousness of God, totally apart from any system of human ability.

The Hebrew word terumah is exactly the same as the Greek aparchê (ἀπαρχή) [pronounced ap-ar-KHAY] in this verse. It is analogous to the foundation of the Jewish nation. As goes the dough, so goes the entire nation. The firstfruits are Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. All were believers and all eventually advanced to maturity. If the first fruits are holy, and they are—because the firstfruits of Israel are Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. They are holy in the sense that they were born again and that they followed the plan of God to its logical conclusion, maturity adjustment to the justice of God through maximum doctrine resident in the soul. So the true Israel must follow Abraham, Isaac and Jacob and be born again. Throughout all history there will always be racial Israel but the true Israel is not racial Israel, it is the Jew who believes in the Lord Jesus Christ and then goes on to advance to maturity. Aparchê (ἀπαρχή) [pronounced ap-ar-KHAY] represents the entire mass of anything, therefore the firstfruits are representation of the entire mass. So the firstfruits denote the representation of the entire mass of true Israel. The mass of true Israel is the believing Jew. True Israel is composed of believers in the Lord Jesus Christ. That means that at the end of the Church Age there is a resurrection—Rapture—and then we have continuation and conclusion of the Jewish Age, called the Tribulation. Then we have the Second Advent of Christ when all of the Old Testament Jews who believed in Christ are resurrected to go into the Millennium with the Jews who believed in Christ during the Tribulation and remained alive. When Israel is restored as a nation it is the restoration of true Israel, those who are believers, and believers only. The protasis, then, refers to the foundation of true Israel while the apodosis which now follows refers to the true Israel of the Old Testament, those who believed in the Lord Jesus Christ in Old Testament times.

“the lump is also holy” – this begins with the adjunctive use of the conjunction kai, “and” or “also.” Next is a nominative singular subject, phurama (φύραμα) [pronounced FOO-ram-ah], which means a lump or a batch of dough. It means anything that follows from the original dough. The lump or the batch of dough is also holy. If the starter is holy the batch of dough is holy.

Principle

1. The batch or lump of dough is true Israel of the Old Testament dispensation of Israel.
2. To be the physical seed of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob is not enough.
3. The Jew must be the spiritual seed of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and this can only occur through faith in the Lord Jesus Christ.
4. No Jew is a true Jew unless he possesses the righteousness of God.
5. No Jew can possess the righteousness of God unless he believes in Christ.
6. To substitute self-righteousness through keeping the law for the imputation of divine righteousness becomes the quintessence of blasphemy and blind arrogance.

So we have used the analogy firstfruits and batch of dough. As goes the firstfruits, so goes the batch. But now we have to change that for the New Testament

Jew where we have root, and out of the root comes the tree, and out of the tree comes the branch. This is what Paul is getting around to now. For the Jews of the New Testament we have the root and the branch. The root is comparable to the firstfruits and the branch is comparable to the batch or the lump of dough.

731 10/17/1979 Romans 11:16b–18a Intimidation of police; olive tree analogy to Jesus Christ, prosperity and Church Age believers; perpetuation of believer Jews in the Church Age; arrogant superiority; IQ and truth

Romans 11:16 Now if the firstfruit is holy, also the lump; and if the root is holy, also the branches.

The second half of this verse deals with the true Israel in the Church Age. While the heave offering is used as a simile for the true Israel in the dispensation of Israel a change of simile is needed to represent the true Israel in the Church Age. The root and branch simile now comes into focus because it conforms perfectly to the concept of positional truth. The root in this case is the Lord Jesus Christ. Out of the root comes the tree and out of the tree comes many Jewish branches. It is a picture of the branch, the Jewish believer in the Church Age, being in union with the root. So it brings the concept into focus, the baptism of the Spirit and the various doctrines of positional truth—current, retroactive.

“and” is the connective use of the conjunction kai to introduce the same subject under a different simile. It is dealing now with the true Israel of the Church Age. With it is a conditional conjunction, ei (εἰ) [pronounced I], which introduces the protasis of a first class condition, plus the nominative singular subject of the noun rhiza (ρίζα) [pronounced HRID-zah], which means root, and the nominative singular of the definite article used generically for a unique category. This is a unique category and the starter this time is the God of Israel, the Lord Jesus Christ in hypostatic union. The branches are those Jewish believers of this dispensation. At the Second Advent of Christ the Lord Jesus Christ is pictured as coming to deliver Israel, but in the first advent He saves the world through His efficacious sacrifice on the cross. Inasmuch as Jesus Christ in His humanity is also the son of David it makes a perfect way to introduce the status quo of born-again Jews in this dispensation. The root which is a part of the simile of true Israel in the Church Age is taken from Jewish heritage in Isaiah 11:1—the basis for Paul using this particular simile. The root shoot refers to Christ in the first advent; the branch refers to Christ in the Second Advent. In Romans 11 only the root is used. Because of ellipsis we insert the present active indicative of eimi (εἰμί) [pronounced eye-ME] and translate it, “and if the root [the Lord Jesus Christ at the first advent] is.”

Next is the predicate nominative from agias, which means “holy” [1st class condition, and He is]. This is a reference to the incarnation, the hypostatic union, the impeccability of Christ; “so are the branches” – the adjunctive use of kai means so or also, and it introduces the apodosis. The nominative plural subject of kladoj is the branches, and it refers to true Israel or believing Jews in the dispensation of the Church. In the Church Age all believing Jews, or true Israel, are in union with Christ through the baptism of the Spirit and positional sanctification. So that all true Jews are in union with Christ just as there is a relationship between root and branch. The branches are also holy. But in the next paragraph we are going to see another type of branch, a branch that has been broken off—the unbelieving Jew.

Translation: “Moreover, if the firstfruits [the starter] are holy, the lump [the entire batch of dough, the Jew in the previous dispensation] is also holy: and if the root [the Lord Jesus Christ in the first advent] is holy [and He is], the branches [believing Jews of the Church Age] are also holy.”

Principle

1. The two similes portray the true Israel in every dispensation prior to the Millennial reign of Christ.
2. Remember that the Tribulation is a part of the Jewish Age—the end of the Jewish Age.
3. In summary, the first conditional clause portrays the true Israel of the dispensation of Israel; the second conditional clause portrays the true Israel of the Church Age. Again, this is an argument to demonstrate that God has not changed His plan because of Jewish failure in the past and it also indicates that God has not departed from Israel, or cast off or rejected Israel.
4. Put together these similes indicate that true Israel is always the believing Jew, not the racial Jew.
5. Therefore all racial Jews are not true Israel.
6. Obviously then, attitude toward Christ determines the issue.
7. To be racial Israel [to have the genes of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob] is not enough. Racial Israel must become true Israel through regeneration, following the pattern of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.
8. Regeneration can only occur when the individual Jew personally believes in the Lord Jesus Christ.
9. Christ was clearly revealed in both Old and New Testaments. Therefore all Jews are without excuse.
10. Christ is portrayed in the Old Testament through animal sacrifices of the Levitical offerings, the structure and the articles of sacred furniture in the tabernacle, the modus operandi of the holy days, the function of the Levitical priesthood, and the direct statements of the prophets.
11. As for the Church Age, the added revelation of the New Testament clearly portrays Christ both to Israel and to the Gentiles.

Verses 17, 18 – a dissertation on broken branches. This is the false Israel. In verse 17 we have a protasis and in verse 18 we have an apodosis.

Romans 11:17 But if some of the branches were broken off, and you, being a wild olive tree, were grafted in among them, and have become a fellow-partaker of the fatness of the root of the olive tree,

Verse 17 – “And” is the transitional use of the postpositive conjunction de, and is translated “Moreover.” Next is a conditional conjunction ei (εἰ) [pronounced /] which introduces the first class condition. “Moreover, if [and it is true].”

Then the nominative masculine plural subject from the indefinite pronoun tis (τις) [pronounced tihç] which represents a category, with the descriptive genitive plural of kladoj – branches—“some of the branches. This is a reference to Jewish unbelievers in every generation of the dispensation of Israel. The Jewish unbeliever cannot inherit the unconditional covenants to Israel. He is not qualified to inherit them because he does not have eternal life. This refers to unbelieving Jews of the Church Age as well.

“be broken off” – aorist passive indicative of the verb e)kklaw which means to break off. “Moreover, if some of the branches were broken off [and they were]” – unbelieving Jews. They do not partake of the root, they are not in union with Christ in this dispensation. This is a constative aorist for a fact or action extending over the entire period of the dispensation of Israel as well as the Church Age. Passive voice: unbelieving Jews receive the action of the verb because they are not true Israel. A broken branch is a racial Jew. He has the genes of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob but he has not personally believed in the Lord Jesus Christ. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the fact that in every generation of the dispensation of Israel there are racial Jews who are going to reject Christ as saviour, and this is true also in our dispensation. We have here both temporal and eternal judgment of unbelievers. The temporal judgment is any kind of a holocaust that might occur; the eternal judgment refers to eternity, the great white throne when all unbelieving Jews are going to be resurrected with unbelieving Gentiles and cast into the lake of fire forever.

“and thou, being a wild olive tree” – the transitional use of the postpositive conjunctive particle de, the proleptic use of the second person personal pronoun su referring to all Gentile believers. It refers to Gentile believers in the dispensation of Israel, as per Romans 9:30-33, and it refers to all born-again believers in this dispensation as well. This principle brings the two dispensations together. Here we have the Gentiles being brought in. The word being is the present active participle from the verb eimi (εἶμι) [pronounced eye-ME]. The present tense is a perfective present referring to a fact which has come to be in the past but is emphasized as a present reality—Gentile believers grafted in by the baptism of the Holy Spirit. Active voice: Gentile believers of the Church Age produce the action of the verb. The indicative mood is the declarative for the historical reality of the fact that in this dispensation especially Christ is the root. The tree has branches. The branches are first of all Jews but some branches have been broken off. A wild olive tree, the Gentiles, are going to be grafted in, so this brings the Gentiles into the body of Christ as well. The body of Christ was originally composed of Jews. The first members of the royal family of God were Jews on the day of Pentecost. Now, we the Gentiles are brought into the picture.

Then we have the predicate nominative which is translated, “a wild olive tree.” The Greek word is α)grielaioj and it is used as a figure for heathenism. It refers to Gentile believers in the Church Age.

“were grafted in” – aorist passive indicative of ε)gkentrizw, which means to engraft or to graft in. We are mentioned as Gentiles because the privileged race is the Jewish race. The aorist tense is a culminative aorist, it view Gentiles believers in Christ as being entered into union with Christ through the baptism of the Spirit but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. We are joint heirs with Israel in this dispensation. Passive voice: Gentile believers receive the action of the verb through the baptism of the Spirit. The indicative mood is declarative for historical reality—Gentile believers being joint heirs with Jewish believers in the Church Age.

“among them” – en (έν) [pronounced en] plus the locative plural from the intensive pronoun autós (αὐτοῦς) [pronounced ow-TOSS], a reference to Jewish believers of the Church Age. This makes the olive tree a reference to the Church as the body of Christ, the royal family of God. The Bible must be interpreted, however, in the time in which it was written, and at the time of the writing the olive tree was a source of prosperity in the ancient world. It was the symbol of prosperity because of its oil and berries.

The olive tree was used in connection with Israel, for its prosperity, its security, and its responsibility as a client nation to God. This is illustrated by Zechariah chapter four. The olive tree refers also to the Church and God’s plan for the Church related to the ministry of God the Holy Spirit. The olive oil represents the ministry of the Holy Spirit whereas the olive itself represents special blessing imputed to Jew or Gentile believer when they crack the maturity barrier. Since oil represents the ministry of the Holy Spirit His ministry is unique in the Church Age.

The Gentile believers were grafted in with Jewish believers in the royal family of God in the Church dispensation. We are actually, then, one in Christ. The true Israel of Jewish believers is depicted as the olive tree in which some of the natural branches have been broken off—Jewish unbelievers. The Jewish unbelievers are rejected, and that is the meaning of the breaking off of the branches. In their place Gentile believers have been grafted in. God in the Church Age has broken down the wall of partition, the wall that separates Jew and Gentile, so that Jew and Gentile become one body in Christ—Ephesians 3:6.

“and with them partakest of the root and fatness of the olive tree,” is poorly translated. It should be, “and have become co-partners [or, joint partakers] of the root and the prosperity of the olive tree.”

“and have become” is the aorist middle indicative of gínomai (γίνομαι) [pronounced GIN-oh-my]. The culminative aorist view the event in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. The result is that we, the Gentiles, no longer depend on client nation Israel for evangelism because we, the Gentiles, are now doing the evangelizing. We, the Gentiles are the ones who form the client nation in this dispensation, but to do so we must believe in Jesus Christ who is the Gold of Israel. The middle voice is a direct middle in which the agent, the Gentile believer, acts with a view toward participating in the results of the action. The indicative mood is declarative for historical and doctrinal reality. Jew and gentile believer are in the same royal family in this dispensation, having the same privileges and the same opportunities.

There is also a predicate nominative, sugkoinwmoj, which means joint partakers, joint participation, partners. The noun was often used in the Greek for business partners—“and have become partners. The genitive of relationship singular from rhiza (ρίζα) [pronounced HRID-zah] refers to the Lord Jesus Christ as the root, the foundation of the Church through His death, burial, resurrection, ascension and session.

Next is the possessive genitive of the noun piothj which means fatness, richness, or prosperity. This prosperity refers to the imputation of two categories of blessing—logistical blessing and supergrace blessing.

“of the olive tree” –the descriptive genitive singular e)laia. The olive tree is God’s plan for the Church.

Translation: “Moreover, if some of the branches [Jewish unbelievers of the Church Age] were broken off [and they were], and you [Gentile] being a wild olive tree, have engrafted in among them, and have become a partner of both the root and prosperity of the olive tree.”

Principle

1. This verse recognizes the historical trend of Jewish rejection of Christ as saviour in this dispensation. Therefore there is plenty of room in the body of Christ for Gentile believers.
2. The branches broken off are those Jews who in every generation of this dispensation reject the Lord Jesus Christ as their saviour.
3. These unbelieving Jews follow the pattern of the big blot-out.
4. They understand and reject the gospel, which results in maximum scar tissue of the soul.
5. The human mind, no matter how brilliant, is helpless to cope with life apart from truth. The human mind cannot operate on that which is false. Therefore, no matter how great the IQ the thinking is distorted and ruined by operating on falsehood.
6. The mentality of the soul only functions properly on the fuel of Bible doctrine.

7. The human mind of the Jew, though brilliant, is useless without divine help. That divine help is Bible doctrine which they have rejected.

8. Israel's failure is Gentile opportunity, Gentile blessing, when the Gentile believes in Jesus Christ, the God of Israel.

9. The Gentile believer is depicted in this verse as a wild olive tree. A wild olive tree cannot bear any fruit. Before it can it must be grafted in to a good olive tree.

10. The mechanics of grafting in—the baptism of the Holy Spirit whereby every believer is entered into union with Christ—Jew and Gentile alike.

Romans 11:18 do not boast over the branches. And if you boast against them, you do not support the root, but the root you.

Verse 18 – the apodasis. “Boast not against the branches” starts out with a present middle imperative from a compound verb katakauxaomai [kata = over; kauchaomai (καυχάομαι) [pronounced kow-KHAH-om-ahēe] = to boast], to boast over is a compound which emphasizes comparative superiority expressed in boasting. The Gentiles, to compensate for their inferiority, become arrogant and boast of their superiority. It connotes boasting because of triumph over others, or because of imagined superiority over others. With this is the negative mê (μή) [pronounced may]. The present tense is a progressive present for action in a state of persistence, therefore linear aktionsart. This is the indirect middle voice, emphasizing the agent, the Gentile believer, as producing the action of the verb, which means he is antagonistic toward the Jew when he should be participating in blessing with him. This signifies the action as closely related to the subject and therefore giving a verbal command in an individual way in order to specify, Beware first of all interlocking systems of arrogance, and beware of interlocking systems of arrogance when they make you antagonistic toward the Jew. This should be translated, “Stop assuming arrogant superiority over.” The objective genitive plural from kladoj means “the branches.” These are the Jewish branches, Jewish believers in union with Christ just as the Gentiles.

“But if” – the conditional conjunction ei (εἰ) [pronounced I] introduces a 1st class condition. With the indicative mood it introduces the second apodasis of a 1st class condition, a supposition from the viewpoint of reality. The arrogant distortion of grace was actually occurring among Gentile believers. With this is the postpositive conjunctive particle de used as a transitional conjunction, no contrast is intended in context; “thou boast” – present middle indicative of the verb katakauxaomai, which means to be arrogant. “And since you are arrogant” is the corrected translation. Paul was addressing himself to the Roman believers. In their midst were those involved in interlocking systems of arrogance. The present tense is a perfective present referring to a fact which has come to be in the past (interlocking systems of arrogance) but is emphasized as a present reality and the basic problem of the Roman Church. The indirect middle voice emphasizes the agent, the Gentile believer in Rome, as producing the action of the verb rather than as participating in the result. The indicative mood is declarative for historical reality.

Next is the negative adverb ou (οὐ) [pronounced oo] plus the proleptic use of the pronoun su—“you and only you.” The verb is the present active indicative of bastazō (βαστάζω) [pronounced bas-TAD-zoh], meaning to bear, to carry, to lift up. A function of the client nation to God is to protect the Jew. Since carrying is the exertion of power, including the exercise and application of volition, it comes to mean here to support or to sustain—“you [and only you] do not support/sustain the root,” rhiza (ρίζα) [pronounced HRID-zah], accusative singular direct object. The present tense is a static present for a condition perpetually existing. Active voice: the arrogant Gentile believer does not produce the action of the verb because of interlocking systems of arrogance. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the spiritual condition of the Gentile believer [interlocking systems of arrogance] and his failure to sustain or support or carry the root, the root being the Lord Jesus Christ.

Lesson #732

732 10/17/1979 Romans 11:18b Doctrine of interlocking systems of arrogance: criminal, crusader, righteous indignation, psycho, and sexual vs. the plan of God

Romans 11:18 do not boast over the branches. And if you boast against them, you do not support the root, but the root you.

“but the root thee” – which takes us into the principles of logistical grace.

The meaning of this

1. The believer does not advance the plan of God but the plan of God advances the believer. The problem is that the Roman Gentile believers are not advancing in the plan of God, therefore the plan of God must discipline them.
2. The plan of God does not depend on the believer but the believer depends on the plan of God.
3. The plan of God supports the believer; the believer does not support the plan of God.
4. Arrogance reverses the function of grace so that a blasphemy is sponsored in the name of Christianity.
5. Arrogance overestimates the individual believer and underestimates the grace provision of God.

Arrogance emphasizes the subject of faith while grace emphasizes the object of faith—the root, the Lord Jesus Christ.

Principle

1. In blind arrogance a self-righteous person generally dominates a group of people.
2. An offshoot of blind arrogance is personality arrogance in which the arrogant person uses his personality to dominate a group within a system, and not only to dominate the group but to be antagonistic toward the policy of that organization, its authority, its leadership.
3. Personality arrogance finds the acceptable or dominating or pleasing personality setting false spiritual standards for the group or cell.
4. A dominating personality in a local church may enter blind arrogance by declaring that the pastor no longer has the right biblical message.
5. He therefore announces to his cell that the pastor has become mixed up and they must look to him for leadership to guide them in this matter.
6. This is a case of distraction from doctrine through personality domination rather than doctrinal control, resulting in the blind leading the blind.
7. All of them fall into the ditch of interlocking systems of arrogance.
8. Dominating personalities in local churches, or for that matter any organization, must beware of setting up their personal and often erroneous opinions against the authority or the policy of the organization.
9. Personality arrogance, then, is a self-centeredness of personal opinion rather than truth. Personality arrogance seeks to establish personal opinion over doctrinal standards, or the policy or the authority of any given organization. At this point personality arrogance becomes not only blind arrogance but institutional arrogance as well. The believer must avoid allowing personal opinion to come into opposition with doctrine.

Lesson #733

733 10/19/1979 Romans 11:19 Interlocking systems of arrogance: psychopathic, sexual, superiority, and distortions; anti-Semitism

Romans 11:19 You will say, then, “Branches were broken off, that I might be grafted in.”

Verse 19 has to do with the arrogance that develops out of anti-Semitism. People are anti-Semitic because of personality domination. “Thou wilt say” – future active indicative of λέγω (λέγω) [pronounced LEH-goh], “You will say.” The gnomic future is for an action expected under conditions of Gentile believers’ arrogance. Active voice: Gentile believers produce the action through interlocking systems of arrogance. The indicative mood is declarative which anticipates the reality of arrogance among Gentile believers who become involved in anti-Semitism through becoming first involved in interlocking systems of arrogance. The inferential conjunction oun (οὐν) [pronounced oon] is correctly translated “therefore.” It introduces an inference from what precedes.

The nominative plural subject, kladoj, “branches,” refers to Jewish unbelievers who are involved in maximum scar tissue of the soul and the big blot-out, and are being punished by the fifth cycle of discipline and therefore scattered throughout the world. The aorist passive indicative of the verb e)kklaw means to be broken off. This is a constative aorist for a fact or action extended over the period of Israel’s client nation status, all of the way from the Exodus to the fall of Jerusalem in A.D. 70. The passive voice: the unbelieving Jews received the action because they are not true Israel, believers in Christ. They receive both temporal and eternal judgment. The indicative mood is declarative, indicating the fact that historically there will always be times when client nations to God become degenerate. They do not become degenerate through immorality—immorality is merely one of many manifestations. They become degenerate through interlocking systems of arrogance.

The conjunction hina (ἵνα) [pronounced HEE-na] introduces a purpose clause, “that.” Then we have the aorist passive subjunctive of e)gkentrizw, which means to be grafted in. The culminative aorist views the arrogant presumption in its entirety, but here we see the existing results—the distortion of grace doctrine, the function of anti-Semitism. Passive voice: the gentile believer assumes that he receives the action of the verb because of an imagined superiority over the Jew. The subjunctive mood is potential as a part of the purpose clause.

Lesson #734

734 10/21/1979 Romans 11:19–20a Anti–nukes refuted; arrogance of personality and anti-Semitism; third–world degeneracy and conspiracy

Romans 11:19 You will say, then, “Branches were broken off, that I might be grafted in.”

Translation: “You will say then, The branches [Jewish] unbelievers were broken off, in order that I might be grafted in.”

Principle

1. Arrogance is behind anti-Semitism.
2. Gentile believers distort grace blessing into racial superiority.
3. Because the Jew is under divine punishment of the fifth cycle of discipline it does not infer that he is inferior to the Gentile. Far from it.
4. If ever there was a super race it is the race of Israel.

5. Contempt for those under historical discipline is that same interlocking system of arrogance which divorces the believer from reality and repudiates the Christian modus operandi of the royal family honor code.

6. Arrogance and its interlocking system is the worst of all degeneracies. It is a series of sins, a complex, and therefore becomes almost synonymous with the old sin nature.

7. Arrogance motivates most of the mental sins, the verbal sins, and the overt sins.
Stopped here

Principle

1. The assumption and distortion of this verse is a reflection of the degeneracy of soul and thinking which comes from interlocking systems of arrogance. The assumption is incorrect and refuted by the next verse.
2. You will note that arrogance exploits and abuses those who are under divine discipline.
3. Arrogance, then, not only divorces the believer from reality but causes him to participate in a form of mass cowardice known as kicking someone when they are down.
4. But kicking the Jew while he is down is one of the most disastrous and suicidal functions in history. God does not permit man to interfere with his discipline of someone else.
5. To interfere with the function of divine discipline is to invite disaster to self, plus a life of future misery and punishment.
6. Therefore, no believer can afford to be anti-Semitic for even a second.
7. The believer who is arrogant is also inadequate. To compensate for his inadequacy he must kick something to show how “good” he is.
8. No matter how great the IQ arrogance not only divorces one from reality but guarantees stupidity. Arrogance destroys perceptibility.

Romans 11:20 Rightly so: They were broken off by the unbelief, but you stand by faith. Do not be high minded, but be afraid.

Verse 20 – “Well” is the adverb kalos (καλός) [pronounced kal-OSS] used as an affirmative adverb. It means, “Quite right” [it is true]. The instrumental of cause in the singular is apistía (ἀπιστία) [pronounced ap-is-TEE-ah]—“unbelief.” The instrumental usually expresses intermediate or impersonal means, often related to ordinary factors producing it. Hence, we have the instrumental of means, “because of unbelief.” Because something has been rejected; because they have rejected Christ as saviour, because they have rejected establishment principles.

“they were broken off” – aorist passive indicative of e)kklaw. When it says they were cut off because of unbelief it does not simply mean rejection of Christ, though that is the heart of it. It also means that there were reverberations in both ways. There was negative volition toward the cross, toward Jesus Christ the God of Israel. The reverberations move in two ways under interlocking systems of arrogance. It meant, first of all, rejection of the laws of divine establishment; it means the destruction of their freedom. It also contributed to the interlocking systems because some believed, but instead of advancing to maturity so that there would be a pivot of mature believers to protect in times of apostasy they went into the sin unto death under the principle of reversionism. So whatever direction is taken the interlocking systems of arrogance caught believer and unbeliever in a maelstrom of historical disaster. The passive voice: this refers to the client nation of the past. The indicative mood is declarative indicating that this happened; this is a reality.

“and” – the postpositive conjunctive particle de emphasizes the contrast between the Jews under discipline as a client nation and believers in the Lord Jesus Christ assembled in local churches—“but.” Jews are the branches broken off and saved Gentiles are the branches grafted into the olive tree. With it is the proleptic use of the personal pronoun su, “you [and only you].” This is a reference to believers who are Gentiles and it emphasizes the dispensation in which we find ourselves.

“standest” – perfect active indicative of the verb histêmi (ἵστημι) [pronounced HIHS-tay-mee] which means to stand. The intensive perfect denotes a completed action with emphasis on the existing results. We stand on the basis of the integrity of God and what He has provided. Active voice: the Gentile believer produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the doctrines which cause us to stand.

“by faith” – the instrumental singular of cause, pistis (πίστις) [pronounced PIHS-tihz]. This can be one of three things. It can refer to faith which saves, it often refers to salvation. It also refers to the faith-rest technique. Faith also is used for doctrine. Here it stands for a combination of the latter two.

The present active imperative of the verb phroneô (φρονέω) [pronounced fron-EH-oh] means to think, but when you put the negative mê (μή) [pronounced may] with the imperative of phroneô (φρονέω) [pronounced fron-EH-oh] it is a prohibition. So we have to correct the translation to “stop thinking.” The present tense expresses the continued action of thinking in an erroneous manner. The prohibition therefore demands that the thinking be stopped. One of the most difficult things for the believer to do, and one of the greatest tests of flexibility, is the ability to change your opinions when he is wrong. So this demands that the action in progress, arrogant thinking, be discontinued. By way of contrast, a prohibition in the aorist subjunctive forbids a thing before it has begun. A prohibition in the present imperative says that it is already going on, so now stop it. Therefore we translate it, stop thinking.

With this is the accusative neuter plural from the adjective hupsêlos (ὑψηλός) [pronounced hoop-say-LOSS] which means arrogance, and with phroneô (φρονέω) [pronounced fron-EH-oh] it means to be thinking from inside interlocking systems of arrogance. So the Gentile believers to whom Paul originally addressed Romans were thinking inside of the interlocking systems of arrogance. Arrogance divorces the believer from reality as far as God is concerned.

“but” is the adversative conjunction allá (ἀλλά) [pronounced ahl-LAH], and it sets up a contrast between what believers in Rome were thinking and what they should be thinking. What they should be thinking is the present middle imperative of the verb phobeô (φοβέω) [pronounced fohb-EH-oh], which has two almost antithetical meanings. One is fear and the other is respect. One has the connotation of sin and one has a connotation of honor. So when we deal with phobeô (φοβέω) [pronounced fohb-EH-oh] we have to deal with the fact of these two connotations. The present tense is a tendencial present used for an action which is purposed or desirable, but not actually taking place, and demanding it as a way of life—linear aktionsart. The middle voice is a permissive middle representing the agent, the arrogant believer, being commanded to voluntarily yield himself to the results of the action or to seek to secure the results of the action in his own interests. He does this by his own flexibility, humility, respect for authority wherever it is found. It is translated, “but keep having respect.”

Lesson #735

735 10/21/1979 Romans 11:20b–21a Interlocking systems of arrogance re degeneracy, respect and believing lies; divine discipline for anti Semitism; flattery

Romans 11:20 Rightly so: They were broken off by the unbelief, but you stand by faith. Do not be high minded, but be afraid.

Translation: “Quite right; because of unbelief they [the unsaved Jews] were broken off, but you [saved Gentiles] stand because of faith in Christ. Stop thinking proud thoughts, but fear [or, respect].”

Romans 11:21 For if God did not at all spare the natural branches, neither will He spare you.

Verse 21 – “For” is the explanatory use of the postpositive conjunctive particle gar. Here is a reason or explanation why Gentile believers should avoid interlocking systems of arrogance. Not only does it mean anti-Semitism for which there is divine discipline but it means a lot of other things for which there is also divine discipline. With this is the conditional particle ei (εἰ) [pronounced I] which introduces the protasis of a 1st class condition—“if [and it is true].” Sometimes it is even better to translate this “since,” which it is a conjunction which means ‘if and it is true.’ So we have supposition from the viewpoint of reality. When this fact of doctrine is realized then arrogance and the interlocking systems can be avoided.

Then comes the subject in the nominative singular, theos (θεός) [pronounced theh-OSS], “God”—“For if God.” With it is the aorist middle indicative of phéidomai (φείδομαι) [pronounced FIE-dom-ahée], plus the negative ou (οὐ) [pronounced oo] which is used when you have the indicative mood. If the mood here was imperative or subjunctive or infinitive then the negative would be mê (μή) [pronounced may]. “For if God did not spare.” The aorist tense is a constative aorist for a fact or action extended over a period of time. The middle voice—this is really a deponent verb, middle in form, active in meaning. God produces the action of the verb in administering discipline to those who fail. The indicative mood is declarative for a first class condition. The objective genitive plural of kladoj refers again to Israel—“the branches.” For if God did not spare the natural branches.” These are Jewish unbelievers. The word natural is a prepositional phrase—kata plus the accusative of the noun phusis (φύσις) [pronounced FOO-sihz], literally: “according to nature.” But it is an idiom meaning natural. This is a reference to the Jews whose spiritual heritage includes the original client nation to God, the great heritage of the Mosaic law, of the prophets, the Old Testament canon; everything that goes to make up their spiritual heritage, including the unconditional covenants. With all of this spiritual heritage God does not spare the Jew who rejects Christ as saviour, the Jew who enters interlocking systems of arrogance. If God judges the unbeliever He must also discipline His own children.

The apodasis starts out with the negative conjunction oude (οὐδέ) [pronounced oo-DEH], and it is translated neither. Next is the future middle indicative of pheídomai (φείδομαι) [pronounced FIE-dom-ahée]. The gnomic future tense is for a statement of fact which may be rightfully expected under conditions of anti-Semitism—“neither will he spare you.” This does not imply that the believer can lose his salvation but simply the fact of divine discipline from the justice of God to the believer who sins, or is guilty of the evil of anti-Semitism, or gets himself involved in interlocking systems of arrogance, or turns his back on doctrine and becomes a reversionist. Principle: God does not require the help of anyone else in punishing someone else in the human race, believer or unbeliever. Such interference on the part of the believer is blasphemous.

Lesson #736

736 10/25/1979 Romans 11:21b Relaxed mental attitude toward critics; interlocking systems of arrogance re anti-Semitism, maligning, divine discipline and cf. reversionism

Romans 11:21 For if God did not at all spare the natural branches, neither will He spare you.

Translation: “For if God spared not the natural branches [and He did not], neither will he spare you [Gentile believers guilty of anti-Semitism].”

Principle

1. When the Jew rejects Christ he is rejecting his great spiritual heritage, for Christ is not only the saviour but also the God of Israel.
2. Now regarding the Jews, obviously to whom much is given much is expected.
3. Both the individual Jew who rejects Christ and the client nation of Israel in apostasy have been judged by God.
4. The client nation has received the administration of the 5th cycle of discipline, which means there is no more client nation Israel until the second advent and the millennial reign of Christ.

5. The individual Jewish unbeliever is also judged during the times of the Gentiles. He is judged as an individual and he is judged collectively. This is the function, then, of the justice of God toward Israel, both national and individual.
6. That same justice of God will not tolerate sin in the believer, therefore the importance of the rebound technique on the part of the believer.

Once rebound has occurred the discipline from God can be removed, as in the case of 1Corinthians 11:31, or it can be continued for a blessing out of cursing.

1977 Romans

Lesson #737

737 10/26/1979 Romans 11:22a Liberal critic of the left; blessing from the integrity of God; punishment of nations from the severity of God

Romans 11:22 Behold therefore the kindness and severity of God: severity indeed upon those having fallen, but kindness of God toward you, if you continue in the kindness; otherwise you also will be cut off.

Verse 22 – the application of divine essence to the situation. The first two words here are i)de oun (οὖν) [pronounced oon]. I)de is correctly translated Behold, if you understand that this particle is simply the aorist active imperative of the verb eidô (εἶδω) [pronounced Ī-doh]. It is used as an interjection of concentration. It points out something to which the human author Paul wishes to draw special attention. It also points out the fact that in the reading of this there would be a long enough pause so that everyone suddenly became aware of the fact that no one was saying anything, and they would immediately look toward the speaker to see what was wrong. Nothing is wrong, he is just waiting for everyone to refocus. This is called in English speaking, dramatic pause. The inferential conjunction oun (οὖν) [pronounced oon] denotes that what it introduces is the result of what precedes.

Next is the accusative singular direct object from the noun chrēstôtēs (χρηστότης) [pronounced kh-ray-STOT-ace]. It often connotes goodness or doing what is right but it doesn't mean either here, it means the origin of what is always right. Therefore it means integrity—"Behold therefore the integrity." We have an anarthrous construction of the noun chrēstôtēs (χρηστότης) [pronounced kh-ray-STOT-ace], i.e. there is no definite article. This emphasizes the quality of God's integrity rather than the identity of God's integrity. Therefore the absence of the definite article in the Greek is equivalent to the emphatic use of the definite article in the English.

Then we have a connective kai because we are to look at something else, a second accusative and therefore a double direct object. The accusative singular direct object from the noun a)potomia [ἀπό] [pronounced aw-PO] = away from; tomia = cut], to cut away from or cut off. Cut off finally comes to mean severity if you think of cut-off in terms of the guillotine. The possessive genitive of the noun theos (θεός) [pronounced theh-OSS] follows, referring to God.

“on them which fell severity” – we begin with the emphatic particle men, which is Classical Greek. It is used with another particle, de, and is translated “on the other hand.” Next is the prepositional phrase, epí (ἐπί) [pronounced eh-PEE] plus the accusative which always emphasizes motion. In this case it is epí (ἐπί) [pronounced eh-PEE] plus the accusative plural of the definite article, touj. It is correctly translated “to those,” since the definite article is used as the demonstrative pronoun to emphasize the unbelieving Jew as the one who is the recipient of all of this discipline.

We have now come to the time when only Gentile nations can become a client nation. This means that the Jews under the fifth cycle of discipline are scattered throughout the world.

Then we have a verb, the aorist active participle from the verb piptô (πίπτω) [pronounced PIHP-toh], which means to fall. So we have, “on the one hand to those [the branches broken off, the unbelieving Jews] who fell. The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. It takes the Jewish negative volition toward the gospel and regardless of its extent or duration gathers it into a single whole, therefore a fact or action extended over the entire period of the Church Age. The participle is circumstantial for the big blot-out.

Next is a nominative singular subject from the noun apotomia, which means cut off or severity; plus the adversative use of the conjunction de, and here is the Attic Greek correlative clause—“but on the other hand, to you.” This is a reference to the Gentiles of the Church Age who have believed in the Lord Jesus Christ. And then the nominative singular subject chrēstôtēs (χρηστότης) [pronounced khray-STOT-ace], which means integrity, plus the possessive genitive of theos (θεός) [pronounced theh-OSS], “the integrity of God.”

This is a constant emphasis on the difference between those who believe in Christ and those who reject Him. But in this interpretation it is the unsaved Jew and the saved Gentile. It is based on grace rather than race, therefore the issue is grace and not race. This verse emphasizes the doctrinal principle that divine blessing to the Gentile should never be distorted into arrogance of racial superiority. Jewish punishment from God does not imply racial inferiority but rather the denial of the Jewish spiritual heritage and rejection of Christ as the God of Israel. Jewish reversionism has not only resulted in loss of his client nation status in history but the periodic reoccurrence of the holocaust experience. Except for faith in the Lord Jesus Christ the Gentile would be in the same boat.

“if thou continue” – the protasis is introduced by the conditional particle eán (εάν) [pronounced eh-AHN] which, with the subjunctive is the recognition of the 3rd class condition—probability. The verb is the present active subjunctive of epiménō (ἐπιμένω) [pronounced ep-ee-MEHN-oh], and it means if you continue, or if you persist. The present tense is a perfective present, it denotes the continuation of existing results—the blessings of logistical grace support and eventually the blessings of supergrace support. Active voice: the Gentile believer produces the action. The subjunctive mood is potential for a 3rd class condition implying a future reference and qualifying it by an element of contingency. This is followed by the locative of sphere of xristothj again—“if you persist in the sphere of the integrity.”

“otherwise thou also shalt be cut off” – the conjunction epei (ἐπεὶ) [pronounced ehp-IH], usually causal but here is the Attic Greek use, and it means, “if it were different” or “otherwise.” This is called alternative through ellipsis, meaning if you do not continue you will be cut off from blessing by divine discipline. With this is the nominative singular for the personal pronoun su, the subject, and it refers to the Gentile believers, the branch grafted in. Then the adjunctive use of kai, translated also.

Next is the future passive indicative of e)kkoptw, used for the cycles of discipline in this passage. It means to be cut off, to be removed, to be prevented. This is a gnomic future for what may be judicially expected when the believer becomes reversionistic or becomes involved in interlocking systems of arrogance. The passive voice: the Gentile believer receives the action of the verb through rejection of doctrine and consequent reversionism. So we have: “if you continue in the sphere of the integrity of God [maybe you will and maybe you will not]: otherwise you also [Gentile believers] shall be cut off from blessing by divine discipline from the justice of God.”

Just as the Jewish unbeliever is maladjusted to the justice of God through rejection of Christ as saviour, so the Gentile believer becomes maladjusted to the justice of God through rejection or neglect of Bible doctrine. It means loss of client nation status because of a shrinking pivot of mature believers. It means divine discipline for carnality, for reversionism. It means historical disaster in time, loss of maturity blessing in time, loss of eternal blessing and reward, but it does not imply any loss of salvation.

Lesson #739

739 10/28/1979 Romans 11:22b Divine discipline for the unbeliever and negative volition of Jew and Gentile; review of the 5 cycles of discipline of the client nation

Romans 11:22 Behold therefore the kindness and severity of God: severity indeed upon those having fallen, but kindness of God toward you, if you continue in the kindness; otherwise you also will be cut off.

Translation: “Therefore behold the integrity of God and the severity of God: on the one hand severity to those who fell [Jewish unbelievers]; but on the other hand the integrity of God [blessing from the justice of God] to you [Gentile believers], if you persist in the sphere of the integrity of God: otherwise you also shall be cut off.”

This refers to the cycles of discipline. The cycles of discipline are based on the fact that Jesus Christ controls history. He controls it directly through the function of His essence or His deity. He controls it indirectly through the laws of divine establishment. He also controls it permissively through the policy of permitting the angelic conflict to be perpetuated and concluded in human history. Therefore human good and evil coexist with the spiritual factors related to Bible doctrine. Under the principle that Jesus Christ judges nations with the administration of five cycles we have that principle involved at the end of this verse. These cycles of discipline are punitive measures against apostasy, reversionism and evil, and they relate not only to the spiritual life of the client nation to God but at the same time to the economic life, the military life, and the social life; in fact every aspect of life.

The cycles of discipline are found in Leviticus chapter twenty-six. The first three cycles are found in verses 14-22. In verse 14 we have the warning that precedes every cycle of discipline—"But if you will not obey me..." This relates to the three areas of the Mosaic law—Codex #1: freedom; Codex #2: spiritual heritage; Codex #3: the laws of divine establishment.

The fifth cycle of discipline is the removal of a client nation—verses 27-38.

1977 Romans

Lesson #740

740 10/29/1979 Romans 11:23 Jesus Christ the hope for unbelieving Jews while alive; divorcement from reality; power of Jesus Christ to control history

The only hope for the Jewish unbeliever as a broken branch is given in verses 23 & 24. In verse 23 we have the principle of doctrine.

Romans 11:23 And even they, if they do not continue in unbelief, will be grafted in, for God is able to graft them in again.

Verse 23 – kakeinoj combines the conjunction kai with the demonstrative pronoun ekeinos (ἐκεῖνος) [pronounced ehk-Ī-noss]. This is a kind of slurring of words in the Koine Greek, and it is because of some hope or excitement after condemnation. The Jewish unbeliever in the big blot-out is the one that needs the hope. But when translated it doesn't come up with much, it is simply "And those," referring to the Jewish unbelievers. Then there is a postpositive conjunctive particle de used as a transitional conjunction—"And those also."

Next comes the conditional clause. The third class condition is introduced by the conditional conjunction eán (ἐάν) [pronounced eh-AHN] plus the subjunctive—"if" (maybe it is true and maybe it is not). The present active subjunctive which follows is epiménō (ἐπιμένω) [pronounced ep-ee-MEHN-oh] which means to persist or to continue. With the negative it means "if they do not persist in." The progressive present denotes the action in a state of persistence. The action is the big blot-out, the Jews rejecting Christ in the Church Age. Active voice: unbelievers of the Jewish race produce the action. The subjunctive mood is the potential subjunctive which is used for the protasis of the 3rd class condition.

The locative of sphere, apistía (ἀπιστία) [pronounced ap-is-TEE-ah], indicates in what they are not to persist if they are ever going to have any blessing from God. It means unbelief. “And they [those Jewish unbelievers] also, if they do not persist in their unbelief.” Their unbelief refers to the big blot-out.

What will happen? The future passive indicative of e)gkentrizw, “they shall be grafted in.” The future tense is a gnomic future for what will happen in the future under specific conditions—where Jewish people who have rejected Christ, still alive on this earth, will believe in Christ. The passive voice: the unbelieving Jew at the moment of faith in Christ receives the grafting in by the baptism of the Spirit. The indicative mood is a potential indicative, meaning they have to believe in Christ before it can happen. As long as Jewish unbelievers are alive, therefore living in time, there is hope that they will personally believe in the Lord Jesus Christ. But when time runs out through either physical death or the Second Advent, or the end of the Millennium, then the Jew has had his last opportunity to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ. When there is life there is hope, hence the explanatory addendum to this verse.

“for God is able to graft them in again” – the explanatory use of the postpositive conjunctive particle gar begins this addition, “for.” Then the subject, nominative singular, ho theos (θεός) [pronounced theh-OSS]—“the God,” plus the present active indicative of eimi (εἶμι) [pronounced eye-ME], the verb to be. The present tense is a static present, it represents a condition as perpetually existing. Active voice: the omnipotence of God produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of fact. Then the predicate nominative singular of dunatos (δυνατός) [pronounced doo-nat-OSS], which means to be able, to have ability, and is a direct reference to the omnipotence of God who controls history.

Principle

1. God’s ability to control history is related to His omnipotence, backed by His omniscience which knew every detail of history from eternity past.
2. This principle of doctrine has been used many times in history. For example, Shadrach, Meshach and Abednigo is answering Nebuchadnezzar—Daniel 3:17, “God is able to deliver us.” They didn’t say He would, they said that if God so desired He could do it.
3. The ability of God is a warning against violating the royal family honor code. One of the great violations of this is judging others. Cf. Romans 14:4.
4. The ability of God is noted in relationship to His grace policy—2Corinthians 9:8 deals with the doctrine of logistical grace. Logistical grace blessing is the ability of God.
5. The ability of God is beyond human imagination. Ephesians 3:20.
6. The ability of God includes all creatures, according to Philipians 3:21.
7. The ability of God is greater than disaster—2Timothy 1:12.

Then we have one other word, the accusative plural direct object from the intensive pronoun autós (αὐτοῦς) [pronounced ow-TOSS], used as the personal pronoun—“them.” The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it refers to that moment when the Jew believes in Christ. It contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety; it recognizes that instant of time when a person who is a Jew believes in the Lord Jesus Christ. In that moment he is grafted in, the baptism of the Holy Spirit enters him into the royal family of God forever. Active voice: God has the ability and therefore produces the action. This is the infinitive of an actual result.

The last word is the adverb palin (πάλιν) [pronounced PAL-in], it denotes the return of the racial Jew to his spiritual heritage. It doesn't mean he is saved again, it means he has returned to the greatness of his heritage, but with one difference: he is now royalty whereas as a Jew with his spiritual heritage in the past he had to be in one family of the tribe of Judah to have that royalty, the family of Jesse, the family of David. So being a Jew in the Church Age when the Jews are scattered under the fifth cycle of discipline has one of the greatest advantages, a far greater advantage than any Jew of any tribe or family in the past, except the family of Jesse, the family of David.

Translation: “And they [Jewish unbelievers] also, if they do not persist in their unbelief, shall be grafted in: for God is able to graft them in.” This is why when any Jew believes in the Lord Jesus Christ he becomes a member of the royal family of God.

Lesson #741

741 10/30/1979 Romans 11:24–25a Freedom; A FORTIORI of grace re believers grafted in; client nation status; doctrine of the mystery

Romans 11:24 For if you were cut off out of the naturally wild olive tree, and contrary to nature were grafted into a cultivated olive tree, how much more will these, the natural, be grafted into the own olive tree!

Verse 24 – “For if” is ei (εἰ) [pronounced /] gar. Gar is on the postpositive position, it is the explanatory use of this conjunction and is correctly translated “For,” or “For you see.” The addition of the conditional conjunction ei (εἰ) [pronounced /] introduces the protasis of a first class condition. This is supposition from the viewpoint of reality. We translate this, “For since.”

Next is the proleptic use of the pronoun su—“For since you.” This is referring to Gentiles. Then the first verb, the aorist passive indicative of e)kkoptw which means to cut off. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. We, Gentile believers, receive the action of the verb in the passive voice. This is a declarative indicative mood for a dogmatic reality. The Church Age is the time when Gentile believers join Jewish believers in becoming the royal family of God forever. The reason for this is because of our Lord's royalty resulting from His resurrection, ascension and session. “For since you were cut off” is the corrected translation.

Next is the preposition ek (ἐκ) [pronounced ehk] plus the ablative of phusis (φύσις) [pronounced FOO-sihs]—“by nature.” It is simply an idiom meaning natural. “For since you were cut off from what is by nature a wild olive tree.” This is a reference to Gentiles who are believers in the Lord Jesus Christ, and the wild olive tree status quo is the unsaved status of Gentiles.

“and were grafted contrary to nature into a good olive tree” – we started out as unbelievers, we were in darkness, we did not know that Jesus Christ went to the cross and was judged for our sins. We discovered it because we live in a client nation where we have freedom to do so. To go from status quo unbeliever to status quo believer one must believe in the Lord Jesus Christ. When this happens God the Holy Spirit takes every believer and enters him into union with the Lord Jesus Christ, forming the royal family of God for this dispensation of the Church. For this to occur there must be this umbrella of freedom, which is why we have during the times of the Gentiles Gentile client nations to God. Evangelism must line up with freedom. The words “were grafted [in]” refers to each one who has personally believed in the Lord Jesus Christ and received Him as saviour. “For since you [Gentiles] were cut off from what is by nature a wild olive tree” refers to the status quo of being an unbeliever; “and since contrary to nature you were grafted in to a good olive tree” – grafted in is the aorist passive indicative of e)gkentrizw. It is a culminative aorist, it views the salvation of all Gentiles during the Church Age in its entirety but it looks at it from the viewpoint of existing results. So the aorist tense gathers up into one entirety every Gentile during this dispensation who believes in Christ, but it emphasizes the results: they are now members of the royal family of God.

Then a prepositional phrase, eis (εἰς) [pronounced ICE] plus the accusative of kallielaiou –“into a good olive tree.” This is the baptism of the Spirit by which we enter into union with Christ. In both cases in this verse you refers to Gentiles believers in contrast to the Jews. The Gentiles are pictured as branches of a wild olive tree which are broken off and then brought into a good olive tree—grafted in. The broken branches or Jewish unbelievers are said to be broken out. In other words, when the Jews lost their client nation status for the last time in A.D. 70 the fifth cycle of discipline was administered. That was the last time that the Jews functioned as a client nation. That means the end of an era historically, and no Jewish nation can be a client nation to God until the Second Advent. That means that the responsibility for client nation function falls upon Gentile nations. That means also that a Gentile nation, to maintain its client nation status, must have a large pivot of mature believers. The broken branches, or Jewish unbelievers, have denied their spiritual heritage under the principle of the big blot-out, whereas the Gentiles are portrayed as branches cut off of a wild olive tree and grafted in to a good tree. The good olive tree of the Old Testament was Israel with its spiritual heritage, the law and the prophets, but the good olive tree in the Church Age is the body of Christ composed of both Jewish and Gentile believers in Christ. The good olive tree is still the spiritual heritage of Israel since the human writers of the NT are Jewish, and the protasis of this first class condition confirms the fact that Gentile believers were cut off of the wild olive tree and grafted in with Jewish believers to form the body of Christ.

“how much more” – the ablative singular of comparison from posoj plus the comparative adverb mallon (μᾶλλον) [pronounced MAL-lon]. This sets up an a fortiori [with greater reason] system. If God does the most for the Gentiles at the point of salvation He cannot withhold the less from the Jew at the moment that he believes in Christ. So the Jew and Gentile become one in Christ. This is the true issue of the baptism of the Spirit. So with greater reason God will graft in the natural branches [the racial Jews] whose spiritual heritage is salvation by grace through faith in Christ. The Jewish race was begun through regeneration and the Jewish nation was the first, and will be the last, client nation in history.

“shall these” – the nominative plural subject from the immediate demonstrative pronoun houtos (οὗτος) [pronounced HOO-tos], “these [Jews who believe in Christ],” plus the nominative plural definite article used as a relative pronoun—“who are,” and then kata plus phusis (φύσις) [pronounced FOO-sihz], which means nature: “the natural branches.”

“be grafted into their own olive tree?” – future passive indicative of e)gkentrizw plus the locative of sphere from the adjective idios (ἴδιος) [pronounced IH-dee-os], their own.

Translation: “For since you [Gentiles] were cut off from what is by nature a wild olive tree, and since contrary to nature you were grafted into a good olive tree [body of Christ, the Church, perpetuating the spiritual heritage of Israel]: how much more [with greater reason] shall these [Jews], who are natural branches, be grafted into their own olive tree [when they believe in Christ].”

Principle

1. While Israel is no longer a client nation to God, nevertheless their spiritual heritage has been passed on from the client nation now defunct to a special group, the believers in this dispensation—Church, body of Christ, or royal family of God. The spiritual heritage of Israel related to the Lord Jesus Christ is perpetuated in every generation of history.
2. Therefore the Jewish heritage in mystery form is still available to any Jew who believes in the Lord Jesus Christ. But his heritage is not found from his racial genes, it is found from regeneration. This is why Jesus told a Jewish Pharisee, “Ye must be born again.”
3. At the moment of salvation through faith in Christ the Jew is grafted into the olive tree through the baptism of the Holy Spirit and resultant positional sanctification.
4. During the time that Israel is defunct as a client nation to God they can only participate in the benefits of their spiritual heritage by believing in Christ and becoming members of the royal family of God, i.e. the Church.
5. If God enters the saved Gentiles into the royal family of God at the point of faith in Christ, it follows a fortiori [with greater reason] that He will not withhold royal family status from the Jew who believes in Christ.

Paragraph three, verses 25-36: the perpetuation of the Jewish remnant in the Church Age.

The Mystery of Israel's Salvation

Romans 11:25 For I do not want you to be ignorant, brothers, of this mystery, so that you may not be wise in yourselves: A hardening in part has happened to Israel, until the fullness of the Gentiles may come in.

Verse 25 – the big blot-out and the fullness of the Gentiles. “For” is the explanatory use of the postpositive conjunctive particle gar; “I would” – present active indicative of the verb thélō (θέλω) [pronounced THEH-loh], plus the negative adverb ou (οὐ) [pronounced oo]—“I do not wish” or “I do not desire.” The historical present tense is the idiom which views the past event with the vividness of a present occurrence. Active voice: the apostle Paul, the human writer, produces the action of the verb. He is saying this for his contemporaries, as well as all Jews of the Church Age, and for the Gentiles. They must understand their status quo by believing in Christ. This is a potential indicative of obligation. With it is the accusative plural direct object from the pronoun su, plus the vocative plural from adelphos (ἀδελφός) [pronounced ad-el-FOSS] which refers to the Church. “For I do not desire you brethren.” Adelphos (ἀδελφός) [pronounced ad-el-FOSS] refers to believers of this dispensation. It is addressed to all Church Age believers, Jew or Gentile.

Then we have the present active infinitive of agnoeō (ἄγνοέω) [pronounced ag-noh-EH-oh], which means to be ignorant. The descriptive present tense is for what is now going on. Active voice: Church Age believers produce the action of the verb through ignorance of pertinent doctrine. The infinitive of intended result indicates the fulfilling of a deliberate objective, therefore blending of purpose and result.

“of this mystery” – accusative singular direct object from mustêrion (μυστήριον) [pronounced moos-TAY-ree-on], plus the accusative of the demonstrative pronoun houtos (οὗτος) [pronounced HOO-tos], emphasizing the importance of something: “this mystery.” “For, brethren, I do not wish you to be ignorant of this mystery.” Mystery is a technical word here, referring to the Church Age and its concept of intercalation.[4]

“lest ye be wise in your own conceits” is not a correct translation. We have the conjunction hina (ἵνα) [pronounced HEE-na] plus the negative mê (μή) [pronounced may] introducing a negative purpose clause—“that not.” However, we have to get some words in between that and not—the present active subjunctive of the verb eimi (εἶμι) [pronounced eye-ME]. The present tense is an aoristic present, punctiliar action in present time. The perception of doctrine is the means of stopping ignorance and arrogance. “That you may not be” is the way most people would translate this. However, because we have an active voice plus the negative mê (μή) [pronounced may] this demands a cessation of some action which is in progress. The action in progress is said to be arrogance from ignorance. The subjunctive mood plus the negative mê (μή) [pronounced may] is the subjunctive of discontinuance as a part of a negative purpose clause. A purpose clause is formed by the conjunction hina (ἵνα) [pronounced HEE-na] plus the subjunctive mood. So instead of translation it literally,

“that you may not be,” we translate, “that you stop being.” The present subjunctive with the negative mê (μή) [pronounced may] is equivalent, then, to the present imperative. The purpose of prohibition when expressed by the aorist subjunctive is to forbid a thing that has not yet begun, but a prohibition in the present imperative, or in some rare cases the present subjunctive, commands you to stop doing something that you have been doing.

“wise” – predicate nominative plural phronimos (φρόνιμος) [pronounced FROHN-ee-moss]. It means wise or smart, but that isn’t what we are saying here. It is the prepositional phrase which follows which is so important—en (ἐν) [pronounced en] plus the locative of the reflexive pronoun heautou (ἑαυτοῦ) [pronounced heh-ow-TOO], which is literally, “in yourselves.” But it is an idiom meaning in your own estimation.

Principle

1. To be wise in your own estimation is to be arrogant from ignorance.
2. Rejecting doctrine produces both scar tissue of the soul and arrogance simultaneously. This is why a believer comes to believe a lie.
3. Ignorance of truth inevitably produces arrogance.
4. Therefore the negative purpose clause demands that the believer avoids ignorance of doctrine which produces arrogance of life.
5. The removal of ignorance regarding doctrine destroys arrogance in the soul of the believer.
6. Cognizance and conceit are mutually self-exclusive where Bible doctrine is concerned.
7. Ignorance of doctrine pertaining to Israel in this Church Age has often caused believers to become arrogant—wise in their own estimation.

Principle

1. Ignorance of doctrine is tantamount to rejection of doctrine. The reason so many Christians are ignorant of doctrine is because they do not care for doctrine.
2. Scar tissue of the soul is built up through rejection of doctrine, either deliberately or inadvertently.
3. Accompanying the build-up of scar tissue in the soul is arrogance, for pride increases in proportion to the amount of scar tissue resident in the soul.
4. Therefore blackout of the soul plus scar tissue of the soul increases and intensifies arrogance.
5. A person may be positive toward doctrine and still have great areas of ignorance. That is inevitable. Such ignorance will produce arrogance but we call it blind arrogance in contrast to deliberate rejection of doctrine which results in obvious vanity. Perception of doctrine, then, destroys the potential of arrogance in spheres of ignorance.

742 10/31/1979 Romans 11:25b Anti-gun motivation; conservatism; doctrine of the mystery (cont.); arrogance from ignorance and rejection of Bible doctrine

The Mystery of Israel's Salvation

Romans 11:25 For I do not want you to be ignorant, brothers, of this mystery, so that you may not be wise in yourselves: A hardening in part has happened to Israel, until the fullness of the Gentiles may come in.

“that” – the conjunction hóti (ὅτι) [pronounced HOH-tee], a conjunction for after perception. In this case negative perception to indicate the context of that perception. Next is the subject, the nominative singular pwrwsij which refers to hardening, insensibility, obstinacy. This hardness of heart or scar tissue of the soul is tantamount to the big blackout, Israel’s scar tissue of the soul which caused them so much trouble. With it is the prepositional phrase apó (ἀπό) [pronounced aw-PO] plus the locative of méros (μέρος) [pronounced MEH-ros] – in part.

Next comes the perfect active indicative of gínomai (γίνομαι) [pronounced GIN-oh-my] which means to become, but here it means has occurred or has happened. The perfect tense is a dramatic perfect, it describes a fact in an unusually vivid and realistic way. It emphasizes the results of an action. Active voice: hardening of the heart or scar tissue of the soul produces the action of the verb. The declarative indicative mood regards the action from the viewpoint of historical reality in this dispensation—explaining certain things that have happened to the Jews.

Then follows the dative singular of the indirect object from the generic use of the definite article, plus the noun Israêl (Ἰσραήλ) [pronounced is-rah-ALE]. The very basis for the administration of the fifth cycle of discipline to Israel in A.D. 70 has been perpetuated in every generation of the Church Age. Each rejection of doctrine in their spiritual heritage adds a layer of scar tissue to the soul so that their brilliant IQ is neutralized by arrogance and blackout of the soul. Therefore the Jewish unbeliever comes to believe a lie because of scar tissue—that Christ is not the Messiah, that Christ is not the God of Israel, as well as the Lamb of God that takes away the sin of the world. The hardness in part means that all Jews do not follow the pattern of rejection of Christ as saviour, some of them believe in the Lord Jesus Christ.

“until the fullness of the Gentiles be come in” – the phrase begins with an Attic Greek adverb, achri/achris (ἄχρι/ἄχρις) [pronounced AHKH-ree/AHKH-rece], used as a conjunction and correctly translated until.” The adverbial genitive of time from the relative pronoun hos follows. It is translated here as an idiom—“until which time.” Next is the nominative singular subject plêrôma (πλήρωμα) [pronounced PLAY-roh-mah], which means a completion, a finish. It connotes that which fills, the full content of some container, a basket, a ship, a group. The connotation of entirety indicates a great mass or the whole sum of something, a totality or a full measure of. Then follows the genitive plural of ethnos (ἔθνος, ους, τό) [pronounced EHTH-noss]—“the full measure of the Gentiles.” That is the dispensation of the Church from the baptism of the Holy Spirit on the day of Pentecost to the Rapture or the resurrection of the Church. In other words, the full measure of the Gentiles is that period of time when only a Gentile nation can become a client nation to God.

The fullness or the full measure of the Gentiles must be distinguished from the times of the gentiles. The times of the Gentiles places direct emphasis on the client nation status. The fullness of the Gentiles emphasizes how the client nation continues to function, continues to be perpetuated---70 A.D. to the Rapture. The times of the Gentiles emphasizes client nation status while the fullness of the Gentiles emphasizes what they do in that client nation.

The final phrase, “be come in,” is an aorist active subjunctive from the verb eiserchomai (εἰσέρχομαι) [pronounced ice-ER-khom-ahēe]—“has come in.” The culminative aorist tense views the fullness or the Gentiles or the Church Age in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, namely the Rapture of the Church. In other words, the resurrection of the Church terminates the Church Age and/or the fullness of the Gentiles so that the Jewish Age can be continued and concluded.

Translation: “For brethren, I do not wish you to be ignorant of this mystery, that you stop being wise in your own estimation; that hardening in part has happened to Israel, until which time the fullness of the Gentiles has come in.”

1977 Romans

Lesson #743

743 11/01/1979 Romans 11:26a U.S. failure cf. the Swiss government and UMT; anti Semitism; future deliverance of Israel from four powers

In verses 26-28, the Jews are going to win in history.

Romans 11:26 And so all Israel will be saved, as it has been written: “The One Delivering will come out of Zion, He will remove ungodliness from Jacob.

Verse 26 – the future restoration of Israel. “And so all Israel shall be saved” is not correctly translated. It begins with kai, the connective use which introduces a result of what has preceded—the branches broken off, the branches grafted in, the wild olive tree, to good olive tree; plus the adverb houtos (οὗτος) [pronounced HOO-tos] which also refers to what precedes—“and so.” This means we have come to our first conclusion. The Jews are under discipline today, the fifth cycle. Israel is no longer a client nation, and no Jewish nation can be a client nation. Today Gentile nations are functioning as client nations to God. Then we have the subject, the adjective pás (πάς) [pronounced pahs] in the nominative singular, and then Israêl (Ἰσραήλ) [pronounced is-rah-ALE]—“all Israel. This phrase does not refer to all Jews nationally or racially. The true Jew is not the racial or the national Jew, he is the born again Jew. This phrase refers to those Jews who have believed in the Lord Jesus Christ, as per Romans 9:6. It actually refers to Jewish believers of the Tribulation, so we are not even talking about Jewish believers in this dispensation of the Church.

“shall be saved” is the future passive indicative of the verb sôzô (σώζω) [pronounced SOHD-zoh]. The problem with sôzô (σώζω) [pronounced SOHD-zoh] is that it has three different meanings. It means to deliver from any kind of trouble, it means as an individual to be delivered, it also has a collective deliverance connotation, and then it also refers to regeneration. This is not referring to salvation here, it is referring to the deliverance of the Jews in the Tribulation from the greatest period of anti-Semitism the world will ever know. The future tense here is a predictive future for an event which is expected to occur in the future at the Second Advent of the Lord Jesus Christ. Passive voice: Jewish believers of the Tribulation receive the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for historical reality.

“as it stands written” – the comparative adverb kathôs (καθώς) [pronounced kahth-OCE], “as” or “just as,” introduces documentation from the Old Testament scriptures, specifically Isaiah 59:20; 27:9. Plus the perfect active indicative of the verb graphô (γράφω) [pronounced GRAWF-oh], which means to write. The intensive perfect tense emphasizes the existing results, the completion of the Old Testament canon. The passive voice of graphô (γράφω) [pronounced GRAWF-oh] gives us the mechanics of verbal plenary inspiration of the scripture.

Isaiah 59:20 – “And the Redeemer will come to Zion [Second Advent], and unto those who turn from transgression in Jacob, declares the Lord.”

Isaiah 27:9 – “Therefore through this, Jacobs’ iniquity will be forgiven; and this will be the full pride of the pardoning of his sin.” This is an eschatological passage also dealing with the Second Advent and the restoration of Israel.

Paul is going to quote from these two verses and put together something to indicate that even though the Jews are now out as the client nation under the fifth cycle of discipline, and scattered throughout the world until the Second Advent, God still has a purpose for them.

Next is the articular nominative singular subject, present middle participle from the verb ruomai plus the definite article ο. The definite article in the nominative masculine singular is the subject, it is used as a personal pronoun and is translated he. It is a reference to the Lord Jesus Christ. The present middle participle is used as a relative clause—“He who delivers.” We have the futuristic present of the verb ruomai, it denotes an event which has not yet occurred but which is regarded as so certain in thought that it is contemplated as already coming to pass. It is the same as the prophetic perfect in the Hebrew. The middle voice is the indirect middle which emphasizes the agent, the Lord Jesus Christ, as producing the action rather than participating in the results of the action. The participle is circumstantial.

744 11/02/1979 Romans 11:26b Zion; inspiration of Scripture; future restoration of Israel after removal of all unbelievers

Romans 11:26 And so all Israel will be saved, as it has been written: “The One Delivering will come out of Zion, He will remove ungodliness from Jacob.

The main verb is “shall come” – future active indicative of the verb h(kw) which means to come or to arrive. This is a predictive future for the Second Advent. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the historical reality of the future Second Advent of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Then we have the preposition ek (ἐκ) [pronounced ehk] plus the indeclinable proper noun Ziwn [equivalent to Zion in the Hebrew]—“from Zion” emphasizes Jesus Christ in hypostatic union coming as the ruler of Israel in the line of David, and therefore fulfilling the Davidic covenant.

“and shall turn away” – the future active indicative of a)postrefw means to remove. This is a predictive future and it refers to the baptism of fire, one of the events after the Second Advent of the Lord Jesus Christ. The active voice: all judgment is committed to Christ. He is the judge who will eliminate all of the unbelieving Jews at the Second Advent.

“ungodliness” – accusative plural direct object of asebeia (ἀσέβεια) [pronounced as-EHB-i-ah], which means Godless ones, unbelievers, unbelieving Jews.

“from Jacob” – apó (ἀπό) [pronounced aw-PO] plus I)akwb. Jacob is used for the restored Israel. Why Jacob? Because Jacob means chiseller. Jacob had two wives and a few mistresses, and twelve sons which forms Israel. The nation, the race came from the twelve sons of Jacob. Whenever the Jews are presented in their racial aspects, divided into two groups, Jacob is used. Jacob refers to the nation and it means here that the unbelievers will be removed.

Translation” “And so all Israel [born-again Jews] shall be delivered [Second Advent: just as it stands written, He who delivers will come from Zion, he will remove Godless ones from Jacob.”

The concept of the restoration is found in a number of passages: Isaiah 5:26,27; 10:20-23; 11:11-16; Joel 2:18,19; Zechariah 10:6-12.

1977 Romans

Lesson #745

745 11/04/1979 Romans 11:27 Price of freedom; U.S. client nation function; doctrine of the covenants to Israel: contract and Messianic line

Romans 11:27 And this is the covenant from Me to them, when I shall take away their sins.”

Verse 27 – on the surface this verse appears to be somehow dealing with the problem of sin, but in reality it is God’s contract with Israel, the contract which has been written up in the numerous covenants.

It begins with the conjunction kai which is used as an adverb, the adjunctive use of kai which is translated “also”—“Also this.” The nominative singular feminine subject from the immediate demonstrative pronoun houtos (οὗτος) [pronounced HOO-tos] is translated “this” and refers to Israel as a client nation. There is no verb here, Paul is using ellipsis, a much greater expression of intensified thought in the Greek. But we do have to include the verb to be—“Also this is.” Then the predicate nominative diathêkê (διαθήκη) [pronounced dee-ath-AY-kay] which refers to the contract of a client nation. It is correctly translated covenant but it actually refers to a contract. It refers to the New Covenant to Israel or the new contract to Israel, which is found in Jeremiah 31:33,34.

Jeremiah 31:33—“But this is the covenant [contract] which I will make with the house of Israel after those days, declares the Lord”—in other words, the contract which began at the Exodus when Israel became a client nation to God is going to be perpetuated. There is no client nation today, this is the times of the Gentiles. After those days means after the elapse of the Church Age, the termination of the Tribulation and the Second Advent—“I will put my law”—the basics concept of the contract; each part of the Mosaic law tells the client nation how it should operate.

Verse 34 – “And they shall not teach again each man his neighbor, and each man his brother, saying, Know the Lord; for they shall all know me”—this is the future aspect of the contract. In the past the Jews failed because they did not know the Lord; they did not learn the contract, they did not understand the laws of divine establishment found in Codex #3 of the Mosaic law—“from the least of them to the greatest of them, declares the Lord; furthermore I will forgive them their iniquity, and their sin I will remember no more.”

This covenant is mentioned by the apostle Paul when he says, “Also this is the covenant.” With this is a dative plural indirect object from the intensive pronoun autós (αὐτοῖς) [pronounced ow-TOSS]. The intensive pronoun is generally used in the New Testament as the third person plural personal pronoun and should be translated, “to them.” The indirect object indicates the one in whose interest the new covenant was given. Just as God has a contract with us it is in our interest to fulfil that contract. Failure to fulfil that contract on our part results in the destruction of a client nation. Then a prepositional phrase, apó (ἀπό) [pronounced aw-PO] plus the ablative of source from the personal pronoun egó (ἐγώ) [pronounced ehg-OH]—“from me.” “Also this is the covenant to them [Israel in the future] from me [God].”

The New Covenant is given at the Second Advent with the restoration of Israel as a client nation to God. It is given to Jewish believers who form the nucleus of the restored client nation of the Millennium. These Jewish believers will have survived the Tribulation.

“when I shall take away their sin” – this must be understood in the light of the eschatology of the Millennium. The temporal clause is introduced by a temporal conjunction, hótan (ὅταν) [pronounced HOH-tan], plus the subjunctive mood for an indefinite temporal clause. The time limit is based on contingency, and that is when the Second Advent occurs. It can be translated either when or whenever, but it refers to the return of the Lord Jesus Christ to the earth. With it is the aorist middle subjunctive of the verb ἀφαιρέω which means to remove, to take away something from someone. The culminative aorist views the Second Advent of Christ and the fulfilment of the New Covenant to Israel in its entirety, but it regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. The existing result is the removal of the stigma on the Jew which is related to the 5th cycle of discipline. The middle voice is the indirect middle, emphasizing the Lord Jesus Christ as the agent fulfilling the New Covenant to Israel. The subjunctive mood is a potential subjunctive, it implies a future reference and therefore this the mood used in a temporal clause.

The accusative plural direct object is hamartia (ἁμαρτία, ας, ῆ) [pronounced hahm-ahr-TEE-ah], “sin.” However, this is taken from the Hebrew of Jeremiah 31 and it is not correctly translated here as sin. It must be understood as a quotation from Jeremiah 31 and it is actually taken from a noun chatath, which means with its third masculine plural suffix, punishment for sin. It actually refers to the fifth cycle of discipline. In other words, He is not going to remove sins, He is going to remove the punishment for their sin which is the 5th cycle of discipline.

Translation: “Also this is the covenant to them [the Jewish believers of the Millennium] from me, when I have removed their punishment for sin [i.e. the 5th cycle of discipline].”

Lesson #746

746 11/04/1979 Romans 11 Doctrine of the covenants to Israel (4–6): Abrahamic, real estate and military, Mosaic Law. Church Age client nation

The New Covenant to Israel is a contract; it is a reminder that the Jews have a future as a client nation to God. So it emphasizes the restoration of Israel in the Millennium. It also emphasizes the removal of their historical collective punishment, the fifth cycle of discipline.

The covenants to Israel

1. Definition: “The Old Testament” – the word for testament in the Hebrew is berith. It does not mean testament, it means covenant or contract. We have the same problem when we come to the New Testament—H(kein)h Diathêkê (διαθήκη) [pronounced dee-ath-AY-kay]. But that is incorrect, it is not a testament. A testament is a will of someone who is deceased, and this is not a will of someone who is deceased, this is God’s contract with certain segments of the human race. So we should call the Old Testament either the Old Covenant or the Old Contract; we should call the New Testament the New Covenant or the New Contract. The covenants to Israel are defined in terms of the actual language. Berith in the Hebrew, and diathêkê (διαθήκη) [pronounced dee-ath-AY-kay] in the Greek. These mean a contract in which there is favourable disposition on the part of party of the first part [God] to party of the second part [client nation]. These covenants to Israel actually cover two separate dispensations. First, when Israel is a client nation—the dispensation of Israel; and secondly, when Israel will be under the Lord Jesus Christ in His personal reign.

The five covenants to Israel are generally classified as conditional and unconditional. For example, the Mosaic law is regarded as conditional whereas the Abrahamic, Palestinian, Davidic and New covenants are regarded as unconditional. This is a false classification. It is true that there are definitely conditional clauses in the Mosaic law, but that is because a population in a client nation is made up of believers and unbelievers, and if the population failed to make certain standards historical disaster is inevitable. But to call this conditional and unconditional is definitely confusing to the issue. By very definition we must eliminate this classification for a covenant or a contract is an agreement between two parties. Furthermore this contract is a covenant because a covenant is a disposition made by party of the first part in favour of party of the second part. The primary issue is favour or grace, therefore conditional and unconditional is always a secondary consideration. The key to the covenants to Israel is the Jewish client nation status, which again eliminates such categories as conditional and unconditional. Once understood under the client nation connotation neither conditional nor unconditional are ever proper issues. Furthermore there is neither reason nor purpose for the New Covenant to Israel apart from client nation interpretation. The client nation interpretation is the only one that will hold up.

2. The client nation interpretation of the covenants to Israel by way of classification. There are five covenants or contracts to Israel. They can be called one contract but they really come in five parts. Part one is the Abrahamic covenant. This deals with the subject of race. The race of the client nation of Israel had to be defined. Not only is the race defined as the Jew but also there are certain divine laws with regard to that race. We are told to keep our hands off the Jews and to not try to persecute him. There is, secondly, the Palestinian covenant which describes the real estate of the client nation. The third part of the contract is the Mosaic law which is both spiritual and temporal, for both believer and unbeliever. The fourth paragraph of the contract is called the Davidic covenant, and it is the dynasty for the client nation—who is going to rule in the client nation? The fifth paragraph is the New covenant which is merely the restoration of the client nation at the Second Advent and its Millennial modus operandi. (There is only one contract, and it has five paragraphs) There is another contract which belongs to the Church Age. God has made in history two contracts for client nations, one for the Jew and one for the time of the Gentiles. We have the times of the Gentiles and the fullness of the Gentiles, which means that certain parts of this contract, namely the Mosaic law, have now become pertinent to the Church Age—e.g. economic principles, the laws of free enterprise without government interference, etc. And we are to operate under this.

3. The covenants in the Messianic line. Some of these covenants which are in the contract simply deal with who and what Christ is. Remember a principle: Jesus Christ controls history. So we have the Adamic covenant—Genesis 2:15; 3:15. The seed of the woman is the Lord Jesus Christ. The humanity of Christ in His hypostatic union will originate with Adam's seed. So the contract deals with the person of Christ and there must be an understanding in the contract and in its various paragraphs that there is a Messianic line and that Christ is the hope of the world.

The Noahic covenant which was reiterated to Noah with regard to the Messianic line—Genesis 6:18; 8:21-9:17. These deal with the fact that the only saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ, would come through Adam, but then when Adam's line begins to split up it is going to come through Seth.

The Abrahamic covenant—Genesis 12:1-3; 13:15,16; 15:18; 22:15-18; 26:3,4; Exodus 6:2-8. The line narrows, the line of Abraham was the only one of the semitic peoples. The seed of the woman would descend from Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. That means the Jew. But in the line of the Jew only one tribe would be involved, the tribe of Judah. But not the entire tribe of Judah, the family of Jesse, the father of David.

So now we get down to the Davidic covenant—2Samuel 7:8-17; Psalm 89:20-27. The seed of the woman, the humanity of Christ, will descend from the tribe of Judah, the family of David.

Then finally, we have the New Covenant again. The seed of the woman, the humanity of Christ, will return to the earth a second time to restore Israel and to bring about the same conditions which existed when man was first on the earth—perfect environment.

4. The Abrahamic covenant, the first part of the contract.

1. It is a grace paragraph in which God as party of the first part made favourable disposition to Abraham and the race of Abraham as party of the second part. In other words, for client nations of the Old Testament we have a specific race, the Jewish race.

2. The Abrahamic covenant defines the Jewish race defines the Jewish race as citizens of the first and last client nation in history. There must be racial vigour in a client nation, or population vigour since there is no longer a clearly defined race outside of Israel—vigour from their freedom.

3. Like all of the paragraphs related to the covenants to client nation Israel Abraham and his spiritual seed are the beneficiaries of blessing and logistical support from the justice of God.

4. Abraham is the be the father of a new race which will eventually become the client nation known as Israel. So in setting up the contract a specific people are always in mind.

5. The original presentation of the Abrahamic paragraph includes both race and nation, and it was found as a three-point principle in Genesis 12:1-3.

6. The real estate promise was given for the first time in the Abrahamic paragraph, and it and the geographical boundaries were first part of the Abrahamic covenant in Genesis 13:14-16; 15:18-21. The reason for this is to prove that the people of a client nation must occupy a piece of geography on planet earth in order to function as a client nation.

7. The covenant was confirmed in sequence to those to whom it would pertain—Isaac in contrast to his brothers, Genesis 26:3,4.

8. The covenant was confirmed to Jacob instead of his twin brother Esau—Genesis 35:12. It is a reminder that members of the same family are different. Obviously, different races are not the issue if different members of the same family are as different as the twins. The difference is a spiritual factor.

9. The covenant was the basis for the divine deliverance of the Jews from 400 years of slavery. Most people put under slavery for even one century would disappear, yet in one generation the Jews made the transition from slavery to freedom. The spiritual factor was the factor.

10. The mechanics of the Abrahamic covenant demanded at its very inception spiritual maturity: ultra-super-grace sexual prosperity.

11. The new race and the client nation are brought together in the covenant in Genesis 17:8, and circumcision is the ritual of confirmation and acknowledgement—Genesis 17:9-14. Then ritual in itself is not meaningful except as it relates to the truth of doctrine, the spiritual factor. Ritual is meaningless without the reality of truth. The reality is truth is that God set up a new race to form a client nation to provide blessing to all of the other peoples and nations of human history because of client nation function.

12. The ultimate of blessing in this covenant is declared in Genesis 22:15-18. This is both individual imputation of blessing to the mature believer and blessing by association in that a client nation is necessary for the other nations of history to be blessed in a contemporary setting.

5. The real estate on which the client nation would be located. You cannot have a client nation without property; you cannot have property without the sanctity of property, one of the most important concepts of freedom. Where you have a nation where the people are not allowed to own property, where the state owns the property, then you have a people with no freedom.

In the past God has promised the Jews certain property; in the future God has promised the Jews certain property. In the past the Jews only owned what property they could conquer by their military establishment. The book of Joshua is the history of how military establishment took certain property. But when the Lord Jesus Christ returns the military establishment will not be the basis for gaining or maintaining property, it will be the work of the Lord Jesus Christ, the God of the armies, the God of Israel. At that time Israel will own property which Israel has never owned in the past.

a) God is party of the first part and He made a favourable land grant to Israel as His client nation forever. The land grant is for their forever status. Only what they could conquer and hold was their land grant in the past but in the future Jesus Christ will give them what they could never conquer or hold. It will include part of Africa, south-eastern of Turkey, and all of the Middle East, including Saudi Arabia, Jordan, southern Iran, half of Egypt and half of Ethiopia.

b) The Palestinian covenant guarantees the entire Middle East as a land grant to Israel forever. The present nation of Israel only has that which they can hold by military function.

c) The grant which is mentioned in the Bible will never be fully occupied by client nation Israel until the Second Advent of Christ and the Millennial reign of the Son of David.

d) The grant was first proclaimed by God through Abraham as the father of the Jewish race and is mentioned under rather indefinite terms in Genesis 13:14,15 and Genesis 15:18. But it becomes very definite later on.

e) The land grant was confirmed to Isaac as the second generation of the new race, and was confirmed with geographical boundaries which were understood at that time and are partially obscured by nations of modern history.

f) The land grant was reconfirmed to Jacob as the third generation of the new race in Genesis 35:12.

g) The land grant was reiterated to Moses as the father of the Jewish nation—Exodus 6:2-8.

ê (ě) [pronounced ā] Therefore Moses describes the geographical boundaries of the land grant to Israel in Numbers 34:1-12. But these boundaries relate to the time of Moses.

i) Furthermore, Moses prophesied the fulfilment of the land grant being given to Israel in the Millennium—Deuteronomy 30:1-9. To encourage Joshua to conquer as much of the land as he could and hold it the land grant was reconfirmed in Joshua 1:2-4. Potentially the Jewish army could have occupied everything in that land grant. The fact that they failed to do so was a spiritual factor—lack of motivation.

j) Both Jeremiah and Ezekiel confirm the fact that this land grant will not be fulfilled to client nation Israel until the Millennial reign of Christ, that only what they could conquer and hold by military function would be pertinent, but that in the future when the Lord gave them the land it would be of a very large nature. Jeremiah 32:36-44; Ezekiel 11:16-21; 36:21-38.

k) What is the nature of this specific land grant in terms of modern geographical boundaries? The western border is the Mediterranean Sea, including central Turkey (The land of the Hittites). The southern border is the Nile River, including eastern Egypt and eastern Ethiopia, and also Saudi Arabia. The eastern border includes Jordan and Iraq. The north-eastern border is the Euphrates River.

6. The covenant to Moses (the Mosaic law). This is the divine paragraph dealing with client nation policy in several areas—freedom, spiritual life and establishment. It therefore has as much pertinency today as it had then, without certain factors, e.g. the observation of the Sabbath. We must, however, understand that this covenant to Moses was specifically given to the client nation Israel—Exodus 19:3; Leviticus 26:46; Romans 3:19; 9:4. It was specifically never given to a Gentile nation as such, en toto as a spiritual heritage. In other words, the Mosaic law is the spiritual heritage of Israel. Deuteronomy 4:8; Romans 2:12-14. It was not given to the Church—Acts 15:5, 24; Romans 6:14; Galatians 2:19.

As the policy for client nation to God the covenant to Moses is divided into three categories. (The ten commandments do not define sin, as per Calvinistic theology, though they mention sin in terms of defining freedom in terms of certain negatives)The Decalogue defines freedom in terms of morality, privacy, property, and authority.

Secondly, there is a spiritual code known as the ordinances. The function of a client nation demands regeneration plus momentum in the plan of God. Without born again believers there is no pivot; without a pivot there is no use of the spiritual heritage, no function of the spiritual heritage, no perpetuation of the spiritual heritage. The real heritage that must be perpetuated cannot be perpetuated by birth and therefore there must be a new birth—which is why Jesus introduced the term, “Ye must be born again,” which we simply call regeneration. Spiritual heritage is not perpetuated by physical birth, spiritual heritage is perpetuated by a new birth. The spiritual heritage of Israel includes a complete Christology and soteriology taught through ritual and oral communication.

The third category of the Mosaic law is the establishment code known as the judgments. Every principle related to the modus vivendi of a client nation to God is included—freedom, privacy, marriage, military policy, legitimate taxation, diet, health, sanitation, quarantine, the control of crime, the function of free enterprise and profit motivation.

Lesson #747

747 11/05/1979 Romans 11 Hitler; military of the client nation and Switzerland; freedom; doctrine of the covenants to Israel (7–8): Davidic and New; Coniah bypass; doomsday

The Mosaic Law:

1. It establishes both policy and blessing patterns for the client nation collectively and for its citizens individually.
2. It authorizes the function of a Levitical priesthood in separation from the modus operandi of the government.
3. It authorizes the tabernacle and later on the temple as a sacred building for worship and a training aid for teaching doctrine. The concept of the sacred building has been perpetuated under the concept of the church building.
4. It authorizes the Levitical sacrifice to communicate salvation. We have the gift and function of evangelism in the time in which we live. Hebrews 9:12,13.
5. The Mosaic Law authorized the blood of animals as the dedication of shadows—Hebrews 9:18-22 cf. 10:1. Today the shadow takes the form of personal evangelism as well as collective evangelism.

6. Keeping the law was neither salvation nor spirituality but the modus operandi of the client nation to God in both temporal and spiritual realms.
7. The law therefore could not justify. Romans 3:20; Gal. 2:16.
8. The Mosaic law today has been set aside in two ways: the fulfilment by the Lord Jesus Christ on the cross—the shadows are now removed because Christ fulfilled those shadows; it is set aside as a function of believers in a client nation, but it is never set aside in principle as the contract for the existence of any client nation. The cycles of discipline are found in Codex #3 of the Mosaic law, and the cycle of discipline function today.
9. Since the Mosaic law has no application to Israel during the times of the Gentiles, per se, the question arises: What is the purpose of the Mosaic law? The answer can be given four ways: a) a pattern for Gentile client nation function regarding freedom, military activity, taxation, government modus operandi, free enterprise; b) It is written for the believer's instructions—Romans 15:4; c) It is written for the believer's example—1Corinthians 10:11,12; d) It is used as a divine standard to establish reality in a client nation to God.

1. The Davidic Covenant.

Party of the first part is God, and He makes a gracious disposition to party of the second part who is king David. As a part of his super-grace blessing he was to have a perpetuated dynasty forever. Not in his immediate line through Solomon, that line would be cut off. The line would be perpetuated through Nathan. 2Samuel 7:8-17; Psalm 89:20-37. While the Davidic line would continue for 400 years in Judah (to 586), and about 72 over the northern kingdom (998-926), this is not the fulfilment of the covenant. The covenant is fulfilled through the Lord Jesus Christ. Cf. Isaiah 66:22. The covenant will be fulfilled with the Second Advent of Jesus Christ.

8. The Covenant to Jeremiah (the New Covenant to Israel) simply shows that the spiritual heritage of Israel, begun in the dispensation of Israel, is renewed in its contract in the Millennium. The Millennium could be called the dispensation of the second clientship of Israel. (In the meantime there is a new covenant to the Church which says that when the Church is big enough in any Gentile nation then that nation becomes a client nation to God.) The New Covenant to Jeremiah is defined as the divine promise to disciplined and dispersed Israel that they will be restored as a client nation to God at the Second Advent. Furthermore, the restored client nation will continue forever, both in time (Millennial rule of Christ) and in eternity. The Old Covenant, the Mosaic law, was only abrogated because of the death, burial, and resurrection of Christ—and only Codex 2. When it says Christ fulfilled the law, He fulfilled the Levitical sacrifices and the principle of the atonement. Codex 1 and Codex 3 have never been abrogated, and any client nation to God must follow the principles. When they do not, then they become immoral. The New Covenant emphasizes the fact that God has not cast off His people because of their past failure and it guarantees the perpetuation of Israel as the client nation forever.

748 11/06/1979 Romans 11:28 Military of modern Israel; anticipation of the new covenant to the Church cf. to Israel; election to privilege

Romans 11:28 For as regards the gospel, they are enemies on account of you; but as regards election, beloved on account of the patriarchs.

Verse 28—this is a verse where you have to have a preliminary idea of what it is all about. In the context there is nothing to indicate the meaning of the startling statement, “as concerning the gospel they are enemies for your sakes: but as touching the election they are beloved for the Father’s sake.”

Principle of Anticipation

1. In this verse we anticipate the New Covenant to the Church, or the covenant of Israel’s dispersion. There is a contract from God to believers during the time the Jews are out under the fifth cycle of discipline.
2. God as party of the first part makes a gracious disposition in favour of party of the second part—the Church, the royal family of God composed of Jewish and Gentile believers. Party of the second part in this dispensation is not a client nation like Israel but a key to any Gentile client nation.
3. The New Covenant to the Church or the new contract supersedes all of the Jewish contracts without destroying the continuity of spiritual heritage.
4. The new contract to the Church authorizes a new priesthood, a universal one—every believer.
5. The New Covenant to the Church defines both spiritual heritage and client nation policy of the pivot during the times of the Gentiles.
6. Every Jew and every Gentile who believes in the Lord Jesus Christ is in the royal family of God, and as his own priest is commanded to function under a special modus operandi, that of the royal family honor code. We could not function without honor.
7. The New Covenant authorizes the election of the royal family of God during the times of the Gentiles to replace the Jews as God’s people in this dispensation only. God’s people in the Church Age are all Jews and Gentiles who believe in Christ. The moment they do they are so signified as God’s people through the baptism of the Holy Spirit. The scripture for the new contract begins in Matthew 26:28, includes a few references here and there in the Gospels—Mark 14:24; Luke 22:20; 1Corinthians 11:25; 2Corinthians 3:6; Hebrews 7:22; 9:15-20; 10:29; 12:24. These are one-sentence citations authorizing a new contract during the time when the Jews as a client nation Israel and as God’s people are out under the fifth cycle of discipline.
8. The key to the new contract to the Church is the function of the royal priesthood of believers inside of any Gentile client nation.

9. In effect, the New Covenant to the Church voids temporarily the covenant promises to Israel.
10. Distinction therefore must be made between the New Covenant to the Church which pertains to the dispensation of the Church and the New Covenant to Israel which pertains to the Millennial reign of Christ.
11. The New Covenant to the Church has a universal priesthood of believers while the New Covenant to Israel in the Millennium has a specialized priesthood in client nation Israel during the reign of Christ.
12. The New Covenant to the Church establishes a royal family of God forever while the New Covenant to Israel establishes Israel as a client nation forever.
13. This distinction becomes one of the fundamental differences between Israel and the Church, and between the Age of Israel and the dispensation of the Church. Client nation function of Israel is discontinued as AD 70, and the only client nations that will function from AD 70 until the Second Advent are Gentile client nations who have received and are to perpetuate (through their pivot) the spiritual heritage which once belonged to Israel.

The verse begins with a correlative use of the affirmative particles from the Attic Greek—men, and later on de. We translate men “on the one hand.” “On the one hand with reference to the gospel” is the corrected translation. Then the preposition kata plus the accusative euangelion (εὐαγγέλιον) [pronounced yoo-ang-GHEL-ee-on]. Kata plus the accusative here means with reference to. The gospel deals with soteriology. First it was in Israel as a part of their spiritual heritage, now it belongs to the Church as our spiritual heritage. We have to insert the verb to be, eimi (εἰμί) [pronounced eye-ME], 3rd masculine plural for Jewish unbelievers—“they are.” Next is a predicate nominative from echthros (ἐχθρός) [pronounced ehkh-THROSS], which means enemies. It means that God regards the unbelieving Jew as an enemy. But He also regards the unbelieving Gentile as an enemy. However, the passage is simply dealing with the Jew.

Why are they regarded as enemies? Dia plus the accusative plural of the personal pronoun su—“for your sakes.” For the sake of the royal family of God composed of Jewish and Gentile believers. The Jewish unbelievers are excluded from the family of God, therefore they are regarded by God in terms of the anthropathism—enemies. The preposition dia plus the accusative plural of su emphasizes Gentile believers in the royal family of God. This is the divine viewpoint. God regards and treats as enemies Jewish unbelievers of the Church Age for the sake of Gentile believers who possess the righteousness of God through faith in Christ.

“but as” should be translated “on the other hand”—the postpositive conjunctive particle de, used in Attic Greek correlation.

Next is a prepositional phrase, kata plus the accusative singular of eklogê (ἐκλογή) [pronounced ek-log-AY], which means election—“But. On the other hand, as far as their election is concerned.” Following this is a predicate nominative plural, agapêtos

(ἀγαπητός) [pronounced ag-ap-ay-TOSS], the word for beloved, and it refers to Jewish believers—“they are beloved.”

“for the father’s sakes” – dia plus the accusative plural of patêr (πατήρ) [pronounced pat-AYR], “because of the fathers.” The word fathers emphasizes the Jewish believers of the dispensation of Israel. Jewish believers in the Church Age have no Jewish covenant but they are still under a contract from God, they are under the New Covenant to the Church. The election of their fathers was related to client nation Israel. There is no client nation Israel during the Church Age, therefore the Jew can only fit into the picture by believing in the Lord Jesus Christ and becoming a member of the royal family of God forever. Hence, there is a true Israel in every generation of the Church Age, it is composed of any Jew who personally receives Christ as His saviour. The fathers has a special reference to the origin of the Jewish race through regeneration.

Translation: “On the one hand, with reference to the gospel, they [Jewish unbelievers] are enemies because of you [the Church as a special election to privilege]: but, on the other hand, as far as their election is concerned, they [Jewish believers] are beloved because of the fathers.”

Principle

1. The contrast in this verse is between Jewish unbeliever in the Church Age and Jewish believer of the dispensation of Israel, called the fathers.
2. The similarity is between the Jewish believer of the dispensation of Israel who is elected to privilege under the old covenants and the Jewish believer of the Church Age who is elected to privilege under the new contract and the baptism of the Spirit.
3. In each dispensation there is a special issue called election to privilege.
4. In each dispensation election to privilege is based upon personal faith in the Lord Jesus Christ.
5. Each prepositional phrase beginning with dia emphasizes the election to privilege of that dispensation.
6. For example, “because of you” in the first phrase refers to election to privilege in the Church Age.
7. For example, “because of their fathers” refers to election to privilege in the dispensation of Israel.
8. Under the doctrine of election there are two elections to privilege, Israel and the Church. Mankind enters either one of these elections through faith in Christ. The difference between the two elections is a difference of time, a difference of dispensation.
9. Because of the change is dispensation the Jew has no authorization or excuse for rejection of the Lord Jesus Christ.

The word enemies is technical for a description of unbelievers, as per Romans 5:8. The word beloved is a technical word for a description of the Church Age believer, emphasizing positional truth. We are “accepted in the beloved.” An election to privilege must have special relationship stated in terms of divine revelation. Ours is stated in terms of the baptism of the Spirit and positional truth. The first election, Israel, had special relationship revealed through the covenants to Israel. The second election, the Church, has a special relationship revealed through the baptism of the Spirit and resultant union with Christ. Each election had one thing in common, it demands personal faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. Therefore a change in dispensation does not change the way of salvation.

1977 Romans

Lesson #749

749 11/07/1979 Romans 11:29 Iranians; preparation for crisis; negative volition to truth and "Wake up America"; immigration surge

Romans 11:29 For the gifts and the calling of God are irrevocable.

Verse 29 — because God is perfect His plan has no failures or regrets, therefore God has provided perfect security, perfect stability and perfect consistency. “For the gifts and calling of God are without repentance.” That is not what it says.

We have the explanatory use of the post positive conjunctive particle gar, plus a predicate nominative neuter plural from the adjective a)metamelhtoj. In the neuter it means irrevocable. We actually have the first and the last words in the verse: “For ... irrevocable.” In between we have a few things that are very important. Because God is perfect His plan is perfect; because His plan is perfect God has not regrets. This is generally all people can get from this verse in the English.

We also have the nominative plural subject charisma (χάρισμα) [pronounced KHAHR-ees-mah] which often means gifts, or spiritual gifts. In the Greek it refers to what is freely and graciously given. Essentially, it takes its meaning from charis (χάρις) [pronounced KHAHR-ic] which means “grace.” So the correct translation is “For the grace benefits.”

Then we have a connective kai and a nominative singular subject, klhsij which means “calling” but is technical for election or election to privilege — “For the grace benefits and election.

Next we have the ablative singular of source from qoej — “from God.” Then we have to put in a verb because we have a predicate nominative “irrevocable” — “are irrevocable.”

Translation: “For the grace benefits and election from God are irrevocable.”

Grace benefits mean two principles of doctrine: the justice of God imputes to the believer the righteousness of God, establishing the grace pipeline. Grace benefits are what comes from the justice of God down the grace pipeline to the righteousness of God. So the grace benefits are twofold: logistical grace and supergrace. The grace benefits are for fulfilling the concept of election to privilege. We have a purpose for being here, we are the beneficiaries of logistical grace support and in some cases of supergrace imputation. With that we have a purpose: election to privilege — the deliverance of our nation as a client nation through the enlargement of its pivot. You may as well forget trying to wake up this country. You might as well forget the crusading, trying to straighten everyone out. When people have rejected truth it is inevitable that they will believe a lie. It is easy to believe a lie under the principle of strong delusion.

We as believers are in a plan that is based on truth. The foundation is truth, the edifice is truth. Our responsibility is to expose ourselves to the truth day by day as we listen to the teaching of the Word.

Principle

1. Note that klhsij or election is singular and charisma (χάρισμα) [pronounced KHAHR-ees-mah] is plural. Election is singular but grace benefits are plural.
2. This means simply that election to privilege is always the same. It is based on faith in Christ regardless of the dispensation. No one is elected to privilege unless he believes in Christ, therefore it is in the singular because regardless of the dispensation election to privilege is always the same.
3. However grace benefits [plural] to election to privilege differ in each dispensation and therefore grace benefits must be different.
4. In the dispensation of Israel election to privilege means relationship with the covenants of Israel.
5. But in the Church Age election to privilege means relationship with God through the baptism of the Spirit, i.e. the royal family of God.
6. While the Jews no longer have client nation privileges in the Church Age as such, they still have royal family privileges as members of the body of Christ through faith in Christ. Therefore this is great hope to the Jew. Has the Jew lost out? Has God cast away His people? No! Why not? “For the grace benefits and election from God are irrevocable.” If they are irrevocable obviously they can’t be cast away.
7. Each dispensation provides for the believer in Christ irrevocable election from God and irrevocable grace benefits from God.
8. Therefore the issue to the Jew is to believe in Christ whether Israel is a client nation or not. Can the Jew get along in a dispensation where Israel is not a client nation? Of course he can. Paul is the perfect illustration. God has not cast off his people. Therefore the issue to the Jew is to believe in Christ whether Israel is a client nation or not.
9. Neither man’s failure nor a change in dispensation changes the plan of God. God did not make unsaved Jews unbelievers, their own freedom of choice made them unbelievers. Eventually, being unbelievers, the strong delusion principle overtook them and so did the fifth cycle of discipline.

750 11/08/1979 Romans 11:30 Hitler and anti-Semitism; Greek comparative clauses show pivot-Jew-Gentile relationship Verses 31 & 32, God's client nation plan benefits the Gentile and the Jew in this dispensation. Verse 30, an protasis; verse 31, an apodasis.

Romans 11:30 For just as you once were disobedient to God, but now have been shown mercy by the disobedience of these,...

Verse 30—begins with the particle hōsper (ὥσπερ) [pronounced HOH-sper] which introduces a protasis of a comparative clause, not a conditional clause. In a conditional clause you have a 1st, 2nd, 3rd, or 4th class condition. They are generally introduced by the word if. We also have the same protasis and apodasis for another category of clause altogether, i.e. a comparative clause, which is not the same as a conditional clause. (In the next verse the protasis is introduced by the particle houtos (οὗτος) [pronounced HOO-tos]) Hōsper (ὥσπερ) [pronounced HOH-sper] is translated just as; houtos (οὗτος) [pronounced HOO-tos] is translated so or so therefore.

“For just as” is the way this verse begins, because the next word is the postpositive conjunctive particle gar, which introduces an explanation. A comparative clause introduces an analogous thought for the purpose of elucidating or for the purpose of emphasizing the thought expressed in the principle clause. We have here a comparison between Gentiles when Israel was a client nation and Israel when the Gentiles are the client nation. Therefore the grammatical structure of these two verses is so cut and dried from the standpoint of advanced syntax that there is only one explanation. In other words, in the protasis we see how the Gentiles fared when Israel was the client nation (the Age of Israel), and then, how Jews fare when Gentiles are client nation.

Next is a second masculine plural personal pronoun su in the nominative case—“all of you,” a reference to the Gentiles. When Israel was a client nation to God what was the status of the Gentiles? So the protasis goes back to the Age of Israel. Why start out that way with the protasis? Because when you start out with the Jews at the peak of their glory as a client nation, using their spiritual heritage, and you place the Gentiles in the subordinate role of being evangelized from that client nation, then you immediately have the attention of all of the Jews in the time of the Roman empire, and for any Jews who will listen to the Word of God when it is taught here in Romans. This is their answer, it explains everything. How did the Jews treat the Gentiles? Sometimes well; sometimes poorly. If the pivot was large the Gentiles had a break; if the pivot was small the Gentiles fared poorly. Does that tell us anything? Now that the Gentiles have client nation status, if the pivot is large the Jews have a break; if the pivot is small they get a reaming.

There are a couple of words between just as and you. There is an enclitic particle of time pote which is in the sentence. “For just as at one time you”—which takes us back to the previous dispensation. The verb is the aorist active indicative of apeithēō (ἀπειθέω) [pronounced ap-i-THEH-oh], which means to disobey, to disbelieve, to refuse to believe—“For just as at one time you had not believed.” Pote demands that you use the past tense. The aorist tense demands that you use the past tense, since the aorist tense is always past time; it is a certain type of action in past time. This is a constative aorist, which contemplates Gentile unbelief in its entirety in past time. The active voice: Gentile believers of the Age of Israel produce the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for historical reality of a fact.

The dative singular indirect object of theos (θεός) [pronounced theh-OSS] follows—“God.” The dative singular indirect object emphasizes the uniqueness of the Lord Jesus Christ, both as the manifest person of the Godhead and as the unique person in hypostatic union, the God-Man. Therefore it refers to only one member of the God-head, the Lord Jesus Christ. The definite article merely strengthens the principle that this is referring to the Lord Jesus Christ. “yet now” – nun de. The adversative particle de emphasizes a contrast between the Gentile unsaved state and the status quo of the Gentile after faith in Christ—“but.” The temporal adverb nun (νῦν) [pronounced noon] means “now”—“but now,” referring to Gentiles as believers and members of the royal family of God forever.

Next is an aorist passive indicative of the verb ēleeō (ἐλέεω) [pronounced ehl-eh-EH-oh]. In the passive voice this means to find, to receive, or to be shown mercy—“but now have received mercy.” This is a culminative aorist viewing Gentile salvation in its entirety but regarding it from the viewpoint of its existing results in the plan of God as members of the royal family of God, plus the privilege of being the pivot in a Gentile client nation; therefore the recipients of divine blessing because of justification. Passive voice: the Gentile believers of the Church Age, in contrast to Jewish unbelievers, are receiving the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic and absolute statement of Bible doctrine, relating the Gentile believer to the dispensation of the Church.

“through their unbelief” – the instrumental of cause from apeiqeia. This is the instrumental of cause meaning disbelief or disobedience, or unbelief. With it is the possessive genitive plural from the near demonstrative pronoun houtos (οὗτος) [pronounced HOO-tos], translated “of those.” Literally translated the phrase means “because of the unbelief of those Jews,” but in modern English it is translated a little more into the idiom, “because of their unbelief.”

Translation: “For just as at one time you [the Gentiles] had not believed in [the] God [Jesus Christ, the God of Israel], but now you have received mercy because of their unbelief.”

Lesson #751

751 11/09/1979 Romans 11:31 Muppets and Marines; Church Age unbeliever Jews substitute self-righteousness for imputed +R; doctrine of the great inversion

Romans 11:31 ...so these also now have been disobedient for your mercy, so that they also now may have mercy shown them.

Verse 31 – the adverbial particle o(utwj) introduces the apodasis. The conjunction is the adjunctive use of kai, translated also—“So also.” The nominative plural from the demonstrative pronoun houtos (οὗτος) [pronounced HOO-tos]—“these.” The demonstrative pronoun calls special attention to the Jews in the Church Age. The temporal pronoun nun refers to the Church Age. Again, the aorist active indicative of the verb that sets up the parallelisms of the circumstantial and comparative clause, apeithéō (ἄπειθέω) [pronounced ap-i-THEH-oh], which means to disobey, to disbelieve, to refuse to believe. “So now also these [Jews] have not believed.” The constative aorist contemplates the Jewish action in the Church Age in its entirety. The active voice: only Jewish unbelievers are in view, just as only Gentile unbelievers were in view in the protasis. This is the apodasis where the situation is reversed where we have Jewish unbelievers in the Church Age instead of Gentile unbelievers in the Jewish Age. The indicative mood is declarative for historical reality. This is first of all a reference to the big blot-out in the Church Age, it involves only the unbelievers of Israel. With this is the locative of time singular from the possessive pronoun u(mereteroj—“your,” plus the locative of time singular from the noun eleos (ἔλεος) [pronounced EHL-eh-os]—“mercy.” It actually means, “in your time of mercy,” and it is a reference to the Church Age when Gentile nations function as client nations to God. Gentiles are the missionaries to Jews in this dispensation which also doubles as the times of the Gentiles.

Now we have the conjunction hina (ἵνα) [pronounced HEE-na] plus the subjunctive, translated “in order that” introducing a final clause as a part of the comparative clause to denote purpose, aim, goal, objective. Then the aorist passive subjunctive of the verb éleeō (ἐλέεω) [pronounced ehl-eh-EH-oh] which means to have mercy, to show mercy, but in the passive voice it means to receive mercy. The culminative aorist tense views Jewish salvation in the Church Age in its entirety, i.e. when a Jew believes in the Lord Jesus Christ, but it regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. The existing results: in every generation there will be a remnant of Jewish believers, along with the Gentiles. But Paul is making a special emphasis on Jewish believers in the royal family. The passive voice: the remnant of Jewish believers in the Church Age receive the action of the verb. The subjunctive mood is a part of the purpose clause within the apodasis of the comparative clause.

Then follows the adjunctive use of kai again—“also,” the nominative plural from the intensive pronoun autós (αὐτός) [pronounced ow-TOSS] used in its usual way, the 3rd person plural pronoun referring to that same Jewish remnant.

Translation: “So now also [Church Age] these [Jews] have not believed in your time of mercy [times of the Gentiles], in order that now [Church Age] they also [Jewish remnant] might receive mercy [be evangelized by the Gentiles].”

This Means . . .

1. Jewish unbelief can be summarized as rejection of doctrine or truth, forming scar tissue of the soul.
2. As scar tissue accumulated so arrogance intensified.
3. The intensification of arrogance under prosperity produces self-righteousness.

4. This self-righteousness was applied to the Mosaic law with the result stated in Romans 9:31.
5. The Jew rejected Christ as saviour which is rejection of truth building scar tissue.
6. Having rejected Christ intensified arrogance and arrogance depended on self-righteousness in keeping the law.
7. Only the possession of the righteousness of God is compatible with the grace of God.
8. Rejection of Christ is the substitution of human self-righteousness for imputed divine righteousness, and that is arrogance in itself.
9. Arrogance is aware of self-righteousness but ignorant of the imputed divine righteousness and its implications.

Principle

1. Righteousness manufacture from religious zeal—self-righteousness and arrogance—can never replace God's perfect righteousness and eternal life possessed through faith in Christ.
2. The zeal manufactured from arrogant self-righteousness is always in direct conflict with the grace policy of God.
3. The imputation of divine righteousness through faith in Christ results in humility and grace orientation, while the development of arrogant self-righteousness results in inflexible legalism and total blindness to Bible doctrine.
4. The Jews have a high IQ but mental blindness to the doctrines of the Old Testament.
5. In arrogance the Jews had established an imaginary orthodoxy, which does not exist in the plan of God but in their evil and vain imaginations.
6. By rejection of Jesus Christ, the God of Israel and their only saviour, the Jews have excluded Him from their imaginary system of orthodoxy.
7. Arrogance and self-righteousness in Israel are totally divorced from reality. Consequently they distort the service of God, as in John 16:2.
8. All legalism is based on self-righteousness; all grace orientation and all grace function is based on imputed righteousness from God. We can only have imputed righteousness from God through faith in the Lord Jesus Christ.

The Doctrine of the Great Inversion

1. The great inversion is defined as a reversal of position between Jew and Gentile regarding client nation status. The contrast is between the Old Testament dispensation of Israel and the New Testament dispensation, the Church Age. This is a collective inversion.
2. The inversion of the Jewish Age found Israel as the client nation to God and the Gentiles were to be evangelized by Jews.

3. The inversion of the Church Age finds Gentile nations as client nations to God and the Jews evangelized by the Gentiles.
4. The inversion of the Church Age includes Jesus Christ as the God of Israel blessing Gentile believers and punishing Jewish unbelievers.
5. There are three categories of the great inversion of the Church Age: a) the reversal of client nation status; b) reversal of relationship—Gentile believers are royal family of God while Jewish unbelievers have no relationship with God; c) we have a reversal or order—the times of the Gentiles precedes the restoration of Israel in the Millennium.

Lesson #754

754 11/12/1979 Romans 11:32a VOLAR: low IQ's; decline of the U.S. military; emotion re Iran; grace before judgment of the client nation; control of the old sin nature

Romans 11:32 For God has bound up all in disobedience, that He may show mercy to all.

Verse 32 – this is incorrectly translated in the KJV. “For” is the postpositive use of the inferential conjunction gar. The nominative singular subject ho theos (θεός) [pronounced theh-OSS] follows, and these first two words are correct. It is the verb where the error starts, the aorist active indicative of sugkleiw, which is incorrectly translated “concluded.” It actually means to close up together, to hem in, to shut up together. The Koine is taken from an older word which really helps us more than anything else—cugkleiw, which is a military word which started with Xenophen. It means soldiers marching in closed ranks in order to break out of entrapment. It was later used for soldiers enclosed in fortifications, encircled but secure because they had set up some system of fortification. Finally, it was taken from the military and used for shutting up or locking up people in a prison, and it was used for fish caught in a net. This use finally slipped into the Koine in Luke 5:6 regarding Peter’s catch. It finally came to mean, as we have it here, being locked up. “For the God has locked up.” The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it refers to the fact of God’s condemnation of mankind by the imputation of Adam’s original sin to every person at the moment of life. The active voice: the justice of God produces the action of the verb after human birth—human life and Adam’s sin are imputed. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of doctrine, the fact that Jew and Gentile are condemned at the moment of life from the justice of God.

Next is the accusative plural of the definite article touj, the generic use of the article used with the accusative plural from the adjective pás (πάς) [pronounced pahs] to designate the entire human race—"the all," literally, but the all comes to mean the entire. It is an adjective. It means the entire human race.

Then the prepositional phrase, eis (εἰς) [pronounced ICE] plus the accusative of a)peiqeia which means a state of disobedience toward God. This is a reference to the imputation of Adam's sin to each person simultaneously with the imputation of life. Notice the result of the imputation of Adam's sin: a)peiqeia. Obviously one of the most important things in life for the control of the old sin nature is the antithesis, which is obedience. If God locks us up in disobedience because we have an old sin nature and the imputation of Adam's sin then obviously any solution to any problem in life is to go from disobedience, wilful rejection, to obedience or positive volition. That is why we often have in the Bible "obedience to the gospel" which is believing in Christ—+V toward gospel information. And this is why children are given parents—because they are born disobedient. The first thing parents must teach their children is obedience.

"For God has locked up the entire human race with reference to disobedience."

Beginning in verse 33 we have the doxology—a response to grace. Verse 33 starts out with an interjection, which is simply an W with a circumflex accent. The closest we can come in transliteration is "O". This is a Classical Greek exclamation, it is not Koine. It is used before a vocative to express address or invocation, along with the W to introduce an explanation. Here we have the exclamation leading to a rhetorical question in verses 34 & 35, and ending in a solemn ascription in verse 36. Most of this is Classical and not Koine Greek. It is the maximum expression of praise to God in one sentence. It introduces an act of adoration and worship excluding the possibility that an abstract quantity is being addressed. So we translate in "O" with the nominative singular from bathos (βάθος) [pronounced BATH-oss] which is also an Attic Greek word.

The old commentator A.T. Robertson says, "Paul's argumentation concerning God's elective grace and goodness had carried him to the heights, and now he pauses on the edge of a precipice as he contemplates God's wisdom and knowledge, fully conscious of his inability to sound the bottom with the plummet of human reason and words."

Bathos (βάθος) [pronounced BATH-oss], which is translated depth, means inexhaustible. In the ancient world when they wanted to say that something was inexhaustible they always went to depth. They were thinking about something that they could not probe. Anyone could look up into the sky and see, but they could not look down into the sea and see the bottom. Therefore, that denoted to them something that was inexhaustible. To the Greek there was no bottom to the sea when he got out into certain places over which he sailed. So that is really what this means: "O the inexhaustibility."

Of what is brought out by the possessive genitive from the noun ploutos (πλοῦτος) [pronounced PLOO-toss], meaning wealth in the sense of abundance of what God possesses. What kind of wealth is involved here? Now there has to be a description of what that wealth is, and since this is not Koine Greek it can be done by putting in a dash. But they did not have diacritical markings, they did it by doubling the conjunction kai. It occurs here twice and it means “both and.” Then we have two words, the descriptive genitive of swfia for wisdom, referring to the sum total of God’s self-knowledge-omniscience in contrast to His foreknowledge; then the descriptive genitive from gnôsis (γνῶσις) [pronounced GNOH-sis]. This is a Classical Greek structure. “O the inexhaustibility of the wealth, both of the wisdom and the knowledge.” Then comes the possessive genitive from theos (θεός) [pronounced theh-OSS]-“of God.” There are no definite articles in this phrase in the Greek. The absence of the definite article emphasizes the qualitative aspect of all of the nouns involved, rather than mere identity. Hence, the absence of the definite article in the Greek is equivalent to the definite article on the English. Therefore we put them in when translating, even though they are not there. When you translate from one language to another you not only translate the words but you translate the grammatical emphasis, or lack of it. Wisdom (swfia) has self-knowledge and omniscience; knowledge (gnôsis (γνῶσις) [pronounced GNOH-sis]) has foreknowledge. All three of the areas of knowledge finally arrive. Principle: Wealth resides in thought. Your wealth as far as God is concerned is determined by your ability to think.

Category #1 is God’s self-knowledge, found in swfia. God has eternally known Himself. Each member of the Trinity has perfect subjective knowledge of self. Each member of the Trinity also has perfect objective knowledge about the other members of the Trinity. All members of the Godhead have self-knowledge-which is not the same as omniscience.

Category #2 is omniscience, which is also found in swfia. God’s objective knowledge of the universe and all of its creatures is the correct definition of omniscience. God’s knowledge of all creatures falls into two categories: actual and possible. God’s omniscience has nothing whatever to do with time-past, future, or contemporary time. When we see words like predestination, foreordination, the decrees of God, these are simply ways of describing God’s perfect omniscience related to reality and possibility. It has nothing to do with fatalism.

Category #3 is knowledge-foreknowledge, the gnôsis (γνῶσις) [pronounced GNOH-sis] category in the phrase here. Foreknowledge is a print-out of the divine decrees. Nothing is foreknown until it is first decreed. Foreknowledge simply acknowledges what is in the decree-and for the believer only. Foreknowledge, predestination and election have nothing to do with the unbeliever. The unbeliever is not predestined; he is not foreknown; he is not elected; he is not justified; he is not glorified. These are all believer print-outs, they only pertain to the believer in the divine decrees.

Knowledge of God

1. God is eternal; His knowledge is eternal.
2. God is sovereign, therefore His knowledge is infinitely superior to any creature knowledge.
3. Every minute details of both angelic and human history is completely in the mind of God at all times. There never was a time when it wasn’t in the mind of God.

4. Therefore, omniscience perceives the free as free, the necessary as necessary, together with all their causes, conditions and relations, as one indivisible system of things, every link of which is essential to the whole. The free as free has to do with the volition of the soul; but more than that, it the relation of the soul to systems of authority. The necessary as necessary means that certain functions of establishment are designed to protect freedom-freedom to be evangelized, freedom to accept or reject Christ, freedom to choose a life-time partner, freedom to select a business or a job, etc.
5. Time has nothing to do with God's knowledge, therefore the future is as perspicuous to Him as the past.
6. The omniscience of God knows all of the alternatives of your personal life and all of the history as well-actual (history); probably (the alternative).
7. In omniscience God knows all that would have been involved in every case where individual decisions might have been different from what they actually were. Not so the foreknowledge of God.
8. The computer of divine decrees prints out the facts about the believer under categories foreknowledge, predestination, and election.
9. This means that there is a difference between the omniscience of God which programs the computer and the foreknowledge of God which is the print-out of the computer. In other words, nothing can be foreknown until it was first decreed. You cannot get out of the computer what was never put into the computer.
10. Only divine decrees establish reality. Therefore, God's self-knowledge and omniscience precede the decree while God's foreknowledge follows the decree. Omniscience deals with the actual and possible of history; foreknowledge deals only with the actual. The foreknowledge of God makes nothing certain, but acknowledges what is certain, i.e. what is in the divine decrees. God foreknew all events as certainly future because He had first decreed them from His omniscience. Each of the print-outs of eternity past relates the believer to the plan of God in the form of a rationale. The plan of God rationale includes five print-outs from the computer. Omniscience feeds the facts into the computer about the believer. The first print-out is foreknowledge; the second print-out is predestination; the third is election; the fourth is justification; the fifth is glorification. Foreknowledge means we were in the mind of God in eternity past; predestination: we were in the plan of God in eternity past; election to privilege: the believer is a part of God's plan in the function of client nations-the necessary as necessary. So we come down to this: the omniscience of God (swfia) feeds the facts into the computer of divine decrees, and the print-out is gnôsis (γνώσις) [pronounced GNOH-sis].

Lesson #756

756 11/14/1979 Romans 11:33a Army secretary; wealth is thought; divine self knowledge, omniscience and foreknowledge; Berachah Sunday School literature

Romans 11:33 O, the depth of riches, both of wisdom and knowledge of God! How unsearchable His judgments, and untraceable His ways!

The second sentence in verse 33 begins with the conjunction wj used as a characteristic quality of God. Then the nominative neuter plural, the subject of the verb, a)veceraunhtoj, which means unsearchable, unfathomable, inscrutable. Next we have a predicate nominative which demands in the English the verb to be, krima (κρίμα) [pronounced KREE-mah], which does mean judgment [krisis (κρίσις) [pronounced KREE-sihs]] but it also means decrees—“how inscrutable are his decrees.” The possessive genitive from the intensive pronoun autós (αὐτῶς) [pronounced ow-TOSS] is the word for “his.” God has thoughts beyond the ability of human thinking; His wealth is infinite because His thinking is infinite. Man’s wealth is limited because his thinking is limited. The believer has the right, says this verse in the second sentence, to penetrate. With the ministry of the Holy Spirit and the teaching of doctrine the believer has the right to penetrate into the inscrutability and infinity of divine wealth, i.e. God’s thoughts. Because this is true he is able to grow in grace, make correct applications regarding personal life, to have happiness in all circumstances, know where he is going. God’s decrees are inscrutable but we can understand them.

“and” – the connective kai, and the nominative plural subject hodos (ὁδός, οὐ, ἡ) [pronounced ho-DOSS], which means a highway or a road. Figuratively it means a way of life, a modus vivendi. It refers to God’s attributes and policies. Then the predicate nominative plural from the adjective a)necixniastoj, which means untrackable. This is strictly a Koine Greek word found only in Romans 11:33 and Ephesians 3:8.

1977 Romans

Lesson #757

757 11/15/1979 Romans 11:33b; Isa. 40:13–14 Happiness from divine wealth; inscrutable decrees of God; emotion vs. authority; multitude of counselors

Romans 11:33 O, the depth of riches, both of wisdom and knowledge of God! How unsearchable His judgments, and untraceable His ways!

Translation: “O the inexhaustibility of his wealth, both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! How inscrutable are his decrees, and his policies untrackable!”

Apart from Bible doctrine we cannot understand either the person of the plan or the policies of God. God is inscrutable apart from the key—perception of Bible doctrine. Bible doctrine, therefore, is the most valuable thing in life for it is the wealth of God revealed to the royal family of God. Doctrine is the wealth of God revealed to man, therefore doctrine resident in the soul of the believer is not only the means of spiritual growth and momentum but it is resident wealth which cannot be taken from us unless we so decide from our free will. Thinking divine viewpoint through reverse concentration is one of the great pay-offs. Principle: Only the wealthy worship God. The wealthy are those who have doctrine resident in the soul. Wealth is measured in terms of doctrine. Reverse concentration is the most basic concept in worship. So the doxology begins with a reverse concentration response to the fantastic doctrine which reveals the wealth of God. The two rhetorical questions in the next verse emphasizes the importance of learning it so that you can worship.

1977 Romans

Lesson #758

758 11/16/1979 Romans 11:34–36 U.S. degeneracy and weakness; redistribution of wealth; faith–rest drill and occupation with the Source of grace END OF SERIES

Romans 11:34 “For who has known the mind of the Lord, or who has been His counselor?”

Verse 34 – this is a quotation from Isaiah 40:13: “Who has measured,” piel imperfect of taken. The piel stem says, in effect, that there is always someone who thinks he is smart enough to out-fox God, out-think God; “the spirit of the Lord, or as his counselor has caused him to learn?”—hiphil imperfect of jada, which means to know. In the hiphil stem it means to cause to learn. The word ruach or spirit here is not the Holy Spirit, it is the human spirit of the humanity of the Lord Jesus Christ in hypostatic union, showing that in His humanity Christ did not seek or need counsel. He had the whole realm of doctrine.

Isaiah 40:14 – “With whom has he taken counsel,” the niphil perfect from jaatz. It should be translated, “From whom has he received counsel.”

“that he [the counselor] should cause him to understand” – hiphil imperfect from bin, which means to know categorically.

“and who shall teach him” – piel imperfect of lamad, who has the authority to teach him.

“the path [or, way] of integrity, or shall teach him knowledge, and by intelligent words cause him to understand?”

Corrected translation:

Verse 13 – “Who has measured the [human] spirit of the Lord, or as his counselor has caused him to learn?”

Verse 14 – “From whom has he received counsel that he should cause him to understand [categorically], and who has the authority to teach him the path of integrity, or teach him knowledge, and by intelligent words cause him to understand?”

Verse 34 – begins with the interrogative pronoun tis (τίς) [pronounced tihç] which introduces the first of two rhetorical questions, plus the postpositive conjunctive particle gar used in questions to document or to provide a reason. This is the explanatory use of gar and it is translated with the interrogative pronoun, “Who then.”

Next is the aorist active indicative from the verb ginôskô (γινώσκω) [pronounced gih-NOH-skoh], which means to know—“Who then has known.” The culminative aorist views the event in its entirety but emphasizes the existing results. The active voice: by interpretation, no one; by application, the mature believer who has cracked the maturity barrier and entered the pivot. This is an interrogative indicative mood for a rhetorical question. This is equivalent to the hiphil imperfect of the Hebrew verb jada. The hiphil is causative active voice. With it is the accusative singular direct object of noús (νοῦς) [pronounced noose], the left lobe of the soul and also the it refers to the mind as a faculty for thinking. This is equivalent to the word which is translated in the KJV, “spirit”—ruach, referring to the humanity of the Lord Jesus Christ. Since ruach means breath, spirit, life, it is also used for thinking, for understanding. And with it is the possessive genitive of kurios (κύριος) [pronounced KOO-ree-oss] which is equivalent to the Tetragrammaton, and it translated “Lord” in the English. “Who then has known the mind of the Lord?” This is the first rhetorical question. It emphasizes the importance of advancing to maturity through the daily function of Gap. However, this is application. But by interpretation no one can produce the action of the verb. The mind of the Lord is defined in 1Corinthians 2:16. What we know about the Lord’s thinking, the great wealth of God, comes to us from understanding the Scripture.

Principle

1. The mind of Christ or the mind of the Lord is revealed thought of God and/or Bible doctrine.
2. Knowing Bible doctrine or the mind of the Lord is the purpose of logistical grace for sustaining the believer in time. All of us are being kept alive with the primary purpose of learning the mind of the Lord and using Bible doctrine in the devil’s world. This emphasizes the second stage of the faith-rest drill which is reverse concentration.
3. Perception of doctrine of doctrine is also the basis for the dynamic function of the second stage of the faith-rest drill.
4. It must be emphasized that in eternity past no one knew the mind of the Lord.
5. Only the mature believer in time can understand the thinking of the Lord, and this is the most basic wealth. All mature believers are wealthy in the sense of having Bible doctrine. Only the mature believer in time can understand the thinking of God which He had in eternity past. Only the mature believer possesses doctrine or the epignôsis (ἐπίγνωσις) [pronounced ehp-IHG-noh-sis] of the soul, which is the mind of the Lord.
6. Thanks, then, to the grace policy of God it is possible for the believer to have the greatest privilege in life—to know the mind of the Lord and/or Bible doctrine.

The second question, “or who has been his counselor?” starts out with the disjunctive particle ê (ἢ) [pronounced ā]. The disjunctive particle is used in an interrogative sentence to introduce and add a second rhetorical question. Translation: “or”. Plus the interrogative pronoun tís (τίς) [pronounced tihç] again—“or who.” Then the aorist active indicative of the verb ginwmai—to become: “or who has become.” The culminative aorist views the question in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. The active voice: no one can produce the action of the verb. We do not counsel God; we do not improve God’s policies; we do not help God. The indicative mood is the interrogative indicative for the rhetorical question. Next is the predicate nominative sumbouloj, translated a “counselor.”

“Who then has known the mind of the Lord? Or who has become his advisor?” The rhetorical question demands an answer. No creature has known the mind of God in eternity past, therefore no creature could program the divine decrees. God Himself programmed the divine decrees. The mature believer knows from maximum doctrine resident in the soul the mind of Christ in part, but this is not the intent of the rhetorical question. The rhetorical question is designed to praise the omniscience of God who fed the actual into the computer with regard to the believer and the unbeliever. Print-out for the believer is foreknowledge which acknowledges what is in the decrees and is different from omniscience. Omniscience knows the alternatives, the decisions, the thoughts, the actions that did not occur but could have occurred. But only reality is fed into the computer and the print-out is foreknowledge, predestination, election, etc.

The first rhetorical question states dogmatically that only members of the Holy Trinity, using the attributes which they possess, know the thoughts, the motives, the decisions, the actions of every creature before any creature existed. While God knew our thoughts we did not know His thoughts. Therefore, we the creatures are nothing added to nothing, equalling more than nothing.

Romans 11:35 “Or who has first given to Him, and it will be recompensed to him?”

Verse 35 states the principle. The disjunctive particle ê (ἢ) [pronounced ā]—used in an interrogative sentence to introduce and add a third rhetorical question. It is translated “or”. Then the interrogative pronoun tís (τίς) [pronounced tihç], used to introduce the rhetorical question—“or who.” The verb is the aorist active indicative of prodidomi [pro = before; didōmi (δίδωμι) [pronounced dihd-OH-mee] = give], which means to precede in giving, to give in advance to someone. The principle in this verse is quoted from Job 41:11. No gift is regarded as recompensing, paying back, or compensating God. “Or who has given to him [God].” The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The action is giving. The believer gives to the Lord under principles of giving. The active voice: the believer produces the action of the verb through the priestly function of giving. The indicative mood is a potential indicative of obligation which uses the indicative to face the reality of the obligation as a part of worship and understanding true wealth. You give on the basis of wealth in the soul. All worship demands wealth, and spiritual worship demands Bible doctrine in the soul.

Next is the connective kai and the future passive indicative from a double compound verb, antapodidomi, which means to pay back or to repay—“and it shall be repaid to him.” This is a gnomic future tense for the statement of fact which can be rightly expected under normal conditions. This is an idiom and it means compensation—“Or who has given to God and has not been compensated?” On the surface this appears to be a gimmick for encouraging the believer to give, but in reality it is the quotation of a principle from Job 4:11. In giving, no one is bribing God.

Principle

1. The believer must be occupied with the source of grace so as not to be distracted by the blessings of grace. This is why the most basic concept of grace is occupation with the person of Christ. Upon reaching maturity this is the first factor.
2. The believer can be so occupied with his money that he forgets the source of that money—either logistical or super-grace blessing. In order that this does not occur true giving is based upon true wealth—doctrine in the soul. Therefore you give from doctrinal motivation.
3. The believer can be so occupied with success that he forgets the source of success.
4. The believer can be so occupied with friends and loved ones that he forgets the source of friends and loved ones.
5. The believer can be co occupied with life that he forgets the source of life.
6. Therefore Bible doctrine resident in the soul (true wealth) is designed to perpetuate occupation with Christ who is the source of both logistical and supergrace blessing.
7. Therefore Christ is the source of all blessing.

Romans 11:36 For from Him and through Him and unto Him are all things. To Him be the glory to the ages! Amen. (BLB)

Verse 36 – emphasis on the source. “For” is the causal conjunction hóti (ὅτι) [pronounced HOH-tee], which should be translated “Because.” Next comes three prepositional phrases. There are no verbs, subjects, predicates. In each case the object of the preposition is autós (αὐτός) [pronounced ow-TOSS], the intensive pronoun used as the third person singular personal pronoun. So it starts, ek (ἐκ) [pronounced ehk] plus the ablative of autós (αὐτῶς) [pronounced ow-TOSS]—“from him.” The ablative of source implies the original source of both logistical and super-grace blessing. The second prepositional phrase, linked by kai, emphasizes Jesus Christ as God. As God He is the source of salvation; He is the source of all temporal and eternal blessing; there is no blessing apart from this source; He is the source of our logistical support; He is the source of super-grace blessing. This is dia plus the ablative of autós (αὐτῶς) [pronounced ow-TOSS], translated “through him.” The ablative is not the regular case for expressing means, the instrumental is. However, when the ablative is used it means emphasis on the source. This prepositional phrase emphasizes the mechanics of blessing, “through him.” The third prepositional phrase is eis (εἰς) [pronounced ICE] plus the accusative of autós (αὐτῶς) [pronounced ow-TOSS], translated “for him.”

The subject is the nominative neuter plural from pás (πάς) [pronounced pahs]. The definite article is used as a demonstrative pronoun—“all things.” We supply the verb. “Because those all things are from the source of him, and through the agency of him, and for him.”

“to whom be glory forever” is erroneously translated in the KJV. The subject is the nominative doxa (δόξα) [pronounced DOHX-ah], “the glory.” Plus the dative singular indirect object from autós (αὐτῶς) [pronounced ow-TOSS], used for the third person personal pronoun, referring to the Lord Jesus Christ, and should be translated, “the glory belongs to him.”

“forever” – another prepositional phrase. “Amen” simply means “I believe it.”

Translation: “Because those all things are from the source of him, and through the agency of him, and for him in time; furthermore, the glory belongs to him forever. Amen [So be it].”

Corrected Translation of Romans

Romans 1:1 Paul, a slave of Christ Jesus, called an apostle, through having been appointed because of the Gospel from God.

Romans 1:2 Which [gospel] He Himself had previously promised through His prophets in the holy writings.

Romans 1:3 Concerning his Son who was born from the seed of David according to the flesh.

Romans 1:4 Who was marked out [specified in the decrees] the Son of God by means of power, according to the Holy Spirit, by means of resurrection from deaths;...

Romans 1:5 ...through Whom [the resurrected Christ] we have received grace and apostleship, for the purpose of obedience to doctrine among all nations, for the sake of His person (reputation, fame, name).

Romans 1:6 Among whom also you are the privileged royalty [elected] of Jesus Christ.

Romans 1:7 To all who are in Rome, dearly loved by God, privileged royalty: Grace to you and so prosperity from God our Father, and from the source of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Romans 1:8 First, I thank my God through Jesus Christ for all of you [Roman believers], because your faith [doctrine] is celebrated (proclaims, made famous) throughout the entire world.

Romans 1:9 For the God, Whom I continue to serve in my spirit in the gospel of His Son, is my witness how constantly (unceasingly) I make mention of you [in prayer],...

Romans 1:10 Always in my prayers when offering a petition, that if somehow now at last I will succeed by the will of God in coming face to face with all of you.

Romans 1:11 For I am longing to see you, that I may share with you something of importance from my spiritual gift, with the result that you might be stabilized [through maturity adjustment to the justice of God] .

Romans 1:12 But added to this, to receive encouragement together with you through [the] doctrine in each other, both yours and mine.

Romans 1:13 Moreover I do not wish you to be ignorant, brethren, as frequently I intended to come face to face with you, (but was forbidden until now), that I might have some production among you, as also among other Gentiles.

Romans 1:14 I am debtor [under obligation] both to the civilized and the uncivilized [unbeliever]; both to the wise [mature believer] and the ignorant [reversionistic believer].

Romans 1:15 Thus, my eagerness to proclaim the good doctrine, even to you who are in Rome.

Romans 1:16 For I am not ashamed of the gospel [the good news of salvation]: for it is the capacity and ability of God for providing salvation to anyone who believes in Christ; both to the Jew foremost [first in privilege], and likewise to the Gentile.

Romans 1:17 For by the same gospel the justice of [belonging to] God is revealed from faith [adjustment at salvation] to doctrine [maturity adjustment after salvation]: as it stands written, But the vindicated one [believer making mature adjustment] shall live by means of doctrine. (Habakkuk 2:4)

Romans 1:18 For anger from God is being revealed from heaven against all non-Godliness [heathenism; unbeliever reversionism] and anti-justice [salvation maladjustment to the justice of God] of those who suppress the truth [salvation doctrine] through anti-justice [salvation maladjustment to the justice of God].

Romans 1:19 Because what is known about God is revealed in them [God-consciousness]; for the God has revealed Himself to them.

Romans 1:20 For since the creation of the world His invisible attributes [the essence of God] are clearly perceived, being perspicuous through the things which He has created, namely both His omnipotence [eternal power] and His divine nature [essence of deity]: so that they [the human race] are without excuse [before the justice of God].

Romans 1:21 Because, when they knew the God, they did not honor Christ as God, nor did they feel obligated to thank Him; in fact, as a result of their negative volition they received worthless ideas [thoughts] in their evil celebrations, and their ignorant right lobe receives darkness.

Romans 1:22 Although they claimed to be wise [= arrogance], they became fools (saltless and insipid).

Romans 1:23 And they exchanged the glory [essence] of the incorruptible God for an image in the form of corruptible mankind, and birds, and quadrupeds, and reptiles.

Romans 1:24 Therefore the God [justice of God] delivered them over in the lusts of their right lobes to immoral status [= alienation from God through maladjustment], that their bodies might be degraded among themselves.

Romans 1:25 They [reversionists] who exchanged the doctrine of the God for a lie [gospel for false doctrine or evil], both worshipped and served the creature [Satan] rather than the Creator [the Jesus Christ], Who is blessed forever. Amen.

Romans 1:26 Because of this [exchange of doctrine for evil] the God delivered them over to passions of dishonor [sexual perversions of degeneracy]: for not only their females exchanged the normal function [of sex] for that which is contrary to normal function.

Romans 1:27 But also in the same manner even the males [homosexuals], after they abandoned the normal sexual function of the female, became inflamed with sexual desire in their lust toward each other [of the same category (males with males)]; accomplishing the perverted act, and receiving back payment in themselves that judgment of their perversion which was inevitable.

Romans 1:28 And since in full knowledge [epignôsis (ἐπίγνωσις) [pronounced ehp-IHG-noh-sis] at gospel hearing], they rejected having the God after careful examination, the God delivered them over to a worthless mind, doing those evil things which are improper.

Romans 1:29 Being fully influenced by all categories of anti-justice, by a state of evil, by inordinate desire, by function of evil; full of jealousy, full of murder, full of dissension [strife or discord], full of treachery, full of evil craftiness; they have become gossips [slanderers],...

Romans 1:30 ...slanderers, God-haters, insolent [haughty, overbearing, disrespectful], arrogant ones, boastful presumption, fabricators of evil things with reference to parents disobedient ones,...

Romans 1:31 ...ignorant ones, contract-breakers, unloving, implacable,...

Romans 1:32 Such are those who though they have total perception of the legal requirements of the justice of God, (that those who practice such things are deserving of death) not only are doing the same things, but also give their approval to those who practice the same evil of heathenism.

Romans 2:1 Therefore, you are without excuse, O man, everyone of you when you judge: for in which sphere you keep judging the other category, you condemn yourself; for you who keep judging practice the same things.

Romans 2:2 For we have come to know that the judicial verdict from the God is according to the truth (= doctrine) against them who practice similar things.

Romans 2:3 And do you presume this, O man, who judges those who practice similar things, and are guilty of the same things, that you will escape the judicial verdict from the God?

Romans 2:4 Or do you disparage the riches of His gracious generosity and clemency and patience; not knowing that the graciousness of the God brings you to conversion.

Romans 2:5 Because of your hardness and unrepentant heart, you store up and accumulate for yourself wrath against the day of wrath, even disclosure of the just judgment from the God.

Romans 2:6 [the God, Jesus Christ] Who will render judgment to each one according to his works.

Romans 2:7 To those on the one hand who, on the basis of expectation of a good work are seeking eternal life, there is glory, and honor [something of value], and immortality [resurrection body].

Romans 2:8 But, to those on the other hand, who from inordinate ambition, also disobey the gospel [truth], but continue obeying injustice [wickedness or evil resulting from salvation maladjustment to the justice of God], anger [judgment in time] and wrath [judgment in eternity].

Romans 2:9 There is pressure [personal suffering] and distress [historical disaster] for every soul of man who produces the evil, especially with reference to the Jew, but also to the Greek.

Romans 2:10 But glory and honor, even prosperity, to each one who attains the good [maturity adjustment to the justice of God], especially to the Jew, but also to the Gentile.

Romans 2:11 For there is never partiality before the God.

Romans 1:12 For as many as have sinned without the law also shall perish: and as many as under the law have sinned, through the law will be judged.

Romans 2:13 (For you see the hearers of the law are not just before the God, in fact the doers of the law shall not be justified.

Romans 2:14 For every time that Gentiles, who do not have the law, do instinctively those things from the law, these, not having the law, are a law unto themselves.

Romans 2:15 The very ones who demonstrate the accomplishment of the law written in their right lobes, their conscience confirming the testimony, in fact their thoughts alternately accusing or else defending themselves;)

Romans 2:16 In the day God will judge the secrets of those men through Jesus Christ according to the standard of my gospel.

Romans 2:17 If on the one hand you are classified as a Jew [and you are], and not only rely on the law [for salvation], but also you boast about relationship with God [and you do].

Romans 2:18 And knows his will, and approves those superior things, since he is instructed from the law [this is sarcasm].

Romans 2:19 Moreover, you yourself are confident that you are a guide to the blind ones, a light with reference to those in darkness.

Romans 2:20 An instructor of the ignorant, a teacher of immature ones, having a superficial form of knowledge and the doctrine in the law. [This is what the arrogant Jewish teacher believes.]

Romans 2:21 You therefore, when you teach another, do you teach yourself? You who proclaim in a loud voice, Thou should not steal, do you steal?

Romans 2:22 You who say, Thou shalt not fornicate, do you fornicate? you who despise idols, do you rob idol temples?

Romans 2:23 You who keep boasting in the law, through violation of the law do you dishonor the God?

Romans 2:24 Consequently the reputation of the God is slandered among the Gentiles because of you, just as it stands written.

Romans 2:25 So on the one hand circumcision is beneficial if you accomplish the purpose of the law [salvation adjustment to the justice of God through faith in Christ]: but if on the other hand you are a transgressor of the law, your circumcision has become uncircumcision.

Romans 2:26 If therefore the uncircumcised Gentile observes the righteous requirements from the law, will not his uncircumcision be evaluated as circumcision? Yes, it will.

Romans 2:27 In fact, if he accomplishes the purpose of the law, will not the physically uncircumcised Gentile judge you Jews, who through the letter [written page] and circumcision are a transgressor of the law?

Romans 2:28 Consequently, he is not a Jew who is one by overt manifestation; neither is circumcision that category which is external by overt manifestation.

Romans 2:29 For he is a Jew who is one by hidden birth [regeneration]; and circumcision is that category of heart, by the Spirit [HS, the teacher of doctrine], not by the letter [Mosaic law]; whose approval from the justice of God is not from man, but is from God.

Romans 3:1 What therefore is the advantage of the Jew? Or what is the benefit from circumcision?

Romans 3:2 Much in every way: for in the first place since they [the Jews] were entrusted with the doctrines from God.

Romans 3:3 Well then how stands the case with regard to the alternatives? If certain ones [the Jews] refuse to believe [in Christ] (and they do), shall their lack of faith cancel the integrity of God? No.

Romans 3:4 Emphatically not: rather, let the God be proved reliable, though every man a liar; as it stands written, In order that you might be demonstrated [or vindicated] just by means of your doctrines, and that you might prevail when you are being slandered.

Romans 3:5 But if our unrighteousness promotes the integrity of God [and we assume it does], to what conclusion are we forced? The God Who inflicts wrathful punishment is not unrighteous, is He? No, of course not. I am presenting the human viewpoint.

Romans 3:6 Emphatically not. Otherwise if it were true how shall God judge the world?

Romans 3:7 But if the doctrine of the God has shown itself to be extremely great for the purpose of his glory [and we assume that it has]; why therefore am I also still being judged as sinful?

Romans 3:8 In fact, not true (as we have been slandered, and certain arrogant (self-righteous) ones (legalists) keep alleging that we say,) "Let us do evil things that good things may come." Their condemnation and punishment is deserved.

Romans 3:9 Therefore how are we to understand the situation? Do we possess anything that might shield us from the justice of God? No, not at all; for we have already indicted both Jews and Gentiles, that they are all under sin.

Romans 3:10 As it stands written, There is not a righteous one, not even anyone.

Romans 3:11 There is not one who comprehends doctrine, there is not one who searches for the God.

Romans 3:12 All have turned aside [into reversionism (unbelievers)], [all] at the same time they have become depraved; there is not one who attains the integrity [of God], (there is) not even one.

Romans 3:13 Their vocal cords are a grave which has been opened; with their tongues they keep on deceiving; the venom of (Egyptian) cobras is under their lips.

Romans 3:14 Whose mouth of revenge and bitterness keeps on being filled.

Romans 3:15 Their feet are swift [or, hurry] to commit murder.

Romans 3:16 Historical disaster and personal suffering are in their highways (their way of life; their modus vivendi).

Romans 3:17 In fact they have not known [or, comprehended] the way of peace,...

Romans 3:18 There is no respect for God before His eyes [in the sense of perception].

Romans 3:19 Now we understand that whatever things the law says, it speaks to those under the jurisdiction of the law; that every mouth may be closed, and the whole world may become [guilty and] accountable to the God.

Romans 3:20 Therefore by the works of the law no human being shall be justified in His presence; for through the law is a consciousness of sin.

Romans 3:21 But now apart from the law the righteousness belonging to the integrity of God has been revealed, being confirmed by the law and the prophets.

Romans 3:22 That is, the righteousness which belongs to the integrity of God through faith in Jesus Christ for all who believe (for there is no distinction [between Jews and gentiles]...

Romans 3:23 ...for all have sinned and have fallen short of the glory of God;...

Romans 3:24 ...receiving justification [vindication] without payment by his grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus.

Romans 3:25 [Christ Jesus] Whom the God [the Father] has publicly displayed by His blood as the mercy seat through faith in Christ, for a demonstration of His righteousness because of the passing over of previously committed sins, because of the delay in judgment [clemency] from the God.

Romans 3:26 For the demonstration of his integrity at this present time of crisis [Church Age], in order that he might be just, even when he justifies anyone who has faith in Jesus.

Romans 3:27 Where then is boasting? It is excluded. By what principle? that of works? Definitely not; but by the principle of faith.

Romans 3:28 We conclude, then, that man is justified by faith apart from the works of the law.

Romans 3:29 Or is the God the God of the Jews only? Is he not also the God of the Gentiles? Yes, he is also the God of the Gentiles.

Romans 3:30 Since the Godhead is one in essence [or, integrity], who shall justify the circumcision [the Jew] by faith, and the uncircumcision [Gentile] through [that same] faith.

Romans 3:31 Do we cancel the law through that same faith? Definitely not. On the contrary we establish the [true purpose of the] law.

Romans 4:1 Therefore to what conclusion are we forced, that Abraham our human forefather has obtained?" or "Therefore what do we conclude that Abraham our forefather has obtained?

Romans 4:2 Assuming that Abraham has justified by means of works, he has a basis for boasting, but not before God.

Romans 4:3 For what does the scripture say? Now Abraham had believed in the God [the Lord Jesus Christ], and it [faith in Christ] was credited to him [Abraham] for righteousness [= ½ of divine integrity]. (Genesis 15:6)

Romans 4:4 But to him who works for salvation his compensation [reimbursement] is not credited according to grace, but according to debt.

Romans 4:5 But to him who does not work for salvation but believes on Him Who justifies the unbeliever, his faith receives credit for the imputation of divine righteousness.

Romans 4:6 Even as David also communicates the blessings to the man to whom the God credits divine righteousness apart from works.

Romans 4:7 Happinesses to those whose lawlessnesses have been forgiven and whose sins have been covered (by the blood atonement).

Romans 4:8 Happy is the man to whom the Lord will not impute sin. (Psalm 32:1–2)

Romans 4:9 Is this blessing therefore for the circumcision [the Jews] only? Or is it also for the uncircumcised [the Gentiles] also? For we contend that his faith was credited to Abraham for righteousness.

Romans 4:10 How then was it credited? While he was in circumcision, or in uncircumcision? [Answer] Not in circumcision but in uncircumcision.

Romans 4:11 In fact he received the ritual mark of circumcision, a seal of the righteousness from the faith [which he exercised toward Christ] in the status of uncircumcision; that the same one [uncircumcised Abraham] might be a pattern [= father] to all who believe during uncircumcision; that divine righteousness might be credited to them.

Romans 4:12 And the pattern of circumcision, not only to those from circumcision [Jews], but also to those who advance in the ranks from the source of doctrine, like our ancestor Abraham in uncircumcision.

Romans 4:13 For not through the law is that promise to Abraham and to his seed, that he will be the heir of the world, but through [imputed] righteousness by means of faith (in Christ).

Romans 4:14 For if they by means of the law are heirs [and we assume they are], then that faith has been voided with the result that it is permanently invalidated, and that promise (from the blessing of the justice of God) has been cancelled.

Romans 4:15 For the law brings about wrath [from the justice of God]; but where the law does not exist also no distortion of the law exists.

Romans 4:16 For this reason it is by means of faith, in order that it might be in accordance with grace; that the promise of salvation might be valid to all the seed; not only to those from the law [the Jews who were evangelized by studying the law, by hearing the teaching of the law], but to those Gentiles from Abraham's faith; who is the pattern with reference to all of us.

Romans 4:17 (As it stands written [in Genesis 17:5], "I have decreed [or appointed] you the father of many nations". In the sight of Him Whom he believed, even God who gave life to the sexually dead ones [that is, Abraham and Sarah], and designated those things which did not exist as now existing.

Romans 4:18 Who beyond hope of sexual prosperity believed in hope of fulfilment, in order that he might become the father of many nations, according to that which He had spoken, "So your seed shall exist." [Genesis 15:5]

Romans 4:19 And so, not becoming weak in that faith, he completely understood his own body which had become sexually dead when he was approximately one hundred years old; likewise he completely understood the barrenness of Sarah's womb.

Romans 4:20 That is, with reference to the promise of God, he did not stagger [or, waiver] in unbelief; but he was invigorated [power was poured into him] by means of doctrine [resident in the soul], giving glory to God.

Romans 4:21 And having been fully convinced that what He Himself had promised He is able also to accomplish.)

Romans 4:22 And for this reason [salvation adjustment to the justice of God] it [faith in Christ] was imputed to him [Abraham] for righteousness.

Romans 4:23 Now it was not written for his sake alone, that it was imputed to him.

Romans 4:24 But also for our sakes to whom it was destined to be imputed, when we believed on him who resurrected Jesus our Lord from deaths.

Romans 4:25 Who was delivered over to judgment because of our transgression and was resurrected from the dead because of our justification.

Romans 5:1 Therefore being justified by faith, let us have prosperity face to face with the God through our Lord Jesus Christ.

Romans 5:2 Through Whom also we have obtained that access by means of faith into this grace in which we stand, and so let us boast in hope [or, demonstrate integrity; or, demonstrate esprit decor] the glory of the God.

Romans 5:3 And not only this, but also we glory [or, demonstrate integrity; or, demonstrate esprit decor] in our tribulations (adversities, trials, stressful circumstances), knowing that tribulation produces perseverance;...

Romans 5:4 And not only this, but also let us boast [or, demonstrate esprit decor] in adversities; knowing that that pressure [persecution, oppression, trial, affliction, distressing circumstances] brings about one for courage, honor, integrity in the pressures of life.

Romans 5:5 And courage under pressure brings about proven character [demonstrated integrity]; and proven character brings about hope [blessing from the justice of God].

Romans 5:5 And the hope never disappoints; because the love for God has been poured out in our right lobes by the Holy Spirit who was given to us.

Romans 5:6 Yet in fact, Christ, while we were weak (helpless, powerless), yet he died at the right time in place of the ungodly.

Romans 5:7 For only rarely someone may die in behalf of a righteous person; indeed in behalf of a good person someone might even be brave enough to die.

Romans 5:8 But the God demonstrates his own love to us, in that, while we were still sinners, Christ died instead of [or, in place of] us.

Romans 5:9 Much more then because we have now been declared righteous [or, justified] by His blood, we will be saved through Him from God's wrath [or, we shall be delivered by the punishment of God].

Romans 5:10 For if, while we were enemies, we were reconciled to the God by means of the death of his Son [and we were], much more, having been reconciled, we shall be delivered in His life.

Romans 5:11 And not only this, but also we glory in the God through our Lord Jesus Christ, through Whom we have now received the reconciliation.

Romans 5:12 For this reason, just as through one man [Adam] the sin [nature] entered into the world, and the [spiritual] death through the sin [nature]; consequently the [spiritual] death spread to all men, because all sinned [when Adam sinned].

Romans 5:12 For this reason, just as through one man [Adam] the sin [of Adam] entered into the world, and the [spiritual] death through the sin [of Adam]; consequently the [spiritual] death spread to all men, because all sinned [when Adam sinned]. (revised)

Romans 5:13 (For until the law the sin nature was in the world, and imputed sin was in the world; but personal sin was not imputed when the law did not exist)

Romans 5:13 (For until the Law, personal sin was in the world, but personal sin was not imputed when the Law did not exist. (Revised))

Romans 5:14 Nevertheless the spiritual death ruled from Adam to Moses, even over those who had not sinned in the likeness of Adam's transgression, who is a type of him [Christ] who was destined to come [the 1st advent].

Romans 5:14 Nevertheless, the spiritual death ruled from Adam to Moses, even over those who had not sinned in the likeness of Adam's transgression, who is a type of Him [Jesus Christ] Who is destined to come [1st advent]. (Revised)

Romans 5:15 But not as that transgression [Adam's original sin], so also is that gracious gift [the incarnation and the work of Christ on the cross]. For if by the transgression [the original sin] of [that] one [Adam] the many died [spiritual death (and they did)], much more the grace of God, and the gift by grace, by the one man, Jesus Christ, who has provided superabundance for the many [who believe in the Lord Jesus Christ].

Romans 5:15 But not as that transgression [Adam's original sin], so also is that gracious gift [the incarnation and sacrifice of Christ on the cross], for if by the transgression of that one [Adam's sin in the garden], the many [the human race] died [spiritual death at birth] [and they did], much more the grace of God, even the gift of grace by the One Man [Jesus Christ] Who has provided superabundance [the blessings from the justice of God to the mature believer] for the many [that is, for the mature believers]. (Revised)

Romans 5:16 In fact the gift [Jesus Christ] is not like what occurred through one [Adam] who sinned; for on the one hand the judicial verdict came by one transgression resulting in condemnation [spiritual death], but on the other hand that gracious gift [the incarnation and work of Christ] was given because of many transgressions, resulting in one judicial act of justification.

Romans 5:16 In fact, the gift [Jesus Christ] is not like what occurred through the one [Adam] who sinned. For on the one hand, the judicial verdict came by one transgression resulting in [universal] condemnation; but on the other hand that gracious gift [incarnation and atonement of Christ] was given because of many transgressions resulting in a judicial act of justification. (Revised)

Romans 5:17 For if by the transgression of the one [Adam's original sin] the [spiritual] death ruled through the one [Adam, and it did]; much more they who receive in life the surplus of grace [blessing from maturity adjustment], and the gift of righteousness, they shall reign through the one, Jesus Christ.

Romans 5:17 For if by the transgression of the one [the original sin of Adam], the spiritual death ruled through that one [Adam] (and it did), much more, they who receive in life this surplus from the grace [blessings in time for the mature believer] and the gift of the righteousness of God, much more they will rule by One Jesus Christ. (Revised)

Romans 5:18: So therefore as through one transgression [Adam's original sin] imputed to all mankind resulting in condemnation, so also through one sentence of condemnation [judicial act of imputation of personal sins to Christ on the cross] God's righteousness was imputed to all mankind resulting in the justification in this life.

Romans 5:19 For as through one man's disobedience [Adam's original sin] the many [the human race] were appointed sinful [the OSN ruling human life through spiritual death], so also through one man's obedience [Christ (the judgment on the cross)] the many shall be appointed righteous [imputation of divine righteousness and subsequent justification].

Romans 5:20 Now the law came in as a side issue [as a minor actor to play a minor role], in order that the transgression of Adam might be augmented [enlarged]. But where personal sin increased [overflowed in great abundance], grace increased in superabundance [or, greater abundance].

Romans 5:21 But just as the sin nature has ruled in the sphere of spiritual death, so also the grace of God might rule through imputed righteousness because of eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord.

Romans 6:1 Therefore what are we to conclude? Are we to continue in the sovereignty of the sin nature in order that the grace of God might increase?

Romans 6:2 Emphatically not! We who have died to the sin nature, how shall we still live in it?

Romans 6:3 Or are you ignorant that all of us who have been baptized into Christ Jesus, into His spiritual death have been baptized?

Romans 6:4 Therefore, we have been buried together with Him [Christ] through baptism of the Spirit into His [physical] death: in order that as Christ has been raised up from deaths [spiritual & physical] to the glory of God the Father, so also we might [potentially] walk in newness of life.

Romans 6:5 For if we have become intimately united to the likeness of his death [and we have through retroactive positional truth], not only this, but also we shall be intimately united to the likeness of his resurrection [current positional truth].

Romans 6:6 Be knowing this, that our old man [OSN] has been co-crucified together with him, in order that the human body with reference to its sin nature might be rendered powerless [inoperative], that we should no longer be slaves to the old sin nature.

Romans 6:7 For he who has died [baptism of the Spirit and resultant retroactive positional truth] has been acquitted [positional deliverance] from the power of the sin nature.

Romans 6:8 Now if we have died with Christ [and we have], we also believe that we shall live in association with Him [= current positional truth].

Romans 6:9 Knowing that because Christ has been raised from the deaths he can never die; physical death is no longer master or lord over him.

Romans 6:10 For the death [spiritual] that he [Christ] has died, He died once for all with reference to the sin nature; but the resurrection life which He lives, He lives with reference to the God.

Romans 6:11 So also on the one hand all of you yourselves [believers] conclude yourselves to be dead with reference to the sin nature, but on the other hand living with reference to the God in Christ Jesus.

Romans 6:12 Therefore, stop permitting the sin nature ruling in your mortal body, that you should obey the same [the sin nature] with its trends.

Romans 6:13 And stop placing your members as weapons of wickedness [good and evil] under orders to the sin nature: but place yourselves under orders to God as those who are alive from deaths, and your members as weapons of righteousness to the God.

Romans 6:14 For the sin nature will not control [or, lord it over you]; for you are not under law, but under grace.

Romans 6:15 What then are we to conclude? Shall we sin because we are not under law, but under grace? Definitely not.

Romans 6:16 Do you not know, that to whom you put yourselves under orders as slaves for the purpose of obedience, you are slaves to the one you are slaves to the one you habitually render obedience; either to the sin nature resulting in death, or obedience [to God] because of [imputed] righteousness [and resultant justification].

Romans 6:17 Now thanks to the God that you were [kept on being] slaves to the sin nature, but [this is what is new] now you have obeyed by means of the right lobe a system of doctrine [pattern of teaching] into which [system of doctrine] you were committed [delivered, handed over].

Romans 6:18 And by having been set free [both positionally and experientially] from the sin nature, you became enslaved to [the] righteousness [of God].

Romans 6:19 I use a human illustration because of the weakness of your flesh [the old sin nature]; for just as you have put your members under orders as slaves to impurity [the old sin nature's trend toward sin] and to lawlessness [the old sin nature's trend toward good] resulting in lawlessness [the old sin nature's trend toward evil] so now put your members under orders as slaves to the righteousness of God, resulting in experiential sanctification.

Romans 6:20 For as long as you were the slaves of the sin nature you were excluded with reference to [the] righteousness [of God].

Romans 6:21 Therefore, what benefit were you having at that time from old sin nature trends over which you are now ashamed? For the end of those things [OSN trends] is death.

Romans 6:22 But now having been set free from the sin nature [the tyranny of the sin nature; the 1st husband], and having become slaves to the God, you are having benefit with reference to sanctification, and the end of life on earth, eternal life.

Romans 6:23 Certainly the subsistence pay [rations] from the sin nature is death; but the grace benefit from the God is eternal life in Christ Jesus our Lord.

Romans 7:1 For are you ignorant, brethren, (for I communicate to those who know the law,) that the [Mosaic] law lords it over man for as long a time as he lives.

Romans 7:2 For the wife under the authority of her husband has been bound to her husband by law while he is living. But if the husband has died [by death or divorce], she has been released by the Law from her first husband.

Romans 7:3 So then if, while her husband is living, she has become intimate with another man, she shall be [impersonally] classified as an adulteress; but if her husband has died [or divorced] she is freed from that law; so that she is not an adulteress, though she has become married to another man.

Romans 7:4 Therefore, my brethren, you also were made to die [or, to be divorced] with reference to the law by the human body of the Christ; with the result that you might belong to another [the second husband, Christ], to the one who has been raised up from deaths [spiritual and physical], in order that we might bear fruit to the God.

The Law, acting as a counselor, points to the solution.

Romans 7:5 For while were in the flesh [OSN], the sinful [impulses or] trends which through the law were effective in our members, resulting in the production of fruit associated with spiritual death.

That fruit is sin, good and evil.

Romans 7:6 But now we have been released from the law [as a marriage counselor], through having died to that by which we were bound [1st marriage to the old sin nature]; that we might serve in a new marriage by the Spirit, not in the old marriage by the letter [the Mosaic Law].

Romans 7:7 Therefore to what conclusion are we forced? Is the law sin? Definitely not. On the contrary, I was not cognizant of the sin nature, except through the law; for instance, I did not understand the lust pattern, except the law kept on saying, You will not lust.

Romans 7:8 But the sin nature, having seized the opportunity through the commandment, produced in me every category of lust. For apart from the law the sin nature is dead [unknown].

Romans 7:9 Now at one time I lived apart from the law; but when the tenth commandment came, the sin nature was activated (and invigorated), and I realized I was spiritually dead.

Romans 7:10 And that commandment [the 10th commandment of the Mosaic Law], which points to [eternal] life, the same was discovered by me, pointing to death [Codex #1].

Romans 7:11 For the sin nature, having seized the opportunity through the commandment, deceived me, and through the same [10th commandment] killed me.

Romans 7:12 As a matter of fact, therefore, the law is holy, also the commandment [10th] is holy, and perfect justice, and absolute good.

Romans 7:13 Therefore the good [Mosaic law] to me, did it become spiritual death? Definitely not. But the sin nature, in order that it might be revealed [or exposed] through the good made spiritual death a reality to me; in order that the sin nature might become utterly sinful by the commandment.

Romans 7:14 Certainly we know that the law is spiritual. But I am unspiritual [= fleshily], led astray under the authority of the sin nature.

Romans 7:15 For what I accomplish I do not understand, because what I desire (will or resolve) to do, these things I am not accomplishing; but what I detest, these things I keep on doing.

Romans 7:16 Now if I keep doing this thing which I do not desire to do, I agree with the law that it is advantageous (or, noble).

Romans 7:17 But as the case really stands, I am no longer performing the same [trends of the sin nature, which are sin, good, evil], but the sin nature which keeps on indwelling me.

Romans 7:18 In fact I know that there does not reside in me (that is, in my human body,) any intrinsic good: and the honorable accomplishment [or, execution] of my purpose is negative.

Romans 7:19 For the intrinsic good which I {purpose, will or} desire I do not do; but the evil which I do not desire, this I keep on practicing.

Romans 7:20 Now if what I do not desire the same I keep doing, I am no longer the one bringing it about, but the sin nature residing in me.

Romans 7:21 Consequently I discovered this principle: when I desire to do the honorable thing, that the principle of evil resides in me.

Romans 7:22 For along with other believers I delight in the law from God [Bible doctrine] in the inner man.

Romans 7:23 But I see a different principle in the members of my body, campaigning against the principle of my mind, and so making me a prisoner to the principle of the sin nature, the same sin nature being located in the members of my body.

Romans 7:24 I am a miserable person! who shall rescue me from the body of this death?

Romans 7:25 Grace belongs to the God through Jesus Christ our Lord. So then on the one hand with my mind I myself serve the law of God; but on the other hand with my flesh I myself serve the law [or, the principle] of sin.

Romans 8:1 Now therefore there is no judgment to those who are in Christ Jesus.

Romans 8:2 For the principle of the Spirit [ministry of the Spirit at salvation] Who is the source of eternal life has set you free in Christ Jesus from the principle of the sin nature and the resultant spiritual death.

Romans 8:3 For what was impossible from the law, because it was weak through the flesh [OSN, first marriage], the God, by having sent his own Son [deity of Christ] in the likeness of the flesh of sin [perfect humanity of Christ], and for a sin offering [the work of Christ on the cross], judged the sin nature in the flesh;...

Romans 8:4 ...in order that the legal requirement of the law might be filled up in us, who keep walking not according to the flesh [the old sin nature], but according to the Spirit.

Romans 8:5 For those believers who are according to the flesh [that is, dominated by the old sin nature] keep thinking about the things of the old sin nature; but those believers who are dominated by the (Holy) Spirit keep thinking about the things of the Spirit [i.e., Bible doctrine].

Romans 8:6 Consequently the thought pattern of the old sin nature is dead; but the thought pattern of the Spirit [Bible doctrine resident in the soul] is life [capacity for life] and prosperity.

Romans 8:7 Because the thought pattern of the old sin nature is hostile toward God, because it is not subordinate [or, under orders] to the policy [or, law] of God because it is not able to be subordinate to Bible doctrine.

Romans 8:8 Moreover, they who are in the flesh [under the authority of the sin nature] are not able to please God.

Romans 8:9 In fact you are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, assuming that the Spirit of God dwells in you. In fact if anyone [unbeliever] does not have Spirit from Christ [Holy Spirit], he [unbeliever] does not belong to Him [God].”

Romans 8:10 In fact if Christ is in you, on the one hand the body is dead [temporal or reversionistic death] because of the sin nature; but on the other hand the Spirit is life [new life in Christ] because of imputed righteousness.

Romans 8:11 Now if the [Holy] Spirit from him [God the Father] who has raised up Jesus from deaths [spiritual and physical] indwells you [and He does], He who raised Christ Jesus from deaths will also make alive your mortal bodies by [the agency of his Spirit] Who resides in you.

Romans 8:12 Therefore, brethren [members of the royal family], we are not debtors to the old sin nature, that we should live according to the flesh.

Romans 8:13 Indeed, if you live under the authority [or, domination] of the old sin nature, you are destined to die [maximum discipline, the sin unto death], but if by means of the Spirit you recognize as dead the actions from the body [human good], you shall live [the new life].

Romans 8:14 For as many as are being led by the Spirit of God, these are mature sons of God.

Romans 8:15 For you have not received again a life of slavery for the purpose of fear; but you have received the Spirit of adoption, by whom [the Holy Spirit] we keep shouting, Abba, my Father.

Romans 8:16 The Spirit himself testifies together with our human spirit, that we are the children of God.

Romans 8:17 Now if we are children, we are also heirs; on the one hand heirs of God the Father, and on the other hand fellow-heirs with Christ; if indeed we suffer with maturity status, that also we might be glorified with Christ.

Romans 8:18 For I conclude that the sufferings of the present period of time [while in spiritual maturity] are not comparable to the glory which is destined to be revealed in us.

Romans 8:18 For I conclude that the sufferings of the present period of time [maturity adjustment to the justice of God] are not comparable to the glory which is destined to be revealed in us.

Romans 8:19 For the confident expectation of the creation (the material universe) waits eagerly for the revealing of the sons of God.

Romans 8:20 For the creation [material universe] was subordinated [at the fall] to futility against its own will, but because of Him [God the Father] who has subordinated it in the time of hope [second advent].

Romans 8:21 Therefore the material universe [nature itself] also shall be set free from the slavery to the corruption into the freedom of the glory with reference to the children of God.

Romans 8:22 For we know that the entire material universe groans along with us and suffers the pains of child birth together with us until now.

Romans 8:23 And not only nature, but ourselves also [as mature believers], though possessing the firstfruits from the Spirit [divine blessings in time, paragraph SG2], even we ourselves groan within ourselves [the imputation of undeserved suffering to our +R], eagerly anticipating the adoption, [that is] the redemption [or resurrection] of our body.

Romans 8:24 For with reference to that [future] hope [the third hope/the seventh imputation] we have been saved: now when a hope is seen it is not a hope: so who hopes for what he sees?

Romans 8:25 Now if we hope [possess confident anticipation] for what we do not see [and we do], then through fortitude [= the confidence of the mature believer in suffering] stand in eager anticipation.

Romans 8:26 And also in the same way the Spirit Himself gives a helping hand to our weaknesses—for we do not know how to pray as we should—but the Spirit Himself intercedes with groanings too great for words.

Romans 8:27 He [God the Father] who keeps searching the hearts knows what the thinking of the Spirit is, because according to God He makes intercession in behalf of saints [mature believers].

Romans 8:28 We know, in fact, that to those who love the God (mature believers), all things work together of the purpose of good to those who are the called ones [elected ones] according to the predetermined plan (for the believers of the Church Age).

Romans 8:29 We know that whom He foreknew, He also foreordained [predestinated] conformed ones to the image of His Son, that He might be the firstborn among many brethren [members of the royal family].

Romans 8:30 And whom He foreordained [predestinated], the same one He also called [elected]: and whom He called [elected], the same one He also justified: and whom He justified, the same ones He also glorified [reward of blessings in eternity].

Romans 8:31 Therefore face to face with these things, to what conclusion are we forced? If the God is for us, who is against us?

Romans 8:32 The God who did not even spare His Own Son, but on behalf of all of us He delivered Him over to judgment, how shall He not also in grace with Him give to us the all things.

Romans 8:33 Who will bring accusation against the elect of God? God is the one who justifies [vindicates].

Romans 8:34 Who is the one who condemns? Christ Jesus is the one having died, yes rather, having been raised, who is on the right hand of God, who petitions [as our defense attorney] [or, who makes intercession] for us.

Romans 8:35 Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? Shall tribulation [circumstantial pressure, historical disaster], or anguish [mental pressure], or persecution, or famine, or nakedness [deprived from necessities], or danger [physical or natural catastrophe], or sword [crime, violence, military disaster]?

Romans 8:36 As it stands written [in Psalm 44:22], For your sake we are being put to death the whole day [the reign of Nero], we have been imputed as sheep for slaughter.

Romans 8:37 Nevertheless, in all these things we win the supreme victory through Him [God the Father] Who loves us.

Romans 8:38 So I stand convinced that neither death nor life, neither angels nor rulers of angels, neither present things nor future things, neither powers.

Romans 8:39 Nor heaven nor hell [nor height nor depth]; nor any other created thing be able to separate us from the love of God [the Father] which is in Christ Jesus.

Romans 9:1 I am communicating doctrine [positive affirmation], I am not lying [negative affirmation], my conscience bearing witness [joint testimony] with me in the Holy Spirit,...

Romans 9:2 ...that I have a great sorrow and constant pain in my right lobe.

Romans 9:3 For I could wish that I myself would be accursed [cherem], consequently separated from the Christ [but it cannot be] for the sake of my brethren [racial Jews], my fellow countrymen [national Jews] according to earthly descent [Abraham, Isaac and Jacob],...

Romans 9:4 ...who are Israelites, to whom is the adoption and the Shekinah Glory and the unconditional covenants and the gift of the Law [divine establishment] and the worship of the true God and the promises [which is the manifestation of the integrity of God];...

Romans 9:5 ...from whom are the fathers [the regenerate ancestors Abraham, Isaac and Jacob], in fact from whom is the Christ, the One who came in the flesh, the One who is God, ruler over all, extolled [praised, eulogized] forever. Amen.

Romans 9:6 However this is not to imply that the Word of God has failed. For not all who are descended from Israel are really Israel.

Romans 9:7 Neither because they are Abraham's posterity [having the genes of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob] are all racial Jews the children of the inheritance; but, in Isaac your seed (posterity) shall be designated (elected). (Genesis 21:12)

Romans 9:7 Neither because they are Abraham's seed [posterity] are all racial Jews the children of the inheritance; but, "In Isaac your seed shall be elected [or, designated]." (Genesis 21:12, where God was speaking to Abraham concerning Isaac)

Romans 9:8 This means that the descendants of the flesh [racial Jews], these are not the children of God; but the children of promise are imputed for the seed.

Romans 9:9 For the word of the promise is this: At this time [maturity adjustment to the justice of God] I will come to impute blessing, and Sarah will have a son. (Genesis 18:10)

Romans 9:10 And not only [previous case history]; but also Rebecca when she had become pregnant from one, Isaac our father.

Romans 9:11 For though the twins [Esau and Jacob] had not yet been born, and though they had not yet accomplished anything, good or evil, in order that the predetermined plan of God [the divine decrees] might remain in status quo in relationship to election;...

Romans 9:12 ...not from works, but Him Who elects, it was said of her [pregnant Rebecca], the older Esau shall be subservient to the younger Jacob. (Genesis 25:23)

Romans 9:13 Just as it stand written [quotation from Malachi 1:2–3], I love that Jacob but I hate that Esau.

Romans 9:14 Therefore to what conclusion are we forced? There is no injustice with God, is there? Emphatically not.

Romans 9:15 For He communicates to Moses [Ex. 33:19], "I will have mercy [imputation of divine blessing at maturity] on whomever I show mercy [salvation], and I will have compassion [logistical grace] on whomever I show compassion [salvation adjustment to the justice of God]."

Romans 9:15 For He communicates to Moses, I will have mercy on whomever I show mercy; and I will have compassion (logistical grace) on whomever I show compassion [salvation adjustment to the justice of God] (Exodus 33:19)

Romans 9:16 So then it is not from who desires [blessing], and not from him who runs [after blessing], but from God who shows mercy.

Romans 9:17 For the scripture says to Pharaoh [in Exodus 9:16], I have caused you to continue in history in order that I might demonstrate My power by means of you, and in order that My person might be proclaimed throughout the entire earth [everywhere].

Romans 9:18 Consequently therefore, He shows mercy on whom He desires, in fact whom He wishes He hardens.

Romans 9:19 Therefore you will say to me, “Why does He still find fault? For who has resisted His purpose [or, His intention]?”

Romans 9:20 On the contrary, O mankind, you, who are you who answers back to the God? Can what is molded say to its molder [or the pot say to the potter], “Why have you made me like this?” No, of course not!

Romans 9:21 Or does not the potter possess authority over the clay? From the same lump [free will, self-determination] to make on the one hand a vessel for the purpose of honor, and on the other hand another for the purpose of dishonor? [of course, he does].

Romans 9:22 Moreover, if as is the case, the God, willing to demonstrate His indignation, and to reveal His omnipotence, has endured with great patience vessels of wrath [unbelievers] having been equipped [or, prepared] for destruction [the last judgement],...

Romans 9:23 ...and in order that He might make known [or, reveal] the riches of His glory on vessels of mercy, which vessels He previously prepared for glory,...

Romans 9:24 ...even us, whom He has elected, not only from among Jews, but also from among Gentiles.

Romans 9:25 As He has also communicated in Hosea [Hosea 2:23], I will call those who are not my people [Gentiles], My people [Gentiles become the client nations]; and those who have not been loved [Jewish nations in the times of the Gentiles] as those who having been loved [the restoration of the Jews at the second advent].

Romans 9:26 And it shall be in the place [Israel] where it was said [Hosea 1:10], You are not my people [because of the big blot-out]; in that same place [Israel] they shall be called the sons of the living God.

Romans 9:27 In fact, Isaiah speaking in an emergency, with reference to Israel, “If the number of the sons of Israel be as the sand of the sea the remnant shall be delivered.”

Romans 9:28 For the Lord will execute his word on the earth, completing what He also decreed.

Romans 9:29 And so, just as Isaiah had prophesied [Isaiah 1:9], Except the Lord of the armies [the Lord Jesus Christ] had left to us a seed [a spiritual seed, a pivot of mature believers], we would have become like Sodom, we would have been made like unto Gomorrah.

Romans 9:30 Therefore to what conclusion are we forced? That the Gentiles, who did not strive for (pursue after) righteousness, have attained (without effort) divine righteousness, that is, the righteousness which is from the source of faith [in Christ].

Romans 9:31 But Israel who ran after the law with [human] self-righteousness, has not accomplished the purpose of the law.

Romans 9:32 Why not? Because they pursued it not by faith but (as if it were possible) by works. They stumbled over the stumbling stone,... (Isaiah 8:14b)

Romans 9:33 Just as it stands written, Behold I lay in Zion a stone of stumbling, even a rock which arouses opposition; nevertheless, he who believes on Him will not be humiliated (or, disappointed). (Isaiah 28:16 8:14)

Romans 12:1 I urge you therefore, brethren, by the grace blessings [from the justice of God], that you place your bodies under orders as a living, holy sacrifice. This is well-pleasing to our God—your rational and spiritual worship [or, service].

Romans 12:2 Also stop being conformed to this age, but be transformed by the renovation of your thought, that you may prove what the will of God is, namely the good, the well-pleasing and the complete.

Romans 12:3 For I say through the grace which has been given to me, to everyone who is among you, stop thinking of self in terms of arrogance beyond what you ought to think; but think in terms of sanity for the purpose of being rational without illusion, as the God has assigned to each one a standard of thinking from doctrine.

Romans 12:4 For just as we have many parts in one body, and all the parts do not have the same function.

Romans 12:5 So we, the many, are one body in Christ, and individually parts one of another.

Romans 12:6 And since we have gifts that differ according to the grace given to us, if prophecy, then prophecy in agreement with the doctrine;...

Romans 12:7 ...if service, then serve in the gift of service; if teaching, then teach in the gift of teaching,...

Romans 12:8 ...if counseling, then counsel in the gift of counseling; he who gives, with generosity; he who manages administration with diligence; he who performs acts of mercy, with graciousness.

Romans 12:9 Your love must be non-hypocritical. Despise the evil; adhere to the good.

Romans 12:10 With reference to your brotherly love be devoted to each other; with reference to your honor esteem others more highly than yourself.

Romans 12:11 With reference to application of doctrine do not be negligent with reference to the Holy Spirit; be zealous when serving the Lord.

Romans 12:12 With reference to hope [the 3rd hope], be rejoicing; with reference to the pressure of undeserved suffering, stand fast; persist in prayer.

Romans 12:13 Contribute to the needs of the saints; be pursuing the hospitality.

Romans 12:14 Speak well of those that persecute you, and do not curse them.

Romans 12:15 Rejoice with those who rejoice, weep with those who weep.

Romans 12:16 Be thinking the same toward each other. Do not be thinking in terms of arrogance, but associate with humble people. Stop being wise in your own estimation.

Romans 12:17 Never pay back evil for evil. Respect what is honorable in the sight of all men.

Romans 12:18 If it is possible [and it is], as much as it depends on you, live in harmony with all men.

Romans 12:19 Stop avenging yourselves, beloved; instead give place to the punishment from the justice of God; for it stands written, Punishment belongs to me; I will repay, says the Lord.

Romans 12:20 Nevertheless if your enemy is hungry, feed him; if he is thirsty, give him a drink; for by doing this you will pile up coals of fire on his head.

Romans 12:21 Stop being conquered by evil, but conquer evil by means of the good.

Romans 13:1 All human beings subordinate yourselves to governing authorities. For there is no authority except delegated by God; that is, those which do exist have been delegated by God.

Romans 13:2 Therefore those who resist the authority have opposed the ordinance of the God; if fact, they who oppose shall receive discipline [judgment, punishment] to/on themselves.

Romans 13:3 For government authorities are not a cause of fear for good (or moral) function, but for evil function. Really, do you desire not to fear the authority? Keep on doing the good, and you will have recognition from it.

Romans 13:4 For he is the minister of God to you for the purpose of good. But if you do evil, keep on being afraid; for he does not wear the sword for nothing; for you see he is a minister of God for the purpose of divine wrath to him who practices evil.

Romans 13:5 For this reason it is necessary to be subordinate to governing authorities, not only because of the punishment, but also because of the conscience.

Romans 13:6 And so for this reason also keep on paying taxes; for they are public servants of God who make a career out of this same thing.

Romans 13:7 Therefore discharge your obligations to all: to whom taxes, taxes; to whom indirect (hidden) taxes, indirect (hidden) taxes (or, to whom custom, custom); to whom respect, respect; to whom honor, honor.

Romans 13:8 Owe nothing to anyone, except to love one another of the same kind; for when he loves the other believer of a different personality he has fulfilled the law.

Romans 13:9 For instance this: You will not commit adultery, You will not commit murder, You will not steal, You will not give false testimony in a court room, You will not lust; and if there is any other commandment, it is epitomized in this principle, that is, You shall love your neighbor as yourself.

Romans 13:10 The love does not produce evil to the one near him; therefore the love is a fulfilment of the law.

Romans 13:11 This do also, by having known the period of time [Church Age], that it is already time for you to wake up from sleep; for now our deliverance is nearer than when we believed.

Romans 13:12 The night is far gone, the day is approaching; therefore let us lay aside the works of darkness, and let us put on the armor of light.

Romans 13:13 Let us walk honorably as in the daytime; not in rioting and drunkenness, not in fornication and licentiousness, not in strife and jealousy.

Romans 13:14 But put on the Lord Jesus Christ, and stop making provision for your flesh [old sin nature], because of its lusts.

Romans 14:1 Now receive that one who is weak [in the doctrine], but not for the purpose of getting into quarrels about opinions.

Romans 14:2 On the one hand the one category [mature believer] holds the opinion [is convinced] that he may eat all things; on the other hand, that one, the weak believer [because of weakness or reversionism] eats only vegetables.

Romans 14:3 He who eats [the mature or strong believer], let him stop regarding with contempt that one who does not eat [the legalistic weak believer who regards the taboos]; furthermore he who does not eat [weak believer], let him stop judging that one who keeps on eating everything; for the God has admitted him [the strong believer] into friendship.

Romans 14:4 You there, who are you, the one who keeps judging a house slave belonging to another? To his own Lord [the Lord Jesus Christ] he stands firm or becomes a casualty [through reversionism]. In fact, he will hold his ground [or, stand firm] for the Lord has the power to make him stand [or, hold his ground].

Romans 14:5 For on the one hand this one [the weak believer] considers one day greater than another day (inflexibility in the nonessentials); on the other hand that one [the strong believer] considers every day alike [from the Lord]. Let each one be fully convinced in his own mind. [The privacy of the priesthood.]

Romans 14:6 He who observes the day [mature believer] observes it to the Lord. And he who eats [mature believer], eats to the Lord; for he gives thanks to God; in fact he who does not eat [weak or immature believer], with reference to the Lord he does not eat, and he gives thanks to God.

Romans 14:7 For not one of us lives for himself, and not one of us dies for himself.

Romans 14:8 For just as when we live, we live to the Lord; so also when we die, we die to the Lord; so not only if we live, but also if we die, we are the Lord's.

Romans 14:9 You see, for this reason Christ died and lived, in order that he might be Lord over both dead and living.

Romans 14:10 But you [weak believer], why do you judge your brother? Or you also [strong believer], why do you despise [or, regard with contempt] your brother? For all believers will be present at the tribunal of the God.

Romans 14:11 For it stands written, I keep on living, and by Myself I have sworn, Every knee shall genuflect to Me [Christ], and every tongue shall confess to God [the Father].

Romans 14:12 So therefore each one of us will give a word [or an account] to God concerning himself.

Romans 14:13 Therefore let us no longer judge each other, but rather determine this, not to place an obstacle or distraction in front of his brother [the weak believer].

Romans 14:14 I know and have received confidence in the Lord Jesus, that there is nothing [no food] unclean by means of itself; except the one [weak believer] who presumes something to be unclean, to that one it is unclean.

Romans 14:15 For if because of food your brother [weak believer] is distracted [and he is], you no longer walk according to [impersonal] love. Because of that food, stop destroying him in behalf of whom Christ died.

Romans 14:16 Let not the good attained by you [maturity adjustment to the justice of God] be slandered/maligned.

Romans 14:17 For the kingdom of God is not eating and drinking; but righteousness [imputed at salvation] and (resultant) prosperity [imputed at maturity], and happiness by means of the Holy Spirit.

Romans 14:18 For he who serves the Christ in this, is pleasing to the God [royal priesthood], and respected by men [royal ambassadorship].

Romans 14:19 Consequently we pursue those things [doctrines] related to prosperity [imputation of divine blessing], and those things related to the edification complex from which comes blessing to each other.

Romans 14:20 Because of food do not destroy [tear down, demolish] the work of the God. To be sure, all foods are clean; but it becomes evil to that one [strong believer] who by eating gives offence.

Romans 14:21 It is honorable not to eat meat, nor to drink wine in a specific situation, nor do anything else by which your brother [the weak believer] stumbles.

Romans 14:22 You there [mature believer], the doctrine which you have, be having it to yourself in the sight of God. Happy is that one [mature believer] who does not condemn himself in what he approves.

Romans 14:23 But he [weak believer] who doubts is condemned [by his weak conscience] if he eats [contrary to his taboo], because he does not eat by means of doctrine. And everything which is not eaten by means of doctrine is equivalent to sin.

Romans 15:1 Now we, the strong [mature believer], are obligated [under the honor code] to keep bearing the weaknesses of the weak, and to accommodate ourselves.

Romans 15:2 Let each one of us [the mature believer] accommodate his neighbor for the purpose of the good to the edification complex.

Romans 15:3 For even the Christ did not accommodate Himself; but, as it stands written [in Psalm 69:9], The blasphemous insults of those who insulted You [God the Father] fell on Me [Christ on the cross]. (Psalm 69:9)

Romans 15:4 For as many doctrines as have been written before [Old Testament], for our instruction they were written, in order that through perseverance and encouragement from the scriptures we might have hope [= confidence].

Romans 15:5 Now may the God of perseverance and encouragement give to you to be thinking the same category of things [Bible doctrine and resultant divine viewpoint] in the presence of one another, according to Christ Jesus.

Romans 15:6 In order that with one motivation [Doctrine resident in the soul] by one message [Doctrinal teaching] you may glorify God, even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Romans 15:7 Therefore be receiving one another (of the same kind), even as Christ has received us for the purpose of the glory of God.

Romans 15:8 Consequently I report that Christ has become a minister to the circumcision [the Jews] on behalf of the doctrine of God, to establish the promises [the covenants] made to the fathers [Jewish ancestors, who were the original recipients of these promises].

Romans 15:9 And that the Gentiles might glorify God for his mercy; just as it stands written, Because of this [imputed blessing] I will praise you among the Gentiles [believers in David's court], and I will sing hymns to your person. (Psalm 18:49)

Romans 15:10 And again he says, Rejoice, O Gentiles, with his people. (Deuteronomy 32:43)

Romans 15:11 And again, Praise the Lord, all ye Gentiles, and applaud him, all you people. (Psalm 117:1)

Romans 15:12 And again, Isaiah communicates, There shall be the root sprout of Jesse, even He Who shall rise up to reign over the Gentiles; in Him shall the Gentiles trust. (Isaiah 11:10)

Romans 15:13 Now may the God [Jesus Christ] of the hope fill you will all [categories of] happiness and [peace and] prosperity by means of believing [function of GAP; Operation Z], that you may excel in the hope, by means of the power of the Spirit.

Romans 15:14 In fact I am convinced, my brethren, even I myself concerning you are full of goodness [in the sense of doctrine producing integrity; producing the royal family honor code function], having been filled with all knowledge, being able also to have a corrective influence on each other.

Romans 15:15 In fact I have written to you more boldly [with greater alertness] in part [in some parts of Romans], in such a way as to remind you again, because of that grace which has been given to me from the God.

Romans 15:16 That I should be a minister of Christ Jesus to the Gentiles, ministering as a priest the gospel of God, that the offering consisting of the Gentiles might have become acceptable, having become sanctified (set apart) by the Holy Spirit.

Romans 15:17 Therefore I have esprit décor in those things pertaining to the God.

Romans 15:18–19 For I will not presume to speak about anything except what Christ has accomplished through me [as a missionary], resulting in obedience of the Gentiles, by word [doctrinal teaching] and by occupation [professional missionary function] by the power of signs to the Jews and miracles to the gentiles in the power of the Holy Spirit; so that from Jerusalem, in a circuit as far as Illyricum, I have fulfilled the gospel of Christ.

Romans 15:20 In fact, in this way [according to my standard operating procedure]: I consider it a point of honor [application of the royal family honor code] to proclaim the gospel, not where Christ has been mentioned, in order that I might not build on a foundation belonging to another [missionary].

Romans 15:21 But just as it stands written, Those to whom it was not reported [Gentiles] concerning Him [Jesus Christ], shall see: and they [Gentiles] who have not heard shall comprehend [or, understand]. (Isaiah 52:15)

Romans 15:22 For this reason also I have been hindered [or, prevented] many times from coming to you.

Romans 15:23 But now no longer having a ministry in these regions, and having a desire to come to you [in Rome] for many years.

Romans 15:24 Whenever I go to Spain (for I expect to see you when passing through, and by you be assisted to that place, if first I am satisfied with you in part)...

Romans 15:25 Now I go to Jerusalem to minister to the saints,...

Romans 15:26 ...for Macedonia and Achaia have decided with pleasure to make a special offering to the poor ones among the saints in Jerusalem.

Romans 15:27 Yes, they have decided to do this with pleasure [the gentiles sending the gift]; in fact, they are obligated to them [the Jews]. For you see, if the Gentiles have shared in spiritual things belonging to them [the Jews; and they have], they [Gentiles] are obligated [under the honor code] to minister to them in material things.

Romans 15:28 Therefore when I have accomplished this mission, and have myself [sealed or] certified this production to them, I will go to Spain by means of you.

Romans 15:29 Now I know that when I come face to face with you I shall come in full measure of blessing from Christ.

Romans 15:30 Now I encourage you, brethren, by our Lord Jesus Christ, and through love from the Spirit, that you join me in a team effort in your prayers to the God on behalf of me.

Romans 15:31 That I may be delivered from those who are disobedient in Judaea; and that my ministry to Jerusalem might become acceptable to the saints.

Romans 15:32 So that when I come face to face with you in happiness by the will of God, I also myself may find rest and refreshment with you.

Romans 15:33 Now the God of prosperity be with all of you. Amen.

Romans 16:1 Now I recommend to you Phebe our sister, who is a helper, an agent of the church which is at Cenchræa.

Romans 16:2 That you receive her [Phebe] in the Lord, in a manner worthy of saints [royal family honor code], and that you stand by to help her in any matter [or, business] in which she might have need of you; for she has also been of great assistance to many, including myself.

Romans 16:3 Greet Prisca and Aquila, my fellow workers in Christ Jesus,...

Romans 16:4 ...who have risked their necks for my life; to whom I not only give thanks, but also all of the churches of the Gentiles.

Romans 16:5 Also pay my respects to the church in their home. Greet Epaenetus my beloved friend, who is the first convert to Christ from [the Roman province] Asia.

Romans 16:6 Pay my respects to Mary, who has worked hard for you with reference to many things.

Romans 16:7 Pay my respects to Andronicus and Junia, my cousins, and my fellow prisoners, who are prominent among the missionaries, who have been in Christ before me.

Romans 16:8 Pay my respects to Ampliatus, my beloved in the Lord.

Romans 16:9 Salute Urbanus, our Fellow Worker in Christ, and Stachus my beloved friend.

Romans 16:10 Pay my respects to Apelles the reliable one, tested and approved in Christ. Greet the slaves of Aristobulus.

Romans 16:11 Greet Herodion my fellow countryman. Salute those slaves of Narcissus who are in the Lord.

Romans 16:12 Greet Tryphena and Typhosa [the twins], who have worked in the Lord to the point of exhaustion. Pay my respects to Persis, worthy of love, who has worked in the Lord to the point of exhaustion with reference to many things.

Romans 16:13 Greet Rufus the elected one in the Lord, also pay my respects to his mother and mine.

Romans 16:14 Greet Asugcritos, Phlegon, Hermes, Patrobius, Hermogenes [or Hermos], and the royal family associated with them [another church].

Romans 16:15 Greet Philologus, also Julia, Nereus and his sister, even Olympas, and all the saints associated with them [another local church].

Romans 16:16 Greet each other with a holy kiss. All the churches of Christ greet you.

Romans 16:17 Now I urge you, brethren, look out for those who are causing dissensions and apostasies contrary to doctrine which you have learned [from a teacher]; in fact, be turning away [or, separating] from them.

Romans 16:18 For such believers do not serve [or obey] our Lord Christ, but their emotions, serving themselves; and by their smooth and flattering speech they [false teachers] deceive the right lobes of the unsuspecting.

Romans 16:19 Certainly the report of your obedience [authority orientation] has become known to all. Therefore because of you I am delighted; but I want you to be wise [learned, sagacious] with reference to the good, and unharmed with reference to the evil.

Romans 16:20 In fact, the God of prosperity will soon crush Satan under your feet [and] the grace of our Lord Jesus be with you.

Romans 16:21 Timothy my co-workers greets you, also Lucius, and Jason, and Sosopiter, my fellow countrymen.

Romans 16:22 I Tertius, who wrote this epistle, pay my respects to you in the Lord.

Romans 16:23 Gaius, my host, and the entire church, salute (greet) you. Erastus, the comptroller of the city, greets you; also our brother Quartus.

There is no verse 24; what is there shouldn't be.

Romans 16:25 Now to him [God the Father] who is able to support you [logistical grace] according to my gospel, and the proclamation [or, the public communication] of Jesus Christ, according to the unveiling [or, disclosure] of the mystery, which has been concealed with reference to past history.

Romans 16:26 But now [Church Age] is revealed, through the prophetic scriptures, by the decree of the eternal God, having been made known to all the Gentiles for the purpose of obedience [to the plan of God] from doctrine.

Romans 16:27 To God alone wise, through Jesus Christ [the revelation of the wisdom of God], to whom is the glory forever and ever. Amen

Genesis 18:10. And He [Jesus Christ] said, "I will surely return to you when the time revives next year; and behold, Sarah, your wife, shall have a son."

Exodus 9:16 But on the contrary for this purpose I have established you, in order that I might show you My power and in order that My name may be declared throughout all the earth.

Exodus 20:17. You shall not lust for your neighbor's house; you shall not lust for your neighbor's wife, or his male servant, or his female slave, or his ox, or his donkey, or anything else that belongs to your neighbor.

Exodus 33:18 And he [Moses] said, "Please, Sir, cause me to see Your glory."

Exodus 33:19 – All of my good [attributes revealed] I will cause to pass before your face, and I will proclaim the person of Jehovah before you.

Exodus 33:19: And He [God] said, all of my good [the plan of God] I will cause to pass in front of you [doctrine of divine decrees related to history], therefore I will proclaim by the name of YHWH before you [or to your face] [you never learn the glory of God until you learn the person]; furthermore, I have been gracious [qal perfect of chanan; the divine decrees] to whom I will be gracious [qal imperfect of chanan], and I have had mercy [piel perfect of râcham] on whom I will have mercy [piel imperfect of râcham].

Exodus 33:20 But he said, You cannot see my face; for man [lit. son of earth. This is finite man] cannot see me and live.

Deuteronomy 6:4–5 “Hear, O Israel, Adonai our Elohim is unique. You will love Adonai your Elohim with all your right lobe, with all your soul and with all your ability.

Deuteronomy 6:6–7a And these word (these doctrines) which I am commanding you today,” says Moses, “shall be in your right lobe and you will teach them diligently these things to your children.”

Deuteronomy 28:47-48 Because you [a priest nation or a client nation] did not serve the Lord your God with joy and a glad heart for the abundance of all things [which comes from maximum doctrine in the soul]; therefore, you will serve your enemies whom the Lord will send against you, in hunger, in thirst, in nakedness, He will put an iron yoke on your neck until He has destroyed you.

Deuteronomy 32:35 – Retaliation [vengeance] belongs to me, and retribution; in due time their foot will slip. For the day of their calamity is near, and the impending things of judgment are hastened upon them.

Deuteronomy 32:43 Rejoice, O Gentiles, with his people [the Jews]; for he will avenge the blood of his servants, and will render vengeance on his enemies, and will atone for the land, and his people.

Joshua 6:17–19 The city shall be under the ban (cherem; it is not redeemable); it and all that is in it belongs to the Lord. But as for you, only keep yourselves from the things under cherem lest you covet and seize some of the things under the ban; and so you will make the camp of Israel accursed and bring trouble on it. ; therefore, all the silver and gold, all the articles of bronze, the iron, all are holy to the Lord; they will go into the treasury of the Lord.

1Samuel 2:3 Do not boast any more with arrogance; arrogance will come out of your mouth, for Jehovah, the God of omniscience, and by Him, actions are examined.

2Samuel 6:16 Now when it came to pass that the ark of the Lord came into the city of David, then Michal, the daughter of Saul, looked out the window and she saw David dancing before the Lord; consequently she despised him in her heart.

Job 4:6 Is not your respect for God your confidence? And is not your hope the integrity of your ways?

Job 5:19–21 In six troubles He will deliver you. Even in seven, evil will not touch you. In economic disaster, He will deliver you from death, and in war He will redeem you from the power of the sword. You will be hidden from the scourge of the tongue. Neither will you be afraid of violent death when it comes. Later verses: You will come to your grave in a full age like a shock of corn in its season. Behold this, the doctrine of dying grace, we have researched it and so it is; know it is for yourself. For not one of us lives for himself or dies for himself.

Job 8:13-14 So are the paths of all who forget God. Therefore the hope of the godless will perish, whose confidence is fragile and whose trust is a spider's web.

Job 11:20 But the eyes of the reversionist will fail and their hope is in the expiring of their soul.

Job 33:16-17 Then he opens the ears of men (gap) and He seals their instruction that He may turn aside from His discipline and protect that man from the pride complex.

Psalm 7:9 Let the evil of the reversionist come to an end, but establish the ___ of the mature believer for the righteous God tests the heart and reins

Psalm 10:7 His mouth is full of curses and deceit and oppression; under his tongue is evil and wickedness.

Psalm 12:2 They (mutual admiration societies) speak evil to one another (the arrogant one with the inadequate one), vindicating themselves with a lip of flattery; they speak with a double-heart (or a double standard) [lit., they speak with a heart to a heart].

Psalm 18:46-50. The Psalm is David's hymn of worship and praise for deliverance from Saul and his other enemies.

Psalm 18:46, The Lord lives, a phrase representing occupation with the person of Christ on the part of a very mature believer. Jesus Christ is more real than anything else, and David has learned, as all mature believers do, that about the essentials one must be totally inflexible. And about the Lord Jesus Christ David never wavers, he has the capacity to love the Lord; and blessed be my rock – David has been blessed in his circumstances; therefore exalted be the God of my deliverance. – David mentions the rock, which is Zion, the place where he built his castle.

Psalm 18:47 – The God who executes vengeance for me. David maintains the concept of impersonal love when He says this because he did not seek vengeance. He always put things in the Lord's hands; and subdueth the peoples under me – even after David became king he was still a great general. He is referring to the military profession.

Psalm 18:48 – He delivered me from my enemies. Here is one of the great imputed blessings, our Lord's deliverance from enemies. When the Lord does it, it is right and fair; if we do it, it is not right and it is not fair because our judgment is imperfect; surely, you promote me above those who rise against me. You have rescued me from the violent man. It is interesting that David understood the difference between good military procedure in killing the enemy and violence against the establishment principles of authority.

Psalm 18:49 – all of these things have been accomplished by the Lord, and David has written this hymn and is celebrating at this moment. Note that Jews are involved but also Gentiles are involved. Therefore I will give thanks to you among the Gentiles, O Lord," which means that he has Gentiles among his staff. Some of his generals are Gentiles. David's body guard is made up of Gentiles; "and I will sing praises to your person.

Psalm 18:50 – Great deliverance giveth he to his king [David]; and shows mercy [grace] to his anointed [the one who has been commissioned], to David, and to his descendants forever [he is the recipient of the Davidic covenant].

Psalm 23:1 The Lord is the One (constantly) shepherding me. I cannot lose [anything] [or, I cannot lose anything].

Psalm 23:2 In pastures of choice food, He causes me to lay down. He leads me to waters of comfort (and refreshment) [= the refreshment of Bible doctrine in the soul] in adversity and disaster.

Psalm 23:3 He restores my soul. He guides me in paths of (imputed) righteousness because of His integrity (or reputation).

Psalm 23:4 When I walk in a valley overshadowed by death, I cannot fear evil because You are with me; your rod [discipline] and your staff, they comfort me.

Psalm 23:5 You have prepared before me a (banquet) table in the presence of my enemies; you have anointed with oil my head; my cup is overflowing.

Psalm 23:5-6, David described the imputation of special blessing. You have prepared before me a table in the presence of my enemies; You have anointed my head with oil; my cup is overflowing. Only prosperity and grace shall pursue me all the days of my life, and I shall remain in the house of the Lord forever [eternal blessings].

Psalm 23:6 Only prosperity and grace shall pursue me all the days of my life and I will live prosperously in the house of the Lord forever.

Luke 23:46, "Into Your hands I deposit My spirit," with Psalm 31:5, we learn what was not recorded in Luke, ...for You have delivered Me, O Lord, God of doctrine.

Psalm 26:2 Examine me, O Lord, and test my kidneys (emotions) and my right lobe.

Then, shattered vessels are used to describe personal judgements from God. For example, when David was in reversionism (Psalm 31:12) he wrote: "I am forgotten as a dead man; I am out of mind; I am like a shattered vessel." In other words, he felt completely and totally deserted, which is what happens when you get into intensive discipline, that stage of reversionism.

Psalm 33:4 For the Word of the Lord is integrity, and all His provision is in faithfulness.

Psalm 34:19 Many are the afflictions of the righteous, but the Lord delivers him out of all of them.

Romans 3:3-4 Shall their unbelief cancel the faithfulness of God? Definitely not! Moreover, let God continue faithful, even though every man is a liar. Even as it stands written [in Psalm 51:4], That You might be vindicated by Your doctrine, and that You might prevail when You are maligned.

Psalm 71:5 For you are my hope, O Lord God, my confidence from my youth.

Psalm 85:10 Grace and doctrine have met together; righteousness and reconciliation have kissed each other.

Psalm 90:12 So teach us to organize our days that we might attain a right lobe of wisdom.

Psalm 94:1,2 – O Lord God of vengeance; the God of vengeance has shown forth. Rise up O judge of the earth; render recompense to the arrogant.

Psalm 101:5 Whoever secretly slanders his neighbor, I will destroy him. No one who has a manifestation of pride and an arrogant heart will I endure.

Psalm 110:4 The Lord [God the Father] has made a solemn promise and will not change His mind. You are a priest forever, after the order of Melchizedek.

Psalm 117:1–2 Praise the Lord, all Gentiles; laud Him, all you peoples. For His grace increases over us and the doctrine of Jehovah endures forever. Praise the Lord.

Psalm 119:45 And I will walk in freedom for I seek your doctrines.

Psalm 138:2 I myself will worship toward the temple of Your Holiness [= integrity] [heaven], and I will be motivated to celebrate Your person [that is, occupation with Christ] because of Your grace and Your doctrine, because You have magnified Your doctrinal [Word] teaching over Your reputation.

Psalm 138:2 I myself will worship toward the temple of Your Holiness [heaven], and I will be motivated to praise Your person because of Your grace and Your doctrine, because You have magnified Your doctrinal teaching over Your reputation.

Psalm 138:2 I myself will worship toward Your holy Temple, and praise Your person [name] for Your grace and doctrine. For You have magnified Your doctrine above Your person.

Psalm 139:1-6

Verse 1 — “O Jehovah, you have searched me and you know me.” The search existed in eternity past before any of us existed.

Psalm 139:2 — “You have known when I sit down and when I get up.”

Psalm 139:3 — “You have computed my journey [through life], my lying down, in fact you are intimately acquainted with all my ways.”

Psalm 139:4 — “Even before there is a word on my tongue, behold, Lord, you know it all.”

Psalm 139:5 — “You have surrounded me behind and before, and laid your hand on me.” God has protected us so that we can fill out our time.

Psalm 139:6 — “Such knowledge is too wonderful for me; it is too high, I cannot attain to it.”

Prov 1:3 To receive through the function of gap doctrinal instruction of prosperity, justice or judgment [blessing or cursing], but always with integrity.

Prov 5:12-14 How I have hated instruction of doctrine, and my heart has spurned reproof, and I have not listened to the voice of my teacher nor inclined my ear to the instructor. I almost came to ruin in the middle of the assembly of the congregation.

Prov 6:14, 18. The one who by distortion or perversity in his heart devises evil continually, he is the one who is the spreader of strife. A heart that devises wicked conspiracy, feet run rapidly to evil.

Prov 7:10 And behold a woman comes to meet him dressed magnificently like a prostitute and very cunning of heart.

Prov 8:13 The respect for the Lord (occupation with Christ) is to hate evil, pride and arrogance, and the evil ways. A mouth of distorted things do I hate.

Proverbs 8:33-36. Heed Bible teaching, become wise, do not neglect it. Happiness to the man who listens to me [Bible doctrine], watching daily at my gates [assembling for Bible teaching], waiting at my doors. He who finds me [Bible doctrine] finds capacity for life and obtains grace blessing from the Lord. But he who sins against me injures himself. All those who hate me love death [the sin unto death].

Prov 11:2, When pride comes, then comes dishonor, but with the humble is wisdom.

Prov 13:16-17 Every wise believer acts with knowledge of doctrine, but a fool [believer] spreads foolishness. An evil messenger falls into adversity [the law of volitional responsibility], but a faithful ambassador brings healing.

Proverbs 23:6–7 Do not eat the bread (or, enjoy the hospitality) of a selfish man or desire his delicacies [he appears to be hospitable, but underneath, he is something else] for as he thinks in his soul, so he is. And he says to you, “Eat and drink,” but his right lobe is not with you [or, his right lobe is against you].

Proverbs 25:13 Like the cold of snow in the time of harvest [a hot day] is a faithful messenger [pastor-teacher] to those who send for him. He refreshes the soul of his masters.

Proverbs 25:21–22 If the one who hates you is hungry, give him food to eat; furthermore, if he is thirsty, give him water to drink; for you will heap burning coals on his head, and the Lord will reward you.

Ecclesiastes 7:26 I have discovered more bitter than death the woman whose heart is snares and nets, and in her hands she has chains. However, the person who is pleasing God [doctrine in the right lobe] will escape from her. But the sinning one [arrogant male] will be captured by her.

Isaiah 8:14 Therefore, he will become a refuge; but a stone of stumbling and a rock of offense to both houses of Israel, both a snare and a trap to the inhabitants of Jerusalem.

Isaiah 10:22 For though your people, Israel, shall be like the sand of the sea, only a remnant within them will return ...

Isaiah 11:10 Therefore it will come to pass in that day [Second Advent] that the root sprout of Jesse, who stands as the guidon [rallying point of the Jews of the dispersion]; that the Gentiles will also search for him, and his resting place shall be the glory.

Isaiah 13:7-8 All hands will fall limp. Every man's heart will melt [no thought]. They will be terrified.

Isaiah 28:16 Therefore, so communicates Adonai Jehovah, Behold, I am he [who was] who has laid in Zion a foundation stone [the Lord Jesus Christ as the God of Israel, the founder of Israel], a rock of testing, a cornerstone of honor, a secure foundation; the one who has believed in him will not panic.

Isaiah 29:9 Be shocked, and amazed blind yourselves, and be blind they stagger, but not from strong drink

Isaiah 29:10 For the Lord has poured over you a spirit of deep sleep he has shut your eyes, O prophets he has covered your heads, O seers.

Isaiah 29:11 Therefore the entire vision [first advent] shall be to you like the words of a sealed book absolutely obscured by their negative volition which, when they give it to one who is literate, saying, Please read this, he will reply, I cannot read (because it is sealed).

Isaiah 29:12 When the book is given to one who is literate, saying, Please read this, he will reply, I cannot read (because it is sealed).

Isaiah 29:13 Then the Lord said, Because this people draw near with their mouth, and honor me with their lips in the greatest of detail, and honor with their lips, and yet at the very same time reject the things that they were saying in their souls.

Isaiah 29:14 Therefore, behold, I will once again deal wonderfully with this people doing wonderfully a wonderful thing therefore the wisdom of their wise men will perish and the intelligence of their intelligence shall vanish.

Isaiah 29:15–16 Woe to those who deeply hide their conspiracies from the Lord; whose deeds are done in a dark place. So they say, “Who sees us? Or, who knows us?” You turn things around [says Isaiah to the Jews of his day]. You distort, you twist, you turn things around. Shall the potter be considered equal with the clay? That a work can say to its maker, “He has not made me.” [In your arrogance, do you consider yourself equal to God? There is no way a pot is equal to its maker.] Or what is formed say to what formed it, “He does not understand it.”

Isaiah 30:18 Therefore, the Lord waits to be gracious to you; furthermore, He is on high to show compassion to you; for the Lord is a God of justice. How blessed are those who wait for Him [which is the daily function of gap; it is the patience and the dedication to the intake of Bible doctrine on a daily basis].

Isaiah 33:6-7 And He [Lord Jesus Christ] will be the stability of your times, a wealth of salvation, wisdom, and knowledge. Behold their brave men [army of Israel] cry in the streets, the ambassadors of peace weep bitterly.

Isaiah 33:22 The Lord is our judge, the Lord is our lawgiver, the Lord is our king; he will deliver us.

Isaiah 35:1 The desert and the wilderness will be ecstatic [qal imperfect of the verb gil, which means to dance around in a circle] in great happiness; and the desert will rejoice and blossom like a crocus.

Isaiah 35:2 It will blossom profusely [the qal imperfect of parach. The doubling of the verb is an intensity factor and it means to blossom profusely], it will both rejoice with rejoicing and sing with happiness; the glory of Lebanon will be given to it, the majesty of Carmel and Sharon; they will see the glory of the Lord, the majestic royalty of our God.

Isaiah 42:1 — “Behold my Servant,” a reference to the Lord Jesus Christ. He is called the servant because He has come to fulfil the ministry of God the Father — “whom I sustain; my elected one in whom my soul delights. I have put my Spirit upon Him.”

Isaiah 45:4 — “For the sake of Jacob my servant, and Israel my elected one, I have also called you by your name; I have given you a title of honor though you [unbelieving Jews] do not even know me.” Nevertheless, the principle: Israel will always have an elect, and that elect formed the pivot that kept the Jewish nation in great prosperity during the time they were functioning as a priest nation. Now that that has been discontinued (70 AD) the Jews who reach maturity in every generation determine the prosperity of Israel during the period of being scattered — the Church Age and the Tribulation.

So Isaiah 45:8-12 states the case:

This was an old hobby of the Jews.

Isaiah 45:8 “Shower, O heavens, from above, and let the clouds rain down righteousness; let the earth open, that salvation and righteousness may bear fruit; let the earth cause them both to sprout; I the LORD have created it. (ESV)

Verse 8 – “Cause to trickle down, you heavens above, and let the blue skies rain down righteousness” -- they were having a drought, and in this drought there was a shortage of righteousness – divine righteousness imputed; “let the earth open, and let salvation blossom” – imputed righteousness causes salvation to blossom, “and righteousness, let them sprout together; I, Jehovah, have created it.”

Isaiah 45:9 “Woe to him who strives with him who formed him, a pot among earthen pots! Does the clay say to him who forms it, ‘What are you making?’ or ‘Your work has no handles’? (ESV)

Verse 9 – “Woe to the one who quarrels with his Maker!” There it is, impudence toward God – blasphemy, contradiction, arguing against God. It is inevitable that when the arrogance is too great there is no respect for authority. “A pot among the pots of earthenware.” The person who quarrels with God, the person who contradicts God, is a pot among the pots. “Will the clay say to the potter, What are you making? Or the thing you are making say, He has no hands?” Impudence to the maximum.

Isaiah 45:10 Woe to him who says to a father, ‘What are you begetting?’ or to a woman, ‘With what are you in labor?’” (ESV)

Verse 10 – “Woe to him who says to his father, What are you begetting? Or to his mother, To what are you giving birth?” This is ludicrous, but it is far more ludicrous to contradict God.

Isaiah 45:11 Thus says the LORD, the Holy One of Israel, and the one who formed him: “Ask me of things to come; will you command me concerning my children and the work of my hands? (ESV)

Verse 11 – “This says Jehovah, the Holy One of Israel, and his Maker: Ask me about things to come that my sons, or the work of my hands, be committed to me.”

Isaiah 45:12 I made the earth and created man on it; it was my hands that stretched out the heavens, and I commanded all their host. (ESV)

Verse 12 – “It is I who made the earth [I know what I am doing], and I created mankind upon it” -- When He created mankind He created mankind with a free will – “I stretched out the heavens with my hands [all of space was created by God], and I commanded all their armies [angels].”

Isaiah 46:9–10 Remember the former things long past, for I am God, and there is no other; I am God, there is no one like me, declaring the end from the beginning and from ancient times things which have not been done, saying ‘My decrees will be established, and I will accomplish my good pleasure’.

Isaiah 49:5–8 And now says Jehovah, Who formed Me [Jesus Christ] to be His servant, to bring Jacob back to Him [the future restoration of Israel] in order that Israel might be gathered to Him, for I [Jesus Christ] am glorified in the sight of Jehovah [God the Father] and My God will be My strength [that is, resurrection]. He decrees the Father, He says ‘It is too small a thing that You should be My servant to raise up the tribes of Jacob and to restore the preserved ones of Israel. My God the Father will also make you the light of nations so that My deliverance will be to the ends of the world. So decrees Jehovah, the Redeemer of Israel, the Holy One, regarding the despised One [Jesus Christ] regarding the One abhorred by the nation, the servant of rulers: ‘Kings shall see and come to attention; princes shall bow down on their knees because of the Lord Who is faithful and the Holy One of Israel Who has elected you. So decrees Jehovah, ‘At the right time I have answered you. Therefore, on the day of deliverance [the second advent] I have helped you; consequently, I will keep you and give you for a covenant of the people [the restored nation of Israel] to restore the land of Israel, to cause them to inherit the desolate heritage [which describe the Jewish nation at the present time; instead of having a spiritual heritage, they have a desolate heritage; and they will continue to have a desolate heritage until the restoration at the 2nd advent].

Isaiah 52:15 So he will startle many Gentiles; kings shall shut their mouths before him; for what had not been communicated to them they will see, and what they had not heard they will discern for themselves.

Isaiah 53:4 Therefore He himself carried the guilt of our sinful afflictions [this is the imputation of our personal sins to Christ on the cross]; He carried like a heavy burden our guilt. Consequently, we evaluated Him the One being struck down by judgment, the one being judged by God the Father; the One being degraded.

Isaiah 53:10 However, Jehovah the Father made a command decision to crush Christ on the cross. He caused the affliction of Christ on the cross (when you will appoint His soul a trespass offering) He (Christ) will see a seed (a royal family) , He shall prolong days to rule Israel in the Millennium ; and therefore, the plan of Jehovah the Father shall advance in His hand.

Isaiah 53:11 From the sorrow of His soul [God the Father had to judge God the Son; this is an anthropopathism referring God the Father imputing our sins to Jesus Christ and judging them] He shall see [that is, He will observe the imputation of judgment] and He will be satisfied [the doctrine of propitiation]; by His knowledge My righteous Servant [the Lord Jesus Christ] will vindicate the many [or justify the many, referring to believers] for He and only He shall bear their punishment for sin.

Isaiah 53:12 Therefore I [God the Father] will distribute the spoil [the plunder of victory] to Him [that is, to the Lord Jesus Christ] because of the many believers [which includes all believers who crack the maturity barrier]. Then He [the Lord Jesus Christ, as King of Kings and Lord of Lords] will distribute the spoil. I will distribute the spoil to the great ones [the mature believers] because He [Christ] has poured out His soul to death, because He Himself carried the sin of the many and about the offering for sin, the whole thing was caused to fall on Him.

Isaiah 53:12 Therefore, I [God the Father] will distribute the plunder of victory to Him [Jesus Christ] because of the many [royal family]; then He will distribute the plunder of victory to the great ones [mature believers] because He poured out His soul to death...

Isaiah 54:17 No weapon that is formed against you will prosper; and every tongue that accuses you in judgment, You will condemn. This is the heritage of the servant of the Lord and their vindication is from Me, decrees the Lord.

Isaiah 54:17 No weapon that is formed against you will prosper, and every tongue that accuses you in judgment, You [Jesus Christ] will condemn. This is the heritage of the servant of the Lord and their vindication is from Me," decrees the Lord.

Isaiah 55:6-9 - "Seek the Lord while He may be found [positive volition toward doctrine in time], call upon Him while He is near" - the principle of prayer and other spiritual dynamics related to the believer - "Let the reversionist forsake his way [negative volition toward doctrine], and the unrighteous man [reversionist] his thoughts [human viewpoint], and let him return to the Lord [reversion recovery], and He will have compassion on him; and to our God; and to our God; for He will abundantly pardon. For My thoughts [divine viewpoint] are not your thoughts [human viewpoint], neither are My ways [the ways of God] your ways [reversionism]. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are My ways higher than your ways, and My thoughts than your thoughts."

Isaiah 57:17-21. "Because of the iniquity of his unjust gain [function of evil in Judah], I was angry [anthropopathism to express the divine attitude toward evil in client nation]; I struck him [anthropomorphism to express divine judgment toward evil]; I hid My face [anthropopathism to express divine rejection of evil]; therefore, I was angry, but he went on turning away [continual apostasy] in the way of the right lobe [mental attitude of black-out of soul, life in cosmic system]. I have seen his ways [barrier], but I will heal him [reconciliation]. I will lead him and restore comfort to him and to his mourners [perpetuation of pivot in Judah], creating the praise of his lips. Peace [reconciliation] to him who is afar off [gospel to Gentiles through Israel as missionaries] and peace to him who is near [evangelism in Israel],’ says the Lord. `Therefore I will heal him [remove the barrier as a result of positive response].”

Isaiah 59:7–8 Their feet run to evil, and they hurry to shed innocent blood; their thoughts are thoughts of iniquity; devastation and destruction are in their highways. They do not know the way of peace [the way of prosperity], and there is no justice in their tracks; they have made their paths crooked; whoever treads on them does not know peace.

Isaiah 61:5–7 Strangers will stand and pasture your flocks; foreigners will be your farmers and wine producers and you will be called the priests of Jehovah [good wine and good food in the Millennium] you will be called the priests of Jehovah; you will be spoken of as ministers of our God; you will eat the wealth of nations and in their glory you will boast. Instead of your shame [today, the Jews are out under the 5th cycle of discipline] you will have a double portion; and instead of humiliation, they will shout for joy over their portion [the restoration of Israel]. Therefore, they will possess a double-portion in their land, everlasting happiness will be theirs for I Jehovah love justice [it is the justice of God which sustains the United States of America today].

Isaiah 65:9 — “Therefore I will bring forth from Jacob a seed [the elect of Israel], out of Judah an inheritor of my mountains, even my elected ones will inherit it, and my servants will dwell there.”

Jeremiah 1:9 Then the Lord [God the Holy Spirit] stretched out His hand and touched my mouth and said to me, `Behold, I have put words in your mouth.’

Jeremiah 17:5 So says the Lord, `Cursed is the man who depends on mankind and makes flesh his strength. His heart has turned away from the Lord [negative volition to Bible doctrine].’

Jer 13:10 I the Lord search the heart (or the right lobe); I test the kidneys or the emotions even to give to every man according to his modus vivendi.

Jeremiah 17:9 The heart is more deceitful than anything else and becomes a source of desperate wickedness.

Jeremiah 17:7 Happinesses to the man who puts his trust in the Lord and whose hope is in the Lord.

In Jeremiah 22:28 king Coniah was also a reversionist” “Is this man Coniah a despised, shattered vessel? or is he an undesirable vessel? Why has he and his descendants been cast out and thrown into a land they did not know?” They were taken into captivity and the reason was because they were shattered vessels. A shattered vessel holds nothing; it is no longer a container. Shattered vessel means you had every opportunity to learn doctrine, to be filled up with doctrine, to have more doctrine than you’ve ever had before. But once you are shattered it means you are on the way to the sin unto death, the final and last stage.

Lamentations 3:17-18 My soul has been rejected from prosperity; I have forgotten the good. So I saw, my strength has perished and so has my hope from the Lord.

Lamentations 3:20-25 Surely my soul remembers and is humbled within me. This I recall to mind, therefore I have hope. The Lord's gracious functions never cease, for His compassions never fail; they are new every morning; great is Your faithfulness. 'The Lord is my portion,' says my soul, 'therefore, I have hope in Him.' The Lord is good to those who wait for Him, to the one who seeks Him.

Ezekiel 7:10 Behold the day (the 5th cycle of discipline) is coming has your doom has come forth the rod of discipline has sprouted because arrogance sprouted.

Ezekiel 28:14-17 You were the anointed cherub furthermore, I placed you there. You were complete in your ways from the day that you were created until revolution was found in you. By the abundance of your commerce, your inner life was filled with evil and you sinned. Therefore, I have cast you are profane from the mountain of God and I have destroyed you from the middle of the stones of fire your right lobe was lifted up because of your beauty. You have corrupted your beauty with your splendor.

Daniel 4:37. Now, I, Nebuchadnezzar, praise (honor and exalt) the Lord of heaven (the Lord Jesus Christ) for all His works are doctrine and His ways are justice; furthermore, He is able to humble those who walk in arrogance.

Daniel 12:3 And many of those who sleep in the dust of the ground will awake to eternal life [first resurrection for believers only], but others to disgrace and eternal rejection.

Hosea 2:23 Therefore, I sow her Israel for herself in the land [referring to the 2nd advent and the Millennium] and I will love her tenderly [Israel in the Millennium], the one not being loved [Israel under the 5th cycle of discipline]. Furthermore, I will say to those who are not my people [the gentiles], 'You are My people;' and they [the gentiles] shall say, 'You are my God.'

Hosea 4:1-6 Hear the doctrine of Jehovah, you citizens of Israel. [this was the last chance given to the northern kingdom before they went out under the 5th cycle of discipline] because Jehovah has a lawsuit against the citizens of ... because there is nothing of doctrine being taught [the justice of God destroys a nation without doctrine] therefore, nothing of grace being taught, nothing of knowing Elohim in the nation. Instead [whenever doctrine declines; whenever there is indifference to doctrine] there is false communication [government deception], lying, deceiving, murdering [crime rate always goes up when doctrine is rejected; in a time of liberal apostasy]; there is homicide and stealing, where they break in to commit adultery [rape; there is no respect for womanhood; instead, women are violated]; therefore, blood reaches out and touches blood [which is violence in the streets; and this is the way that we are going in the United States]. For this cause, the land shall mourn [have great adversity] therefore, everyone who is in the land—the citizens—will lose strength along with the animals in the field, the birds in the sky, the fish of the lake—they shall all be destroyed [referring to a military invasion]. And let no one [a reversionistic believer] try to put down the authority of someone teaching doctrine nor impugn anyone who teaches doctrine; since your people [the northern kingdom of Israel] destroy the authority of the communicator [there is always an attack upon those who teach doctrine; at the time of writing, this refers to the prophets; in our time, pastor-teachers—there is ridiculing of the pastor-teacher, there is the diluting of his authority in the local church]. Therefore, you will stumble in the daytime and even the prophet will stumble with you in the night darkness; and I will destroy your mother [that is, your nation]. Therefore, you have stumbled [you have entered reversionism; you are under the influence of evil] in the daylight [which is the time of good doctrinal teaching] and even the prophet [the communicator of doctrine] will stumble with you in the night darkness [the apostate false teaching]. And I will destroy your mother [the administration of the fifth cycle of discipline to the northern kingdom]. My nation is destroyed from lack of knowledge of doctrine. Because you have rejected the principle of knowing doctrine, therefore, I will reject you from being a priest nation to Me. Since you have neglected doctrine, the Torah of your God, I will neglect the citizens. This is what destroys a nation.

Hosea 7:10-14. Thought the arrogance of has testified against them, then have not returned to Jehovah their God, nor have they sought Him in spite of warning discipline. So Ephraim (the northern kingdom) has become like a silly woman without sense. They call to Egypt for help; they go to Assyria. When they go, I will spread a net over them; I will bring them down like birds from the sky. I will punish them according to doctrinal teaching. Woe to them for they have strayed from Me. Destruction (the 5th cycle of discipline) is theirs. They have revolted against Me when I would have redeemed them. Then they speak lies against Me and they do not cry out to Me from their right lobe although they kept screaming on their beds, for the sake of grain and new wine, they have assembled for worship [they only went to church to get God to prosper their crops]. They have revolted against Me and therefore they have been destroyed.

Hosea 8:8,9: “Israel is swallowed up; they are now among the nations like a vessel in which no one delights [it doesn’t hold anything]. For they have gone up to Assyria [5th cycle of discipline] like a wild ass all alone; Ephraim his hired lover [description of spiritual fornication which comes from being saturated with evil].”

Malachi 1:2–3 “I have loved you,” says the Lord. But you say, “How have You loved us?” “Was not Jacob Esau’s brother,” declares the Lord. “Yet I have loved Jacob; but I have hated Esau.”

New Testament Translations

Matthew 7:1–2 Judge not that you be not judged. For by what judgment you judge, you will be judged. And by what measure you measure, it will be measured back to you.

Matthew 8:18 Now when Jesus saw the mob around Him, He gave orders to depart to the other side.

Matthew 8:19 Now a certain scribe [the pseudo intellectual] approached and said to Him, "Professor, I will follow You wherever (if) You go."

Matthew 8:20 And Jesus replied to him, "The foxes have burrows [lair, dens], and the birds of the atmosphere have roosting places, but the Son of Man has no place where He may recline His head.

Matthew 8:21 Now, another of his students (disciples) said to Him, "Lord, permit me first to go and bury my father."

Matthew 8:22 But Jesus said to him, "Follow Me and let the (spiritually) dead bury their own (physically) dead."

From here, go to Luke 9:60. The third disciple is found in Luke 9:61–62. He loves his family and he has capacity for love. But he is distracted; and he has forgotten the source of his blessing (his wife, children, parents and in-laws).

Matthew 8:23 Nevertheless when He boarded the ship His disciples followed Him.

Matthew 8:24 And so, look what happened, a great storm originated on the sea, so that the ship was covered by waves; but He [the Lord Jesus Christ] kept right on sleeping.

Matthew 8:25 Consequently having approached [that is, having gone to Him] they woke Him up screaming, "Save us, Lord, we are being wrecked."

Matthew 8:26 "Consequently," He said to them, "Why are you cowards, you short time trusters." And then when He got up, He reprimanded the winds and the seas and it became perfectly calm.

Matthew 8:27 Now the men were amazed and they kept on saying, "What kind of a person is this the winds and the sea obey Him?"

Matthew 11:18–19 "For John came, abstaining from meat and drink, and they say he hath a demon. The Son of Man came eating and drinking; and they say, Behold a gluttonous man and a wine drinker; a friend of tax collectors and prostitutes. But wisdom [maximum doctrine in the soul] is justified by her children [that is, by her deeds, production]."

Matthew 12:18 Behold My Servant [Jesus Christ], whom I sustain. My Chosen One, in whom My soul delights. I have put My Spirit on Him.

Matthew 12:28 Jesus said, 'If I cast out demons by the Spirit of God, then the kingdom has come to you.'

Matthew 12:34-35 Jesus called these people with wrong thinking "a brood of vipers, a nest of snakes. How can you, being evil, speak what is good. For the mouth speaks out what fills the heart. The good man out of his good treasure [= words] brings forth what is good. On the other hand, the evil man out of his evil treasure brings forth what is evil.

Matthew 16:27 For the Son of Man is destined to come in the glory His Father, with His angels, and then (at that time) He will reward to every man according to his works

Matthew 16:28 Truly I communicate to you, there are some of those standing here who shall certainly not taste of death until they have seen the Son of Man coming in His kingdom."

Matthew 17:1 And after six days, Jesus takes with Him Peter, and James, and John his brother, and led [or, hauled] them up into a high mountain by themselves.

Matthew 17:2 And He was transfigured before them, and His face shone like the sun, and His clothes became white as the light.

Matthew 17:3 And behold, Moses and Elijah appeared to them, conversing with Him.

Matthew 17:4 And Peter spoke up and said to Jesus, "Lord, it is advantageous for us to be here. If You wish, I will make here three tabernacles: one for You, and one for Moses, and one for Elijah."

Peter has a lot of things to say, but God interrupts him. God, "It is time for you to stop speaking and start listening."

Matthew 17:5 While yet he was speaking, behold, a bright cloud overshadowed them; and behold, a voice out of the cloud saying, "This is My Son, the Beloved, in Whom I am well pleased. You keep listening to Him!"

Matthew 17:6 When the disciples having heard it, fell flat on their faces and were greatly terrified.

Matthew 17:7 And Jesus having come to them and having touched them, said, "Get up, and do not be afraid [which means, start thinking doc]."

Matthew 17:8 And having lifting up their eyes, they saw no one except Jesus Himself alone.

Matthew 17:9 And as they were coming down the mountain, Jesus instructed them, saying, "Tell to no one the vision, until the Son of Man is risen out from the dead."

Matthew 24:12 Because of lawlessness (or, anti-establishment reversionism), shall increase, the love of many believers shall be extinguished (believers will lack the spiritual maturity to be occupation with Christ).

Mark 12:36 David himself said by means of the Holy Spirit, `The Lord said to my Lord, "Sit down at My right hand until I put your enemies beneath your feet."

Luke 4:14 Jesus returned to Galilee in the power of the Spirit.

Luke 9:60 But Jesus said to Him, "Follow Me and let the (spiritually) dead bury (physically) dead. But, you (and you only) go and proclaim everywhere the Kingdom of God."

Luke 9:61 Another disciple said, "Lord, I would follow You, but please give me permission to say goodbye to those of my family."

Luke 9:62 Now Jesus replied face to face with him, "No one, after putting his hand on the plough, and looking toward the things behind, is well-adjusted to the Kingdom of God."

Luke 11:13 If you being evil, know how to give good gifts to your children [and you do], how much more shall your Father from heaven give the Holy Spirit to those who ask for Him.

Luke 11:21 Whenever that strong person has been completely armed he guards his own home. Therefore his possessions and his loved ones remain undisturbed.

Luke 21:20-24. But when you see Jerusalem surrounded by armies, then know that its desolation has come near. Then let those [the pivot; the mature believers in Judæa] who are in Judea flee to the mountains, and let those who are inside the city depart, and let not those who are out in the country enter it, for these are days of vengeance [the 5th cycle of discipline from the justice of God], to fulfill all that is written. Alas for women who are pregnant and for those who are nursing infants in those days! For there will be great distress upon the earth and wrath against this people. They will fall by the edge of the sword [1,100,000 Jews will die] and be led captive among all nations, and Jerusalem will be trampled underfoot by the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles are fulfilled.

Luke 23:46, "Into Your hands I deposit My spirit," with Psalm 31:5, we learn what was not recorded in Luke, ...for You have delivered Me, O Lord, God of doctrine.

John 3:34 For He whom God has sent speaks the doctrines of God; for He does not give the Spirit by measure.

John 5:22 For not even the father judges anyone, but He has delegated all judgment to the Son.

John 12:40, "He has blinded their eyes [blackout of the soul], He has hardened their right lobe [scar tissue of the soul], lest they should see with their eyes, and perceive by means of their right lobe, and receive conversion, and I restore them [Israel as a client nation]."

John 14:19–20 Before long the world will see Me no longer, but you will see Me; because I live, you also will live. In that day [Church Age], you shall come to know that I am in My Father, and you in Me, and I in you.

John 17:22-23, 26 And I have given them the glory which You gave Me that they may be one even as we are one. I in them And you in Me [the Father's indwelling of Christ during the Incarnation]; in order that they might be matured with reference to one that the world may know that you have sent Me and that You have loved them, just as You have loved Me. I have made known to them Your person and I will continue to make it known, that the love with which You have loved Me may be in them and I in them.

John 16:8 When He arrives He will convince the world [unbelievers] concerning sin, concerning righteousness, concerning judgement:...

John 16:9 ...concerning sin, because they do not believe in Me [or, toward Me, on Me];...

John 16:10 ...concerning righteousness, because I go to face to face with the Father, and you will see Me no longer;...

John 16:11 ...concerning judgment, because the ruler of this world is judged.

Acts 15:8 Says the Lord Who knows these things from old.

Acts 15:18 Says the Lord Who does these things which were known in eternity past.

Acts 17:28 "That they should seek the God, if perhaps they might grope for him, and find him, though he is not far from each one of us."

Acts 28:25 The Holy Spirit rightly spoke through Isaiah the prophet...

Romans 3:3-4 Shall their unbelief cancel the faithfulness of God? Definitely not! Moreover, let God continue faithful, even though every man is a liar. Even as it stands written [in Psalm 51:4], That You might be vindicated by Your doctrine, and that You might prevail when You are maligned.

Romans 5:15–17 For if by the transgression of one [Adam's original sin] spiritual death ruled through that one; much more they who receive in life the surplus from grace [the exploitation of logistical grace is parleyed into supergrace - surplus of grace] and the gift of righteousness [imputed righteousness], much more they shall rule through that one, Jesus Christ.

Romans 8:28-34 — “We know in fact that to those who love God all things work together for the purpose of the good [agathos (ἀγαθός) [pronounced ag-ath-OSS]], to those who are the elected ones according to a predetermined plan.” Omniscience knew the actual and distinguished it from the probable. Omniscience knows the probable — what would have happened if you had made different decisions — but only the actual was fed into the decrees as facts. The “predetermined plan” takes cognizance of human volition. “We know that whom he foreknew [foreknowledge], he also foreordained as conformed ones to the image of his Son, that he might be the firstborn among many brethren [royal family of God];” — foreknowledge is a printout about believers only; “and whom he foreordained [or decreed], these same one he also elected; and whom he elected these same ones he also imputed righteousness [justification]; and whom he justified, these same ones he glorified [glorification is the imputation of divine blessing to imputed righteousness].” “Therefore, face to face with these things, to what conclusion are we forced? If the God is for us, who is against us? The God who did not even spare his own Son, but on behalf of us all he delivered him over to judgement; how shall he not with him in grace give to us the all things? Who will bring accusation against the elect of God? God is the one who justifies; who is the one who condemns? Christ Jesus is the one having died, yes, rather having been raised, who is at the right hand of God, who also makes intercession for us.”

Romans 9:11-12 For though his twins had not yet been born, and had not accomplished anything good or evil, in order that the predetermined plan of God might stand on the basis of election, not because of works, but because of Him who calls, it was said to her, ‘The older will serve the younger.’

Romans 12:12 With reference to hope [3], be rejoicing; with reference to the pressures of undeserved suffering, stand fast.

Romans 16:17–18. Now I urge you, brothers, keep your eyes on those who cause dissension, an occasion of stumbling contrary to Bible doctrine turn away from such people because such types are not slaves to the Lord Jesus Christ but to their own emotion, who, by their smooth and false tongue deceive the stupid.

1Corinthians 1:2 “To the church of God which is at Corinth, to those who have been sanctified in Christ Jesus [the baptism of the Spirit], saints [royal family] by election, with all who in every place call upon the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, their Lord and ours.”

1Corinthians 2:7 But we communicate God's wisdom in a mystery, the hidden assets which God predestined before the ages to our glory.

1Corinthians 2:11 Who among men knows the thoughts of a man, except the life of that man which is in him [the life referring to the soul and specifically the mentality of the soul]? Even so the thoughts of God no one knows, except the Spirit of God.

1Corinthians 2:14 The soulish man [unbeliever] does not accept the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness to him; and he is not able to obtain knowledge of the gospel because they are discerned from the source of the human spirit.

1Corinthians 2:14 But the soulish man [unbeliever] does not acquire knowledge of the things of the Spirit of God; for to him they are foolishness, and he is not able to acquire this knowledge because it is discerned from the source of the spirit.

Corrected translation of 1Corinthians 2:12-16

Verse 12 – But we have not received a cosmic spirit, but the spirit [human spirit] from the source of God; in order that we might have permanent knowledge of things [doctrines] having being graciously given to us under the authority of God.

Verse 13 – Which things [doctrines] also we communicate by categories, not by teaching from the source of man's wisdom [human IQ], but by teaching from the source of the Holy Spirit, combining with the human spirit to teach spiritual phenomena [Bible doctrine through a spiritual apparatus: GAP].

Verse 14 – But the soulish man [unbeliever] does not acquire knowledge of things [doctrines] from the Spirit of God; for to him they are foolishness [he has no frame of reference], and he is not able to get knowledge because they are discerned [perceived] from the source of the [human] spirit.

Verse 15 – But the spiritual man [the believer with GAP] discerns [perceives] all doctrines, but he himself is discerned under the authority of no one [doctrines in the human spirit cannot be evaluated by human viewpoint].

Verse 16 – For who has come to know the Lord's mind [learn doctrine], who shall instruct him? We keep on having the mind of Christ.

1Corinthians 3:14 If anyone's work which he has built remains, he shall receive reward; if his work is burned, he will suffer loss; but he himself will be saved (delivered) yet so as through fire.

1Corinthians 9:24-27 Do you not know that those who run a race all run but one receives the prize? Run in such a way that you may win. And everyone who competes in the games exercises self-discipline in all things. They do not receive a perishable crown but an imperishable crown. Therefore, I do not run without a goal [or, an objective]. I do not box like a person beating the air [he hits his target]. Instead, I discipline my body and keep it in training, lest having communicated to others the word, I myself should be disqualified.

1Corinthians 9:24-27: "Do you not know that those who run in a race all run [analogous to the games in the Roman empire and the function of gate four, the perception and application of doctrine necessary for momentum in the Christian life], but one receives the prize [in each event]?" analogous to the attainment of spiritual maturity or advance from gate four to gate eight in the divine dynasphere. "Run in such a way that you may win," a command for residence and function in the divine dynasphere ; "And everyone who competes in the games exercises self-discipline in all things. They [the athletes] do it to receive a perishable wreath [or crown]; but we [mature believers] an imperishable crown.

Therefore [Paul's application] I do not run like a person without an objective; I do not fight like a person beating the air [cosmic believers are shadow boxers]: Instead I discipline my body, and keep it in training [residence and function in the divine dynasphere]: lest having preached [communicated doctrine] to others, I myself should be disqualified" [disqualification from both temporal blessing in time and eternal reward at the judgment seat of Christ].

1Corinthians 10:11-12 Now these things happened to them as an example, furthermore, they were written for our instruction, upon whom the accomplishments of the ages [the execution of the plan of God under the power of the Holy Spirit] have come. Therefore, let him who thinks he stands take heed lest he fall.

1Corinthians 11:6,7, For if a woman does not cover her head (that is, with long hair) let her also have her hair cut off. But it is disgraceful for a woman to have her hair cut off (or her head shaved) and therefore, let her cover her head; for a man ought not to have his head covered (with hair) since he is the image and the glory of God; but the woman is the glory of the man (therefore the man has short hair and the woman has long hair).

1Corinthians 11:14-15. Does not even nature teach you that, if a man has long hair it is a dishonor to him. But if a woman has long hair, it is a glory to her.

1Corinthians 12:11 But one and the same Spirit works all these things, distributing to each one individually just as He wills.

1Corinthians 15:43. Our body is sown in dishonor but it is raised in glory; it is sown in weakness and it is raised in power.

1Corinthians 15:50-53 Now I communicate this doctrine to you, royal family, that flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God; neither does corruption inherit incorruption. Behold, I tell you a mystery that we shall not all sleep but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the blinking of an eye, at the last trumpet, for the trumpet shall sound and the dead shall be raised incorruptible and we shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on the incorruptible and this mortal must put on immortality [this is a reference to the rapture of the church]

1Corinthians 15:54–57 But when this corruption shall have put on incorruption and this mortal shall put on immortality, then will come to pass the saying that has been recorded, [Isaiah 25:8] death is swallowed up in victory; O death where is your victory; O death, where is your sting? The sting of death is sin and the power of death is the Law, but thanks be to God Who gives us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. The sting of death has been taken away from us by this great doctrine of the rapture.

1Corinthians 15:58 Therefore, my beloved brothers, be stabilized (immoveable) always abounding in the production of the Lord, knowing that your labor is not empty in the Lord.

1Corinthians 15:58 Therefore, my brethren, be stabilized immovable, always abounding in the production of the Lord, knowing that your labor (your advance to maturity) is not empty in the Lord.

1Corinthians 16:17-18 I rejoice at the coming of Stephanas and Fortunatus and Achaicus, because they have supplied what was lacking on your part, for they refreshed my spirit as well as yours. Therefore, acknowledge such men.

2Corinthians 3:17 And where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is freedom.

2Corinthians 4:18 We look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen [essence of God]; for the things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal.

2Corinthians 5:1, "For we know that if the earthly tent which is our house is torn down [physical death], we have a building from God [resurrection body], a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." Verse 6 - "Therefore, we keep having confidence, and knowing that, while we are at home in the body, we are absent from the Lord." As long as we live in this life we can have great confidence based upon knowing. Verse 7 - "(For we walk by doctrine [our confidence] resident in the soul, and not by sight). Our whole instrument system is doctrine resident in the soul. Verse 8 - "We keep having confidence, and take mental delight in the fact that to be absent from the body is to be at home with the Lord."

2Corinthians 5:10 For we must all appear before the Judgment Seat of Christ that each one might be rewarded for the things done by means of the body, face to face with what he has accomplished, whether good or worthless.

2Corinthians 5:18-21. Now all these things [baptism of the Spirit, new spiritual species, great power experiment of the Church Age] are from God [Father] who has reconciled us to Himself through Christ [agent of reconciliation], and has given to us the ministry of reconciliation. Namely that God [the Father as reconciler] by means of Christ [agent of reconciliation] was reconciling the world to Himself [unlimited atonement] by not imputing their sins to them, and He entrusted to us the doctrine of reconciliation. Therefore, we are ambassadors for Christ as though God was making an appeal through us; we invite you on behalf of Christ: become reconciled to God. He [God the Father] caused Him [God the Son] who had no sin [impeccability of Christ] to become sin for us that we might become the righteousness of God by means of Him.

2Corinthians 5:19-21 Namely, that God [Father] by means of Christ [agent of reconciliation] was reconciling the world to Himself by not imputing their sins to them, having deposited in us the doctrine of reconciliation. Therefore, we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God were making His appeal through us. We invite you on behalf of Christ to become reconciled to God. He [God the Father] caused Him [God the Son] who knew no sin to be made sin as a substitute for us in order that we might become the righteousness of God in Him.

2Corinthians 5:20 Therefore, we are ambassadors for Christ as though God were making His appeal through us. We invite you on behalf of Christ: become reconciled to God.

2Corinthians 5:20 Therefore, we are ambassadors to Christ, as though God were entreating through us, we beg you on behalf of Christ, be reconciled to God.

2Corinthians 6:11–12 Oh you Corinthians, our mouth has been open face to face with you (teaching in the local church) because our right lobe has been enlarged. You have not been hindered from learning doctrine from us; you have been hindered by your own emotions.

2Corinthians 6:11-12 O you Corinthians! Our mouths [means of communication by Paul, Apollos, and Timothy] have been opened face to face with you; our right lobes have been enlarged [we were prepared]. Therefore, you have not been hindered by us [Paul, Apollos, Timothy], but you have been hindered by your own emotions.

2Corinthians 7:13 For this reason we have been comforted and beside our comfort we rejoice even more for the happiness of Titus, because his spirit has been refreshed by all of you.

2Corinthians 9:7–8 Each one, just as he has determined in his right lobe, let him give, not from mental pressure or compulsion from emotion, for the God loves a grace oriented believer.

2Corinthians 10:4-6 tells us what our attitude and what our concept in the royal family should be - "(For the equipment and the weapons of our conflict are not human attributes" - we are fighting in the greatest of all warfare, the angelic conflict, older than the human race, and we are not fighting it with human attributes. The power is in the soul - "but the attributes of power [resident doctrine in the soul] through God against the destruction of fortifications)" - Satan's fortifications, Satan's concepts. Satan has many fortifications in the world today, e.g. the United Nations, the concept of socialism, communism, the ideologies of the day. Therefore these fortifications cannot be destroyed by a good punch or counter punch, these things are in a greater warfare and a warfare that demands the skill of the soul. The skill of the soul is our mental attitude based on doctrine resident in the soul - "assaulting and demolishing cosmic thoughts [human viewpoint], and every obstacle of pride which attacks against the objective of knowledge of God [divine viewpoint], and makes a prisoner of every human viewpoint system of thought to the authority of Christ;" - "holding in readiness to punish all deviation from obedience [reversionistic human viewpoint], when your obedience [daily function of GAP] has been fulfilled."

2Corinthians 10:15 ...not boasting beyond our measure in other men's labors, but with the hope that as your doctrine increases, we shall be within our sphere enlarged even more by you.

2Corinthians 12:9-10 But He said to me, "My grace is sufficient for you, for My power is perfected in weakness; most gladly, therefore, I would rather have esprit decor about my weakness, that the power of Christ may reside in me. Therefore [the testimony of a mature believer under undeserved suffering], therefore, I am content with weaknesses, with insults, with pressures, with persecutions, with difficulties for the sake of Christ, for when I am weak, then I am strong [strength in adversity is a blessing from the justice of God].

Galatians 2:16 Knowing that a person is not justified by the works of the law, but through faith in Christ Jesus, even we have believed in Christ Jesus that we might be justified by faith in Christ, and not by the works of the law; for by the works of the law no person will be justified.

Galatians 3:13 Christ has redeemed us from the curse of the law, having become a curse [cherem] for us; for it stands written, Cursed is everyone who hangs on the wood.

Galatians 3:26-29 You are the children of God through faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as have been baptized into [union with] Christ, you have clothed yourselves with Christ [you share what Christ has]. There is neither Jew nor Greek [racial distinctions], there is neither slave nor free man [cultural distinctions], there is neither male nor female [social distinctions]; for you are all one in Christ Jesus. And if you belong to Christ, then you are Abraham's offspring, heirs according to promise.

Galatians 4:1–5 Now I say, as long as the heir is a minor, he does not differ from a slave in the household although he may be in the future lord of everything. But he is under guardians and stewards until the date set by his father, until the date when he receives adoption, he is under guardians and stewards (teachers and bodyguards and the ones who trained him). So also we, while we were children, we were held in bondage in slavery to the rudimentary principles of this world. But when the fullness of time came, God sent His Son, born of a woman and under the Law, in order that he might redeem those who were under the Law that we might receive the adoption of sons.

Galatians 5:1 In the sphere of freedom, Christ has freed us; stand firm, therefore, and stop being enmeshed by the yoke of slavery [to good and evil].

Galatians 5:5 For we through the Spirit from doctrine are waiting for the hope [2] of righteousness

Galatians 5:8 You reversionists have become a casualty from Christ whoever are being vindicated by the Law (legalistic reversionism); you have drifted off course from [logistical] grace.

Ephesians 1:3-6 - "Worthy of praise and glorification is the God even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the one having provided us benefits by every spiritual blessing in the heavenlies in Christ [our election], even as he has elected us for himself in Him before the world began ... in love having foreordained us to the adoption as sons through Jesus Christ to himself, according to the good pleasure of his will, resulting in recognition of glory from the source of his grace, from which he has pursued us in grace in the beloved one."

Ephesians 1:4–5 Even as He has chosen us for Himself in Him before the beginning of the world that we should be saints [royal family] and blameless before Him; in love, having pre-designed us for the purpose of adoption [which is a part of the salvation ministry of the Holy Spirit] as adult sons for Himself [which includes the power and position of a permanent royalty]

Ephesians 1:5-6, "Having pre-designed us with the result of the appointment of adult sons for Himself through Jesus Christ, according to the benevolent purpose of His will, resulting in the recognition of glory from the source of grace, from which He has pursued us with grace in the Beloved."

Ephesians 1:8–9 From which grace, He [God the Father] caused to superabound toward us [that's supergrace] by means of all doctrine and divine viewpoint having made known to us the mystery of His purpose and design according to the standard of His good thinking, from which He [God the Father] pre-designed in Him [in Christ].

Ephesians 1:11 "In whom Christ we have received an inheritance [destiny], having been foreordained according to a predetermined plan [divine decrees] from the one [God the Father] putting into operation all things according to the decree from his own will."

Ephesians 2:3–6 If you have heard of the dispensation of the mystery [and you have], having been given to me [to Paul] for you [royal family] that from divine disclosure [Paul's disclosure] the mystery was revealed to me [to Paul] just as I have previously written in brief face to face with which doctrine of the mystery, when you exegete, you ought to be able to understand my categorical knowledge in the sphere of the mystery of the Christ, which in other dispensations [other periods of time] was not revealed to the sons of men so that now it has been revealed to His holy Apostles, even prophets, by means of the Holy Spirit that the gentiles believers are joint heirs and members of the body and joint possessors of the promise of Christ Jesus through the gospel.

Ephesians 2:10 For we are His production [we have the provision of computer assets in our very own portfolio; i.e., election and predestination], having been created in Christ Jesus [the formation of the royal family of God and a new spiritual species resulting in positional sanctification by which every believer becomes the heir of God and has equal privileges under predestination] for good achievements [in momentum in the divine dynasphere as a part of equal privilege of election] which God has prepared in advance [divine provision of your portfolio of invisible assets], that we should walk by means of them [utilization of our computer assets].

Ephesians 4:1 — "Therefore I, the prisoner of the Lord, continue to encourage you to walk in a manner worthy of your station of life [royal family], to which station you have been elected."

Ephesians 4:8-11 but to each one of us the grace has been given according to the gift of Christ. For this reason, the Scripture says, [Psalm 68:18] when He ascended on high [marking the strategic victory in the angelic conflict], He led captive in a triumphal procession (OT believers were transferred to the 3rd heaven) and He distributed gifts to man [that is, to the royal family] [On the day of Pentecost, there was this moment when the baptism of the Spirit took place, where all believers there in that geographical location were placed into Jesus Christ; and spiritual gifts were given] [the Jerusalem bunch became the ignition system that started the Church Age] Now this doctrine that He ascended, what does it imply other than He also descended into the inner parts of the earth [that is, into paradise] and He gave some male members of the royal family Apostleship, and others prophets, and others evangelists, and others pastor teachers [now here's the reason for spiritual gifts] for the purpose of training and equipping the saints for combat, for the purpose of the occupation of the ministry [every believer is in full-time service] for the purpose of the edification of the body of Christ, until we all attain the goal [the good] because of the consistency of doctrine [we must enter into a realm of doctrine] and the full knowledge of the Son of God to a mature status to the standard of maturity that belongs to the fullness of Christ. In order that we no longer be immature believers, being tossed here and there by ways, being carried here and there by every wind of doctrine, by the dice playing of men and cheating, we are easily led astray; but, by way of contrast, by teaching doctrine in the sphere of the filling of the Spirit you may cause them to grow up by Jesus Christ.

Ephesians 4:11-17. And He gave some Apostles [the top communication gift in those days] and other prophets, and others evangelists [a specialist; he gets the attention of his audience] pastor-teachers; For the purpose of training and equipping saints [the royal family] for combat; for the purpose of the vocation of the ministry, for the purpose of the edification of the body of Christ; until we all attain the goal, because of the consistency of doctrine and the full knowledge of doctrine of the Son of God, with reference to a mature noble man, to the standard of maturity which belongs to the fullness of Christ, in order that we no longer be childish ones [immature ones] , being tossed here and there by waves, being carried by every wind of false doctrine by the dice playing of men cheating, face to face with their cunning methods of deception; but by teaching doctrine in the sphere of love [the filling of the Spirit, the concept of impersonal love] may cause to grow up by all things of doctrine with reference to Him who is the absolute Chief [Jesus Christ] Christ, through Whom all the body, being joined together [in union with Christ] being taught categorically through every joint of supply according to the operational power in measure, one pastor for each part which causes growth in the body resulting in an edification complex belonging to self in love. This therefore, says Paul, I explain and make an emphatic demand by means of the Lord that you all no longer continue walking just as the gentiles [reversionistic types] keep walking by means of nothingness in their minds that I should be a minister of Christ Jesus to the gentiles.

Ephesians 4:12 ...for the purpose of equipping the saints, for the production of Christian service, for the edification of the body of Christ.

Ephesians 4:17-18 This therefore I explained and make an emphatic demand by means of the Lord, that all of you no longer continue walking as also the gentiles (unbelievers) keep walking by means of the worthlessness (or vacuum) of their mind, having become darkened in their way of thinking, having become alienated from the life of God because of the ignorance which keeps on being in them, because of the hardness of their right lobe.

Ephesians 4:17-18. Therefore, I communicate this and because of the Lord I insist that you no longer walk as Gentiles walk, in the vacuum of their mind, having become darkened in their way of thinking [blackout of the soul], having been alienated from the life of God, because of the ignorance that is in them, because of the scar tissue of their right lobe.

Ephesians 4:30 Stop grieving the Holy Spirit, the God by whom you have been sealed for the day of redemption.

Ephesians. 6:10–12 In the future, keep on becoming strong in the Lord even by means of His endowed power [Bible doctrine]. Wear for yourselves the full armor of God that you might be able to hold your grounds against the tactics of the devil because our combat is not against blood and flesh (human beings) but against rulers [these are demon rulers] against the authorities [demon-commissioned officers] against the world rulers of this darkness [ambassador demons to the world courts], against the spirit forces in the heavenlies [the rank and file of demons].

Ephesians 6:20, ...on behave of which [gospel] I am an ambassador in chains, that in this [proclaiming the mystery doctrine], I might communicate with confidence as I ought to speak.

Ephesians 1:17-18, "That the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of glory, may give to you a spirit of wisdom even from the source of revelation by means of knowledge from Him..., that the eyes of your right lobe may be enlightened, in order that you all may have a permanent knowledge, knowing what is the hope of His calling [maximum blessing], and what is the riches from the source of the glory, the inheritance of His saints."

Ephesians 3:16 In order that He might give you according to the riches from His glory, to become strong by means of power through His Spirit with reference to the inner man.

Ephesians 4:16 Because of whom [Lord Jesus Christ] the entire body, being joined together [baptism of the Spirit] and being inculcated by every joint of supply [pastor-teacher] on the basis of the operational power [Holy Spirit in divine dynasphere], in measure one [pastor-teacher] for each part [of the royal family of God]; he himself [pastor-teacher] causes growth in the body, resulting in its edification by means of virtue-love.

Colossians 1:5 because of the hope laid up for you in heaven, of which you previously heard in the word of truth.

Colossians 1:21 - And you being at one time in a state of alienation and hostile in your thinking and evil in deeds

Colossians 1:27 To whom the God decreed to make known what is the wealth of the glory of the mystery among the Gentiles, which is Christ in you, the confidence of glory.

Colossians 1:27 (Church Age believers) to whom God willed to make known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles, which is Christ indwelling you, the absolute confidence of glory.

Colossians 2:6–7 According to as you have received to yourselves Christ Jesus as Lord, so also keep on walking in Him, having been rooted and constantly being edified in Him; being stabilized by means of doctrine in the manner that you have been taught, overflowing with thanksgiving.

Colossians 2:9-12. For in Him all fullness of deity [that is, all divine attributes] dwell permanently in bodily form, and you are in Him, having been completed, the one Who is the sovereign Head of princes, angels and authorities. In fact, in Him, you have been circumcised by a circumcision not made with hands, but by the renunciation of the body [the body is the location of the old sin nature] of the flesh [the flesh is a reference to the old sin nature] [this is our identification with Christ in His deaths]; having been buried with Him by means of the baptism of the Spirit, the same by which you have been raised up with Him by faith from the operational power of God Who raised Him from the deaths.

Colossians 2:14 And having canceled out the debt consisting of the decrees against us [sin, good, evil] which was hostile to us, even He [God the Father] has taken it out of the way having nailed it to the Cross.

Colossians 3:1-4 Therefore, if you have been raised with Christ [and you have], keep on investigating the above-things [that is, learn doctrine]; things where Christ is, sitting on the right hand of God; keep thinking objectively about the above-things of doctrine and not about the things which are on earth [Satan's policies and the trends of the old sin nature] for you have died [retroactive positional truth]; your life has been hidden encapsulated in the Christ by means of God. When Christ, Who is our life, has been revealed, at that time [the second advent], you also will be revealed with Him in glory [that's the time what we will come back with our rewards for cracking the maturity barrier].

Colossians 3:4 On the occasion when Christ our life might be made manifest, also you shall become manifest together with Him in glory.

Colossians 3:12 — “As elected ones of God, holy and beloved, put on the affections of grace compassion.”

Philippians 1:6 For I have confidence in this same doctrine, that He Who began a good work in you will accomplish it until the day of Christ Jesus (being the rapture of the church);

Philippians 1:20–21 I have absolute hope (or confidence) that in nothing shall I be disgraced. As always, Christ shall be exalted in my person, whether by life or by death. For me, then, living is Christ and dying is great profit.

Philippians 2:2, "Fill up the deficiency with inner happiness, that you keep on thinking the same thing [divine viewpoint], having the same love, soul rapport, in thinking."

Philippians 2:9–11 Therefore, also, the God (God the Father) has exalted Him [Jehovah, to the maximum] and He has bestowed on Him the rank which is above every rank [battlefield royalty] in order that in the Presence of the Person of Jesus every knee of heaven shall bow both the ones on earth and the ones under the earth. Every tongue shall acknowledge the Jesus Christ is Lord resulting in God the Father. This is the great genuflect which occurs after we receive our resurrection bodies.

Philippians 2:9-11. Therefore, also, the God the Father has exalted Him (Jesus Christ) to the maximum and He has bestowed upon Him the rank which is above every rank, in order that in the presence of Jesus (rapture of the church) every knee of heaven will bow, both the ones on earth (those who are raptured) and believers under the earth (those who died before the rapture); and every tongue shall confess that Jesus Christ is Lord resulting in the glory of God the Father.

Philippians 2:16 Be concentrating on the Word of Life [crossing no man's land to ultra super grace] that I may have a basis for esprit de corps (glorying) with reference to the day of Christ that I have not run in vain or worked hard for no purpose.

Philippians 3:9 Also that I might be discovered in Him not having my own righteousness from the Law but that righteousness which is imputed by means of faith in Christ, the righteousness from the source of God at the point of faith in Christ.

Philippians 3:15 Therefore, as many as are mature, let us continue objective-type thinking [the result of being spiritually mature], and if you think differently in anything at all [and you do], this also will God reveal that to you.

Philippians 3:15 Therefore, as many as are mature ones, let us continue objective thinking. In fact, if you have a different mental attitude in something, the God will reveal even that to you.

Philippians 3:18-19 For many keep walking concerning whom I have communicated many times and now I keep on communicating even though weeping that they are the enemies of the Cross of Christ, whose termination is ruin, whose god is his emotion, whose fame is by means of dishonor, who keep on thinking about earthly things.

Philippians 3:18-21 For many [reversionists under the influence of evil] keep walking concerning whom I have communicated to you many times, and now continue communicating even though weeping, that they have made themselves the enemies of the cross of that same Christ. Whose termination of life is destruction [ruin or the sin unto death], whose God is his emotion, whose fame is by means of their dishonor, who keep thinking about [or, holding opinions on] earthly things [evil]. For our aristocracy exists in heaven; even from which place [heaven] we eagerly anticipate the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ. Who will change the body of our humiliation into conformity with the body of his glory [resurrection body], according to the operational power from which this same one [Jesus Christ] keeps on being able also to bring under authority all of these creatures.

Philippians 3:20-21 For the seat of our citizenship exists in heaven; even from which place [heaven] we eagerly anticipate the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ; Who shall change the form of our body of our humiliation into conformity with the body of his glory [resurrection body], humble station [phase II] in conformity with the body of His glory [the glory of the resurrected Christ] according to the operational power from of this same one [Jesus Christ] also keeps on being able also to bring into subjection all these things to Himself.

Philippians 4:7 And the prosperity from God, transcending human comprehension, shall garrison your right lobes and thoughts by means of Jesus Christ.

Philippians 4:19 Now my God shall fill up the deficiency of all your needs according to the standard of His riches in glory by means of Christ Jesus.

1Thessalonians 1:3 ...constantly bearing in mind your work of doctrine, and labor of love [impersonal love from the royal family honor code], and courage under pressure from hope in our Lord Jesus Christ in the presence of God the Father.

1Thessalonians 1:4 — “Knowing, brethren beloved of God, his election for you.”

1Thessalonians 4:4 – “That each one of you know how to possess his own vessel in sanctification and honor.”

1Thessalonians 4:13-14 However, we do not desire you to be ignorant, royal family, about those who are asleep [Christian death; the body is sleeping waiting for the resurrection while the soul and the spirit are in the presence of the Lord] in order that you might not grieve as the rest of the world who have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again [which we do] so also the God will bring with him those who have fallen asleep in Jesus.

1Thessalonians 4:13 But we do not want you to be ignorant, brothers, about those who are asleep, in order that you may not grieve like the rest who have no hope.

1Thessalonians 4:15-18 For this doctrine in the Lord we communicate to you, that we who are alive who remain until the coming of the Lord [the rapture] shall not precede those who are asleep for the Lord Himself will descend from heaven with a command with the voice of the archangel, also with the trumpet of God, the dead in Christ shall rise first and then we who are alive who remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds for the purpose of meeting the Lord in the air, and so we shall always be with the Lord. Therefore, comfort one another with these doctrines.

2Thessalonians 2:10 With all deception of maladjustment (salvation maladjustment) for those who perish, because they did not receive the love of doctrine so as to be saved.

2Thessalonians 2:11 And for this reason, God sends to them a deluding influence, with the result that they might believe the lie.

2Thessalonians 2:12 In order that they might all be judged [historical disaster, personal disaster, great condemnation from the justice of God] who did not believe the doctrine but took pleasure in maladjustment.

2Thessalonians 2:10-12, ...and with all deception of maladjustment [rejection of Jesus Christ] for those who perish, because they did not receive the love of the truth, so as to be saved. And for this reason, God sends them a deluding influence [blackout of the soul, scar tissue of the soul], so that they might believe a lie, in order that they might all be condemned who do not believe the truth, but take pleasure in unrighteousness.

2Thessalonians 2:13 — “But we are obligated to give thanks for you [royal family], beloved by the Lord, because God has elected you from the beginning’ — from eternity past. No election apart from faith in Christ — “to salvation through sanctification from the Spirit” — the baptism of the Holy Spirit that enters us into union with Christ and forms the royal family of God — “and faith in doctrine”

2Thessalonians 2:13 We should always give thanks for you [believers], for God has elected you from the beginning for salvation through sanctification by the Spirit, and faith in the truth.

2Thessalonians 2:14, And it was for this that He called you through our gospel that you may attain the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ.

1Timothy 2:9 Likewise I have made a command decision that women should make themselves beautiful by respectable, well-arranged clothing, associated with sanity associated with respect for authority and good judgment (or common sense); not with emphasis on high fashion hair styling, golden jewelry or either pearls or expensive clothing.

1Timothy 2:10 But what becomes fitting for women being promised super-grace status [or maturity status] through intrinsic good accomplishments. (The daily function of gap)

1Timothy 2:15 If they persist in doctrine, and love (the relaxed mental attitude), even experiential sanctification with stability of mind (inner beauty is a mental attitude; inner beauty is emphasized)

1Timothy 2:9 Likewise I have made a command decision that women should make themselves beautiful by respectable, well-arranged clothing, associated with respect for authority and good judgment (or common sense); not with emphasis on high fashion hair styling, golden jewelry or either pearls or expensive clothing.

1Timothy 2:10 But what becomes fitting for women being promised super-grace status [or maturity] through intrinsic good accomplishments [or, the attainment of the good].

1Timothy 2:11 Women be learning in silence with complete [or, total, entire] subordination (to authority).

1Timothy 2:12 But I do not permit a woman to teach, nor do I permit her to exercise authority over a man [or, the adult male], but to be in silence.

1Timothy 2:13 Pray on behalf of kings and all who are in authority, that we may lead undisturbed and tranquil lives in all godliness and integrity. Wrong citation; could not find this one.

1Timothy 2:13 For Adam was formed first, then Eve;... (ESV)

1Timothy 2:14 But although that woman had been completely deceived, she had come to be [in the transgression] with the result that she remained in the transgression.

1Timothy 2:15a In fact, she will be delivered (or saved) through childbearing (the virgin birth).

1Timothy 3:16 And by consent of all, great is the mystery doctrine with reference to godliness [the advance to maturity]; the Unique One [Christ, as eternal God] Who became visible by means of the flesh [the Hypostatic Union], the Same One was vindicated by means of the Holy Spirit [the sustaining ministry of the Holy Spirit except for three hours on the cross when He was being our sins], He was observed by angels [very carefully], He was proclaimed among the nations [very lucidly], He became the object of faith in the world. He was taken up to His place in glory.

1Timothy 3:16 And by consent of all, great is the mystery of the spiritual life; the Unique One [Jesus Christ] who appeared in a human body was vindicated by means of the Holy Spirit; He was observed by angels; He was proclaimed among the nations; He was the object of faith in the world; He was taken up into glory [ascension and session].

1Timothy 4:3–4 False teachers are ones who forbid marriage and advocate abstaining from foods, which God has created to be received with thanksgiving by those who believe and know doctrine For everything created by God is good and nothing is to be rejected if it is received with thanksgiving. And he who eats (the mature believer) eats to the Lord for he gives thanks to the God.

2Timothy 1:7, "For God has not given us the spirit of fear, but of power [resident doctrine], love [the capacity for life which comes from that doctrine], and stabilized mentality"

2Timothy 1:9 — "The one having saved us, and having elected us into a holy station of life [royal family], not according to our works but according to his predetermined plan, even grace [the name of the plan], which has been given to us in Christ Jesus before human history."

2Timothy 1:16 The Lord give mercy to the family of Onesiphorus [who has died] because many times he has refreshed me and was not ashamed of my chains.

2Timothy 2:14-17. Remind them [the congregation] of these things and be warning them in the presence of the God [the assembly] not to fight with words which is useless and leads to the ruin of the congregation. [Then to Timothy, Paul writes:] Be diligent to present yourself approved to God, an irreproachable producer, communicating doctrine from the Word without perversion or distortion. But avoid empty talk, useless argumentation, for they will grow worse toward more ungodly reversionism; and their talk [the sins of the tongue] will increase like cancer. Among these [guilty of the sins of the tongue] are Hymenaeus and Philetus [two reversionists mentioned in Timothy].

2Timothy 2:25–26 In grace orientation, exercising disciplinary action toward those who are in opposition to doctrinal teaching [a responsibility of the pastor-teacher] so that perhaps the God may give them a change of mind for the purpose of achieving ἐπίγνωσις knowledge of the doctrine. And that they should come to their senses [reversionism recovery] and be delivered from the devil's trap, having been held captive by him with reference to his plan.

2Timothy 3:18-19 All Scripture is God-breathed, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for training which is righteousness, that the man of God may be proficient, equipped for every good work.

2Timothy 4:7–8 "I have fought that honorable fight [a reference to the advance to maturity inside the divine dynasphere. It refers to going from gate four to gate eight of the divine dynasphere. It indicates that the apostle Paul has attained spiritual maturity at gate eight], I have completed the course [the fulfilment of God's plan for his life], I have retained the doctrine [not 'I have kept the faith'. And it refers to perception and application of doctrine resulting in the construction of the edification complex structure]. In the future [reference to the judgment seat of Christ] a crown (wreath) of righteousness is reserved for me, which crown the Lord, the righteous evaluator, will award me on that day the crown of righteousness is awarded to the believer who executes the plan of God during the Church Age. and not only to me, but also to all those who have loved his appearance [the appearance of Christ at the Rapture]."

2Timothy 4:18 The Lord Himself shall continue to deliver me from every evil deed and the Lord to Whom is the glory forever and ever. Amen.

Titus 1:1 — "Paul, a slave of God, and an apostle of Christ Jesus, according to the doctrine of God's elected ones and the full knowledge of doctrine according to the norm of godliness."

Titus 2:13 Waiting with keen anticipation for that happy guarantee, even the appearance of glory of that Great God, even our Savior, Jesus Christ;

Titus 2:13 ...looking for the blessed hope [confidence], even the appearing of the glory of our great God and Savior, Jesus Christ.

Titus 3:7 being justified by His grace, made heirs according to the hope of eternal life.

Philemon 7 For I have derived much happiness and encouragement by your love, my brother, because the hearts of the royal family have been refreshed through you.

Philemon 9 Yet for love's sake, I rather appeal to you, since I am such a person as Paul, the ambassador, and now a prisoner of Jesus Christ.

Philemon 20 Very well, brother, let me have benefit from you in the Lord. Refresh my deep affections in Christ.

Hebrews 4:13 There is not a created thing hidden from His sight. But all things are naked and have been exposed to His eyes, to Whom we must give an account.

Hebrews 4:13 And there is no creature hidden from His sight, but all things are open and laid bare to the eyes of Him with whom we have to do.

Hebrews 6:18-20. The two immutable things are God's promise and God's person. In order that, by two immutable things (an oath, which is a statement from integrity and what He promises; this is a promise from divine integrity) in which it is impossible for God to lie, we may have strong encouragement, we who have fled for refuge (in doctrine) for the purpose of attaining the hope (maturity adjustment to the justice of God) set before us, which hope we have as an anchor of the soul, both secure and dependable, and one which enters into the room behind the curtain (our anchor of the soul is connected with heaven).

Hebrews 6:18-20 In order that by two immutable things [God's oath and God's promise] in which it is impossible for God to lie, we may have strong encouragement (or hope) we have fled for refuge in doctrine for the purpose of attaining the hope set before us; which hope (the third hope), we have an anchor of the soul and this anchor is both secure and dependable and one which enters into the room behind the curtain, where Jesus, the advance guard, has entered on behalf of us, having become a high priest forever, assigned to the order [or, battalion] of Melchizedek.

Hebrews 7:18-19 For on the one hand, there is a setting aside of the former commandment [Mosaic Law] because of its weakness and uselessness (the Law made nothing perfect), but on the other hand, there is the bringing in of a better confidence through which we draw near to [have fellowship with] God.

Hebrews 10:13 He sat down on the right hand of God. From that time on he is waiting until his enemies [demons] have been allotted the footstool of his feet.

Hebrews 10:25 Stop neglecting the assembling the assembly of yourselves together therefore it behooves each one of us to use each day for the perception of doctrine.

Hebrews 10:30 For we know him who said, Vengeance is mine, I will repay. And again, the Lord will judge his people.

Hebrews 10:35-36, Don't throw away as worthless your confidence in doctrine; which confidence continues having a rich distribution of blessing. For you keep on having need of perseverance (persistence) in order that when you have accomplished the will of God [advancing to maturity] you might carry off for yourself the promise [that is, the imputed blessings in time with the guarantee of blessings in eternity] [this promise referring to the categories of blessing].

Hebrews 11:1 In fact, doctrine is the reality from which we receive hope, the proof of matters not being seen.

Hebrews 11:1-2 In fact, doctrine is the reality from which we keep receiving confidence, the proof of matters not being seen; for by means of doctrine men of old gained approval.

Hebrews 11:6 And without doctrine resident in the soul, it is impossible to please God, for when one is occupied with God, he must be convinced that He is and that He becomes a rewarder of those who diligently seek Him.

Hebrews 12:15 See to it that no one falls back from the grace of God [logistical grace], that not one root of bitterness sprouting up cause trouble, and through this evil, many be contaminated.

Hebrews 12:17 For you know that even afterwards, when he [Esau] desired to inherit the blessings, he was rejected, for he found no place for a change of mind, though he sought for it with tears.

Hebrews 13:17 Keep obeying those [pastors] who themselves are ruling over you, and submit to their authority. For these same pastors keep watching for the benefit of your souls, as those who have to render an account. Keep obeying them, in order that they may do this accounting with happiness, and not with groaning, for this is unprofitable for you.

James 1:12 which says Happy is the individual who perseveres under testing: for he will receive the crown of life, which God has promised to those who consistently love him [referring to our life inside the divine dynasphere].

James 1:25: But the one who looks intently into the perfect law [Bible doctrine] that gives freedom [perception of doctrine inside the divine dynasphere], and continues to do this [momentum in the divine dynasphere], not forgetting what he has heard but doing it, this believer will be blessed [or happy] in what he is doing.

James 1:25 But the one who looks intently into the perfect law [Word of God] that gives freedom and continues to do this, not forgetting what he has heard [from doctrine] but executing it, this believer will be happy in what he is doing.

James 2:12-13 So keep speaking and so keep doing as though who are going to be judged [evaluated] by the law that gives freedom [perception of doctrine inside the divine dynasphere is the basis for our evaluation]. For judgment for those who have not produced mercy [have not manufactured virtue inside the divine dynasphere, or better, who do not show compassion]; compassion triumphs over judgment.

James 3:5-8 So also the tongue is a small part of the body, and yet it boasts of great things. See how such great a forest is set on fire by a very small spark! And the tongue is a fire, the wickedness of wrongdoing; the tongue is so placed in our anatomy so that it contaminates the entire body, therefore, setting on fire the cycle of existence, and being set on fire by the agency of hell. For every species of beasts and birds, of reptiles and creatures of the sea, is tamed, and has been tamed by mankind. But no one can tame [control] the tongue; it is a restless evil full of deadly poison.

1Peter 1:1–2 ... who are elected according to the foreknowledge of God the Father, by the sanctifying work of the Spirit [baptism of the Spirit], unto obedience and sprinkling of the blood of Christ [the work of the Son, the basis for salvation].

1Peter 1:3 Blessed by the God, even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, Who, according to His great mercy, has caused us to be born again to a living confidence through the resurrection of Jesus Christ from deaths.

1Peter 1:3,13,21. Blessed by the God, even the Lord Jesus Christ, Who, according to His great mercy, has caused us to be born again to a living hope through the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead. Therefore, gird your minds for action, being constantly stabilized and oriented. Fix your hope on the grace being brought to you at the appearing of Jesus Christ. Who through Him, are believers in God, Who raised Him from the dead, so that your faith and your confidence are in God.

1Peter 1:7-8 That the proof of your faith, being much more precious than gold which perishes even though tested by fire, may be found to result in praise and glory and honour at the revealing of Jesus Christ; And though you have not seen him you love him: and though you do not see him now, but believe in him, you greatly rejoice with joy inexpressible and full of glory.

1Peter 2:4 — “And coming to him as to a living stone, rejected by men, but elected and precious in the sight of God.”

1Peter 2:6 — “For contained in the scripture: ‘Behold I lay in Zion a chief corner stone, elected, also he who believes in him will not be put to shame.’”

1Peter 2:9 But you are an elect race, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a people for God's own possession, that you may proclaim the excellencies of Him who has called you out from darkness into His marvelous light.

1Peter 2:9–10 But you are a chosen race; You are a royal priesthood; you are a holy nation; You are a people for God's Own possession...in order that you might proclaim His excellencies Who has called you out of darkness into His marvelous light, for you were once not a people, but now you are the people of God; you have not received mercy, but now you have received mercy.

1Peter 2:13-14 Subordinate yourselves to every human institution, whether to a king as one in authority, or to a governor sent by him; for the punishment for those who do evil for the recognition of those who do good.

1Peter 3:8-12 To sum it all up, let us all [believers] live in harmony, sympathetic, love as fellow Christians, be compassionate, and humble, not returning evil for evil, insult for insult, but blessing; because to this you were called that you might inherit blessing. For `Whoever would love long life and see good days, let him refrain his tongue from evil and his lips from speaking deceit. And let him turn away from evil and produce [divine] good; let him seek prosperity and pursue it. For the eyes of the Lord are upon the righteous, and His ears listen to their prayers, but the face of the Lord is against those who do evil.

1Peter 3:15 But set apart Christ as Lord of your right lobe, always being ready to give a reason to everyone who asks you to give an account for the hope that is in you.

1Peter 3:15 But set apart Jesus Christ as Lord in your right lobes, always ready to give a reason to everyone who asks you, to give an account for the confidence that is in you.

1Peter 5:8 - "Be stabilized, be on the alert, your enemy the devil prowls about like a roaring lion seeking someone to devour."

1Peter 5:10 And after you have suffered for a little while, the God of all grace Who called you to His eternal glory in Christ will Himself perfect, confirm, strengthen and stabilize you.

1Peter 5:12 I have written you briefly exhorting and testifying that this is the true grace of God. Stand fast in it.

2Peter 1:3 Seeing that His divine power has given to us everything pertaining to life and godliness [maturity adjustment to the justice of God] through the full knowledge of Him Who called us to His Own glory and excellence.

2Peter 1:12 Therefore I will always be ready to keep reminding all of you concerning these things, although you have known, and have become stabilized by means of resident doctrine.

2Peter 1:13 Moreover I consider it my duty as long as I am in this tabernacle [human body] to arouse you (or, wake you up) by means of a reminder.

2Peter 1:14 Knowing that the laying aside of my human body is imminent, just as our Lord Jesus Christ has made it clear to me.

2Peter 1:15 Indeed I will be diligent in fact, at any time you may have the doctrine after my death, to call to remembrance these things.

2Peter 1:16 For not having followed [as our source and authority] cleverly concocted myths, when communicated to all of you the power and the coming of the Lord Jesus Christ but we have become spectators of His majestic magnificence.

2Peter 1:17 For when he received from God the Father honor and glory, such a unique voice having been carried to Him by His majestic glory, “This One Christ is My Son, My Beloved, with reference to I have been well-pleased.”

2Peter 1:18 And this same voice having been carried from the heavens, we heard when we were with Him on that holy mountain.

2Peter 1:19 And we keep on having a more reliable prophetic doctrine [more reliable than empiricism] with reference to which (doctrine) you perform honorably by habitually concentrating (as a lamp shining in a dark place until a day dawns [the illustration of the beginning of the Millennium] and a morning star has come up [believers with doctrine in the soul understand it]) in your right lobes.

2Peter 1:20 Knowing this first, that all prophecy of Scripture [eschatological doctrines] does not originate from one’s own personal explanation,...

2Peter 1:21 ...for you see, prophecy was not produced by the volition, the purpose, the design of man but, men from God communicated from God being carried along by the Holy Spirit.

2Peter 2:17–22 These [reversionists] are well without water and mists driven by a storm. For them the gloom of utter darkness has been reserved. For, bombastically speaking loud boasts of the (soul) vacuum, they entice by sensual passions of the flesh those who are barely escaping from those who live in error. They promise them [their victims] freedom, but they themselves exist as slaves of corruption. For whatever overcomes a person, to that he is enslaved. For if, after they have escaped the defilements of the cosmos by means of the ἐπίγνωσις of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ [the unbeliever who understands the gospel message], they are again entangled in them [false doctrine, which they previously rejected] and overcome, the last state has become worse for them than the first. For it would have been better for them never to have known the way of righteousness than having known it to turn back from the holy commandment [the commandment to believe in Jesus Christ] delivered to them. What the true proverb says has happened to them: “The dog returns to its own vomit, and the sow, after washing herself, returns to wallow in the mire.”

2Peter 1:20-21 Understand this first, that all prophesy from Scripture does not originate from one's own interpretation; for prophesy was never produced by the will of mankind, but men communicated as they were being carried along by means of the Holy Spirit.

1John 2:15 Stop loving the cosmic system, or anything in the cosmic system. If anyone keeps loving the cosmic system, the love from the Father is not in him.

1John 3:1-2 Concentrate on how great a love the Father has given to us that we should be called the children of God [and we are]; therefore the world does not recognize us because it did not recognize Him. Beloved, now are we the children of God and it has not yet appeared what we shall be; but we know that if He should appear [the rapture of the church], we shall be an exact copy of Him because we shall see Him just as He is.

1John 3:2-3. Beloved, now we are the sons of God and it has not yet appeared with we will be; however, we know that if He should appear, we should be exactly like Him because we should see Him as He is. And everyone who has this hope in himself purifies himself, just as He, Christ, is pure.

1John 3:2-3 Beloved [royal family of God], we are now students of God, and what we will be has not yet been revealed. However, we know that when He should appear, we shall be like Him [in resurrection bodies], because we shall see Him as He is. And everyone who keeps on having this confidence in Him purifies himself even as He is pure.

1John 3:23 And this is His mandate, that we believe in the person of His Son, Jesus Christ, and love one another, just as He has given to us a mandate.

1John 5:16 If anyone sees his brother sinning a sin not face-to-face with death, he shall ask and He [God the Father] will give life to him who does not sin face-to-face with death. There is a sin face-to-face with death; I do not say that he should ask concerning this category.

1John 5:11-13 This is the deposition: God has given to us eternal life, and this life is in His Son. He who has the Son has this [eternal] life; He who does not have the Son does not have this [eternal] life. These things I have written to you who believe in the person of the Son of God, in order that you may know that you have eternal life.

Revelation 1:6 Behold, He is coming with the clouds [many born again Jews will be with Him] and every eye shall see Him and all those who pierced Him [those who have rejected Him; not those at the crucifixion; those guilty of the big blot out] and those all the tribes with reference of the land will mourn over Him. Yes, I believe it!

Revelation 1:8 "I am the Alpha [the Eternal God] and the Omega [Christ in Hypostatic union]," says the Lord our God [= Adonai Elohanu]; He Who is and Who was and He Who is coming [as] the Omnipotent One."

Revelation 2:10 Do not fear those things which you are about to suffer [undeserved suffering]. Behold, the devil is about to cast some of you into prison that you might be tested. Also, you will have pressure and affliction ten days. Become faithful unto death [the imputation of martyrdom as the highest honor that God can give to the believer in time]. Become faithful unto death, and I will give you the wreath of life.

Revelation 19:6-9 And I heard as a voice of a great crowd of people [the OT saints] and as a voice of many waters [the tribulational martyrs, who are the friends of the groom] and as a voice of mighty thunders [the tribulational believers alive at the second advent]; singing, "Praise the Lord because the Lord God all-powerful has become King [this is an act of worship, where we first must have cognizance]. Let us express super-happiness and let us give glory to Christ because the wedding of the Lamb has occurred and His bride [the church] has prepared herself [the 7 year preparation, receiving a resurrection body minus the old sin nature, our human good burned, our rewards and decorations received]. And it was given to her [the church, the bride] that she herself should be clothed in fine linen [the perfection of ultimate sanctification; the meeting of imputed righteousness with a resurrection body] and the unsoiled [absence of human good and evil] for the fine linen is the justification of the royal family. And He said to me, "Write, happinesses to the ones invited to the wedding supper of the Lamb" and He says to me, "These are genuine doctrines from the source of the God [the friends of the groom are there in their resurrection bodies] and the friends of the bride [it will be 1000 years before they receive their resurrection bodies].

Revelation 19:12. And His eyes are like a flame of fire and on His head are many crowns, having a royal title that no one understood but He Himself.

Revelation 19:16, And He has a royal title which has been written on His robes and on His thighs, King of Kings and Lord of Lords.

What Are Enhanced Notes?

1. There are a set of electronic notes of R. B. Thieme, Jr. floating about. These formed the basis for these enhanced notes.
2. These enhanced notes have the full Greek words where they are mentioned (included is the English transliteration, the Greek word itself, and the pronunciation, as taken from Strong's).
3. The doctrines taught in any lesson are set aside by formatting (they are in yellow boxes). These doctrines are often not included in the original electronic notes.
4. These doctrines are listed at the beginning of the document, alphabetically arranged and hyperlinked.
5. Sometimes a doctrine is transferred over from one of the two doctrinal notebooks, if the points are similar enough. Although this is not always a word-for-word transcription, it is generally very close to the notes given by Bob in whatever this study.
6. The link to those doctrines is here.
7. The lesson summaries are given after the doctrine links and they are also hyperlinked to the lessons themselves.
8. The link to the listing of the lessons, which includes the lesson #'s, a brief description of the lesson and the verses which are covered. This comes from the descriptions found for these lessons on the tape boxes and in the lesson summaries, which are collected here: (HTML) (PDF) (WPD) (MS Word DOC). On occasion, these lesson summaries are corrected.
9. If Bob offers a corrected translation, that is also included. If the entire book or entire chapters are corrected, then that corrected translation will also be found in the index and at the end of the notes. Bob tends not to offer a lengthy corrected translation for books covered early in his ministry or for narratives (like the book of Acts). However, over the years, he developed some very excellent translations—particularly for the epistles.
10. Although Bob almost always refers back to the KJV, I have inserted a different, more up-to-date translation.

For the initial translation, I will use the Berean Literal Bible. This is what they say about their own Bible.

Berean Literal Bible (information)

The Berean Bible is a completely new translation of the Holy Bible, based on the best available manuscripts and sources. Each word is connected back to the Greek or Hebrew text, resulting in a transparent and honest text that can be studied for its root meanings.

The Berean Study Bible text is the result of a meticulous translation and styling process to maintain core meanings and produce an English text of high literary quality, effective for public reading, study, memorization, and evangelism.

Berean Literal Bible (information)

Additionally, we believe that the Scriptures are meant to be studied and shared freely. Just as Paul encouraged the churches to pass on his letters, we are developing digital resources that will be free to access and free to share in websites, apps and software

The Berean Bible incorporates four main components:

1. An interlinear Bible to directly follow the Greek and Hebrew texts.
2. A literal translation to take the reader to the core of the Greek and Hebrew meanings.
3. A modern English translation, effective for public reading, memorization, and evangelism.
4. An emphasized translation to bring out the full meaning and intensity of the original texts.

Berean Literal Bible

The second step in the translation process was the development of a word for word English word order text with the following features:

1. Parts of speech match as closely as possible in translation from Greek to English.
2. Tense, mood, and voice of verbs are maintained as closely as possible.
3. All tags from the interlinear are maintained so that the word for word translation can be connected back to each element of the original text.
4. Gender is translated to be consistent with the original sources (This is also maintained in the Interlinear, Study, and Emphasized Bibles).
5. Pronouns that represent Deity are capitalized for clearer study of difficult passages (This format is maintained from the Interlinear through to the Study and Emphasized Bibles).
6. Sentence structure is maintained so that, in general, the flow of the longer Greek sentences is not interrupted in the translation to the literal version.

This information comes from their Bible information for their e-sword module.
